In presenting my views on the subject of the currency, and the improvement of our banking system, at this time, it is done more with a desire of eliciting a full investigation of the subject, than with an expectation that they will meet with the entire approbation of a majority of your honorable body. On a subject admitting of so many various and conflicting views, unanimity cannot be expected. Believing, however, that the best way to arrive at safe and satisfactory conclusions upon this, as upon all other questions is, by a free and honest interchange of opinions, I have taken this occasion for presenting mine, on the currency, and the improvement of our banking system. The whole subject is submitted to your consideration, and upon your wisdom and prudence the public rely with well founded confidence, that the best will be done for the good of our common country.

If you should not deem the present a suitable time to adopt a permanent system of banking for the State, I would respectfully suggest the policy of extending the time of such of the banks as you may judge worthy of public confidence, for winding up their business, for three years after the expiration of their charters in 1843. Many of the banks of the State have commenced already the business of winding up, under the pretext that the time their charters have to run is not more than sufficient to enable them to close their business. The enormous rates of interest at which capitalists can loan out their money upon private loans holds out a strong inducement to them to withdraw their funds from banks. Extending the time of the banks for winding up, will do away with any real necessity which they may consider themselves under now, to commence the business of closing up their affairs.

You will be better able to judge of the expediency of this measure, however, when you shall have received the report of the bank commissioners. Their report will give you a detailed statement of the present condition of the banks, and enable you to determine how far any of them are entitled to public confidence.

The practice of loaning money at an exhorbitant rate of interest, ranging from ten to fifty per cent., has become a great and growing evil, and should be arrested by a well guarded and highly penal usury law. I would be willing to allow capitalists the liberty of contracting for a fair and liberal rate of interest. It invites capital into the State, and it is frequently an advantage to the borrower to be able to get money at a higher rate of interest than six per cent. But capitalists should not be permitted to take advantage of the embarrassments and necessities of the unfortunate, and by loaning them money at an exhorbitant rate of interest, precipitate their ruin. Ten per cent. is a liberal compensation for the use of money, and all above this should be denounced as usurous, and constitute a forfeiture of both principal and interest.

The following statement from the Auditor's books exhibits the condition of the State Treasury, and the different funds of the State.

GENERAL REVENUE.

The amount of balance in the treasury on the 15th Nov '38 -			$127,054 61 6
Amount from different sources in 1839 - - - -			528,851 18 9
Total revenue - -			655,905 89 5
From this deduct the amount of revenue for canal purposes - -	$173,685 58 1
Amount of sinking fund - -	25,000 00 0
Amount transferred from'revenue to make up State Common School fund -	45,250 59 4
Amount of tax on banks, &c. transferred to same -	118,425 59 0
Amount of drafts received protested -	3,385 27 0
		365.747 03 3
Leaving a balauce for revenue purposes, of - - -		290,158 77 0
From this deduct the amount of bills redeemed at the treasury to the 15th Nov., 1839 - -		267,076 14 0
Leaving the balance in the treasury of - - - - -		23,082 63 0

CANALS.

The balance of this fund in the treasury, Nov. 1838 - -			145,654 53 0
The amount of tolls on the Ohio Canal up to 1st Nov. 1839 -	398,753 22 3
The amount of same on Miami Canal	78,747 15 0
The amount of same on Miami Canal extension - -	983 11 0
		478,482 51 3
The amount of revenue transferred after paying interest on domestic debt - - - - - -		87,925 91 4
The amount received from sales of Ohio lands - - - - -		3,571 49 0
The amount from State lots and water-rents - - - - -		502 00 0
The amount from the various school funds - - - - - -		85,691 00 1
Total - -		801,828 44 8
From this deduct amount paid fund commissioners up to Nov. 15, 1838 -	708,651 86 1
Amount paid on special appropriation	8,729 91 5
		717,379 77 6
Balance in treasury -		84,448 67 2

COMMON SCHOOL FUND.

Amount accruing from banks, surplus Revenue,and interest on school fund for 1838 - - - -	154,748 49 6
Amount of transfer of revenue -	45,350 59 4
Amount accruing from taxes on banks, &c., for 1839 - -	71,844 63 0
Total - - - - -	271,844 63 0
Deduct the amount paid the several counties - - -	200,000 00 0
Balance in the treasury -	71,844 63 0

SCHOOL FUND SUBJECT TO DISTRIBUTION.

Virginia military school fund	11,613 88 6

NATIONAL ROAD.

The balance in the treasury, Nov. 15, 1838 - - - - - -	3,495 96 0
The amount of tolls collected for 1839 - - - - - -	62,496 10 0
Total - - - - -	65,992 06 0
Deduct the amount paid Superintendent to Nov. 15, 1839. -	65,913 79 9
Balance in the treasury, -	78 27 0

The aggregate canal tolls received for 1838, was $435,949 34. The amount received for 1839 is, $478,483 51, showing an increase of canal tolls this year over last, of $42,534 17.—The gradual increase of canal tolls every year since the completion of these works, warrant us in believing that at no distant day, the revenue received from this quarter will more than pay the interest on the cost of their construction. Whether all the works of internal improvement which the State has undertaken, will ultimately do this, is doubtful. If, however, our public works, as a whole, when once completed, shall yield a sufficient revenue to pay the interest on the aggregate cost of their construction, public expectation will be fully realized, and we will have no cause to regret the policy when led to their completion.—When the public works now in progress shall have been finished, our State will be well provided with the means of getting her surplus produce to market. The great avenues, which enable us to transport our agricultural productions from the interior portions of the State to various points, as interest may dictate, are calculated greatly to enhance the value of our land—open up a ready market for the productions of our soil, and promote, in a high degree, the prosperity of our State. That our system of internal improvements, so far as it has been judiciously commenced and prosecuted, is greatly calculated to promote the interest of the State, is universally admitted. To this system I have always been, and am decidedly friendly; and hope that it may ultimately be extended into those portions of the State that have hitherto been overlooked and neglected.

While we all acknowledge the utility of internal improvements in developing the resources of the State, we should not forget that prudence and sound policy require, that they should be limited by their general utility, and the fiscal ability of the State to carry them on. Our State debt is already upwards of twelve millions. On ten millions and a half of this we are paying interest, which constitutes a heavy tax on the people. The improvements which we have already undertaken, and which the State is under obligations to complete, will require the increase of our State debt to fifteen millions. This large debt, together with the great difficulties and embarrassments experienced at the present time in the monetary affairs of the country, and the difficulty of borrowing money on favorable terms to the State, admonish us that the utmost caution should be observed to guard against undertaking, for the present, any new works. The most rigid economy should be introduced into this branch of the public service, and no more money should be borrowed for the ensuing year, than will be necessary to enable the State to meet her present engagements. From present appearances, it is doubtful whether the Fund Commissioners will be able to procure the means necessary to meet the contracts on the public works. It would be ruinous to the State to permit the progress of these works to be interrupted for the want of funds. The credit of the State would be impaired, and a large amount of money and labor already expended, would be lost, and the contractors materially injured. Every effort should be made to enable the State to meet the present contracts on the public works. This is demanded by the best interest of the State, and the high regard we should always have for our engagements.

The time has actually arrived when we are forced by the dictates of prudence to pause and consider what can be done to arrest the accumulation of our State debt. Under the "act to authorise a loan of credit by the State of Ohio to rail road companies, and to authorize subscriptions by the State to turnpike, canal and slackwater navigation companies," passed March 24, 1837, the State debt has been increased $2,492,215. This act has left no discretion in the executive, as to the cases where it would be proper for the State to subscribe for stock. When any turnpike road, canal or slackwater navigation company makes it appear to the Executive, that a certain amount of stock has been subscribed by individuals, and that a certain proportion of the amount subscribed has been paid in and expended on the improvement, it is made the duty of the Governor to subscribe, in the case of turnpike road companies, for an amount equal to that subscribed by individuals. And in the case of canal and slackwater navigation companies, for an amount equal to one half of that subscribed by individuals. Thus the entire credit of the State is placed at the will of these companies. They can involve the State in a debt to an unlimited amount.—In less than three years we have seen the State debt increased, under the provisions of this law, near two and one half millions. These companies are increasing with great rapadity, no doubt with the view of availing themselves of its provisions. The calls on the Governor to subscribe on behalf of the State to the stock of these companies will most probably increase, rather than diminish, for some time to come. The funds drawn from the State treasury under this act, have not in all cases been applied in the most judicious manner, and the policy of the law under any circumstances, I consider very questionable. The immediate repeal of this law is respectfully recommended for your consideration.

The following statement shows the liabilities of the State, as near as I have been able to ascertain them:

Permanent loan,	9,050,873 00
Scrip issued to rail-roads,	233,515 00
Subscriptions to Turnpike Road, Canal and Slackwater navigation companies,	2,268,700 00
Domestic debt,	1,317,527 62
Surplus revenue loaned fin counties	109,946 19
Total, - - - - - - -	12,970,461 81
From which deduct amount paid Turnpike Companies	950,630 86
Total, - - - - - - -	12,019,830 95

I have not been able to ascertain the amount paid by the State on the Pennsylvania, Cincinnati and Whiteriver, and Miami canals. When ascertained, it should be deducted from the above.

The amount of the surplus revenue of the United States, received by the State is, $2,576,347 12—This is not included in the above statement. Although we are liable to be called on for the payment of this money, yet we pay no interest on it, and it is not propable it will ever be required. We should not, therefore, consider it in the light of a debt. Our domestic debt,and the surplus revenue loaned from counties, may be considered as perpetual loans. Our permanent loan, scrip issued to rail road companies, and subscriptions to turnpike road, canal and slackwater navigation companies, will make $10,592,498—the amount of the debt of the State, which will have to be paid as it falls due. In this statement I have taken no notice of the sinking fund.

Our public works during this year have progressed as rapidly as we had a right to expect. Some difficulties and embarrassments have been experienced for the want of funds to meet the estimates.

The national road may be said to be in a reasonable state of repair, and is much improved since last year. This great thoroughfare was in a ruinous condition, when received by the State, but it has been gradually improving under a system of continual repairs. The tolls received on the road, being the only funds appropriated to keep it up,their limited amount will not allow of repairs at all times, when the condition of the road demands them. There is much complaint of the high rate of tolls that the light travel on this road is compelled to pay. It is very doubtful whether the high tolls paid by this description of travel is advantageous to the road, even in a pecuniary point of view. A great portion of the light travel, which does little or no injury to the road, has been driven from it in consequence of the high tolls, while the heavy travel which destroys the road, continue on it. I would suggest the policy of so graduating the rate of tolls as to reduce them on light travel. The tolls received this year are $62,496 10—The tolls for last year were $52,570 78—Showing an increase this, over last year, of $9,925 32.

There has been twenty-nine additional miles of the national road completed during this year, (that is, from the 14th to 43d mile stone west of Columbus,) and surrendered by the General Government to this State, and accepted, and placed under the care of the Board of Public Works.

The improvement of the Muskingum river was put under contract on the 20th October, 1836, to be completed in three years—the time having now expired.—The work originally contemplated eleven dams, fourteen locks, and four short canals; but was so altered by the late board, as to embrace eleven dams, eleven locks, and canals, overcoming one hundred and twenty feet fall. Five of these dams, six of the locks, and two of the canals are now completed. The foundations of all the other dams and locks are laid, and considerable progress made towards their completion. One dam and lock is in a backward state, and will probably have to be re-let. The whole of this improvement will be completed next year,provided the funds necessary, can be had.

The Hocking Valley canal, extending from Lancaster to Athens, is forty-seven miles in length, and overcome a fall of two hundred and three feet. Sixteen miles of this canal, extending from Lancaster towards Athens, were put under contract July 13th, 1836, to be completed on the first day of October, 1837. This division is now finished, and will be ready for use as soon as navigation shall open in the spring. The Lancaster Lateral canal connects it with the main line and is eight miles in length. This canal has been purchased by the State, and hence, twenty-miles of Hocking Valley canal will be ready for transit in the spring. The second divisoin of this canal, sixteen miles in length, and extending from two and one half miles above the falls, to the town of Nelsonville, was put under contract on the 16th day of October, 1837, to be completed in two years. Several sections of this division are finished, and have been received; nearly all the locks and heavy culverts are completed, and the whole of the work is so far advanced, that no fears are entertained of this part of the line being ready for use by the first of July next. The third and last division of this canal, fifteen miles in length, extending from Nelsonville to Athens, was put under contract on the fourth day of September last, to be finished on the first day of October, 1841. This division was let on favorable terms to the State. The contractors have already commenced work, but not much has yet been done.

The Ohio canal has been in good condition for navigation the whole of the season, without any material interruption from breaches, and a very large increase of business has been realized over any former year. The Walholding canal is nearly completed, with the exception of a few re-let sections, which are to be finished the coming season. In consequence of anticipated difficulties in procuring funds, this work has not been prosecuted with the vigor that more favorable times would have justified. The Vernon and Mohican canals, have been carefully relocated, but the want of funds has prevented their being placed under contract.

On the 11th and 15th of September, 1837, there was put under contract all that part of the Miami canal extending from a point about three miles north of Piqua, to St. Marys, a distance of thirty-two and a half miles, including fourteen nd one half miles of feeder, and the two nd embankments of the Mercer county eservoir, embracing in all, about eighty eparate sections. The prices for this ork, taking into consideration the high rices of provisions and labor, are said be low. On the first of January, 1839, here was put under contract eighteen ections more, which extend twelve miles orth of St. Marys, at prices varying but ttle from the former contracts. The rogress of the work on this improvement has not been as rapid as was expected, owing in some measure to the high rices of provisions and labor, but mainly to the want of sufficient funds to make unctual and full payments to contractors. The contracts on the line extending from Piqua to St. Marys, including the idney feeder. expire on the first of May, 840; those north of St. Marys, including he reservoir embankments, on the first f May, 1841; but owing to the causes efore mentioned, the whole line will not e completed before the first of May, 842, and unless the necessary funds hould soon be obtained, the completion ill be delayed even beyond that time.

The Western Reserve and Maumee oad, between Perrysburg and Lower andusky, a distance of thirty miles, is raded and bridged; and fifteen miles beween Perrysburg and Portage river are ompleted by being McAdamized.

The Wabash and Erie canal has been ut under contract to be completed by the rst of October, 1840. It is not expected. owever, that this work will be entirely nished at that time; but it is presumed will be fully completed during the sumer of 1841. Most of the line, except he lockage from Manhattan to the head f the Maumee rapids, a distance of thirty miles, is now completed, and it is expected that the water will be let in the anal early next season, from the head of he rapids to a point below Maumee city, distance of about twenty miles. This one of the most important improvements in the State, and I have no doubt, hen once completed, will yield a revenue ore than sufficient to pay the interest on he cost of construction. It opens a direct communication between Manhattan, n the Maumee bay, and the navigable aters of the Wabash river, and passes rough a country of unsurpassed fertility. We are under obligations to the State f Indiana to construct this work at as arly a day as practicable, and it is to be oped that nothing will occur to retard its peedy completion.

In pursuance of the act entitled "an act elating to the management of and sale f certain canal lands of the State of hio," passed March 19th, 1838, I appointed in January last, a special agent to roceed to Washington city to settle and djust all claims of this State growing out f the general grants of lands made by he United States to the State of Ohio for anal purposes, and the grant of land to he State of Indiana, afterwards ceded to hio, to aid in the construction of the Wabash and Erie canal within the limits f Ohio. The special agent was further uthorized to procure from the General and Office patents for, or written certiicates, with the proper official seal thereto affixed, of all the lands which the State f Ohio may have selected under said rants. The great press of business during the session of Congress prevented he action of the constituted authorities at Washington, on our claim for an additional quantity of land under the Wabash and Erie canal grant, and the special agent was compelled to return without having effected this part of his mission. Written certificates of title to all lands which the State of Ohio has selected under the various canal grants were in progress of preparation at the General Land Office when the special agent left the city. They will, I presume, be shortly, if they are not already completed. When received, they should be carefully recorded in some of the public offices, and provision should be made by law making authenticated copies evidence as to title.

Having been strongly impressed with he justice as well as legality of the claim brought forward by my predecessor, for an addditional quantity of land under the Wabash and Erie canal grant, and also the claim for a further quantity of land under the Miami canal grant, and being desirous to bring these claims to a final close, I communicated to the President through the Commissioner of the General Land Office, at an early period, the full extent of our claims under each grant, with such reasons and arguments in their support as seemed to me proper. I have understood that this communication has been referred to the Attorney General of the United States for his legal opinion on the questions therein presented. I have not been advised, however, of his decision, but hope to be able to communicate to your honorable body, before the close of this session, the final decision of the authorities of the General Government, as to the validity of our claims under each of the above named canal grants.—The largest additional quantity of land claimed by Ohio under the Wabash and Erie canal grant, is about fifty-one thousand, two hundred and seventy-seven acres. The unsettled nature of this claim has prevented the officers of the General Government from bringing into market the United States alternate canal sections along the line of the Wabash and Erie canal. Knowing that there was a deep anxiety felt by the whole community in the north-western part of the state, that the General Government would bring into market her canal sections so as to afford an opportunity for the settlement and improvement of the country, and wishing to remove as far as I could all obstructions to the gratification of the wishes and just expectations of this portion of our fellow-citizens, I entered into an arrangement in September last, with the Commissioner of the General Land Office, by which it was agreed that the maximum quantity of land claimed by Ohio under the Wabash and Erie canal grant should be selected by the state of Ohio, and that the title to the same should abide the final decision of the proper authorities. In pursuance to this arrangement, I appointed three Commissioners to select, on behalf of the State, according to the terms previously agreed on, fifty-one thousand two hundred and seventy-seven and 51-100 acres. The Commissioners have made the selections in behalf of the State, lists of which have been transmitted to the General Land Office for approval. There is now no obstacle to prevent the remaining canal lands owned by the General Government from being immediately brought into market.—The same gentlemen who made the above selections of canal land, were authorized to select, and did select, under the act of Congress of the 20th of May, 1826, seven thousand seven hundred and twenty-nine acres of school land, which is in lieu of section sixteen in Indian Reserves, which had been sold for the benefit of the Indians.

While on the subject of canal lands, I would beg leave to call your attention to the subject of adopting some settled and permanent policy by which they could be brought into market, and sold in small quantities to actual settlers. It is doing great injustice to the enterprising settlers in that rich and fertile part of our state to retain so large a quantity of land from market, and there by prevent the settlement and general improvement of the country. By bringing this land into market in such a way as to afford to actual settlers an opportunity of purchasing it in small quantities, a valuable class of industrious citizens would be induced to emigrate to the state and identify themselves with its interests and welfare. Such a class furnish the most sure and certain source for revenue, and the most valuable defence against danger in time of war. Care should be taken, however, that our lands are brought into market at the same time with those of the United States.

I have received a communication from the Commissioners of the General Land Office, by which it appears that through mistake a portion of the lands selected by Ohio, under the various canal grants, has been sold by the General Government and that these sales have been carried into grant. Whether any of these same lands have been sold by the State, I am unable to say, if so, the title granted by the State must hold the land. But for the purpose of avoiding hereafter all conflict between innocent purchasers, I would recommend the passage of a law authorizing the surrender to the General Government of such tracts of our canal land as have been sold by mistake and carried into grant, and not heretofore sold by Ohio, upon the express condition that Ohio be allowed to select an equal quantity of other land in lieu thereof, from lands of the United States, within the State. The amount of land thus situated is inconsiderable, but it is proper that this matter should be adjusted while good lands can yet be selected by the State in lieu of those sold. By the passage of this law while the rights of innocent purchasers could be secured, the interests of the State need not be prejudiced, as lands of equal value to those sold could now be selected.

M. T. Williams, Esq., Commissioner on the part of this State to settle the boundary line between Ohio and Indiana, under a resolution of the General Assembly, passed March the 10th, 1837, made his report on the 3d day of February last, which is signed by himself and A. Matson, Esq., Commissioner on the part of Indiana. By which report it appears they have run and accurately surveyed the line contemplated in the resolution, and marked it as originally surveyed by Israel Ludlow, deputy surveyor of the United States, and caused suitable monuments to be erected on the same. A copy of the original field notes accompanied their report, together with a copy of the line run and established.—This report with the accompanying documents is filed in the office of the Secretary of State, in pursuance to the above resolution.

A set of standard weights have been received from the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and it will be proper to direct by law, how they shall be preserved, and to make some legislative provision by which the weights now in use in the State shall be made to conform to them.

The number of convicts now confined in the Ohio Penitentiary is four hundred and ninety-three. From December 1st, 1838, to December 1st, 1839, the total cash receipts will be (say in round numbers) 54,000 dollars—payments for general support, &c., 35,000, dollars, leaving a nett balance of 19,000 dollars. The report of the directors of this institution will give you a more detailed and satisfactory account of its operations for this year. Under the Superintendence of the present able and indefatigable Warden, we have every reason to believe that the affairs of this institution will be managed with skill, and a just regard to the objects of its foundation. Many of that highly respectable and valuable portion of our fellow citizens who are engaged in mechanical occupations complain of the direction given to the labor of the convicts in the Penitentiary. The source from which these complaints emanate entitle them to the respect and careful consideration of the legislature, and every relief which is just and proper should be granted.

There are about seventy pupils in the deaf and dumb assylum at this time. Uninterrupted health has been enjoyed by them during the present season, and their improvement has been equal to that of any former year. The great object of this institution being to diffuse moral and intellectual light in the minds of an unfortunate class of our population, and to fill up a place in our great system of education, it affords me a high degree of pleasure to be able to state that, at no time since its establishment, has the institution been more promising for accomplishing this object, and at no period has it been more deserving that high estimation in which it has always been held by the public, than at the present time.

The lunatic assylum is in a flourishing and prosperous condition. The experience of a year has proved that the buildings are well adapted to the purpose for which they were intended.—There has been a great press of application for admittance, not only from our own, but from adjoining States, since the house was opened, and the different halls have been filled as rapidly as they could be prepared—in all, one hundred and fifty-seven have been received and admitted to the benefits of the proper medical and moral treatment. Twenty-seven of these have been entirely restored to the use of their reason, and returned to society and their friends.

It affords me peculiar pleasure to be able to assure you of the present prosperity and increasing importance of the institution for the instruction of the blind. The present head of this institution commenced, in July, 1837, with three pupils. The number has increased to nineteen. The new building although not entirely finished, is now occupied by the scholars, and will afford them great advantages hereafter in the successful prosecution of their studies, which they have not hitherto enjoyed. The progress made by the pupils in the various branches of learning taught in the institution, is highly creditable to themselves, and honorable to their teacher. The facility with which intellectual and mechanical knowledge can be imparted to this unfortunate class of citizens, proves that they are not only capable of receiving a good education, but of becoming valuable and useful members of society.

These humane institutions have more than met the expectations of the public, and they will stand as lasting monuments of the generous philanthropy of their projectors, an honor to the State and a blessing to the country.

In obedience to a resolution of the General Assembly of March 18th, 1839, authorizing me to appoint some one person whose duty it should be to collate all the laws of a general nature passed since the first day of December 1830, and such others as he might deem expedient—to arrange them so as to place in juxtaposition all laws bearing on the same subject, and to accompany them with explanatory notes referring to prior or subsequent legislation, and to the decisions of the courts—I appointed the Hon. Joseph R. Swan, of the city of Columbus, to make the compilation contemplated in this resolution. His report will be completed in a few days, and as soon as received shall be laid before your honorable body. The eminent legal abilities and known industry of the gentleman appointed, qualify him in a high degree for the performance of the duties required in the above resolution, and I have no doubt but his report will be highly satisfactory.

Under an act of the General Assembly of March the 17th, 1838, the Governor is authorized to cause to be laid out into proper lots, streets and alleys, the old Penitentiary lot, containing ten acres. The act further provides that the lots shall be appraised, and authorizes the Governor at such time as he may think proper, to cause the same to be offered for sale at public auction. The survey and appraisement of the lots as required by the law, were completed under the administration of my predecessor. I have not thought it prudent or advisable to bring these lots into market. This lot of ground was conveyed to the State by Alex. M'Laughlin and John Kerr, by deed of the 12th of November, 1812, for public use. If the State should sell this land and the same be converted to private use, a legal question would arise whether it would not revert back to the original grantors, and the State by this means, be deprived of the land altogether. But if no difficulty of this kind existed, I believe it would be bad policy for the State to dispose of this lot of ground. Its location on the canal renders it an eligible site for an Arsenal, Barracks and a military store house, and with some improvement it could be made a desirable parade ground.

An arsenal is now indispensable for the preservation of the public arms. Barracks and a military store house, would be required at the seat of Government in time of war, and a general parade ground would at all times be desirable. The quantity of land in this lot is not greater than would be wanted for various military purposes. The old Penitentiary house situated on it has been fitted up during the last summer under the direction of the Quartermaster General, for an arsenal. The public arms are now deposited in it, and if some sheds were erected for the preservation of field pieces, it would answer all the purposes of the State until a better one could be built. I respectfully submit, whether it would not be good policy to retain this lot of ground for military purposes. With this view I would recommend the passages of a law repealing the above act, and vacating the streets and alleys laid out through said lot—establishing permanently an arsenal thereon, authorizing the erection of sheds for the preservation of field pieces, and directing that the whole lot be suitably enclosed and placed under the care of the Quartermaster General.

In April last, the requisite orders were issued for drawing the quota of arms due this State, from the United States, under the act of Congress, for arming and equipping the militia, for the years 1837, 1838, and 1839, and the ordnance department was duly notified of the kind of arms and military stores desired by this State. The quota due the State for the three years last named, is five thousand five hundred and twenty-six and 9-13 muskets. They have been commuted for the following military stores, to wit: Twenty setts artillery equipments; eighteen hundred half stocked rifles and accoutrements, and two thousnand two hundred and eighty muskets and accoutrements. I have been notified by a letter from the ordnance department, that these military stores have been directed to the order of the Quartermaster General They were expected some time since, but have not yet been received. When received, they will be distributed among the several divisions of the militia of the State according to law. The balance of arms commuted for 1835-6, were received during last summer, being seven hundred and twelve pistols, and one hundred and thirty carbines.

A well organized militia is our main arm of defence against foreign aggression, and domestic tumults. It is upon the citizen soldier that we must principally reply to defend our country from enemies, abroad, and to aid the civil authorities in the preservation of order at home, and the due execution of the laws. Ours is a government of the people—it eminated from them, and to them it belongs. The defence, therefore, of free institutions is very properly and safely entrusted to their hands. A standing army is opposed to the genius of our republican form of government—hostile to liberty, and repugnant to the feelings and opinions of our citizens. Our only reliance for defence, therefore, is on a well organized militia. That they can be so organized as to constitute an efficient arm of national defence cannot be doubted. But it must be borne in mind, that bravery and an ardent devotion to country, which may always be expected to characterize our militia, will avail but little on the field of battle in the present refined state of modern warfare, without skill and proper military organization. As we cannot always expect to escape the calamities of war, prudence requires that we should adopt such means as will ensure the efficiency of the only force upon which we can rely in the hour of danger. It is deeply to be regretted that a better organization does not exist with our militia—but little better could be expected under the existing law. There is, however, in the greater portion of the State, a military spirit, which under a jurisdiction law for organizing and disciplining the militia, could not fail to bring about a decided change for the better. The present law does not meet with the approbation of the officers, and those most experienced in military affairs, and whose means of judging of its defects are derived from practical observation. The difficulty of framing a law on this subject to answer the purpose intended, and to secure the great object desired, an efficient and well organized militia, is evinced by the repeated acts passed within the last ten years on the same subject, none of which have been permitted to exist longer than to test their total inefficiency. This, however, should not deter us from an attempt to form such a system for organizing the militia as will meet the expectations of the public. The limits of this communication will not permit me to point out the defects which I conceive to exist in the present law. It is, however, greatly defective, in my judgement, and should be carefully revised. The duties and powers of commandants and companies in assessing fines, should be plainly and distinctly pointed out.—The mode of collecting fines should be rendered plain and more simple, especially in cases of appeal to the court of common pleas. Justices of the peace should be required to act on all delinquent lists tendered him, subject to suitable and well defined penalties if they neglect or refuse. The manner of disbursing the regimental funds should be pointed out. Officers required to perform special duties should be compensated for their time and expenses out of the regimental funds. It should be optional with the commandants of regiments to detail an officer to take command of a delinquent company, or to attach it to another company. Commandants of divisions and staff, should be required to uniform and attend officer muster; and volunteer companies should be encouraged as much as possible. Amendments on these points, and many others that could be suggested, might be made, which would greatly improve the present militia system. Your special attention is respectfully invited to the subject with the hope that you will give it your careful consideration.

WILSON SHANNON.

Columbus, December 3, 1839.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

TUESDAY, ... DECEMBER 10, 1839

Our readers will perceive we have lost a week with this paper; this is occasioned by the illness of one of our hands, who was unable to work for three weeks, and the impossibility of getting another just at this juncture. But we are now able to go ahead again, and we hope such an event will not shortly occur again.

At the latest advices Congress had not yet organized; they were disputing about the admission of the Jersey members.

A correspondent, in Indiana, says "there is not money enough among the people at this time to pay the taxes."

At the time the taxes were due in this county, there were but little more than half of them paid in; they are nearly fifty per cent higher than in former years.

The last Letter-Press, Philadelphia, reports over 200 new subscribers having been procured by one person for that paper, in Pittsburgh, Pa.; which is put part of its patronage in that city.

The Legislature of this State was organized on Monday the 2d inst., by electing Wm. M'Laughlin Speaker of the Senate, and C. J. M'Nulty clerk; Thomas J. Buchanan Speaker of the House, and Asa G. Dimock clerk. These officers were elected without opposition.

As the Governor's Message is a document generally looked for, by the reading community, we give it entire in this number to the exclusion of most other matter. It is said to be the longest document of the kind ever issued from the executive chair of this State. We believe it gives general satisfaction to all the political parties.

An esteemed Brother writes us, "I wish certain rules and regulations of the Discipline examined and compared with Scripture. If I proceed to make the interrogatories, will you examine and compare them?" We answer,—make the interrogatories you wish, and probably some of our correspondents, who have more time than we have, will attend to them; if not, we will do the best we can for you.

According to the Governor's Message, the number of convicts now confined in the Ohio Penitentiary, is four hundred and ninety-three; and about seventy pupils in the Deaf and Dumb Asylum,—in all, one hundred and fifty-seven have been admitted into the Lunatic Asylum, which has been established but a short time, "twenty-seven of whom have been restored to their reason and returned to society and their friends."

We refer the reader to the communications of Messrs. Hughes and Paul, on the first page, where they will see recorded two most afflicting cases of the effects of intemperance. That such occurrences are still happening is sufficient to stimulate the friends of the Temperance enterprise to renewed efforts, to promote the interests of Temperance Reform. Much has already been done, but abundance more remains to be accomplished.

Rev. T. H. Stockton, of Philadelphia, recently visited Pittsburgh, for the purpose of raising moneys in aid of the erection of a Methodist Protestant Church, now in progress, in the city where he resides. How much, think you, he received these hard times? In his report, he says he has secured $1,500,—received the promise of 500 dollars more; that one brother gave 500 dollars, and others 100 dollars; and some out of the church 100 dollars, others 50 dollars, &c.—Pittsburgh, well done!

With pleasure, we acknowledge the receipt of "Bicknell's Reporter, Counterfeit Detector, and General Prices Current" from Philadelphia, Pa. This is a mammoth sheet, not only attending with ability to the subjects named in its title, but to domestic and foreign news—dedicating, also, a portion of its columns to literature and articles of amusement. The "Reporter" is published every Thursday by Matthew T. Miller, at his Bank Note Exchange, No. 76, South 3d street, opposite the Philadelphia Exchange. Terms, three dollars per annum, in advance; or five dollars for two years' subscription. Advertising, ten dollars per square, per annum.

The Court of Common Pleas has been in session in this town for the three past weeks. The regular jury was dismissed on Saturday evening last. There were three convictions for the Penitentiary, during the term. Among them was one of the Greens to whom we alluded in a former paper, as having murdered Thompson. He was found guilty of man-slaughter. A motion was made for a new trial, which was not decided when our paper went to press. The other two Greens remain yet to be tried, having chosen to have their case investigated at the Supreme Court, which will not set for near a year to come. One of these two latter is the most guilty, having done the deed of murder,—the rest looking on and consenting.

THE MARKETS.

Zanesville—Wheat is still 50 cents; Flour 3 a 3 35.

Pittsburgh—Wheat, the 30th ult., was 50 cents and Flour 3 50 a 3 75.—Harris' Intel.

New York, Nov. 27—Ohio Flour, via canal, 6 25. Exportations from 1st to the 20th Nov., 48,688 bbls.—Brother Jonathan.

Philadelphia, Dec. 2—Flour 6 25 a 6 37½.—Bicknell.

Baltimore, Nov. 30—Flour 6 12½ a 6 25.—Beef on foot 6 a 7 50. Hogs 7 a 7 50—"Cutters show little disposition to pay over 6 per 100 lbs."—Lyford's Price Current.

Cincinnati, Dec. 3—Flour 4 03 a 4 06.—Cin. Republican.

We hear of no engagements of any amount for pork; some has been sold for 4 dollars.

From Bicknell's Reporter.

TEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

The steam packet British Queen arrived at New York, at nine o'clock on Saturday night, with 190 passengers, after a somewhat long and tedious voyage, for a steam ship; the particulars of which will be given hereafter. By her, and through the attention of the efficient newspaper agent in Liverpool, Mr. Wilmer, we have files of the Liverpool and London journals to the second of November, and we are thus enabled to publish the news at the same moment with the New York morning journals of to-day.

We proceed to annex all the details which possess the slightest interest for American readers.

The English Money Market.—The intelligence on this head is decidedly favorable. Money was easier at the latest dates, and a better feeling prevailed.—Consols left off at 90 1-4 to 90 3-8, which is a very slight advance since our last.—Bank of England Stock stood at 180. We believe the last quotation was 178. A report of the suspension of specie payments by the Bank of England, was circulated in this city after the arrival of the mail, but it was doubtless altogether unfounded, as we meet with nothing of the kind in the English papers.

Parliament had been further prorogued to the 23th of December.

The Queen and Prince Albert Coburg are constantly together, and little doubt was entertained of matrimonial arrangement between them.

The Cotton Market.—The Liverpool papers to the 30th, shew a decline in Cotton, of 1-4; it rallied slightly on the 31st and the demand was pretty brisk. The Liverpool Standard of the 1st has the following:

There has been a moderate business done throughout the week, but without any alteration in prices; the sales on Tuesday were 3,500 bales, 500 for export, and 700 on speculation; on Wednesday 4,500 bales to the trade—American at 5¾d. to 2d, under 600 Surat at 5¼, to-day about 5,000 bales of all kinds.

Wheat and Flour.—There was a slight decline in prices up to November 2d, the latest average weekly quotation of Mark Lane bring 66s. 5d. per qr.; whereas the mean of six weeks, was 63s. 2d. The duty is 16s. 8d.

Earthquakes in Scotland.—Shocks of earthquakes had been felt in various parts of Scotland. They had been felt in Fife, Perthshire, Alloway, and various other sections of that country.

Attack upon Louis Phillipe.—An attack was made upon the King of the French, on the 25th ult., by a maniac named Stephanie Girault, who threw a stone into the royal carriage, and was immediately apprehended.

An Important Concession.—Mr. Wheaton, agent of the United States, has obtained an important concession from the Congress of the German Customs. They have granted a reduction of duty on the principal article of import from the United States—which we naturally conclude to be cotton.

The Empress of Russia was dangerously ill.

An opulent banker, says a Paris paper, "came unexpectedly, a short time back, into a fortune of nearly 10,000,000f.—He immediately gave 800,000f. to each of his five brothers and sisters, and has since offered his hand, with the remaining 4,000,000f. to a young orphan lady."

Georgia and Maine.—The Legislature of Maine having "declined taking any measures to give satisfaction to the State of Georgia for the violation of its constitutional rights, by the refusal of Governor Dunlap and Governor Kent to deliver up to its authorities upon their demand the fugitives from its justice, Philbrook and Kelleran," Governor Gilmer says the latter State will be justified in declaring by law that all citizens of Maine who may come within its jurisdiction on board any vessel as owners, officers, or mariners, shall be considered as doing so with the intent to commit the crime of seducing negro slaves from their owners, and will be dealt with accordingly by the officers of justice.

Liberty and its Uses.—Our fathers shed their blood, and parted with every thing else for liberty; and we talk loud about it; but after all, is it worth any thing? What is it good for? Every man likes to be free himself, and have his own way; and talks of his rights, perhaps, when he is restrained; and while every man thinks that himself should be free, there are thousands who think other men are not fit to be free, and that it were better that ignorant men, and poor men, and vicious men, should have no hand in managing the government, and should only be governed. But our fathers fought for liberty, not for the sake of exercising their own self-complacency, but for its benefits in society. They rejected the arrogant assumptions of Lords spiritual and Lords temporal, and asserted that sovereignty was in the people by Divine appointment. They claimed that sovereignty in the people by the arrangement and behest of the Jehovah; and they inferred that it was so in wisdom, and for great and noble purposes of human happiness. They did not ask their rights from kings as a matter of favor, but claimed them by a better title,—each man a king himself, and born a king, as much as any other man on earth. They claimed that their liberty, civil and religious, was their own property, and more valuable than money, and that he should attempt to rob them of liberty, was as wicked a robber as he who robs on the highway, and as boldly and desperately to be resisted.

After all, what is liberty good for?—We answer, it constitutes the very basis of human greatness. Take away from man the liberty of action, and he becomes indolent; and take away from him the liberty to speak out his opinions, and he ceases to think, and he becomes a fool. Without liberty men sink down to the level of the beasts in energy, and much below them in viciousness. But set him free, let him know that what he acquires of money or fame shall be his,—that his thoughts and opinions he may freely express and publish for his own benefit and to persuade his fellow-men—that the results of his physical and intellectual efforts may be brought forth and used unrestrained,—the whole range of ambition, and usefulness, and wealth is free to him,—and you rouse him into energy which nothing can resist. The roughnesses of the world are smoothed, its distances overcome, its resources discovered, its products collected, manufactured and distributed, and energy and gladness go hand in hand. Out of liberty grows well regulated and yet buoyant and vigorous society—and faithfulness and honor in all the relations of life. If you would know what liberty is worth, compare what was done in fifteen centuries of priestcraft and tyranny, with what has been done in half a century of liberty.—Compare Rome with New England.—Journal of Commerce.

Business Department.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS OF THIS PAPER.

1. In remitting money, give the person's name, to whom credit is to be given, the State in which he lives, and the Post-office where he receives his paper.

2. In forwarding subscribers, be careful to give the Post-office, county and State, where the papers are to be sent, writing the name, office and county in a fair hand.

3. When a paper is to be transferred, give the place whence it is to be taken, as well as the place where it is to be directed.

4. In all cases where moneys are paid for papers, receipts should be taken; without these we shall consider our subscribers responsible. Experience in conducting a paper, has shown us that attention to this rule is essentially necessary to secure justice to a publisher.

5. Our paper is $2 per annum on the reception of the first No. On the first opportunity, therefore, be so good as to hand this amount to an agent, or remit, post paid, (except $10 be sent) by mail, at our risk. If any of our agents have made different stipulations with subscribers as it respects the time of payment, we cheerfully abide their arrangement. But in all other cases, and in future, we shall expect our "Terms" to be complied with. This will be absolutely necessary to enable us to continue our paper.

Credits will be given in our paper for the moneys we have received.

☞All the travelling preachers are considered agents for this paper.

Received Payment for first Volume of the Recorder.—Of Wm. Hamilton, Gratiot, $2, from No. 15, vol. 1; of M. N. Warren, 2, for Jos. Evans; of Jos. Thrap, 2, for W. Ogle; of J. Huntsman 10, for J. McCoy, T. Scott, F. Scott, J. Scott, and N. Haynes; of J. Barnes 1,62 (this letter cost 37½) of W. W. Paul, 2 for C. Little; of J. Hibben, 3; of J. Thrap, 2, for J. Gorsuch; of W. Besant, 2; of J. Robinson, 3 for Mrs. E. Rogers, 2, and G. Kell 1; of C. Woodruff, 4 for C. Clancy, and Jefferson Sears, Widow Woods; C. J. Sears, Woodgrove, we have it—is it right? of B. Ely, 2, for J. Slade; of D. Y. Ostrom, 2, for P. R. Hitt, and W. Stoneman; of F. Cochran, 2; of T. Fairchild, 5, for W. Hill, R. Stevenson, and W. Yontz, 1; of H. Wilcox, 2, for P. Frink.

Letters Received.—W. Hamilton, M. N. Warren, Joseph Thrap, as you did not tell us where, we will send W. McConnell's paper to Hanover; G. Hughes, J. Huntsman, J. Barnes, W. W. Paul, J. Hibbon, Jos. Thrap, J. Robinson, we have been sending the paper regularly to R. Smiley, E. Liberty; B. Ely, H. B. Smith, D. Y. Ostrom, we cannot come; Geo. Brown, T. Fairchild, T. Foster, A. K. Earl, and H. Wilcox.

The Post Master at Pittsburgh, informs us that W. Cox, does not call for his paper. Will Bro. Dalby see to this thing and inform us about it?

A. K. Earl, says: "Asa Sperry, of Morgan, Ashtabula, wishes to know whether it is expected he is to pay for the Recorder he gets, or whether Z. Ragan, who ordered it, intended it as a present?" You must ask Mr. Ragan. We cannot afford to present it to him.

Lyford's Baltimore Price Current,

AND INTERNAL IMPROVEMENT JOURNAL,

IS published every Saturday Morning, at No. 26, second street, first door west of the northern entrance of the Exchange. W. G. Lyford, Editor and Proprietor.

TERMS.

Five Dollars per annum, Three Dollars for six months, Two Dollars for three months, } Payable in Advance.

Twelve and a half cents for a single sheet.

VARIETY.

Mr. Pierpont has been requested to take up his connexion again with Hollis street church, Boston, by a vote of 57 to 5.

VELOCITY OF LIGHTNING.—It has lately been ascertained, by a series of ingenious experiments, that the velocity at which lightning, or the electric fluid, moves, is not less then 200,000 miles in a single second of time!

SCARCITY OF MONEY.—Although the people of New York complain of hard times, yet agreeable to late computations, there were ten thousand dollars expended in that city, on one day for amusement.—Sixty thousand dollars a week—not so slow.

CURE FOR THE WHOOPING COUGH.—A tea-spoonful of castor oil to a table-spoonful of molasses; a tea-spoonful of the mixture to be given whenever the cough is troublesome. It will afford relief at once, and in a few days it effects a cure. The same remedy relieves the croup, however violent the attack.

HORSE RACING.—The Corsair, speaking of racing, says "the yearly improvement in our race of horses, is most visible in all those sections of country, were this pastime is established." This certainly is a great mistake. Nearly all the horse racing is done south of the Potomac, and nearly all the fine horses are found north of it. The best horses come from Vermont, New Hampshire and Western New York, where a race course is looked upon almost with horror and from these sections of the country, the people from the racing sections send for their supply of horse.—Providence Journal.

SEED CORN.—A correspondent says—"Several circumstances incline me to the belief that corn which has been sprouted—no matter in what steep—is safe from the ravages of the red or wire-worm. It has been fashionable to steep in a strong solution of copperas, and to ascribe the safety of the seed in this state, not to the change which fermentation has produced in the germ, which is usually first attacked, but to the change in its taste from the copperas. We have known corn soaked in simple water—in water alone—to escape from the worm, as well as that soaked in a copperas steep. Until this matter is made more certain, however, I would hold it bad husbandry to neglect the copperas."

EXCUSES FOR NOT GOING TO CHURCH.—There is no excuse so trivial, that will not pass upon some men's consciences to excuse their attendance at the public worship of God. Some are so unfortunate as to be always indisposed on the Lord's day, and think nothing so unwholesome as the air of the church. Others have their affairs so oddly contrived as to be always unluckily prevented by business. With some it is a great work of wit and deep understanding to stay at home on Sundays. Others again discover strange fits of laziness, that seize them particularly on that day, and confine them to their beds. Others are absent out of mere contempt for religion. And lastly there are a few who look upon it as a day of rest, and therefore claim the privilege of their castle, to keep the Sabbath by eating and sleeping, after the toil and labor of the week. Now in all this, the worst circumstance is, that these persons are such whose companies are most required, and who stand most in need of a physician.—Dean Swift.

"IS HE RICH."—Many a sigh is heaved, many a life rendered miserable, by the terrible infatuation which parents often evince in choosing a life companion for their daughters. How is it possible for happiness to result from the union of two principles so diametrically opposed to each other in point of view as virtue is to vice? And yet how often is the first question which is asked respecting a suitor of a daughter, "is he rich?"

Is he rich? Yes, he abounds in wealth—but does that afford any evidence that he will make a kind and affectionate husband?

Is he rich? Yes, his clothing is purple and fine linen, and he fares sumptuously every day—but can you infer from this that he is virtuous?

Is he rich? Yes, he has thousands floating on every ocean; but do not riches take to themselves wings and fly away?—and will you consent that your daughter shall marry a man who has nothing to recommend him but wealth? Ah! beware! the gilded bait sometimes cover a barded hook. Ask not then, 'Is HE RICH?' but 'Is HE VIRTUOUS?' Ask not if he has wealth, but if he has honor; do not sacrifice your daughter's peace for money.

OUR NATURALIZED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.—Vegetables were imported from the Netherlands in 1500, there being no kitchen gardens in England. Before this time, sugar was eaten with meat, to correct its putrescency. Turnips and carrots are thought to be indigenous roots of France. Our cauliflowers came from Cyprus, our artichokes from Sicily, lettuces from Cos, name vulgarly corrupted into Gos. Shallots, or eschallots, were bro't from Ascalon. What roving ideas, on commerce and civilization, may arise from a dinner and desert? The cherry and filberts are from Catana, in Asia Minor; the peach and walnut from Persia; the plum from Syria; the pomegranate from Cyprus; the quince from Sidon; the olive and fig from Greece, as also the best apple and pears, though also found wild in France and even in this country. The apricot is from Armenia. The mountain wines come from the mountains around Malaga; tent is tinto-tinged, or red wine. Sherry comes from Xeres-Xeres,(the Spanish X is pronounced sh, or ch,) in the south of Spain, where the great battle, fought between the Christians and the Saracens, ended in the conquest of Spain by the latter. Malmsey was from Malvasi, in the Peloponnesus, but afterwards propagated at Alicant, the Canaries and Madeira.

THE LAWYER'S PRAYER.

Lines found in the Pocket Book of D. O. H., Esq., after his Decease.*

Ordained to tread the thorny ground
Where few, I fear, are faithful found,
Mine be the conscience void of blame,
The upright heart, the spotless name;
The tribute of the widow's prayer,
The righted orphan's grateful tear;
To virtue and her friends a friend,
Still, may my voice the weak defend:
Ne'er may my prostituted tongue
Protect the oppressor in his wrong,
Nor wrest the spirit of the laws,
To sanctify a villain's cause!
Let others, with unsparing hand,
Scatter their poison through the land;
Inflame dissension, kindle strife,
And strew with ills the path of life,
On such, her gifts let fortune shower,
Add wealth to wealth, and power to power;
On me may fav'ring heaven bestow
The peace which good men only know;
The joy of joy by few possessed,
The 'ternal sunshine of the breast;
Power, fame and riches I resign,
The praise of honesty be mine,
That friends may weep the worthy sigh,
And poor men bless me when I die!

*D. O. Hudson, Esq., late of Ravenna.

HOW TO PRESERVE BOOTS.—The following extract from Colonel Maceroni's "Seasonable Hints," which appeared in the Mechanic's Magazine, dated February 3, 1838. After stating the utility of sheep skin clothing, for persons whose employment renders it necessary that they should be much out of doors, &c., he says—"I will not conclude without inviting the attention of your readers to a cheap and easy method of preserving their feet from wet, and their boots from wear. I have only had three pair of boots for the last six years (no shoes) and I think that I shall not require any others for the next six years to come! The reason is that I treat them in the following manner:—I put a pound of tallow and half a pound of rosin into a pot on the fire; when melted, and mixed, I warm the boots and apply the hot stuff with a painter's brush, until neither the soles nor upper leathers will suck in any more. If it is desired that the boots should immediately take a polish, dissolve an ounce of beeswax in an ounce of spirits of turpentine, to which add a tea-spoonful of lamp-black. A day or two after the boots have been treated with the tallow and rosin, rub over them the wax and turpentine, but not before the fire. Thus the exterior will have a coat of wax alone, and shine like a mirror. Tallow, or any grease,becomes rancid,and rots the stitching as well as the leather; but the rosin gives it an antiseptic quality which preserves the whole. Boots or shoes should be so large as to admit of wearing in them cork soles. Cork is so bad a conductor of heat, that with it in the boot, the feet are always warm on the coldest stone floor."

A CONTRAST.—VOLTAIRE AND HALYBURTON.—"Who," says Voltaire, "can, without horror, consider the whole world as the empire of destruction? It abounds with wonders; it also abounds with victims. It is a vast field of carnage and contagion. Every species is without pity pursued and torn to pieces through the earth, the air, and water. In man there is more wretchedness than in all the other animals put together. He loves life, and yet he knows that he must die. If he enjoys a transient good, he suffers various evils, and is at last devoured by worms. This knowledge is his fatal perogative: other animals have it not. He spends the transient moments of his existence in diffusing the miseries which he s[illegible]; in cutting the throats of his fell[illegible] tures for pay; in cheating, [illegible] cheated; in robbing and bein[illegible]n serving, that he might command; and in repenting of all he does. The bulk of mankind are nothing more than a crowd of wretches, equally criminal and unfortunate; and the globe contains rather carcasses than men. I tremble at the review of this dreadful picture, to find that it contains a complaint against Providence itself; and I WISH I HAD NEVER BEEN BORN."

Now let us hear the language of the excellent Halyburton, who died as he lived, full of confidence in God. "I shall shortly get a very different sight of God from what I have ever had, and shall be made meet to praise him forever and ever. O the thoughts of an incarnate Diety are sweet and ravishing. O how I wonder at myself that I do not love Him more. What a wonder that I do enjoy such composure under all my bodily pains, and in the view of death itself.—What a mercy that having the use of my reason, I can declare his goodness to my soul. I long for His salvation; I bless His name that I have found Him, and die rejoicing in Him. O blessed be God that I WAS BORN! O that I was where he is. I have a father and mother, and ten brothers and sisters, in heaven, and I shall be the eleventh. O there is a telling in this providence, and I shall be telling it for ever. If there be such a glory in His conduct towards me now, what will it be to see the Lamb in the midst of His throne? Blessed be God that—ever I WAS BORN."

We recommend the following article on ministerial punctuality, from the Cross and Journal, to the notice of all ministers. Nothing so effectually destroys public confidence in a minister of religion as the neglect of his appointments.—Editor Western Recorder.

"MINISTERIAL PUNCTUALITY.—There is a vice,—perhaps that is a harsh name,—there is then, an evil habit which prevails, we hope not very extensively among ministers, of a want of Punctuality in attending to their appointments. How such a habit could have been formed we know not, unless from indolence, and from a misconception of its results on themselves, and those who are disappointed. The consequences to themselves are of no slight nature. It weakens their influence—almost destroys their usefulness. It superinduces a negligence in other duties, till the whole ministerial character is ruined. The consequences to the congregation who are disappointed are disdisastrous. After one or two failures of a minister, the congregation will invariably decline in numbers. Some will make it a pretext for absenting themselves from meeting altogether, and others will seek those places where they will not suffer disappointment. By such negligence on the part of a minister,christians are much perplexed and tried; religion is dishonored, and a long-looked for and special effort may entirely fail. Unforeseen calamities will often enough cause disappointments, without the number being increased by negligence. Appointments had better not be made, unless there is a determination that nothing but impossibilities shall prevent their fulfilment.

"While on this subject we would allude to another practice. Some ministers are in the habit of waiting till after the appointed time has expired, for the congregation to assemble before they commence the services. Now this is the very way to make a congregation dilatory. People will generally try to be present near the commencement of the meeting, and if that begins late, they will of course come late. Were we to give a word of advice to a minister, we would say,—make no appointments but what you can probably fulfil. Attend them promptly. Commence at the appointed time—let the services not be too long—speak fervently and to the point, and pray for the blessing of heaven upon your labors. 'Be ye wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.'"

BLOWING UP OF THE WRECK OF THE ROYAL GEORGE AT SPITHEAD.—We learn with great satisfaction that Col. Pasley, with the usual success that attends well directed perseverance, has at length succeeded in firing off one of his enormous sub-marine mines of gunpowder against the wreck of the Royal George at Spithead. At two o'clock on Monday afternoon, a cylinder containing 2320 pounds of powder was carefully lowered to the bottom, where it was placed alongside the most compact portion of the wreck which has been discovered by the divers. This operation was effected by means of hauling lines rove through blocks attached to bottom of the ship by the divers. When every thing was ready, the vessel in which the voltaic battery was placed was drawn off the distance of 500 feet, which is the length of the connecting wires, and instantaneously on the circuit being completed the explosion took place, and the effects were very remarkable. At first the surface of the sea, which had before been perfectly smooth and calm, was violently agitated by a sort of tremulous motion, which threw it into small irregular waves, a few inches only in height. This lasted three or four seconds, when a huge dome of water made its appearance, of a conical or rather bee-hive shape. At first it appeared to rise slowly, but rapidly increased in height and size till it reached the altitude of twenty-eight or 30 feet in a tolerably compact mass. It then fell down and produced a series of rings, which spread in all directions. The first, or outer one of these, having the aspect of a wave several feet in height, curled and broke, as if it had been driven towards the shore. Neither the shock nor the sound was so great as had been expected by those who had witnessed the former explosions by Col. Pasley, where the quantity of powder was only 45 lbs.; but the effect produced on the water at the surface, considering that the depth was 90 feet, was truly astonishing. What the effect has been upon the wreck will not be fully ascertained by the divers till the present spring tides are over, and the long periods of slack water at the neaps enable the divers to remain for upwards of half an hour under water. In the meantime it is is highly satisfactory to know that Col. Pasley has completely established his command over the application of the voltaic battery to sub-marine purposes, and that he can now with certainty explode his charges at any depth of water. This will give him the power of placing his cylinders against the most refractory parts of the wreck, and by blowing these to pieces, and dislocating the knees, timbers and beams, enable him to draw the whole up, bit by bit, to the surface. Any person who has seen the operation of breaking up a ship on land knows that it is the only way of going to work with a mass so firmly bound together as a line of battle ship, that oven the action of fifty-seven years of decay under water goes but a small way to disintegrate the parts. The manly perseverance of Col. Pasley, therefore, we are well convinced, will in the end effectually clear the noble anchorage of Spithead of this extremely troublesome obstruction. Immense quantities of the wreck of this vessel have been picked up since the explosion on Monday, the force of which is expected almost to have shattered the wreck to pieces. On Tuesday the mainmast was picked up by the pilot on the lookout vessel belonging to the Netherlands Consul, moored at Spithead, who conveyed it to Portsmouth. It has a most extraordinary,appearance,and has excited very great curiosity. It is entirely covered with barnacles, all alive, some measuring eight inches in length.—Bell's Weekly Messenger.

THE WILD IRISHMAN.—How to pay Rent.—"You know the story of the Knight of Kerry and Billy Macabe.

"I fear I must confess my ignorance—I never heard of it."

"Then may be you never knew Giles Daxon?"

"I have not that pleasure either."

"Lord bless me how strange that is! I thought he was better known than the Duke of Wellington or the travelling piper. Well, I must tell you the story, for it has a moral, too—indeed, several morals, but you'll find out for yourself.—Well, it seems that one day the Knight of Kerry was walking along the Strand in London, killing an hour's time till the house was done prayers, and Hume tired of hearing himself speak, his eye was caught by an enormous picture displayed upon the walls of a house, representing a human figure coverd with long dark hair, with huge nails upon his hands, and with a most fearful expression of face.—At first the Knight thought it was Dr. Bowring, but, on coming nearer, he heard a man with a scarlet livery and cocked hat call out, "Walk in, ladies and gentlemen—the most wonderful curiosity ever exhibited—only one shilling—the vild man from Chipopowango, in Africa—eats raw wittals without being cooked, and many other surprising and pleasing performances." The Knight paid his money, and was admitted. At first the crowd prevented his seeing any thing—for the place was full to suffocation, and the noise awful—for, besides the exclamation and applause of the audience, there were three barrel organs playing 'Home, sweet home,' and 'Cherry Ripe;' and the wild man himself contributed his share to the uproar. At last the Knight obtained, by dint of squeezing and some pushing, a place in front, when, to his very great horror, he beheld a figure that far eclipsed the portrait without doors. It was a wild man nearly naked, covered with long shaggy hair, that grew even over his nose and cheek bones. He sprang about, sometimes on all fours, but always utterring the most fearful yells, and glaring on the crowd in a manner that was really dangerous.

The Knight did not feel exactly happy at the whole proceeding, and heartily wished himself back in the 'House,' even upon a committe of privileges, when, suddenly, the savage gave a more frantic scream than before, and seized upon a morsel of raw beef, which a keeper extended to him on a long fork like a tandem whip—he was not safe, it appears, at close quarters—this he tore to pieces eagerly, and devoured in the most voracious manner, amid great clapping of hands and other evidences of satisfaction from the audience. 'I'll go now,' thought the Knight; 'for God knows whether, in his hungry moods, he might not fancy to conclude his dinner with a member of Parliament.' Just at this instant, some sounds struck his ear that surprised him not a little. He listened more attentively; and conceive, if you can, his amazement to find that, amidst his most fearful cries and wild yells, the savage was talking Irish. Laugh, if you like; but it is truth I am telling you; nothing less than Irish. Then he was jumping four feet high in the air—eating his raw meat—pulling out his hair by handfuls—and, amid all this, cursing the whole company to his heart's content, in as good Irish as ever was heard in Tralee. Now, though the Knight had heard of white Negroes, he never happened to read any account of an African Irishman; so he listened very closely, and by degrees, not only the words were known to him, but the very voice was familiar. At length, something he heard left no further doubt upon his mind; and turning to the savage, he addressed him in Irish, at the same time fixing a look of the most scrutinizing import upon him:

"'Who are you, you scoundrel?' said the Knight.

"'Billy Macabe, your honor,'

"'And what do you mean by playing off these tricks here, instead of earning your bread like an honest man?'

"'Whisht!" said Billy, 'and keep the secret. I'm earning the rent for your honor. One must do many a queer thing that pays two pound ten an acre for bad land.'"

"This was enough; the Knight wished Billy every success, and left him amid the vociferous applause of a well satisfied audience. The adventure, it seems, has made the worthy Knight a great friend to the introduction of poor-laws; for he remarks, very truly, that more of Billy's countrymen might take a fancy to a savage life if the secret were found out.—Dublin University Magazine.

Session Paper.

THE OHIO CONFEDERATE and OLD SCHOOL REPUBLICAN will be published twice a week during the approaching session of the General Assembly.

We will furnish it four months, from the 1st of December, for one dollar and fifty cents.

The assistance of our friends who are already in the reception of the paper, and acquianted with its character, is respectfully solicited, in procuring and sending us the names of any who may wish to receive it.

JOHN G. MILLER, Ed. & Pro.

Columbus, November 14, 1839. 13

For Sale.

LARGE MAPS of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations,Land Districts,Townships,&c. engraved from the government surveys and plans in the General Land Office, Washington city, by E. Gilman, Draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. TAYLOR, Book Seller, Washington city, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are published on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State, as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Offices relative to water courses, township lines, Indian Land Reservations, Land Districts, &c., and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in these points. They can be sent to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. Price $2, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for $5. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or any who will buy to sell again. Dec. 10, 1839. 3t16

☞Editors of newspapers any where who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it to the advertiser.

New York Mirror.

☞THE PRESENT VOLUME.

THE conductors of the New York Mirror are determined that no periodical in the world shall exceed this in the interest and variety of its literary contents, the elegance and finish of its pictorial embellishments, the beauty and popularity of its music, and the neatness and superiority of its typographical appearance.

The number for the 19th of October is adorned with one of the most costly and magnificent steel engravings ever published in this or any other country. It is a representation of the "Landing at Jamestown," painted and designed by Chapman, and engraved by Danforth, two American artists of whom their country may be justly proud.

This is the third exquisite engraving that has already appeared in the present volume of the Mirror, the first number of which was issued on the first of July last, all the numbers of which can be supplied to new subscribers, if immediate application be made.

The New York Mirror is the oldest, and unquestionably, the cheapest periodical, extant.—Every number contains a great variety of useful, interesting and amusing matter, on every subject connected with polite literature and the fine arts; and they form, at the end of the year, an immense volume of four hundred and sixteen imperial quarto pages, with vignette title-page, table of contents, splendid engravings, and fifty pieces of popular music, arranged for the piano-forte, guitar, &c.—a library in itself—and all this is afforded at the very trifling cost of five dollars a year, a sum almost inadequate for the extraordinary equivalent rendered to subscribers.

Six superb engravings (including three now issued) will be given, engraved by Danforth, Parker, etc. from original designs and portraits by Weir, Inman, Chapman, etc.

A number of curious etchings on wood will also be published in the present volume, engraved by Adams, Anderson, Johnson, etc. from original designs.

Nothing shall be left undone to render this work, in its literary character, its engravings, its music, and its typography, equal, if not superior, to any periodical of the day.

CONDITIONS.—The Mirror is published every Saturday, at No. 1, Barclay-street, next door to Broadway. It is elegantly printed in the extra super-royal quarto form, with brevier, minion and nonpariel type. It is embellished once every three months, with a SPLENDID SUPER-ROYAL QUARTO ENGRAVING, and every week with a popular piece of MUSIC, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, etc. For each volume an exquisitely engraved VIGNETTE TITLE-PAGE, and a copious INDEX, are furnished. The terms are $5 per annum, payable, in all cases, IN ADVANCE.

December 10, 1839. 3t16

Brother Jonathan.

THE LARGEST PAPER IN THE WORLD.

THE proprietors of this sheet—the "Great Western" among the newspapers, have the pleasure of spreading before the reading public a weekly periodical containing a greater variety and amount of useful and entertaining miscellany, than is to be found in any similar publication in the world.

Each number of the paper contains as large an amount of reading matter as is found in volumes of ordinary duodecimo, which cost two dollars—and more than is contained in a volume of Irving's Columbus, or Bancroft's History of America, which cost three dollars a volume—and all for SIX CENTS a number, or Three Dollars a year.

BROTHER JONATHAN being a genuine Yankee, and thinking that some things can be done as well as others, is determined to present his readers a MEDLEY hitherto unrivalled by any other paper of Anecdotes, Amusements, Allegories, Accidents, Biography, Bon Mots, Conversation, Crimes, Dramatics, Drolleries, Erratics, Essays, Eloquence, Facetia, Geography, History, Jests, Learning, Morality, Marvels, Music, News, Novelties, Oratory, Poetry, Philosophy, Quiddities, Religion, Romance, Sports, Spectacles, Sorrows, Sufferings, Tales, Trials, Truths, Teachings, Wisdom, Wonders, Wit, &c. &c.

As a family newspaper, BROTHER JONATHAN will be found to present attractions beyond any other.

——"He comes the herald of a noisy world,
News from all nations lumbering at his back."

The earliest intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, and the latest novelties of the Literary World, will be promptly served up for the gratification of the reader.

Strictly neutral in politics, it will contain nothing in favor or against any party, and will as seduously avoid any of the controversies which agitate the religious community. Strict morality, temperance, industry and good order, benevolence, and usefulness to our common country and our fellow men, will be advocated and in every page of Brother Jonathan.

TERMS OF BROTHER JONATHAN—Three Dollars a year in advance.

For five dollars two copies will be sent one year, or one copy two years.

The EVENING TATTLER is published every day at the same office, and is put to press at meridian, in season for the great Northern, Eastern and Southern mails, which all close about two o'clock, P. M.

☞All country papers who give this prospectus three insertions, will be entitled to an exchange, on sending a number of their paper to this office containing the advertisement.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed postage paid to

GRISWOLD & COMPANY,
162 Nasau-street New York city.

November 14, 1839. 13

Ohio State Journal.

FOR THE SESSION.

IN consonance with previous usages, the proprietor of the Ohio State Journal submits the following prospectus to the consideration of the people of Ohio. The political character of the Journal is so well known, that no new comments are necessary to explain it. It is unequivocally opposed to the administration of Martin Van Buren, and of all the mad schemes of himself and his advisers. The Journal will continue steadily in the path of its long avowed and long cherished principles. Success cannot corrupt it, nor defeat intimidate it. As a faithful sentinel on the watch-tower of American liberty, it will always be found awake on its post.

During the winter, abundance of interesting matter may be expected from the halls of our State Legislature. The work of BANK REFORM is to be finished, by the majority who now rule triumphant, and we, in common with the whole State, feel anxious to investigate its operation and its progress. Our attention will be given to the subject most amply and unreservedly.

In every other respect, the Ohio State Journal will adhere to its original plan and character.—It will be, emphatically, a NEWSPAPER, in whose columns may be found all the interesting events of the day. Congressional reports, Foreign and Domestic intelligence, together with the opinions of our cotemporories of the Press, and occasional dranghts from the pens of our literati, will form an agreeable variety. A generous support is requested.

TERMS.—Daily Ohio State Journal, $3 00
Tri-weekly " " 2 00
Semi-weekly " " 1 50
Weekly, " " 1 00

☞All payments must be invariably in advance. CHARLES SCOTT, Pub'r.

Columbus, November 14, 1839. 13

The Ohio Statesman.

SESSION PAPER.

ACCORDING to custom, we again present to the people of Ohio our prospectus for a paper during the session of the Legislature. Many persons who do not find it convenient to subscribe for a paper printed at this place for a whole year, do so during the sitting of the Legislature, being desirous of seeing what is done by those in whose keeping they have entrusted the affairs of the State. To accommodate this just desire in the people to be thoroughly acquainted with every thing appertaining to their happiness and welfare, we have in this prospectus extended facilities and favors beyond what has been customary. We shall issue during the session a weekly paper (free of advertisements,) at fifty cents—a semi-weekly at one dollar—a tri-weekly at two dollars, and a daily at three dollars. By this arrangement, we will be able to accommodate every portion of the State by all the mails, and we hope our friends will not be remiss in availing themselves of these means of information. It is all important that every freeman should be fully acquainted with every question touching the welfare of the State and nation.

The approaching session of the Ohio Legislature will be a most important one. No previous one has ever had the same number of delicate and exciting questions to meet and act upon—questions which cannot be avoided, nor disposed of in a moment. Among these are our Internal Improvements, and the expenditures under them. The condition of our Banks, and the banking system under the second suspension. The revision of the laws, as collated under an act of the last Legislature. The apportionment of the State into Senatorial and Representative districts, and an equitable taxation by a re-valuation of property, will be discussed. All these questions have been confided, by the overwhelming voice of intelligent freemen to the care and keeping of the democratic party, and it is important that that party should meet them in sober earnestness, and in that spirit of candor and patriotism which they will bring together, for the public good.

We shall also give such sketches of the doings of Congress as we conceive of immediate interest to the State, by the earliest aid of correspondents.

By the aid of a daily and tri-weekly paper, we shall be able to throw out the earliest Eastern news, Foreign and Domestic, which we hope will not be overlooked by those desiring such information, and with the aid of a power press, on a new and improved model, we expect to add greatly to the facility of preparing our papers for the mails, without the loss even of an hour. We ask only such support as corresponds with our exertions to make our paper useful to the public.

TERMS OF THE SESSION PAPER.—☞Persons receiving this paper will consider themselves agents—and for five subscribers one gratis will be sent.

Weekly Ohio Statesman, $0 50
Semi-weekly " 1 00
Tri-weekly " 2 00
Daily " 3 00

☞All payments must be in advance or reference to a member of the Legislature.

S. & M. H. MEDARY.

Columbus, Nov. 14, 1839. 13

THE
WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

A. H. Bassett, A. Sec.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1839. Number 17.

Extracts from the Minutes of the fourth session of the Illinois Annual Conference
OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

The fourth session of the Illinois Annual Conference of the Methodist P. Church, convened at Canton, Fulton county, Illinois, on Wednesday the 11th of September, 1839, and was organized by electing J. Williamson, President, pro tem, (Wm. H. Collins, not having arrived,) and M. T. Johnson, Secretary. The following ministerial members of the Conference were present, viz: Wm. H. Collins, M. T. Johnson, R. Horn, J. Williamson, P. J. Strong, M. Jarred, R. Wright, N. Winters, R. Miller. Ministerial members not present, D. Tunnel, S. T. Taylor, J. Sims, T. Bennett, J. Bloom, E. Mercer, Wm. Colwell, M. Osborn. The lay delegates present, were Robert Baily, and T. Prather, from Bellville circuit—J. Osborn, Carrolton, Wm. Jarred, and R. Stephens, Canton, J. Kirkpatrick and W. S. Horn, Illinois, B. C. Johnson, Grandview, Geo. Johnson, Bureau. The following brethren were received into the Itinerancy, viz: Wm. Whipp, S. Clark, D. Homer, R. McDaniel, Wm. Miller, Wm. H. Miller, Wm. Patterson, Benjamin C. Johnson, J. Hawkins, Peter Stafford, A. Baxter, T. Prather, R. T. Boid was admitted into this Conference on presenting proper vouchers from Maryland Conference. Elected to Deacon's orders—Wm. Miller, J. Hawkins, and B. C. Johnson.* Elected to Elder's orders—R. McDaniel, Wm. H. Miller, P. Stafford, Wm. Busic, J. T. Fleming, N. Winters, and M. Jarred. All marked thus * were ordained at Conference. John Kirkpatrick was elected Conference Steward. Elected stationing committee, R. Horn, and R. Miller, ministers; John Kirkpatrick and Wm. Jarred, laymen.

The ministers and preachers were stationed as follows, viz: Wm. H. Collins, President. Grandview circuit, R. Wright. Vermillion, B. C. Johnson. Bureau, P. J. Strong and Wm. H. Miller. Canton, R. Miller. Mississippi, S. Clark, one to be supplied. Pittsfield, P. Stafford. Illinois, Wm. Whipp and R. Horn. Carrolton, R. T. Boid and D. Tunnel. Alton station, T. Prather. Madison, D. Homer. Shoal Creek circuit, J. Hawkins. Bellville, M. Jarred. Saline, Wm. Patterson and Wm. Miller. Springfield mission, M. T. Johnson. Lazwell mission, A. Baxter.—Okaw mission, R. McDaniel. Iowa and Missouri mission, N. Winters. J. Bloom, J. Williamson, and M. Osborn, left to be employed by the President. T. Bennett, E. Mercer, and S. T. Taylor, transferred to the superanuated list. Wm. Colwell transferred to the unstationed list.

EXHIBIT OF THE CONFERENCE STEWARD.

Circuits and Stations.	Preachers' claim.	Received,	Deficiency,	President's sal.	Received,	Deficiency,
Bellville circuit, S. T. Taylor,	$68.65	68 65	—	24 00	24 89	—
Madison, do.	no	report,	—	14 00	7 31¼	6 68¾
Carrolton, D. Tunnell,	no	charge,	—	10 00	13 75	—
Alton station, D. Homer,	no	charge,	—	20 00		20 00
Illinois, M. T. Johnson,	100 00	100 00	—	85 00	85 00	—
Mississippi, R. Wright,	100 00	75 75	24 25	25 00	15 62½	9 37½
Canton, M. Jarred,	100 00	85 00	15 00	22 00	22 00	—
Bureau, P. J. Strong,	200 00	151 75	48 25	14 00	8 29	5 77
Grandview, R. Miller,	100 00	95 00	5 00	45 00	19 81¼	25 18¾
Pittsfield, N. Winters,	no	charge,	—	22 00	10 72½	11 37½
Saline, Wm. Miller, six months,	no	charge,	—	17 00	8 12½	8 87½
Pacon mission, R. Horn,	no	charge,	—	—	14 93¼	—

REPORT OF NUMBERS, &C.

Circuits. Unstationed Ministers and Preachers.	Members,	President's sal.
Bureau and Rock-river mission, Oswell Cope,	99	$35.00
Canton, J. T. Fleming, J. S. Willins,	85	33 00
Illinois, J. D. Spencer, J. Fox, J. Ranson, J. Biddlecome, Wm. Colwell, J. Drinkwater, D. Hamaker,	191	66 00
Grandview, H. Doil, J. Wampler,	82	29 00
Vermillion, Wm. Busic,	81	28 00
Mississippi, Levi Shinn,	78	27 00
Pittsfield, J. Turabaugh, T. Jones,	50	17 00
Carrolton, C. J. Guardner, S. Watson, I. Osborn,	25	9 00
Alton station,	6	—
Madison, R. Bailey,	32	9 00
Bellville, J. Hale,	55	20 00
Saline, Geo. Beavy, E. Lacy, two other names not recollected,	60	21 00
Springfield mission, James Hussey,	8	6 00
Lazwell do.	8	6 00
Shoal creek circuit,	37	15 00
Iowa and Missouri mission,	10	4 00
Okaw do.	1	—
Total,	907	325 00

Concluded in our next.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Steubenville, Ohio, Dec. 2, 1839.

Mr. Editor:—Since my last communication, it hath pleased God to favor me with pretty good health and strength, to labor in the vineyard of our Divine Redeemer. On Suttonsville circuit, whence I wrote you last, our people have no meeting houses. This is truly a difficulty in the way of large and popular meetings. The court-house where we held our principal meeting is neither large nor commodious—we have no society there. Still, from the impression apparently made, and the wishes expressed by some, who appeared to be persons of influence, I trust, one may be formed there before very long—brother Lawson is well received. After preaching at two other places, in private houses, I returned to Weston circuit, where I preached five times; twice in the town of Weston, and three times at the Quarterly meeting at Harmony meeting-house. The Quarterly meeting was truly a good one; there were many seeking the Lord. Some found the pearl of great price, and nine were added to the church, at the close of the love-feast, on Monday. Brother Clawson's family had just got on—all in good health. It does seem to me, that our good brother Clawson is now situated in the midst of a field of labor, where he can be extensively useful. God has given him the hearts of the people in general; and I doubt not, but he will, if faithful, bring many of them, through the instrumentality of his labors, to enjoy the great salvation, procured for sinners, by Christ our Lord. From Weston circuit, I proceeded to Clarksburgh circuit; after preaching at Millford once and Clarksburgh twice, I reached the quarterly meeting on Rooty creek, fifteen miles from Clarksburgh. This was a valuable meeting. Some were added to the church—others gave signs of penitence, and I trust, the well meant and faithfully bestowed labors of that meeting, will be attended by much fruit unto life eternal. Brother Simonton, is now under a very heavy responsibility in that region of our Lord's Vineyard, because he enjoys a high amount of public confidence. The Lord grant him grace, to employ all his influence in the promotion of Zion's prosperity.

I then passed on by Pruntytown, Morgantown, and Cheat Neck, preaching as I went, to large and attentive congregations, and reached the Union circuit in due time. It was the time of their Quarterly meeting in Connelsville. Here, I saw many highly esteemed old friends—preached five times to large congregations—had much religious and social enjoyment—saw God's children revived and encouraged. As to awakenings, there appeared to be but few. The sinners of that place, so far as my labors were concerned, appeared to be too mighty for the truth. So, to God and their own consciences I left them, and returned to Uniontown; and preached on Wednesday night, and on Thursday night in Monroe: congregations pretty good. Success, in these places, will I trust, at no very distant day, attend our standard of Mutual Rights. Brothers Robinson and Shearer have much public confidence, and being young, zealous, and enterprising, will hardly be able to live without a revival this year. On the Brownsville circuit, brother Baldwin is beginning to make a pretty fair impression. The Lord stand by him in mercy. I attended his Quarterly meeting in Bridgeport, preached four times with all my strength. The love-feast and sacrament were good seasons. I trust good was done, to the souls of christians, at least. I fear sinners here, were not much profited. However, God is to be the judge. On Wednesday afternoon, I reached home, after an absence of more than eight weeks—found all in middling health, and was immediately called to mourn the death of my beloved friend and brother-in-law, Benjamin H. Hodgson, who died in the Lord, 22d ultimo, in the city of Cincinnati,—a man of sterling christian integrity, and of very superior business habits. O my soul! keep silence, for God hath done this thing. I have just now returned from a pleasant meeting on Ohio circuit. Brothers Herbert and Ross are there, and are much beloved. God grant them success this year.

The above tour of ministerial labor, was pretty much within the bounds of the District I rode in former years, when Presiding Elder in the Methodist Episcopal church. Many of my friends are dead. Those yet lingering upon the earth, whether in the old or new church, treated me with the utmost kindness, and from all quarters attended my ministry. My soul was refreshed to see them, and I trust to meet them in heaven.

In conclusion, please publish the following appointments. January 5, 1840, Steubenville station. Wellsville station, 12th. New-Lisbon station, 19th. Youngstown circuit, 26th. Mahoning circuit, February 2d. Deersville circuit, 9th. Georgetown circuit, 16th. Mt. Pleasant circuit, 23d. Then home. Should God spare my life, I design toiling on throughout the winter, and I hope for success in the holy cause of religion and religious liberty. Yours truly,

George Brown.

December 5, 1839.

Brother Springer:—I forward to you by Bro. Fairchild, five new subscribers for the "Western Recorder." I am happy to inform you, that the paper is well received. Our people are pleased with such a medium of communication for the West. The cause of Mutual Rights is advancing. I aided Bro. Richardson to hold a Quarterly meeting in Deersville, on the 24th of September, that was profitable. Good intimations are manifest on many parts of the circuit.

Yours, &c. Thomas Foster.

Pennsville, Ohio, Dec. 4, 1839.

Mr. Editor:—Our members, or many of them, are, we believe, seeking full salvation. We hope that our itinerant and unstationed ministers will loose no opportunity in pressing holiness of heart upon the people, and in exemplifying the same in their own department. If our liberal principles were exemplified by a holy life in the ministry and membership, we should be able to take a useful stand among other churches, and contribute our mite in promoting the salvation of the world. Let us cultivate friendly feelings towards all denominations of christians.

Yours in the bonds, &c.

D. Y. Ostrom, Sup.
Pennsville Ct.

Morgan, Ohio, Dec. 4, 1839.

Brother Springer:—I commenced my labors on this circuit, on the 6th of October. Our religious prospects are improving. We have held our first Quarterly meeting, and a good impression seemed to be made. We have only received five members into the church; but we have learned not to despise the day of small things.—Our members, generally, appear engaged, and we are looking and praying that God would revive his work among us. Yours, &c.

A. K. Earl, Superintendent of Grand River circuit.

Warren County, O., November 19, 1839.

FERVENT PRAYER.

Brother Springer:—I have thought that we Protestant Methodists depend more on our liberal principles of church government for prosperity, than on being found at a throne of Grace. Verily, it appears that some of our brethren believe that correct principles will do every thing for themselves and the church, both, as to its spiritual and temporal interest, without any exertion on their part. To be sure, a number of them add the labor and toil of the preachers to our liberal principles, and conclude that all will be well. Let us inquire a little into this matter, and see if there is not something else to be done before we have a just right to the title of "Reformers." Are there not hundreds of our members who neglect one of the most profitable and honorable means of Grace?—to wit: secret prayer. I say the most honorable, because there can be no higher dignity conferred on a poor worm of this earth, than to be permitted to approach the infinitely great, holy and eternal God, in secret audience. We think it an honor to be admitted into the company and converse with the great men of the earth,—and especially if they have invited us with a promise, that we should not go away empty. Has not the King of kings invited, commanded and promised, that whatsoever we ask in His name, the Father will give it to us? And, did he not say, "While ye pray, believe that ye receive, and ye shall have it?" Now, it is impossible for God to lie, or deceive us; and the reason why our faith is too weak to lay hold on His gracious promises is, that we do not pray as we ought. And if ten or fifteen minutes were devoted, about three times each day, in secret prayer, by all our brethren, the glorious consequence would be, first, their own spirits would be fired, and they would be able to pray more fervently and regularly in their families, and in their social prayer meetings.—And, when attending on the blessed Gospel, they would be able to exercise more faith, and the preacher would have more liberty; as the good old proverb says: "A praying people make a preaching minister." 2d. The love of God influencing their hearts, they would love one another with pure hearts, fervently. Thus united, prayer and love ruling the hearts of the members, the preacher would be able to preach in faith, and the Word, as in former days, would be as sharp arrows in the hearts of the King's enemies. 3d. They would soon feel an humble assurance that they obeyed the Saviour's command, "love not the world, nor the things of the world," &c. Their thoughts would not be engaged so much in laying plans how they might lay up great treasure on earth. They would think of the Saviour's words again, "where your treasure is, there will your hearts be also."—They would study how they might do the most good, and lay their plans so as not to be hindred from attending their regular meetings—Quarterly meetings, Protracted meetings, &c. And as true religion always inspires the soul with a spirit of liberality, they would make their calculations to give according as the Lord had prospered them, to the support of the Gospel. In a word, the humble, fervent praying soul, will be zealous in all good works; duty will not be a burden, nor worship a task. He will be as zealous for God and His cause, and for the conversion of poor sinners, as he ever was for the things of the world,—crucified to the world and the world to him; glorying only in the Lord. This is "Reformation."

And, now dear brothers, suffer me to beg, for God's sake, for Christ's sake, for consistency's sake, for your own souls' sake, for the sake of perishing sinners, for the sake of Zion, and for the sake of liberal principles of ecclesiastical polity, which we talk so much about. Awake! awake! put on strength,—arise! arise! into the likeness of our blessed Redeemer, and then we shall advance—terrible as an army with banners.

O! thou great and holy one,
Who invites us to thy throne;
Through the merits of a Saviour,
Thou hast promised us thy favor.

Sure a more exalted place,
(Lowly at a throne of Grace,)
There on earth can not be given,
Where the soul is raised to heaven.

Earthly honors all are dead,
When to Christ the soul has fled,
In humble prayer where God alone
Pours His choicest blessings down.

An Old Pioneer.

A woman who is always shedding tears, must have a good deal of water in her head.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Anecdote.—An honest Hibernian, upon reading his physician's bill, replied to the doctor that he had no objections to paying him for his medicine, but his visits he would return.

Matrimonial Ladder.—Sir John Barrington, in giving some advice to fair damsels, when first nourishing the tender passion, describes what he calls the matrimonial ladder, which he says consists of eight steps, viz.: 1. Attention; 2. Flirtation; 3. Courtship; 4. Breaking the ice; 5. Popping the question; 6. The negociation; 8. The ceremony; 8. Repentance.

A Lecturer.—A Welsh clergyman applied to his diocesan for a living; the Bishop promised him one; but as the parson was taking his leave, he expressed a hope that his lordship would not send him into the interior of the principality, as his wife could not speak Welsh. 'Your wife, sir!' said the Bishop, 'what has your wife to do with it?—she does not preach, does she? 'No, my lord,' said the parson, 'but she lectures!'

THE BROKEN HEART.

BY WASHINGTON IRVING.

Every one must recollect the tragical story of young Emmet, the Irish patriot: it was too touching to be soon forgotten. During the troubles in Ireland, he was tried, condemned, and executed, on a charge of treason. His fate made a deep impression on public sympathy. He was so young—so intelligent—so generous—so brave—so every thing that we are apt to like in a young man. His conduct under trial, too, was lofty and intrepid.—The noble indignation with which he repelled the charge of treason against his country—the eloquent vindication of his name—and his pathetic appeal to posterity, in the hopeless hour of condemnation—all these entered deeply into every generous bosom, and his enemies lamented the stern policy that dictated his execution.

But there was one heart, whose anguish it would be impossible to describe. In happier days and fairer fortunes, he had won the affectioas of a beautiful and interesting girl, the daughter of a late celebrated Irish barrister. She loved him with the disinterested fervor of a woman's first and early love. When every worldly maxim arrayed itself against him, when blasted in fortune, and disgrace and danger darkened around his name, she loved him the more ardently for his very sufferings. If, then, his fate could awaken the sympathy even of his foes, what must have been the agony of her whose whole soul was occupied by his image? Let those tell who have had the portals of the tomb suddenly closed between them and the being they most loved on earth—who have sat at its threshold, as one shut out in a cold and lonely world, from whence all that was most lovely and loving had departed.

But then, the horrors of such a grave!—so frightful, so dishonered! There was nothing for memory to dwell on, that could sooth the pang of separation—none of those tender, though melancholy circumstances that endear the parting scene—nothing to melt sorrow into those blessed tears, sent like the dews of heaven, to revive the heart in the parting hour of anguish.

To render her widowed situation more desolate, she had incurred her father's displeasure by her unfortunate attachment, and was an exile from the parental roof. But could the sympathy and kind offices of friends have reached a spirit so shocked and driven in by horror she would have experienced no want of consolation, for the Irish are a people of quick and generous sensibilities. The most delicate and cherishing attentions were paid her, by families of wealth and distinction. She was led into society; and they tried by all kinds of occupation and amusement to disipate her grief, and wean her from the tragical story of her loves. But it was all in vain. There are some strokes of calamity that scathe and scorch the soul—that penetrate to the vital seat of happiness—and blast it, never again to put forth bud or blossom. She never objected to frequent the haunts of pleasure, but she was as much alone there, as in the depths of solitude. She walked about in a sad revery, apparently unconcious of the world around her.—She carried with her and inward woe that mocked at all the blandishments of friendship, and "heeded not the voice of the charmer, charm he ever so wisely."

The person who told me her story, had seen her at a masquerade. There can be no exhibition of far-gone wretchedness more striking and painful than to meet it in such a scene. To find it wandering, like a sceptre, lonely and joyless, where all around is gay—to see it dressed out in the trappings of mirth and looking so wan and wo-begone, as if he had tried in vain to cheer the poor heart into a momentary forgetfulness of sorrow.—After strolling through the splendid rooms and giddy crowd with an air of utter abstraction, she sat herself down on the steps of an orchestra, and looking about some time with a vacant air, that showed her insensibility to the garish scene, she began with the capriciousness of a sickly heart, to warble a little plaintive air.—She had an exquisite voice; but on this occasion, it was so simple—so touching—it breathed forth such a soul of wretchedness,—that she drew a crowd, mute and silent, around her, and melted every one to tears.

The story of one so true and tender, could not but excite great interest in a country remarkable for enthusiasm.—It completely won the heart of a brave officer, who paid his addresses to her, and thought, that one so true to the dead could not but prove affectionate to the living. She declined his attentions, for her thoughts were irrevocably engrossed by the memory of her former lover. He, however, persisted in his suit. He solicited not her tenderness, but her esteem. He was assisted by her conviction of his worth, and her sense of her destitute and dependent situation, for she was existing on the kindnes of friends.—In a word he at length succeeded in gaining her hand. though with the solemn assurance that her heart was unalterably another's.

He took her with him to Sicily, hoping that a change of scene might wear out the remembrance of early woes. She was an amiable and exemplary wife, and made an effort to be a happy one; but nothing could cure the silent and devouring melancholy that had entered into her very soul. She wasted away in a slow but hopeless decline, and at length sank into the grave, the victim of a broken heart.

It was on her that Mr. Moore, the distinguished Irish poet, composed the following lines:

She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers around her are sighing;
But coldly she turns from their gaze and weeps,
For her heart in his grave is lying.

She sings the wild song of her own native plains.
Every note which he loved awaking—
Ah! little they think, who delight in her strains,
How the heart of the minstrel is breaking!

He had lived for his love—for his country he died
They were all that to life had entwined him—
Nor soon shall the tears of his country be dried,
Nor long will his love stay behind him.

Oh! make her a grave where the sunbeams rest
Where they promise a glorious morrow;
They'll shine o'er her sleep, like a smile from the west,
From her own loved island of sorrow.

ADVICE OF PATRICK HENRY TO HIS ONLY DAUGHTER.

My dear Daughter.—You have just entered into that state which is replete with happiness or misery. The issue depends upon the prudent, amiable, and uniform conduct, which wisdom and virtue so strongly recommend on the one hand, or on that imprudence which want of reflection, or passion may prompt on the other.

You are allied to a man of honor, of talents and of an open and generous disposition. You have, therefore, in your power, all the ingredients of domestic happiness; it cannot be marred if you now reflect upon that sytem of conduct which you ought invariably to pursue—if you now see clearly the path from which you will resolve never to deviate. Our conduct is often the result of whim or caprice; often such as will give us many a pang, unless we see beforehand what is almost praiseworthy, and the most essential to happiness.

The first maxim you should follow is, never attempt to control your husband by opposition, by displeasure or any other mark of anger. A man of sense, of prudence, and warm feelings, cannot, and will not bear an opposition of any kind which is attended with an angry look or expression. The current of his affections is suddenly stopped; his attachment is weakened; he begins to feel a mortification the most pungent; he is belittled even in his own eyes; and be assured, the wife who once excites those sentiments in the breast of a husband, will never regain the high ground which she might and ought to have retained. When he marries her, if he be a good man, he expects to find in her one who is not to control him—not to take from him the freedom of acting as his own judgment shall direct, but one who shall place such confidence in him, as to believe that his prudence is his best guide. Little things what in reality are mere trifles in themselves, often produce bickering, and even quarrels. Never permit them to be a subject of dispute, yield them with pleasure, with a smile of affection. Be assured that one difference outweighs them all a thousand times. A difference with your husband ought to be considered as the greatest calamity—as one that is to be studiously guarded against; it is a demon which must never be permitted to enter a habitation where all should be peace, unimpaired confidence and heartfelt affection. Besides, what can a woman gain by opposition or indifference? Nothing. But she loses every thing; she loses her husband's respect for her virtues; she loses his love; and with that, all prospect of future happiness. She creates her own misery, and then utters idle and silly complaints, but utters them in vain. The love of a husband can be retained only by the high opinions which he entertains of his wife's goodness of heart, of her amiable disposition, of her sweetness, of her prudence of her devotion to him. Let nothing upon any occasion, ever lessen that opinion. On the contrary, it should augment every day; he should have much more reason to admire her for those excellent qualities which will cast a lustre over a virtuous woman when her personal attractions are no more.

Has your husband staid out longer than you expected? When he returns, receive him as the partner of your heart. He has disappointed you in something you expected whether of ornament or of furniture, or of any convenience? Never evince discontent; receive his apology with cheerfulnes. Does he, when you are housekeeper, invite company without informing you of it, or bring home with him a friend? Whatever may be your repast, however scanty it may be, or how impracticable it may be to add to it, receive them with a pleasing countenance, adorn your table with cheerfulness, give to your husband and to your company a hearty welcome; it will more than compensate for every other deficiency; it will evince love for your husband, good sense in yourself, and that politeness of manners which acts as the most powerful charm! It will give to the plainest fare a zest superior to all that luxury can boast. Never be discontented on any occasion of this nature.

In the next place, as your husband's success in his profession will depend upon his popularity, as the manners of a wife have no little influence in extending or lessoning the respect and esteem of others for her husband, you should take care to be affable and polite to the poorest as well as to the richest. A reserved haughtiness is a sure indication of a week mind and an unfeeling heart.

With respect to your servants, teach them to respect and love you while you expect from them a reasonable discharge of their respective duties. Never tease yourself or them by scolding, it has no other effect than to render them discontented and impertinent. Admonish them with a calm firmness.

Cultivate your mind by the perusal of those books which instruct while they amuse. Do not devote much of your time to novels; there are a few which may be useful and improving in giving a higher tone to our moral sensibility, but they tend to vitiate the taste, and to produce a disrelish for substantial intellectual food. Most plays have the same cast: they are friendly to the delicacy which is one of the ornaments of the female character. History, geography poetry, essays, biography, travels, sermons and other well written religious productions, will not fail to enlarge your understanding, to render you a more agreeable companion and to exalt your virtue. A woman devoid of rational ideas of religion, has no security for her virtue; it is sacrificed to her passions, whose voice, not that of God, is her only governing principle. Besides, in those hours of calamity, to which families must be exposed, where will she find support, if it be not in her just reflections upon the all-ruling Providence which governs the universe, whether inanimate or animate?

Mutual politeness between the most intimate friends is essential to that of harmony which should never be once broken or interrupted. How important is it then between man and wife! The more warm the attachment, the less will either party bear to be slighted or treated with the smallest degree of rudeness or inattention. This politeness, then if it be not itself a virtue, is at least, the means of giving to real goodness a new lustre: it is the means of preventing discontent, and even quarrels; it is the oil of intercourse;—it removes asperities and gives to every thing a smooth and even, a pleasing movement.

I will only add, that matrimonial happiness does not depend upon wealth; but in minds properly united to our respective situations. Competency is necessary; all beyond that point ideal. Do not suppose however, that I would not advise your husband, to augment his property by all honest commendable means; I would wish to see him actively engaged in such pursuit, because engagement, a sedulous enjoyment, in obtaining some laudable end, is essential to happiness.—In the attainment of fortune, by honorable means, a man derives satisfaction in self applause as well as from the increasing estimation in which he is held by those around him.

In the management of his domestic concerns let prudence and wise economy prevail. Let neatness, order, and judgement be seen in all your different departments. Unite liberality with a just frugality, always reserve something for the hand of charity, and never let your door be closed to the voice of suffering humanity.—Your servants in particular, will have the strongest claim upon your charity;—let them be well clothed, nursed in sickness, and never let them be unjustly treated.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

THURSDAY, ... DECEMBER 19, 1839.

Our paper this week goes to press on Tuesday, instead of Wednesday evening.

Gov. Wickliffe, in his late message states that Kentucky is paying 10 cents, Indiana 30 cents, and Ohio 50 cents tax on each $100 of taxable property.

We believe that nothing of importance has yet been transacted in the Ohio Legislature. Mr. S. Medary is elected State printer. The administration party have the entire ascendency, and are doing business without much opposition in their own way.

The Whig National Convention has nominated Gen. W. H. Harrison, of Ohio, for the Presidency, and John Tyler, of Virginia, for the Vice Presidency. The vote stood,

Harrison,	148
Clay,	90
Scott,	16

THE MARKETS.—Wheat in our town is 50 cts and flour $3 a 3 25. The talk about setling the price of pork here we believe is pretty much of a humbug. When the secret comes out there is very little to sell. Though in the very midst of the pork season, we were told there was not a whole hog in the market last Saturday. Citizens are now engaging pork in the country, for domestic use, at 4 50 a 5 dollars. Some stall fed beef has been engaged, for family use, at 7 and 8 cts. per pound by the quarter. We believe that meat is scarce and will be dear in this place.

The Philadelphia, Baltimore and Pittsburgh markets remain pretty much according to our last week's quotations.

Congress, at our latest dates, was not yet organized. The House was still disputing about the Jersey members. It appears that five Whig members, from that State, presented the certificate of the Governor to their election; five administration members presented themselves as the legitimate representatives of the people.—The clerk, as is customary, in calling over the names of members, at the opening of the House, refused to call the names of the Jersey members, or to put questions when motions were made. A scene of confusion highly disgraceful to the nation ensued. Mr. Adams was ultimately appointed chairman, pro tem. All this excitement, no doubt, grew out of the fact that the two political parties were so nearly balanced in the House, that the admission of these Jersey members was likely to determine the scale in favor of which ever party succeeded. We are glad that the press, is, to a considerable extent, execrating these abominable transactions. We give in another column, an article from Bicknell, on the subject; to which we refer the reader.

A CURIOUS CASE.—One of the cases decided at the late Court of Common Pleas in this town, was between Chandler and Blandy about a horse, the facts of which are in substance these: Mr. Blandy, of this place, had a horse strayed away from him, which he advertised. Shortly after one was brought to him from the country, which he proved to be his, paid the reward and took the horse into possession. Some time afterwards Chandler, coming to town, saw the horse in Blandy's possession, claimed him, he having one which had strayed away about the same time, and offered to prove him by the man with whom the horse was foaled, and the only person through whose hands he had passed before he came into his own possession. After several attempts to settle the matter, between the parties, a writ of replevin was issued upon the horse, and the case was brought up to the Common Pleas for decision. Blandy brought some eight or ten witnesses to sustain his claim to the horse, and Chandler some eighteen or twenty. Each party proved, by these witnesses, most positively that the horse was his. Each swore to his age—to his gaits,—that he was broken at eighteen months old, the one at a carding machine, the other at a salt well; each proved him by a scar on one leg. The trial was in progress two days, and all that time the horse was in the Court House yard for the examination of the witnesses, &c.

The horse was awarded to Chandler. The principal preponderating testimony was, his witnesses proved him by some scars in the ears which came from the amputation of warts, which the testimony of the other party knew nothing about.

We believe there was not the slighest suspicion, on the part of the Court, against the veracity of any of the witnesses. The only supposition which seemed to explain the difficulty, was, the extraordinary similarity between two horses, and the circumstances attending them. Such cases shew us that we should never be too positive that we are right.

ADDRESS OF A LOAFER.—George Ormsby was convicted at the late Court of Common Pleas for this county for larceny, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for three years. The circumstances which led to his conviction were in short as follow:

A merchant of the adjoining county of Perry sent forty dollars, consisting of two twenty dollar notes, by a green horn in an open letter, to Mr. Abbott, of this town. When the bearer reached this place he partook liberally of brandy. Ormsby came to the boarding house where he put up, and soon succeeded in ingratiating himself with the Perry county man, who, to use his own expression, "feeling a little rich" from the effects of his brandy, drew out his two twenty dollar bills and asked Ormsby if they were good, who replied in the affirmative. After this exhibition the holder of the notes slipped them loosely into his vest pocket; this the other noticed, and was also observed by the lady of the house. Ormsby now began to admire the bearer of the money for his stateliness. He said it was rarely he found a man so tall as himself; he did not know but he was; but the fact must be determined by actual measurement. This done he must next measure his thickness. In doing this he took care to make the handkerchief meet over the pocket containing the money. The lady of the house suspicioning Ormsby, and keeping her eye upon all these movements, saw him slip his fingers into the pocket containing the money, but did not see him extract it. All this passed off with a great deal of glee and sociability between the parties, the confidence of the green horn every moment increasing towards the man who picked his pocket right under his nose.

Soon after the measuring was over, Ormsby proposed to the other to take a walk through town; when they were on the eve of starting, the lady stated to the Perry county man, that, if he had any money or papers, he had better leave them with her, until his return. Upon which, feeling for his money, it was gone. The lady immediately stepped out of the room, to call some persons convenient, to assist in making search for the money; while she was out, Ormsby also stepped out, but soon returned. Search was made for the money, but it could not be found then—nor has it been since. But Ormsby, for those few motions has been sent to Columbus a three years' apprenticeship to a trade.

Two practical lessons are to be derived from this case; first, to business men. A simple seal upon the letter which contained this money would have prevented the loss of forty dollars, an expensive court trial, and a man from going to the penitentiary. Secondly—our inexperienced readers should be admonished from this case, to be on their guard when they enter places of public resort. The "loafers" and "black-legs" are generally, to appearance, the most affable gentlemanly men in the country; the most imposing in their manners,—are completely calculated to take in the honest and unsuspecting.

Who but learns in riper years
That man when fairest he appears
Is most to be suspected.

USURY.—The practice of shaving, these hard times, by exhorbitant interests, has become so general and oppressive, as to call public attention to the subject. Not only the moralist but the politician is putting forth efforts to unloose the grasp of Avarice upon his victim. We give below, the communications of Gov. Shannon of Ohio, and Wickliffe of Kentucky, in their late Messages to their respective legislatures on this unrighteous practice.

The practice of loaning money at an exhorbitant rate of interest, ranging from ten to fifty per cent., has become a great and growing evil, and should be arrested by a well guarded and highly penal usury law. I would be willing to allow capitalists the liberty of contracting for a fair and liberal rate of interest. It invites capital into the State, and it is frequently an advantage to the borrower to be able to get money at a higher rate of interest than six per cent. But capitalists should not be permitted to take advantage of the embarrassments and necessities of the unfortunate, and by loaning them money at an exhorbitant rate of interest, precipitate their ruin. Ten per cent. is a liberal compensation for the use of money, and all above this should be denounced as usurous, and constitute a forfeiture of both principal and interest.—Shannon.

A medium of fixed value, by which the price of labor is to be ascertained and the exchanges of property are effected, has been regarded as essential in every commercial community. In my opinion a sound political economy requires that a circulating medium should never be treated as a commodity, and become the subject of barter and sale; be made to vary in the value of its use, as the cupidity of the capitalist and money dealer shall dictate to the necessities of the industrious and enterprising citizen. It forbids that what is designated to be a uniform test of property should, like property, be regulated in its value by the laws of demand and supply. Hence we find that in every country where commerce and trade are regarded as worthy the protection of law, where credit enters into the business transactions of the community, laws have been made to fix the rate of interest upon money, and prescribe the penalties against their violation. It is when revulsions in trade, take place, when misfortune overtakes the honest and enterprising man in times like the present, the usurer, who adds but little by his labor to the wealth or happiness of society, gluts his appetite and fills his coffers at the expense, and not unfrequently upon the ruin, of the laborious and industrious portion of the community. I, therefore, respectfully recommend to the General Assembly the propriety of revising the laws against usury. If the interest upon money, as now regulated by law, be too low, increase it; but at whatever rate the Legislature has declared it shall be, let that be the standard, and prohibit, by adequate penalties, its evasion. The unfortunate victim of the usurer, seldom has the moral courage to avail himself of the present provisions of the law made for his protection; if the excessive interest exacted was forfeited to the Commonwealth, and an appropriate remedy prescribed by law, public sentiment would sustain and enforce its execution. We might then hope to see much of that public and individual suffering, arising from the heavy exactions of the money-lender, disappear from the transactions of commerce.—Wickliffe.

From what we have observed of the effects of Opium, we consider the following description of it true to the life. But we need not go to China to find victims to the habit of using opium.—There are scores of our own fellow-citizens, most of them among what is called the first circles of society, annually martyring themselves to this fascinating practice. We have seen individuals of the highest political standing, reach a premature grave, in all the horrors of disease, by the use of Opion. We now know professors of religion, ministers of the gospel, practitioners of medicine, &c., who are far gone in the habitual use of Opium. Yet, strange to tell, these very men will elevate as indignant a voice against intemperate drinking as any men in the land. We think the press should raise its warning voice against this destructive practice.

"EFFECTS OF OPIUM.—The following passage is extracted from a pamphlet entitled, "Remarks on the Opium Trade with China," published at Calcutta, with a preface by Archdeacon Dealtry, not long before, and re-printed in that periodical, which informs us that it was written (as they are assured on good authority) in China by a British merchant, who must therefore be considered as an eye witness of the deplorable effects of opium smoking which he describes. The comparison between the effects of ardent spirits and those of opium is peculiarly important.

"The intoxicating property, or rather properties of opium, differ in their nature from the intoxicating property of alcohol. In some respects the effects of the intoxication are also different. They both agree, however, in this, that they both stimulate the nervous system to an unnatural degree, and are only fit for use when such a state of bodily illness already exist as to make a stimulus of this nature subservient to the restoration of other vital functions disordered.—They both agree in this, that indulgence is followed by a relaxation of the system, and an undue depression of both the bodily and mental powers when the excitement is over. They both agree in this, as a consequence, that the oftener they are indulged in for the sake of this pleasurable sense of excitement, the greater must be the quantity used in order to keep up that same degree of excitement; so that, if once the appetite is formed, constantly increasing indulgence is necessary and almost, inevitable, and not only so, but is yielded to, unconscious of this increase. The craving of the appetite is insensibly the man's standard for estimating what he can, as he supposes, safely indulge in. They both agree in this, that they disorder the digestive organs, predispose to most other diseases, and materially shorten the term of life. They both agree in this, that they stupify and derange the intellectual powers, and that habitually; for the seasons of depression are quite as far below healthy mental vigor, as those of alternate excitement are beyond. And over the final stages of mental suffering to which they both lead, one is fain to draw the veil; fiction can paint nothing of horror half so horrible. They both agree in this, that they utterly corrupt the moral sense; give to gross appetite the reins of reason; deprave and brutalize the heart, shut up all the avenues to conscience, and make their victim the easy prey to every temptation that presents itself.

"There is but one point of difference between the intoxication of ardent spirits and that of opium deserving of particular attention here; and that is, the tenfold force with which every argument against the former applies to the latter. There is no slavery on earth to name with the bondage into which opium casts its victim. There is scarcely one known instance of escape from its toils, when once they have fairly enveloped a man. We need not appeal to the highly wrought narratives of personal experience on the subject, which have of late years come before the public; they rather invite distrust than otherwise, by the exaggeration of their poetical style. But the fact is far too notorious to be questioned for one moment, that there is in opium, once indulged in, a fatal fascination, which needs almost superhuman powers of self-denial, and also capacity for the endurance of pain to overcome.

"The operation of opium is, on this account, more deadly, by many degrees, than its less tyrannous rival In other respects, above mentioned, there is generally a more rapid and permanent influence exerted by opium than by ardent spirits—an influence so directly inimical to all human happiness whatever, that, if the fact were not before our eyes, we might well doubt the cunning of the archfiend himself, to recommend to one son of Adam the use of such an instrument of self-destruction."

From Bicknell's Reporter, Dec. 10, 1839.

THE MEETING OF CONGRESS AND THE ORGANIZATION OF THE HOUSE.

In the last number of the Reporter, we gave a brief notice of the first day's proceedings in the new Congress. We are pained to be called upon to state that the difficulties which prevented the organization on the 3d inst. were kept up and increased, from day to day, until Saturday last; and much, as it strikes us, to the disparagement not only of those immediately engaged in this outrage, but to the dishonor of the whole country. It is not our intention to take sides in this matter, or to say which of the parties should be held blameless, and which entitled to censure. We do, however, hold it disgraceful in no ordinary degree, that in the nineteenth century, and with the lights of liberty and civilization blazing effulgently around us, with this Republic pointed to in triumph by the friends of civil and religious liberty throughout the world, as happily illustrative of the power of man for self-government—we do say that so situated, and under such circumstances, the conduct of the American people, in playing the part of a mob, and converting their Hall of deliberation into a scene of disorderly and undignified party recrimination, is disgraceful in no ordinary degree. The example is pregnant with the most fearful consequences, and the actors and abettors of this outrage, we care not whether they be Whigs or Democrats, should, the moment Reason once more regains her empire, and the truth is sifted from the clouds of misrepresentation with which the newspapers now teem, be held up to the severest public indignation. In the meantime, and in order to enable our readers to form something like an opinion of the actual merits of this case, we proceed to condense the arguments of two of the principal speakers—Mr. Sergeant, a Whig of Pennsylvania, and Mr. Bynum, a friend of the Administration, of North Carolina. The former gentleman said, in order to arrive at a proper conclusion, the genuineness and force of the credentials, the Clerk is bound to know the laws of the several States in relation to this matter. He is bound to look into those laws, and to see that the certificates are conformable to them; and, if they are so, his authority is at an end. Here are five gentlemen, who present their commissions as Representatives from New Jersey.—Have those commissions come through the regular channel? Does any man entertain a doubt? Is there any defect in the law of New Jersey? We have a right to have it read. I know what it is, and I now aver that, word for word, letter for letter, and syllable for syllable, the certificate which these five gentlemen have brought with them, signed by the Governor of the state of New Jersey, is precisely that which by the law of that State, is declared to be final and conclusive evidence of their election. Is there any thing from the Governor of New Jersey to say that there has been a mistake? Is there doubt as to the genuineness of the signature, or the seal, or the paper? Does the Clerk himself entertain such a doubt? Probably he does, but, if he does, he has not yet said so.—He has said that there is a contest on which he does not undertake to decide, but how he would decide, if he were competent to do so, he has not said. I repeat we are not informed that there is any doubt, and if it were not for this claim, or color of a claim, the certificate would be sufficient.

How then do we stand? What is the position of the question? Why, that these gentlemen are in this House, bringing with them their certificates drawn up according to the laws of the State of New Jersey, even to the letter, and that they are, therefore, under the Constitution of the United States, to hold their seats, unless it is shown how they are to be displaced. Is it not due to a sovereign State that its solemn act, done according to law, and involving an act of executive power, should in the first instance, be treated with respect; that those who intend to impeach it should not come with a transient color of claim, but should show that that which appears to be according to law is not according to law? What have you got on the part of the gentlemen contesting? A certificate from the Secretary of State of the Commonwealth of New Jersey. It is a remarkable thing, but if you look through the law, you will find that there is not a single function which the Secretary of State has to perform. I do not know that he has even the custody of the papers. By turning to the law, it will be found that the Governor of New Jersey, on the returns being made to him, is to summon the Council. The person who has the custody of the papers belonging to the Council is the person who has the charge of all the papers; and I take it for granted, therefore, that they are now in the possession of the Governor and Council, or of their clerk, if they have one. Is there anything from the clerk of the Council? No.

This question becomes a very serious one, because, as I indicated at the very outset of my remarks, the doings of this day are, more or less to serve as a direction to those who come after us—and I say that this is the first time that any Clerk in the Congress of the United States has ever challenged the principle that, under the Constitution of the United States, the man who holds the return is entitled to a seat. I have looked through the decision given in the case of Moore and Letcher. It was there argued by many distinguished members, and, among others, by the gentlemen formerly Speaker of the House, and now the Governor of the State of Tennessee, who brought forward precedents in support of his opinion. He argued conclusively and triumphantly that you cannot go behind or beyond the return commission—beyond the authority which comes to you from the State.—Those who argued on the same side of the question took the same ground. What did the opponents do? Did they question this principle, this unavoidable principle? for such it is in a Government like ours, which consists of independent States, each entitled to act exclusively and convulsively until Congress shall have power to act. The opponents to a man agreed to the principle; all that was contended for was, whether the certificate was in conformity with the law of Kentucky—one side saying it was, and the other that it was not—but both agreeing if it was, he who had it was entitled to a seat. We can come, therefore, now only to one conclusion, so far as we know at present, namely, that these gentlemen are delegates from the State of New Jersey. If their seats are liable to be contested, we know how that is to be done according to the law of the United States. In the mean time, however, the gentlemen should take their seats, and have a right so to do. That, then, which appears wrong to me is, that the Clerk should raise a question which he is not competent to raise—a question which this House, in the case of Letcher and Moore, decided that it must itself settle.

I submit, therefore, that unless something is brought forward to impeach the genuineness of the commission which these gentlemen have produced, they are entitled to their seats, and should take them accordingly.

Mr. Bynum, on the other hand, and in reply to Mr. Sergeant, rose to refute certain statements which had been made for facts, but which were not. He knew it to be a practice with many, in and out of this House, to assume for a fact every thing which they thought proper. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, (Mr. Sergeant,) with whom it was characteristic, had assumed for a fact that this was the first time that ever the seat of a member had been questioned who had been elected according to the laws and the constitution. Did the gentleman undertake to say that he alone had a right to judge of which was the law and the constitution in relation to this subject? If the law and the constitution were so clear as the gentleman would make out, he (Mr. B.) presumed that there would not be a dissenting voice to these gentlemen taking their seats. But this was precisely the fact at issue. He said that these individuals were not elected according to the law and the facts. The gentleman from Pennsylvania said they were—that it was a clear case; but it was to be borne in mind that there were other gentlemen in this House who had an equal right to their own opinions, and to the exercise of their own powers of construction of the laws and constitution, who saw the matter in a very different light. The gentleman thought, too, that it would be a reflection on the Governor of New Jersey, that it would be disrespectful to the State of New Jersey, to question the right of these individuals to their seats, or to doubt the propriety of their names being called.—Were there not others whose interests and opinions were to be respected besides the Governor and his coadjutors in New Jersey? He (Mr. B.) thought that the sovereign people of New Jersey should be heard, and that their rights also should be respected on this floor. If he understood the matter correctly, the members of this House were not so much the representatives of the Executive of the State of New Jersey; they were emphatically the representatives in part of the great sovereign people of New Jersey. Here was a contest between the People and the Executive of New Jersey.—The people called upon this House to do justice; they said that the Governor had committed an outrage upon their feelings and rights; that he had been guilty of a usurpation—a usurpation for which in some countries he would be subject to high responsibility. If the object of gentlemen was to get the names of these five individuals called while the House was yet in an unorganized condition, what was to prevent the names of the other five being called?—The Governor of New Jersey had ordered his representatives to be called, and he was to be heard; but the People of New Jersey had ordered their representatives to be called, and they were not to be heard. This was a matter in which the rights of the people were at stake.

He considered all the propositions which had been contended for by the gentlemen on the other side as impracticable Nothing could be done in the matter until the House had adopted the proposition of the gentlemen from Virginia, (Mr. Rives).—Before a decision could be had, it would be necessary to take into consideration the law of the State of New Jersey, but that could not be done now, because this was not an organized body. Here was the sacred chart that guided us, (pointing to the constitution of the United States).—But, in deciding this matter, the facts as well as the laws must be considered.—"Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members; and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business,"(reading.) The House must be the judge of the rights of its own members. Was there any law to contravene the provision? If the Governor of N. J. dared to contravene the rights of members of this House, let his acts meet with the contempt they merit. He (Mr. B.) had been told that debate had been got up here as a mere catch, to preoccupy public attention; and he doubted whether the Executive of New Jersey had even acted in conformity with the law of his own State. A majority of the people of his State thought that he had not. The Constitution, then, gave this House the power to take the matter entirely into its own hands. But what was first to be done? The House must be organized.—The gentlemen from Pennsylvania had contended that now was the time to take this matter into consideration. How? By whom? Not a step could be taken until there was some organization. Mr. B. then proceeded to vindicate the course which the Clerk had taken. A brief intermediate explanatory conversation ensued between Messrs. Bynum, Slade, and Mercer, on other points, and Mr Bynum concluded his remarks by reading an extract from the journals in the case of Moore and Letcher, and which he cited in support of his own opinions.

We have only to add that on Thursday last John Quincy Adams was elected Speaker of the House, pro tem, and that up to Saturday night no regular organization had been agreed upon. The President's Message had not been delivered. Nothing of the least importance in the Senate.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the New York Courier, and Journal of Commerce, December, 9.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP LIVERPOOL.

LATER FROM EUROPE.—The steamship Liverpool arrived at the dock last night, under the command of Captain Engledove, her former commander Captain Fayer, being, as we understand, sick. She left Liverpool on the 16th ultimo, to which date we have papers from Liverpool, and London of the preceding day. Our private correspondence renders unnecessary further reference to them. Under our commercial head, will be found the commercial and monetary intelligence she brings, which is, as will be perceived, of a most gratifying character.

The news of the suspension of specie payments by the Bank of the United States, and other Banks in this country, reached England Nov. 6th, and created a strong sensation. It appears to have defeated the proposed loan of £800,000 from Hope & Co. of Amsterdam,—but on the other hand relief had been provided in London, and Mr. Jaudon under date of the 13th states that all the bills of exchange drawn upon him by the United States Bank, and arriving at maturity, had been paid. This will be agreeable news to some of our merchants.

Mr. Jaudon has sustained himself and succeeded in his various negociations in a manner which has obtained him great praise.

Cotton had advanced in consequence of large purchases on speculation. Those purchases, however, were based on the supposition that our crop would be late in going forward, and short withal; both of which opinions were erroneous.

On the whole, the intelligence by this arrival, is more favorable, in a commercial and financial point of view, than any one would have dared to expect.

There had been fresh movements of the Chartists in some places, particularly in Newport, Wales, where a number of lives were lost.

A fire occurred in Widegate Alley, Bishopsgate, London, November 14, by which eight persons lost their lives.

General Bernard, formerly in the engineer service of the United States, and more recently French Minister of War, was stated to be at the point of death.—Mr. Hagerman, the eminent Paris banker, had died.

The Dundee Advertiser states that all the whale ships belonging to that port had returned, and that it had proved one of the poorest fishing seasons ever known.

H. M. S. Imogene arrived at Portsmouth, on the 14th from South America, having on board $2,500,000 on merchants' account.

A fire occurred at Constantinople, in the Armenian quarter, 15th October, which destroyed 4000 houses.

Dreadful inundations had been occasioned in Lombarby by the continued rains.

The meeting of the French Chambers had been postponed till about the 20th of December.

The principal Theatre at Calcutta was destroyed by fire on the night of the 31st of May. No insurance.

Correspondence of the Journal of Commeree.

MANCHESTER, Nov. 15, 1839.

Money matters are a little better. The circulation of the Bank is now down to about 16 millions, yet her course is continued, which is, to force down the value of all raw materials, until they and the manufacturers of them, shall be lower here, than on the Continent, and thus create a demand from thence. But so far, the depression in other places has been nearly equal.

The stock of Cotton in Liverpool is now reduced to 296,000 bales. Large sales are daily making at rather improving rates. Fair uplands are now quoted at 7¼d, and with a very moderate supply from the States, under limited prices, the planter, this year, may command a fair value for his crop. The duty on wheat is 18s. 8d; on flour 11s. 2¾d. Sales are rather heavy at this moment. American flour 40s. to 42s. There is commonly a buoyant market in November and December but in the spring it is more frequently drooping. Yet an importation may be necessary before another harvest. Averages, in Bond 30s.,—duty next week perhaps 20s. 8d. Now, 18s. 8d.

[Correspondence of the Courier and Enquirer.]

PARIS, Nov. 13, 1839.

I shall very briefly refer to the suspension of specie payments in the U. States, the intelligence of which reached this city on Friday last. I will not say that it produced no sensation, but it certainly produced none comparatively with the importance of the announcement. After the arrangement made with the house of Rothschild, and the other transactions entered into and completed by Mr. Jaudon, it was here believed that the refusal of Messrs. Hottinguer & Co. to accept the drafts of the Bank of the United States, would be followed by no materially unpleasant consequences—but it appears that this expectation was not justified.

The commercial intercourse of France with the United States, is, as you are aware, extensive. By returns published last week by Government, it appears that France exported to all the world in 1838, merchandise of the value of nearly 1,100,000,000 francs, (22,000,000 of dollars.) Of this amount, one sixth (170,000,000 of francs) went to the United States.—Nevertheless the money transactions (properly speaking) of France with the American Union are comparatively so trifling that—as I have just stated—the suspension of cash payments by so many banks in the United States, produced in this Capitol no very strong sensation, except among the opposition Journalists, who seized upon it as an occasion for the effusion of factious spleen.

As the late harvest in Europe and the United States becomes more or less part and parcel of this question, I shall here refer to the present appearances in that respect in France and on the European continent. A trifling diminution of the price of bread (one half cent, on the four pound loaf,) took place on the 1st instant. Since then the price of Wheat in the Paris market, has, in a trifling degree, declined—not however, because of improved appearance, but because that the quality of the article was inferior to that brought for sale previously. In truth there is no reason for departing in the slightest respect from the view I have already taken of this matter. The late harvest in France was a sufficient one, I am still assured, but if so, nothing beyond it. Of this fact no doubt should be entertained. So far therefore from exportaion from France being likely, the French Government dreading the consequence of the maintenance of Bread at a high price, have ordered (indirectly) the purchase of large quantities of Grain abroad.

From the coast of the Mediteranean and the Adritic we have accounts down to 2d inst. They state, in substance, that the markets had not, in fact risen, but that the holders of grain desired rather to keep than dispose of their article, anticipating from England, and perhaps France, very large orders a little later in the season. Thus, you will see that there is no change, and consequently no improvement in the state of our markets, and none probable.

Our accounts from Constantinople are to the 27th ult. They repeat, that "the greatest apprehensions existed for the interval that must elapse before the harvest of 1840 can be gathered." That "already bread is double its ordinary price," and that it was only from Egypt that they could hope for supplies—the markets of the Black Sea being exhausted or unapproachable, from their extreme height.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

URSDAY, ... DECEMBER 19, 1839

CASE FOR THE POST MASTER AT CAMBRIDGE, O.—Mr. Geo. Metcalf of Cambridge, Ohio, returned to us last June, by the Rev. John Herbert of the same place, as a subscriber to the Western Recorder. His paper was duly forwarded with the Cambridge packet, and several of the first numbers received; then one was returned with a notice, to the effect the paper would not be taken from the office. We thought the change of this matter, and wrote to Mr. Herbert to speak to Judge Metcalf, which he did, and learned that he had not ordered the discontinuance of his paper. We, of course, continued to send it; but the numbers were all, or nearly all returned to us with crabbed little sentences written on them, such as: "Won't have your paper!" "Don't want your paper!" "Won't have your paper!" &c. We thought we would try another method, and enclosed the Judge's paper in a separate envelope, and had it enclosed by a different hand, but it was still declined and returned to us. As we never knew, or heard of any thing, that we recollect of, disreditable to Judge Metcalf, we were satisfied that all this was without his consent. We waited a private opportunity to write to Mr. Metcalf, but as none offered, and as the papers continued to be returned, we determined to write to Mr. M. Sarchit, as a letter written to Mr. Metcalf might also be intercepted. We sent to Mr. S. a paper with one of these crabbed sentences written on it, with a request that he would inform us as to the hand writing. The following is Mr. S's. reply to us:

"CAMBRIDGE, OHIO, DEC. 12th, 1839.

"Dear Sir:—Your letter of the 4th instant is received by due course of mail, but the returned paper has not yet come to hand. I have a box in the post-office and attend to it every day. I delayed calling on the Judge or answering you, supposing the paper had passed on and would return in a few days. He knows nothing about the returned papers, says that they were not returned by him, nor by his direction, nor does he know who did it.

"Yours, &c. M. SARCHIT."

Now, can the Post Master at Cambridge inform us who took the responsibility of returning Mr. Metcalf's paper? Can he tell us what became of the paper we addressed to Mr. Sarchit? Friend Shaffner, we have been treated, in former years, in your house, by yourself and family with hospitality and kindness, the recollection of this causes us to touch you with a sparing hand. If you can give any explanation which will exculpate you from the predicament in which the above facts place you, we will cheerfully publish it in our columns for you. All the facts we have stated above, we stand prepared to sustain.

We acknowledge the receipt of a communication, signed, "The Irishman," post-marked Wooster, Ohio, November 29; which contains the following: "I am surprised to see so many trifling items in the Recorder, and matter which I sent you neglected. It was my design to write for the W. R., but I will overlook it for the present; nevertheless, I will try and do all the good I can otherwise for it." We remark:

1. It is a fact that we received two letters post-marked, October 25, signed "The Irishman." But, as he had not confided to us his proper name, we knew not who he was; and we were at a loss to determine whether he intended to bore us or not: for, first, the letters consisted of a half sheet each, mailed the same day, which cost us twenty-five cents; whereas, if they had been written on one sheet, it would have cost only twelve and a half cents. Secondly—the author did not say whether their contents were original or selected; they were written as though they were original, but we were of opinion they were extracted from published matter.

2. Since his last communication, we are satisfied "The Irishman" is our friend: for, first, the tone of his letter indicates it. Secondly—he has sent us two subscribers for our paper. But still, we do not know who he is; we do not know who that lives about Wooster would send us subscribers from Medina county. This, and several similar communications, make it necessary for us to adopt the following rules to regulate our relations with our correspondents.

1. In every instance where a communication is forwarded to us for publication, the proper name must accompany it, or no attention will be paid thereto.

2. Any one who may wish to animadvert upon any of the functionaries of the church, the provisions of the discipline, or any of the exciting topics of the day, must permit us, at our own discretion, to connect his proper name with any communication he may write on any of these subjects.

3. We will cheerfully publish any selected extracts, our friends may desire, not inconsistent with the character of our paper; provided, they will send, addressed to the "Western Recorder" the paper or pamphlet containing them. But, if sent in writing, we cannot attend to them.

4. We are willing to pay postage on the following letters: 1. All that we have especially invited to write for our paper. 2. The communications of the Presidents of the Districts, giving an account of the spiritual condition of their charges. 3. All letters containing at least five new subscribers. 4. All which contain ten dollars cash;—5. or all which contain at least two new subscribers and five dollars cash. If any person wishes an agent to write to us when these terms cannot be complied with, he must advance to such agent the postage of the letter. If these rules are violated, we will notice it on the reception of the letter, so as to bring them to the recollection of our friends.

There are good reasons why each of the four above rules should be observed; but we have not time now to give them. We would be particularly thankful to our kind and obliging friends to observe the rule in relation to POSTAGE; this has become extremely burthensome to us, laterly. We have received, in some instances, two one dollar bills enclosed without the postage being paid, which came to us charged 37½ cents; whereas, if a two dollar bill had been sent, the postage would have been but 12½ cents, and, so of other amounts of money. Subscribers should recollect, when they remit money for their papers, in all cases the postage is to be paid. Our paper is the cheapest, to the reading community, in this section, at two dollars,—lower than this, we cannot go, because it would not clear expences. We have had, several times, to pay 18¾ cents for one subscriber, without pay, and 37½ for our pay.

We published, some time in July last, from the "Protestant," a letter written by H. M. Cryer of the Methodist Episcopal church, which breathed, as we thought, the spirit of liberal christianity; for this, and a similar letter, Rev. Thos. Madden complained against him, before the Quarterly Conference of Gallatin station, and a reproof was voted against him and duly administered. Brother Cryer, if there had been no Methodist Protestant church, you would not have got off that easy.

This, we presume, is the Bro. Madden we saw in Chillicothe, Ohio, a few years since, on his way to the General Conference, east. He was then a strong advocate for limiting the power of the Methodist Episcopal clergy. For the short acquaintance we had with him, we formed a very favorable opinion of Brother Madden. Strange, that so worthy a person should be capable of such a dereliction of principle, as to be made the tool of power to oppress a man who had not said so hard things against clerical supremacy, as we heard from his own mouth.

But, there is a cause for all this. A few days after Mr. M. passed on, the Rev. Peter Cartwright stopped with us. In alluding to the sentiments of Mr. Madden, he remarked, if he attempted to advocate them in the General Conference "he would not be worth the powder that would shoot him, when he returned to Tennessee." The Tennessee powder has alarmed the good brother, and he has to be obedient.

We have received a pamphlet of forty-four pages octavo, entitled "Church Polity briefly examined, by L. Garrett," of Nashville, Tennessee.

This is the Bro. Garrett, who owned and published the Western Methodist, formerly in Nashville, and who once took us to task so severely, in the above periodical, for exposing some of the objectionable features of the Methodist hierarchy. But our worthy brother has since found, by the "practical operations" of that system, that all we said was true, and a great deal more that we did not say. Having since been expelled from the Methodist Episcopal church, he has been placed in a situation that he could not only see, but has been made to FEEL.

The circumstances of his expulsion, as narrated by himself, are briefly these. While he was conducting the Western Methodist, a paper which he made very interesting to the Methodist community, he admitted into his columns, some strictures, written by a travelling preacher, on the Dandyism of Methodism. This gave great umbrage to certain presiding elders who had influence at Head Quarters. At the next General Conference these procured the establishment of a branch of the Church paper in Nashville, directly beside Mr. Garrett. As this, through the influence of the itinerant preachers, would take from Mr. G. all his patronage, he was compelled to sell his establishment to them on their own terms. In writing the agreement, the committee, on the part of the church, inserted a provision which Mr. G. says was not in the verbal contract—viz: that he should not be concerned in the publication of any other paper in Nashville. Understanding this new provision to mean any similar paper, or one which would especially interfere with the interests of the Church paper, Mr. Garrett signed the article.

Having transferred his establishment to the Church, he was now out of employment; and having nothing to occupy his mind or to provide the means of subsistance; in casting round to see what business he might engage in, which would be profitable to both body and mind, it ultimately occurred to him, that he might get up a paper which would not interfere with the Church paper. After consulting with a number of the leading ministers of the church, who advised him to "go ahead," he commenced the publication of the Western Monitor. For so doing, a charge for a breach of contract was brought against him, and he was expelled from the Methodist Episcopal church, the whole or principal part of the committee of trial admitting at the time, that there was nothing intentionally wrong in the matter. Thus, an aged and talented minister of the New Testament fell a victim to the ruthless hand of POWER.

It is about one year since we read Mr. Garrett's defence, and the above narration is given from recollection; so, if there be any defects in the statements, it will be attributed to that fact.

The pamphlet above alluded to, and the one before us, evince the workings of a strong and decisive mind, laboring under the influence of abused confidence and clerical domination. We endeavored to show some time since, that all honorable minds, when opposing meanness, will do it with a severity bordering on rashness. This principle appears to be exemplified in the case under consideration. But we know how to sympathise with our brother, and hope that God will preserve him through the fiery ordeal which a system of Jesuistry will make him pass.

D. C. CARSON makes the following inquiries: "Where is the Book Concern, and to whom can we make application for books? Can we obtain through you a catalogue of books, with the wholesale prices." He states that the Highland circuit has raised a small Book Fund by joint stock of $5 each; that they had made application to Cincinnati, but the books from there, came so high they were instructed to get them direct from the Book Concern.

In reply to this request, we inform Bro. C., that a letter addressed to the "Book Committee of the Methodist Protestant Church, Baltimore, Maryland," will reach the Concern. And if the Book Committee will furnish us a catalogue of books with the wholesale prices, we will cheerfully publish it, or any thing else which will promote the interest of the establishment.

I wish to say to Bro. Piper, through your paper, that he is desired, by the friends in Lenox, to visit that place and hold a protracted meeting if he can make it suit his convenience; and if so, to send us a letter when. He can direct to P. A. Frink, Lenox, Ashtabula, Ohio.

A. K. EARL.

Morgan, December 4, 1839.

We have received a counterfeit letter signed "GEO. BROWN, Pres." giving some instructions in relation to the Conference Missionary. The hand writing we cannot recognize. We conclude that Bro. Brown never authorized it, as we received a letter from him about the same time, in which he says nothing on the subject.

ITEMS.

Altered notes of the Frederick County, Md., Bank, from one to ten dollars, are in circulation.

A new paper, in the German language, has been commenced at New Orleans.

The proposed Rail Roads and public works in Illinois comprises one thousand three hundred and forty miles, and will cost $14,500,000.

It is said that the Philadelphia Alms-House has at this time, two hundred inmates more than at this period last year.

A woman died lately in Italy, at the advanced age of 143 years, after having eight husbands, the last of whom survived her.

The jail of Chambersburg is at present without a prisoner; a circumstance that has not existed before for fifteen years.

The Urbana jail is destitute of a prisoner at present; a circumstance that has frequently occurred within the period above mentioned.

It is stated in the Peoria Register, that 2000 Russian families, flying from Religious persecution at home, are about settling in the territory of Wisconsin.

Beautiful.—A deaf and dumb person being asked what was his idea of forgiveness, took the pencil and wrote—'tis the odour which flowers yield when trampled upon.

Good Advice.—The ladies will oblige us particularly by wearing double-soled shoes during the cold weather, and then we shall not be annoyed by their barking during church service.

There were seventy-nine failures at Paris in the month of September. No less than one hundred and thirty-six managers of joint stock companies in that capital have given way within a short period.

NEW CEMENT.—The French in Algiers have discovered a new plaster or cement, made of two parts ashes, three of clay, and one of sand; which being stirred and mixed with oil, will resist all weathers better than marble.

Broken Marriage Promise.—In Washington County Court, a few days ago, Miss Susan Gantz had awarded her the sum of one thousand dollars, as damages for a breach of marriage promise made to her by Mr. Isaac B. Rowland.—Balt. Amer.

A gang of Counterfeiters, seven in number, was recently arrested in Canada near the Vermont line. They had in their possession plates of the notes of fourteen different banks, principally of the city of New-York.

Hon. John Holmes, of Maine, is about publishing a work entitled "The Statesman; or principles of Legislation and Law of the State of Maine and of the United States." Mr. Holmes is a man of undoubted talents, and has had as much experience in Law and Legislation as almost any other man.

Revival of Religion.—For a week or ten days past there has been quite an extensive revival of Religion at the Methodist Episcopal Church in this village. Upwards of fifty persons have already united themselves to the Church; and the good work is still progressing without abatement.—Urbana Gazette.

A suit recently brought into the district court of Philadelphia, for the recovery of ten thousand dollars, which sum was offered as a reward to the finder of one hundred thousand dollars, in post notes belonging to the Commercial Bank of Cincinnati, terminated against the Bank. The jury found a verdict of $11,890 in favor of the plaintiff, which included the interest.

A good book and a good woman are excellent things for those who know how justly to appreciate their value. There are many men, however, who judge both, by the beauty of the covering.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Gov. Porter has issued his Proclamation declaring C. J. Ingersoll duly elected member of Congress for the 3d District. Gov. Ritner had before made Proclamation that Mr. Naylor was elected in the same District. This, therefore, presents the extraordinary case of two contesting candidates, both fortified by a certificate from the Governor of the State.

The Journal of Commerce stated the other day, that the United States Bank had again entered the cotton market.—This is positively contradicted by the Philadelphia North American, which says, on authority, that it is the determination of the Bank to cut loose from its multifarious and embarrassing connexions abroad, and concentrate its business within the State of Pennsylvania. We doubt this, because we do not believed it possible that it can find profitable employment for its immense capital within such limits.—Charleston (S. C.) Mercury.

LETTER FROM IOWA.—The war which I advised you of in my third letter, as likely to take place, between the beligerant powers of Missouri and Iowa, has not yet been declared. After some considerable threatening, and some skirmishing between the Missouri Sheriff and citizens of Iowa, and much preparation for attack on the one side, and defence on the other, a truce has been agreed upon and so the matter rests at present. And so, in the name of common sense and decency, let it rest until the proper authority takes it up, and puts it to silence forever.

What the particulars of the compromise are, I have not heard; though I suppose it consists of nothing more, probably, than a mutual agreement not to fight. It must, however, be admitted that strong demonstration was made on both sides:—ten thousand men (so report says) having been called out by Governor Boggs, of Missouri—and the Hero of Toledo, on the north of the line, having been busily engaged in marshalling his troops and preparing for a stout resistance.

The Legislature of Iowa commmenced its session on Monday the fourth of November—and it is hoped that immediate steps will be taken by that body to effect as speedy a settlement of the difficulty as possible. What further course the Missourians will think proper to pursue, remains yet to be seen.

Perhaps the most important question that will come before the Legislature of the Territory is the admission into the Union as a State. It is expected that the preliminary steps will be taken during the present session:—although some of her citizens, from motives of pecuniary interest, think it a step of doubtful expediency.

This territory furnishes, too, materials for a contested election at Washington, this winter. The case is this:—The House of Representatives, in deciding between General Jones and Judge Doty, the claimants to the seat from Wisconsin, decided in effect, that Colonel Chapman, the new delegate from Iowa, was entitled to his seat for the full term of two years.—Considering this point as settled, Mr. Chapman did not become a candidate at the last August election—though an election for Delegate had been ordered by the Governor, and other candidates were in the field. Francis Gehon, Esq. received much the largest number of votes, and has accordingly been declared the delegate by Governor Lucas.

On Monday, the 21st of October, a sale of public lands commenced in the Galena Land District, and on the same day, a sale of a tract of seven townships, in the Burlington District. Those offered at Galena are situated principally in the counties of Boone, Ogle, and Rock Island, and in the heart of one of the finest sections of the West, generally known as the Rock River Country. About $200,000 were received. At the Burlington office, the land all went off, with one, or two unimportant exceptions, at $1 25 per acre—none undertaking to bid against the settlers. About $100,000 were received—much the larger proportion in specie.

The Mormons are still living quietly and peaceably in their new homes, at Commerce, Ill., and Montrose, Iowa.—Much sickness, however, prevailed among them the past season. The leaders of this new sect, Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith, jr. (as I have heard) have gone on a "fool's errand" to Washington city—i. e. to represent the Missouri affairs to the President and Congress. So we must not be surprised if a quarter of next session should be consumed in discussion of Mormonism and the democracy of Gov. Boggs.

Warsaw, Nov. 15, 1839.

DISTRESSING CASE OF SEDUCTION.—An affecting case came under the notice of one of the magistrates on Wednesday, the 20th inst. at the police in this city, New York. Similar cases often occur.—Thousands of females are ruined every year the same way. Are you a parent? a brother? a sister? read the following:

A young woman known in the purlieus of Thomas street as Sarah Lowell, was complained of as a vagrant and prostitute, and on being brought to the office she stated that her father was a respectable and wealthy farmer in Massachusetts, and was willing to support her, but that she had hitherto declined going home in consequence of the hostility of her mother, and the disgrace such a measure would bring upon the family. According to her story, about two years ago she was introduced at her father's house, to a medical man, with whom, under promise of marriage, she contracted an intimacy which was subsequently carried on, after the young lady left home and went to boarding school: and the Doctor's appearance in the school was very frequent.—Ultimately the young lady was decoyed from the school by her seducer, and became a mother! When these facts came to the ears of her mother, the poor girl was forbid the house, and being deserted by her betrayer, was compelled from necessity to seek refuge in a house of ill fame in this city. On Tuesday she heard that her mother was in town, stopping with a distant relation in the upper part of the city; and thither the poor girl went in hopes to persuade her parent at least to relieve her from her present course of life, if not take her home again. But she was not allowed to stop a moment with her mother, and it was strongly suspected that the complaint against her was instigated by the mother herself.

On Thursday an officer was despatched to request the mother to appear, and she reluctantly came down to the office. She is a woman of very respectable appearance, and in reply to a question from the magistrate, stated, weeping bitterly, that she had not seen her daughter before Wednesday for ten months.

Magistrate—It has been stated to me that this poor girl has no means of support; do you know the state in which your daughter now is?

Mother—No, I do not.

Daughter (weeping) My mother would not hear me, I made many attempts, but she would not hear me; she knew of my situation.

Magistrate—She is your child, and in a state of destitution. Are you willing to support her?

Mother—I cannot take her home—but am willing to see that she is properly provided for, if she will abandon her course of life.

Daughter—That's what I would have told you yesterday, but you would not hear me.

After some further conversation between the parties, the mother left the office in tears, followed, after a short interval, by the unhappy girl herself, who appeared to labor under great mental excitement.—Zion's Watchman, November 30th.

FRAUDS UPON THE INDIANS BY THE HIGHEST OFFICERS OF GOVERNMENT.

We have had occasion heretofore to place before our readers the names of the most prominent among the government officers, who were the projectors of and proprietors in the "American Land Company." The stockholders of the American Land Company—a Company now owning as large an amount of territory as the original patentees of this Continent held under the crown of Great Britain.

The charters of the old English proprietors to tracts of land now constituting States, were not at the time of the grant by the crown, equal in value to the lands now owned by the American Land Company! Crosswell, Wright, Dix, Butler, Corning, Olcott, John Van Buren, and a host of other office holders under the general government, are in effect the patentees, under the name of the American Land Company, and like Penn and the Duke of York, we presume some of them will yet give their names to new States to be carved out of their possessions, and hereafter to be admitted into the Union.

From a source that can be relied on, we have learned some new facts in relation to these speculators.

The first company formed was the Mississippi Land Company, in the spring of 1835. This company originated with the Government Officers in Boston. The lands to be speculated in, by this company were the Indian lands—the Chickasaw & Choctaw Indian Reservations. To obtain the title to these, it was necessary to obtain the sanction of the President to the contracts made with the Indians.

Hence it was of importance to have some person connected with the company who could influence the President to sanction all contracts made in its behalf. To secure this influence, an agreement was entered into with AMOS KENDALL, (and as we are informed by a stockholder) under hand and seal, by which Kendall was to have all the profits arising upon FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS of the stock of the company.

The effect of this arrangement upon the interests of the Indians was manifest. If an emigrant went upon the lands, and contracted with the Indians for a portion of their territory at a fair price, he would fail in consumating his title, because the President would not sanction the sale. The consequence was, that the agents of this land company were without competitors, and were enabled to purchase the Indian title at from $1 to $1 50 per acre. when it was well worth $10, and would have commanded that price, had it not been for the influence of this land company and those connected with it. Kendall was not by name a stockholder, but held his contract for a division of the spoils. The company, through their agents, purchased up the Indian titles, and Kendall procured the sanction of the President to every purchase. Any of these lands, thus bought at $1 and $1 50 per acre, were immediately disposed of at an average price of $10 per acre; and shares of the company that cost the original proprietors $1000, were easily sold at $2000 and $2500!!

The Attorney General, Butler, learning the success of this company, and the happy manner in which our cabinet minister was turning his official influence to account, conceived the idea of a more extended and magnificent monopoly; and as he intended that its operations should cover not only Indian reservations, but extend to Government lands, he determined its name should be the "American Land Company." He accordingly called Senator Wright into the consultation, and John Van Buren, as the representative of his father. Forthwith articles of association were prepared, and all the faithful office holders incorporated themselves under the name of the "American Land Company.

The Attorney General stipulated with his associates that the Presidency of the company should be conferred on his brother Charles, with an ample salary, while out of the amount of each subscription was to come to the Butler's five per cent. The company thus organized, its agents purchased largely of the Indian reservation near Pontiac, and the Indian reservations in Alabama. The President sanctioned all their purchases of the Indians! The reader will conceive, at how miserable a price these poor Indians were swindled of their lands, when he is informed that so favorable were the terms of purchase that shares of $200, with but ten per cent. paid in, sold for SIXTY DOLLARS per acre.

The pious part of this association, feeling a little conscience-stricken at the imposition practised upon the poor Indians, about the close of their first years operation, at an annual meeting of the company held at the Albion House, Boston, procured the passage of a resolution to appropriate $1000 for the purchase of Bibles to be distributed among the benighted Indians of Alabama and Mississippi!!!

Such was the reparation of the American Land Company to the poor Indians, after duping them to the tune of probably a MILLION OF DOLLARS, in a series of unrighteous bargains.—Albany Adv.

HYMENEAL.

Married—On the 17th of November, by the Rev. D. Y. Ostrom, Mr. BINGHAM GEODRICH to Miss ELIZABETH GRIFFITH, both of Waterloo township, Athens county, Ohio.

———On Thursday last, by the Editor of this paper, Mr. EVAN SHAW, of Hopewell, to Miss SARAH YOCOM, of Springfield township.

Business Department.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS OF THIS PAPER.

1. In remitting money, give the person's name, to whom credit is to be given, the State in which he lives, and the Post-office where he receives his paper.

2. In forwarding subscribers, be careful to give the Post-office, county and State, where the papers are to be sent, writing the name, office and county in a fair hand.

3. When a paper is to be transferred, give the place whence it is to be taken, as well as the place where it is to be directed.

4. In all cases where moneys are paid for papers, receipts should be taken; without these we shall consider our subscribers responsible. Experience in conducting a paper, has shown us that attention to this rule is essentially necessary to secure justice to a publisher.

5. Our paper is $2 per annum on the reception of the first No. On the first opportunity, therefore, be so good as to hand this amount to an agent, or remit, post paid, (except $10 be sent) by mail, at our risk. If any of our agents have made different stipulations with subscribers as it respects the time of payment, we cheerfully abide their arrangement. But in all other cases, and in future, we shall expect our "Terms" to be complied with. This will be absolutely necessary to enable us to continue our paper.

Credits will be given in our paper for the moneys we have received.

☞All the travelling preachers are considered agents for this paper.

RECEIVED PAY FOR FIRST VOL. RECORDER.

	Dols.	Cts.
Per E. K. M'Masters,
S. Overstreet, - - -	2	00
D. Johnson, - - - -	2	00
The money we received from Bro. J. Clarke some time since, is credited to
R. Collier, - - - -	2	00
G. Smith, - - - -	2	00
J. Enbank, - - - -	2	00
T. Smith, - - - -	2	00
W. Smith, - - - -	2	00
Mr. Harris, - - - -	2	00
J. Murry, - - - -	1	00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Committee Ill. Conference, (postage 50 cents, 25 paid,)
V. Powelson,
M. N. Warren,
J. Clarke,
E. K M'Masters,
A. K. Earl,
Mrs. M. Turner,
M. Sarchit,
R. Richardson,
D. C. Carson.

O. WHITE,
BOOK BINDER,
NO. 104, MAIN-STREET,
ZANESVILLE, OHIO.
August 1, 1839. 2tf

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

For Sale.

LARGE MAPS of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations, Land Districts, Townships, &c. engraved from the government surveys and plans in the General Land Office, Washington city, by E. Gilman, Draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. TAYLOR, Book Seller, Washington city, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are published on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State, as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Offices relative to water courses, township lines, Indian Land Reservations, Land Districts, &c., and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in these points. They can be sent to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. Price $2, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for $5. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or any who will buy to sell again. Dec. 10, 1839. 3t16

☞Editors of newspapers any where who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it to the advertiser.

FOR THE YOUNG.

From the Youth's Cabinet.

LITTLE MARY.—In the northern part of Vermont, the pleasant town of Guildhall stretches along the banks of the Connecticut river, opposite Lancaster, in N. H. In the quiet village at the "Falls," near the northeast corner of this town, a little girl once lived and died, of whom I have heard an interesting account. "It is a true story," said the one who told me, and I hope the readers of the Cabinet will think much of it.

Little Mary, as she was called by her neighbors, was only 14 years old when she died, in February, 1832.

In her early years, she did not enjoy the privilege of going constantly to the Sunday school, but she almost always went when she could.

When more than thirteen years old, her two older sisters, who were then away from home, were both converted.

When they returned, she was so much pleased with their Christian behavior, that she often told her mother, she wished she was like them.

By the blessing of God on their example, and her pious mother's teaching, she was led to see that her heart must be turned from sin to holiness, before she would be fit to enter heaven and enjoy the society of those who are perfectly pure. She soon abandoned every other refuge, and trusted in Christ for salvation; submitting her heart entirely to him.

She loved her Saviour, and, as we all delight to converse with those we love, she was very fond of prayer. She went into her chamber and prayed, the last thing she did before going to school, and the first thing, when she returned, even though her meals might be waiting for her.

She loved to read her Bible, and she did not merely commit the words to memory, but she thought much of their precious meaning. Her father was much distressed at the thought of his sins, and little Mary often brought the Bible to him, and respectfully pointed out such passages as she thought it would do him good to read, and then went away without saying a word.

She loved her mother very much, and always seemed very sorry if she had done any thing to grieve her. She was once intending to take a ride, but whens he was all ready, and her feelings were much excited with the thought of her expected pleasure, something occurred to prevent her going. She wept bitterly at this severe disappointment, but soon recovered hersef, and asked her mother's forgiveness, fearing that she had grieved her by her tears. Early in the winter, many children and young persons in her neighborhood, were seized with the scarlet fever, accompanied with the throat distemper. Several of them died, both in Guildhall and the neighboring towns. This epidemic soon seized on Mary. She suffered much, but bore it all with patience. If any one asked her how she felt, she did not seem to think of her body, but replied: "I feel very happy." One morning her father came in and said: "How do you feel, Mary?"

She pleasantly answered: "O happy, happy; I know I love the Lord, and he loves me; I feel as if his arms were around me all the time."

Children, would you not give away all the pleasure you ever took in sin, for such a sweet feeling? There is a beautiful evening hymn written by Doddridge, which says:

"What if death my sleep invade?
Should I be of death afraid?
While encircled by thine arm,
Death may strike, but cannot harm,"

Yield your hearts to Christ, and you shall be encircled in his arms. Then you may smile at death, and

"——dread
The grave as little as your bed."

Little Mary once exhibited some uneasiness when her pains were unusually severe. She was soon after seen to weep, and when asked the cause, replied: "I was afraid you would think I was dissatisfied, as if I thought you had not done for me so much as you might."

She seemed to think it was wrong to feel any impatience under the pain which God permitted her to suffer.

She continued to grow feeble, but death had no terrors for her. One night, her sister, who had been with her, laid down to rest. The woman who watched with her, observed a change in her appearance, and called her sister up again.

Mary had been fond of singing, and Maria, her older sister, commenced her favorite evening him, commencing with this verse.

"The day is past and gone,
The evening shades appear,
O may we all remember well,
The night of death draws near."

Maria sang alone, in a loud clear voice, and Mary seemed much pleased in listening to the familiar sound. You remember the verse of this beautiful hymn, which begins,—

"And if we early rise."

When Maria reached that, Mary joined in, with a voice which drowned her sister's and sung:

"And when I early rise
And view the unwearied sun,
I shall set out to win the prize,
And after glory run."

She raised her head, and seemed much animated while she sung, but when she closed the verse, she threw herself down on the bed, and though there was no light where it could shine on her, yet her face looked bright, as if the light of a candle had suddenly flashed upon it. Her strength seemed entirely exhausted. She calmly sunk away, and soon she ceased to breathe.

Children and youth! you see from this example, that

"'Tis religion must supply, Solid comfort when we die."

"But I shan't die, for a great many years," says some ruddy-faced reader. Perhaps you will not, my dear child, though you may die soon. Yet if you now accept the Saviour's kind invitation, you will find that

"'Tis religion which can give Sweetest comforts while we live."

From the Youth's Cabinet.

INSTINCT OF ANIMALS.—When I was a lad, and resided with my parents, in Gloucester county, near the village of Woodbury, New Jersey, at a certain time I was engaged with others in felling trees to get the bark for sale to the tanners. On one occasion, we cut down a tree in which were four squirrels, very young, perhaps not more than a day or two old, for they could not see. We were not aware of the squirrels being in the tree until after we had felled it. My curiosity was much excited to know how the old squirrel would act when she came home in the evening, and I secreted myself in some bushes near where the tree lay.

About dusk the old squirrel returned. She sprang upon the stump, stood upon her hind feet and raised herself up as high as she could, and looked around apparently with anxiety for the fate of her young ones. She then sprang to the ground, and run several times round the stump, occasionally raising herself upon her hind feet, looking about to see if she could discover what had become of them. At length she jumped from the stump to the trunk of the tree, and run along it till she came to the hole in which her young ones were, and went in. After remaining there about five minutes, doubtless to give them suck, she came out and galloped off through the bushes, and passed within a yard or two, of where I was concealed.

After an absence of ten or fifteen minutes, she again returned, and took her young ones in her mouth, as a cat carries her kittens, and conveyed them, one at a time, a distance of three or four hundred yards, and deposited them in another tree; where she took care of them until they were able to provide for themselves; and I afterwards saw them running about the tree, when they had grown nearly as large as their mother.

Nature, or instinct, no doubt, warned ed her, that her young would not be safe in the tree, after it was felled, and she accordingly provided for them a place of greater safety.

He who has endowed the brute creation with such wonderful sagacity, as is manifested in the circumstances above related, will not leave man, the most noble of all his works, without a sure director in all things relating to his well being in this life, and to his future happiness. H.

New York, 11th mo., 1839.

ITEMS.

You had better find out one of your own weaknesses, than ten of your neighbors.

When God punishes another he threatens thee; when he wounds another, he warns thee.

Sincerity.—To practice sincerity, is to speak as we think; to do as we profess; to perform what we promise, and really to be what we seem and appear to be.

The ladies will oblige us particularly by wearing double-soled shoes, now that the cold weather is coming on. We ask it only for their own sakes.

If you want to render your husband unhappy, blame him for all he does, right or wrong; scold him for this or that before you know whether he did it or not.

Good.—Subscribers will confer a favor by not lending their paper. Borrowers are always turning up their noses at something it contains.—Newberyport Herald.

The right kind of cheating.—Cheat the doctor by living temperate; cheat the lawyer, by keeping out of debt; and cheat the demagogue, of whatever party, by voting for honest men.

There is no disputing the fact that the girl who can make a good pudding, and substantial music upon the frying-pan, is far superior to her who can only make empty music on the piano.

An exchange paper says:—Any man so base as to strike a woman, should be placed on the back of a hard-trotting horse and made to collect newspaper accounts for the balance of his life.

The Canal tolls of Pennsylvania for the present year will exceed one million of dollars, or about two hundred thousand dollars more than the amount received last year. The Harrisburgh Reporter adds that the "hard times" have caused a falling off in the Fall carrying trade. for had it fulfilled the promises of the Spring, the amount taken, well informed gentlemen think, would have reached a million and a quarter.

Female Resignation.—Deacon Marvin, of Lyme, Connecticut, a large land holder and exemplary man, was exceedingly eccentric in some of his notions. His courtship it is said, was as follows: having one day mounted his horse, with only a sheep skin for a saddle, he rode in front of the house wherein Betty Lea lived, and without dismounting, asked Betty to come to him; on her coming he told her that the Lord had sent him there to marry her. Betty, without much hesitation replied—"The Lord's will be done."

RUSSIAN VISITS TO THE UNITED STATES AND TO PITTSBURGH.—During the last two years respectable officers in the Russian service, principally in the Engineer Department, have visited the United States and our city, on official business, and collected for their government information about our rail roads, canals, steam boat and manufacturing operations, and the rapid improvements and advances of our country, and they scarcely ever fail to give Pittsburgh a visit. About two weeks ago Col. Melnikoff visited us and took lodging at the Exchange Hotel, and spent several days in accomplishing his object. He brought letters stating that Col. Melnikoff, a Russian officer, is engaged by order of his sovereign, in visiting the U. States, to acquire authentic information on the subject of our system of internal improvement, particularly in reference to steam boats and rail ways, and is now proceeding to New Orleans by way of Pittsburgh.

A few days ago Col. Krafft, his colleague and also of the Engineer Department, likewise arrived and took lodgings at the Exchange, where he will remain for a few days, on his way to New Orleans.—Harris' Intelligencer.

AGRICULTURAL.

The following extract from her Governor's late Message, shows, that Kentucky is turning her attention to the subject of agriculture.

"Connected with this sujbect of general education is another which I commend to your favorable consideration—the efforts now being made by the many societies in the State to improve the science and art of agriculture. Kentucky is, and must ever be, an agricultural State. Her wealth and prosperity mainly depend upon the productions of her soil and labor. A State society has been formed for the purpose of combining and concentrating effort and talent in this great cause. These efforts I hope will meet your favorable consideration. When we reflect that much the largest portion of the State revenue is derived from the farming class of the community—is it not due to them that a portion of it should be expended in founding a system of agricultural instruction, that will, while it elevates the intellectual and moral character, teach the practical farmer how to extract from the earth, with the least possible labor to himself and injury to the soil, the greatest amount of product—how to develope the latent energies of his farm—'to cause two blades of grass to grow where one had grown before,' and by combination of knowledge and skill with industry and labor, increase the wealth and resources of his State?"

The following are the remarks of Gov. Noble, of S. C., on the same subject, in his Message of the 26th ult.

"In giving you 'information of the condition of the the State,' I should feel I was justly obnoxious to the charge of neglecting one of the most important branches of industry, were I to be silent on the subject of Agriculture. This pursuit of the great mass of the people, has claims upon your fostering care and attention. It is the source of our wealth and power, and furnishes the means of our commercial exchanges. Yet its importance seems never to have been realized by the constituted authorities of the State; for it is a lamentable truth, that while other branches of industry have received an impulse by wholesome laws, the great interests of Agriculture have been passed by almost with silent contempt. It is now time for the State to dismiss from her councils this cold indifference, and to take such action on the subject, as will promote its success. In exploring the causes which have retarded the State in population, wealth, and importance, none is more prominent than the utter neglect of this primary pursuit. It cannot be doubted, that South Carolina once possessed a soil of unsurpassed fertility. But this rich gift of a kind Providence, has been, in a great measure, lost by a most pernicious course of husbandry. A large portion of this once flourishing region, blessed, too, with a propitious climate, has been reduced to sterility. Yet, all hope of reclaiming and restoring to its wonted productiveness our exhausted soil, is not in vain. It is a beneficent provision of a good Providence, that beneath the surface of the earth, are to be found substances of the most fertilizing qualities. Their discovery, however, requires the application of science, and means seldom possessed by individuals. It is, in such a case, that a wise and patriotic Legislature should extend its aid.—But to subserve fully, the interests of agriculture, the Legislature should not confine its operations to a Geological Survey alone. With this should be connected an agricultural survey. While the former would bring us acquainted with all the substances which enter into the composition of that portion of the earth to which we have access, the latter will elicit a mass of information, in relation to every thing that concerns agriculture, which cannot fail to be highly useful. In other countries, the utility of agricultural surveys has been fully proved, by the valuable results. But in carrying into effect such surveys as have been mentioned, the value of the results would depend upon the selection of an individual, possessing the highest qualifications, combining a profound knowledge of the subjects of investigation, a sound discriminating judgment and an untiring zeal and industry.

The expense of such an object, should not be weighed against the incalculable importance of the end proposed. Being deeply impressed with the practical usefulness of such surveys, I earnestly recommend that you provide for that accomplishment.

COLORING WALLS.—It may not be generally known, particularly in the country that blue vitrol when mixed with lime, forms a very beautiful as well as exceedingly cheap coloring matter for walls. Take good lime and slack it as usual, one or two pounds of blue vitrol; dissolve it in boiling water; when dissolved mix it with the whitewash, and add one pound of glue well dissolved. This should be preparod in a glue pot, if possible, to prevent its being burned or scorched. When well mixed, the first coat must be put on horizontally or from side to side, and the second coat vertically, or up and down. The wall will be of a bright blue color, resembling the blue bottles sometimes seen in apothecary shops. By following these directions, women can put on the coloring as smoothly and as well, generally, as plasterers.

PLANTING GARDEN SEEDS IN THE FALL.—Two years ago, after taking the vegetables from our garden, we immediately prepared the beds and sowed onions, parsnips, carrots, lettuce, beets, cabbage, &c. on the 14th of October. They were covered with rye straw and litter, and manure from the barnyard, thrown over them to the depth of four or five inches. In the spring, as soon as the frost was out, this was removed, and we found that in consequence of the straw not being well thrashed much rye had dropped upon the ground and had taken root, in extracting which we uprooted and destroyed a large portion of our plants, which had already started and were doing well. What did grow, however, did well, and were large enough to use a number of days sooner than those planted as early as the weather would permit. Plants from the cabbage seed sown in the fall, were much more thrifty, and produced larger heads than those of the same variety sown in the spring. We name this as the result of a single experiment, and as we are in no situation to repeat it this year, we should like to have some of our friends try it, and let us know the result next fall. Let a few rows of each kind be sown in one bed to try the experiment, and we would recommend covering them with boughs of evergreen trees if they are handily obtained, or some pieces of board instead of straw, as no grain can then shake off, and they will assist to protect it from frost.—Maine Farmer.

ROTATION IN CROPS.—The alternating system of husbandry has not obtained among us that consideration which its importance demands. It is well known that the ordinary lands will not bear a succession of the same crops without a successive diminution of product; and that if grain, grass, and roots, are alternated or succeed each other, the decrease of fertility is much less apparent. This is ascribed to the well authenticated fact, that different plants exhaust different fertilizing proprieties of the soil, or in other words, that each species requires a specific food, which other species do not take up. It is now generally conceeded that wheat will not do well in a soil which has no lime in its composition—that clover and lucerne require gypsum—that flax cannot be raised on the same ground, that on analyzing wheat, it is found to contain lime: clover, on analysis, has yielded gypsum at the rate of four bushels to the acre—and the supposition is, that a crop of flax exhausts the soil of some property essential to its perfection, which it takes years to restore. The crops can derive these supplies from no other source than the soil; and if the supplies are not there, the crop will be either deficient or defective.

There is still another reason to offer for alternating crops. The soil, if in grass, becomes annually more hard and compact; the roots are consequently restricted in their range for food: the heat and atmosphere becomes partially excluded, and the decomposition of vegetable food is arrested. The consequence is, that the finer grasses gradually disappear, or run out, as it is termed, and the grass crop gradually diminishes. If ploughed and cropped occasionally with roots, these inconveniences are obviated; the soil is broken and pulverized, and rendered pervious to solar and atmospheric influence, and vegetable food which it contains is thereby rendered soluble; and if manure is given to the tillage crops, as it should and can be once during a course, the soil will become renovated and fitted again to receive the grass seeds, with the prospect of a gently increased burthen of hay.—Jesse Buel.

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.

Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Cloverseed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Bicknell's Detector.

MONEY and business matters have increased to such an extent in this country, that we shall soon find it impossible to give an accurate and detailed account of all the Banking Institutions and Counterfeit Bank Notes within the limits of the thirty-two pages of our monthly pamphlet Detector. We propose therefore to increase the size of that publication sixteen pages in each number. We must either do one of two things, publish an imperfect and incomplete Detector, or enlarge our limits. We have determined upon the latter course, unwilling to do injustice to the public, and anxious as heretofore, to issue the only perfect sheet of the kind in the United States. We cannot do this however, without some increase in price; and hence we shall be compelled to charge $1 50 per annum for the enlarged Detector, instead of $1, the price of our present publication. We promise to make very considerable improvements, to give in addition to the present information, the names of the Cashiers of the various Banks as far as they can be ascertained—to renew the type, to obtain better paper, and, in short, to render our monthly accurate in every particular, and entitled in a still greater degree to the confidence so generously reposed in it by the public. The increase in the price, however, may not give satisfaction to all, although it must be apparent to every individual, that in enlarging and improving, we shall necessarily be compelled to increase our expenses to a very considerable extent. Such, however, as are unwilling to receive the enlarged Detector at $1 50 per annum, will be good enough to notify us to that effect, immediately after receiving the first number of the new volume. We may add, those who subscribe to the Weekly Reporter, in addition to the Monthly Detector, will continue to be furnished with the latter at $1 per annum. We are anxious to do every thing in our power to retain our entire list, as well as to secure new patrons; and would make no increase in price, but we find on calculating the impossibiiity of publishing the enlarged and improved monthly, at the existing rates. Deeply grateful for liberal patronage enjoyed, we shall still keep on the even tenor of our way, exerting every energy to render both the Reporter and Detector acceptable, as well as useful and instructive.

MATHEW T. MILLER,

No. 76 South Third-street, Philadelphia.

November 21, 1839. 14

New York Mirror.

☞THE PRESENT VOLUME.

THE conductors of the New York Mirror are determined that no periodical in the world shall exceed this in the interest and variety of its literary contents, the elegance and finish of its pictorial embellishments, the beauty and popularity of its music, and the neatness and superiority of its typographical appearance.

The number for the 19th of October is adorned with one of the most costly and magnificent steel engravings ever published in this or any other country. It is a representation of the "Landing at Jamestown," painted and designed by Chapman, and engraved by Danforth, two American artists of whom their country may be justly proud.

This is the third exquisite engraving that has already appeared in the present volume of the Mirror, the first number of which was issued on the first of July last, all the numbers of which can be supplied to new subscribers, if immediate application be made.

The New York Mirror is the oldest, and unquestionably, the cheapest periodical, extant.—Every number contains a great variety of useful, interesting and amusing matter, on every subject connected with polite literature and the fine arts; and they form, at the end of the year, an immense volume of four hundred and sixteen imperial quarto pages, with vignette title-page, table of contents, splendid engravings, and fifty pieces of popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, guitar, &c.—a library in itself—and all this is afforded at the very trifling cost of five dollars a year, a sum almost inadequate for the extraordinary equivalent rendered to subscribers.

Six superb engravings (including three now issued) will be given, engraved by Danforth, Parker, etc. from original designs and portraits by Weir, Inman, Chapman, etc.

A number of curious etchings on wood will also be published in the present volume, engraved by Adams, Anderson, Johnson, etc. from original designs.

Nothing shall be left undone to render this work, in its literary character, its engravings, its music, and its typography, equal, if not superior, to any periodical of the day.

CONDITIONS.—The Mirror is published every Saturday, at No. 1, Barclay-street, next door to Broadway. It is elegantly printed in the extra super-royal quarto form, with brevier, minion and nonpariel type. It is embellished once every three months, with a SPLENDID SUPER-ROYAL QUARTO ENGRAVING, and every week with a popular piece of MUSIC, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, etc. For each volume an exquisitely engraved VIGNETTE TITLE-PAGE, and a copious INDEX, are furnished. The terms are $5 per annum, payable, in all cases, IN ADVANCE.

December 10, 1839. 3t16

Dr. A. W. Knight,

(Formerly of Philadelphia, but for the last six years in Muskingum county, Ohio,)

HAS removed to MT. STERLING, and respectfully tenders his professional services to the citizens of this place and the surrounding country: he may at all times be found, when not absent on professional business, at his residence. He hopes that undivided attention to the duties of his profession, together with an experience derived from twelve years' practice in the various branches of a profession, and part that time in the Philadelphia Hospital as one of the house physicians, will enable him to merit and receive a liberal share of public patronage.

Mt. Sterling, Ohio, Oct. 31, 1839. 11tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. The improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Brother Jonathan.

THE LARGEST PAPER IN THE WORLD

THE proprietors of this sheet—the "Great Western" among the newspapers, have the pleasure of spreading before the reading public a weekly periodical containing a greater variety and amount of useful and entertaining miscellany, than is to be found in any similar publication in the world.

Each number of the paper contains as large an amount of reading matter as is found in volume of ordinary duodecimo, which cost two dollars—and more than is contained in a volume of Irving's Columbus, or Bancroft's History of America, which cost three dollars a volume—and all for SIX CENTS a number, or Three Dollars a year.

BROTHER JONATHAN being a genuine Yankee and thinking that some things can be done as well as others, is determined to present his readers a MEDLEY hitherto unrivalled by any other paper of Anecdotes, Amusements, Allegories Accidents, Biography, Bon Mots, Conversation Crimes, Dramatics, Drolleries, Erratics, Essays Eloquence, Facetia, Geography, History, Jests Learning, Morality, Marvels, Music, News, Novelties, Oratory, Poetry, Philosophy, Quiddities, Religion, Romance, Sports, Spectacles, Sorrows, Sufferings, Tales, Trials, Truths, Teachings, Wisdom, Wonders, Wit, &c. &c.

As a family newspaper, BROTHER JONATHAN will be found to present attractions beyond any other.

——"He comes the herald of a noisy world, News from all nations lumbering at his back."

The earliest intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, and the latest novelties of the Literary World, will be promptly served up for the gratification of the reader.

Strictly neutral in politics, it will contain nothing in favor or against any party, and will as seduously avoid any of the controversies which agitate the religious community. Strict morality, temperance, industry and good order, benevolence, and usefulness to our common country and our fellow men, will be advocated and in every page of Brother Jonathan.

TERMS OF BROTHER JONATHAN—Three Dollars a year in advance.

For five dollars two copies will be sent one year, or one copy two years.

The EVENING TATTLER is published every day at the same office, and is put to press at meridian, in season for the great Northern, Eastern and Southern mails, which all close about two o'clock, P. M.

☞All country papers who give this prospectus three insertions, will be entitled to an exchange, on sending a number of their paper to this office containing the advertisement.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed postage paid to

GRISWOLD & COMPANY,

162 Nasau-street New York city.

November 14, 1839. 13

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1839. Number 18.

POETRY.

For the Recorder.

ONE EARLY GREY—LIFE—A PICTURE.

"Thou hast ■ gloomy wand, oh time!"
Have I arrived at manhood's age,
And has my head grown grey from age?
Or is it trouble that I share,
A heavy load of toil and care?
Why is it youth has changed so soon,
And I grown grey ere manhood's noon?
Have I mistook the wheels of time,
That roll'd me into manhood's prime?
And have they fled, forever gone,
The brilliant scenes I knew at dawn?
When things were charming as the morn,
And none seemed born to live forlorn,
Down where the sweet-tun'd warblers sung,
Where gone my toys since I was young;
Do others hear those high-key'd strains,
And of my toys share their remains?
Do mortals live but to one end,
And all their thoughts to one point tend,
To joy o'er songs and birds and flowers,
Until we sate those happy powers,
Which he who made seen fit to give Unto us mortals while we live?
What is it for that earthly men
Exert their talents and their ken,
And gain bright honor and ■ name
That lives upon the breath of fame?
Fame, O fame! thy name I breathe,
Thou canst not give the happy wreathe;
And to what end is treasured gold
In such swell'd sums as can't be told?
Gold ne'er has made a mortal wise,
Nor can it buy a heavenly prize;
Yet these are things of earthly stare,
For which our lives we vainly wear,
False letter'd things which buz thro' time,
Sung in our ears with sweetest chime,
For this we climb the mountain side,
For this we sail o'er ocean's pride,
For this we ransack caverns deep,
And dig in mines where death can't sleep,
For this we search for science's top,
And gaze and gaze without a stop,
For this we search the icy pole,
And set our foot on ev'ry shoal,
For this the youth exhausts the lamp,
Till pale his cheek in learning tramp,
Through strifes he runs with hopes and fears,
And knowledge gains beyond his years,
For this he woos the lovely lass,
Who often wounds his hopes, alas,
And plucks the laurels from his brow
Won o'er his books or from his plough;
Has she acheived a hero's crown,
Or won the trophies of renown?
Ah see! she's wearing laurels now,
That wreath she tore from off his brow.
Pull down those laurels from her hair
And ask her why that wreath was there;
Such laurels woman cannot wear,
They'll fall and leave her shame to bear;
Laurels befit a man of war,
Whose blood stained name is heard afar,
Or him who rolls the car of state,
And makes or breaks a nation's fate.
Does human life runs but one ring,
All to effect one simple thing;
To live and love and toys enjoy,
And cherish these until they cloy;
No wonder then men grow grey,
And wan their cheek ere youth's mid-day;
That blooming youth so early fades,
With blasted hopes cold as the shades.
Ah, men are fools, I find they are,
In folly fooled with them I share;
I've found the cause, its most too late,
The past is bound in chains of fate;
I'be found the cause—mankind are lost,
Nor know that they are tempest tost;
In tho't they tread a sunny shoal,
But find alas a frozen pole;
They wish and sigh for endless health,
Wish ardently for endless wealth,
They trust themselves nor poison know,
Mistake the road and walk below. V.

OBITUARY.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor:—It becomes my afflicting task to record the death of Bro. JOSEPH MULLVEAN, of Coshocton county, Ohio, who departed this life on the 22d of November, 1839, in the 57th year of his age. He removed, at an early period from Pennsylvania, to the southern part of Ohio; thence to Coshocton county, where he has resided for more than thirty years.

His education was Calvenistic, but for many years he was satisfied that those doctrines were not in accordance with the oracles of God.—When the ministers of the Methodist Protestant church were first introduced into this section, he was in fellowship with the Presbyterian church; but, having no regular ordinances, in his own neighborhood, from that church, he attended the ministry of the former. And, after acquainting himself with the doctrine and discipline of the M. P. church, he expressed an inclination to attach himself thereto; stating, at the same time, he was well suited where he was, as it respected the order and government of the church,—and in reference to doctrines, he could remain there without any difficulty; but, his greatest objection, was, that it took more to secure the means of grace in the Presbyterian church, in many sections, than poor people were able to contribute. But he was of opinion that this new organization would be the best adopted to the United States of any thing which had yet came under his notice. Its doctrines were in accordance with scripture and public opinion; its government was in accordance with the rights of christians and with the genius of the civil institutions of the country; and above all, its itinerant operations were peculiarly adopted to the spiritual wants of our sparcely populated country.

From the convictions of duty, he therefore, about seven years since, attached himself to the Methodist Protestant church and became a very active and useful member, and was the means of bringing many of his friends and neighbors to Christ. His brethren had the utmost confidence in him, and frequently chose him to represent the interests of the circuit in the Annual Conference, which he always did with mildness and judgment.

In brother Mullvean's case, we see exemplified the propriety of two Methodist churches. His peculiar opinions and Presbyterian education, would have prevented him from ever joining the Old Fellowship, and his usefulness would have been mainly lost to the church of Christ.

Bro. M., was not only an exemplary christian during life, but he gave evidence in his death of the power and efficacy of the Christian religion. He has closed his eyes upon the shadows of time to open them on the splendors of eternal day.

In all the relations of citizen, husband, parent and professor he discharged the duties of a christian. He has left a large circle of friends and connexions to mourn their momentary loss.

Yours, with respect,
MOSES N. WARREN.

Evansburgh, Ohio, Dec. 7, 1839.

For the Western Recorder.

Bro. Springer:—Perhaps nothing more satisfactorily demonstrates the religion of Jesus Christ to be from above, and exactly situated to the condition of man, than the triumphant and joyful confidence it inspires in death's gloomy hour. While I cannot refrain the tear of sympathy, in being unexpectedly called on to record the death of our worthy and young brother, JOHN E. HALL, of Lawrenceburgh circuit, Indiana. I am permitted to rejoice at the triumphs of grace, as exhibited in his closing moments.

He died on the 7th ultimo, in the city of Cincinnati, whither he had came in company with myself and family, on our way to this place, and where he had made arrangements to enter upon the improvement of his education, I believe with the sole view of glorifying God, in being more useful to his fellow men. I have not the means of ascertaining his precise age—the time when he experienced a change of heart, or connected himself with the church; but from the best information I have, he had not passed out of his 20th year, and was short of two years a professor of religion. During the last year I was very intimately acquainted with him as a member of my charge, and part of that time as a member of my family. Seldom, indeed, have I known a young man of such strict integrity—honorable in his principles and feelings, sincere in his professions and attachments, and uniform in his experience. So conspicuous were the excellent traits of his mind, that a very intelligent Presbyterian minister, upon his first interview with him, was led to urge upon him the duty of abandoning the trade which he was then learning, and attend to the improvement of his mind for higher purposes, offering at the same time his assistance, which was afterwards generously rendered. After much reflection and consideration on this subject, he came, as above stated, to commence his studies in Woodward College, Cincinnati. But, oh! how inscrutible are the ways of Providence? Ere he had entered the College or commenced his labor, he was called to rest. Little, indeed, did I think when parting with this youth in Cincinnati, that he was within a week of the grave—and eternity! How solemnly this dispensation warns us all to be ready for our appointed change. During the journeying of that day, he complained some, but we all supposed it a slight illness; but a letter just received from a friend, states, that when he reached his lodgings he took his bed and was but once out subsequently. During his illness—which was at first of Billious fever, but soon after hemorrhage of the lungs also,—my informant states, "he was quite resigned to the will of God—the powers of his mind unimpaired to the last moment." A minister who visited him, remarked, that "he never knew any person so perfectly resigned." About two hours before he expired, while a pious sister was engaged in prayer with him, he became exceedingly happy, insomuch, that his voice was heard above hers, praising his Redeemer.

Farewell, John, we loved thee,—may we meet where love is perfectly free from all hatred,—worth no more envied, and friendship is uninterrupted and everlasting. Thy numerous friends mourn their loss, while thou art rejoicing in thy infinite gain. JNO. CLARKE.

Allegheny, Pa., Dec. 2, 1839.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LOGANSPORT, IA., DEC. 9, 1839.

Brother Springer:—After so long a time, I send for your paper. We received the first number gladly, and I repeatedly urged Mr. T. to write, but he still delayed. We have had many discouragements from various quarters, with respect to society—preachers have been appointed who never came—some members were only transient, who, when the public works ceased, left us. Our old side brethren have a good meeting-house and congregation beside us. O! how much we need a well established and capable minister to aid us in these ends of the earth! God grant that we may receive such speedily!

Well, send us your friendly paper. I can truly say, it has been our almost only help. It is to us a messenger of glad tidings, and has been the means of keeping alive the interest I feel for the welfare and prosperity of the Methodist Protestant church. How often have we been told, and told too, by people who should speak the truth, "the M. P. church is going to nothing." "It is done,"—"all are turning back,"—"you may as well go with us," and abundance of such kind of talk. Then comes your paper and brings the good news that the work is progressing,—sinners are converted,—believers growing strong, and some dying in the triumphs of faith. This encourages us, and I feel like trying to stand 'till the time to favor us should come.

The M. E. church have held a protracted meeting in this place; they have some excitement, and have taken one of our few members,—he was our leader,—a good man, but wanting in firmness. The cry is "join us," "join us," but I feel like standing firm.

But O! how much we need a minister on the account of our children. The three eldest is almost grown. Do tell us, in your paper, about the Lawrenceburg school. We want to know the terms of tuition, &c. Mr. Turner talks of sending our son there, if we should be able.

I remain as ever, your friend,
MARY TURNER.

P. S.—I have heard since writing the above, that there is a preacher on his way here. May we yet have good times. Our number now, in town, is but five. But the Lord does not despise the day of small things. M. T.

INDIANA, Nov. 21st, 1839.

Mr. Editor: Our first quarterly meeting for White river circuit closed last Sunday night.—We had a sweet time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

There were ministers from four different denominations attended the meeting, three of whom partook in the exercises of the pulpit, viz: Bro. Dunning, a New School Presbyterian, Brother Woodward, a Cumberland Presbyterian, and our own preachers. There was much kind feeling manifested upon the occasion; party names and party spirit appeared to be forgotten, and the spirit of love seemed to pervade the people.

The work of the Lord is advancing on this circuit; prospects are every day growing better.—We have had some increase this year. We have formed several new societies, and taken in six regular preaching places. There is a general inquiry upon the subject of church government.—May the Head of the church make us a holy people zealous of good works. Yours, &c.
E. K. M'MASTERS.

LEESBURGH, OHIO, DEC. 7, 1839.

Brother Springer:—Having a few subscribers to send you for your valuable paper, I will take the opportunity of stating some things respecting the cause of God on this circuit, and of the location of my family, which is in Leesburgh, a pleasant little village, containing four stores and only one tavern. It has two houses of public worship, both of brick; one for the Episcopal the other for the Protestant Methodist church.—The Episcopal Methodists have many members in this place. Lately, their society here have had to wade through many difficulties and have been much cast down, but the Lord has visited them again, and they manifest a disposition to thank God and take courage. Though we have but few members in the town, yet, we have kind and obliging abolition neighbors, and a large abolition society. We held our first quarterly meeting in Deersville. Here, we have a large society and a frame meeting house. The Lord was with us in truth. We had brothers Stanart, Foster and Morris to help us; eight were added to the church,—I hope of such as shall be saved. We have omens of good in several societies. As to myself, I am striving to preach good tidings unto the meek, to bind up the broken hearted, to preach liberty to the captives, the opening of the prison to them that are bound, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of God's vengeance, if we do not, as a nation, as churches and as individuals repent of our sins and turn to God.

I have to travel alone, as Bro. Cameron is sick and has not been able to travel any yet. O! brother, pray for us; ask all God's children to pray for us, and to continue the struggle until the powers of darkness give way, and civil and religious tyranny be destroyed from the face of the whole earth, and the saints of the Most High take the kingdom. R. RICHARDSON.

Carrollton, Carroll county, Ohio.

MORGAN CO., O., DEC. 19, 1839.

Bro. Springer: Our first quarterly meeting for this Conference year was held in the Pisgah meeting house, which is situated upon one of the high hills of the Muskingum river. It commenced on Saturday, the 30th of November, and closed on the next Friday evening. Brothers Thompson, Galbreth, Lukins, Johnson and Davis, came to my assistance, and their labor was not in vain in the Lord,—for He spake through them to the people. Sinners confessed their sins to God in the presence of the congregation, and after repentance and dedication to God, by faith in the Redeemer, they rose and gave evidence of the Saviour's love.

The triumphant ecstacy of believers certainly bore some resemblance to the holy triumph achieved in the days of Moses, when the people of God looked from old Pisgah's top and beheld the promised land. Thanks be to God, our cords are lengthened, and our stakes are strengthened.—Sixteen united with us to serve the Lord and wing their way to heaven.

Truly our God has his way in the whirlwind as well as in the calm. Oh that all intelligences would learn his way, and let his will be done!—Two of the above persons who joined with us were strangely exercised. One of them, (a young man) was with us in our church meeting on Friday, when a member was expelled, at which he greatly rejoiced. A sister B. was rather displeased at his conduct, and reproved him for his vain exultation;—she told him she was not aware of his being any better than the member who was expelled, and that she would advise him to get religion and endeavor to fill his place more honorably in the church. At this, the young man took umbrage, and left the meeting house, near which, after the close of the meeting, this conversation took place. In the evening of the same day he went to her house to close the relation subsisting between them as neighbors. Embracing this second opportunity, she administered another reproof, and counseled him as to the course she thought he should pursue. At this his feelings were again touched, and he left her house in a spirit of anger. In a short time, however, conviction seized his guilty conscience; and he was unable to erase its impressions until he found pardon for his transgressions at the altar of prayer.

The other, a middle aged man, who had long lived in a state of rebellion against the moral government of God, received an arrow of conviction in his guilty heart, and began to think of the dangerous state of his soul,—of the awful gulf prepared for the finally impenitent. He started on Sabbath morning to observe the conduct of professors of religion, and the manner in which they spend this holy day. The first house to which he came was the residence of brother Wm. Ross. Here he found nothing to reprove. The second house which he visited was brother Wm. Patterson's (a late professor.) Finding the sister sweeping the house, he observed to her that she was not so religious as some of her neighbors were. She called for the reason of this strange remark, and he replied that he had visited Mr. Ross' family that morning, and he, having cut his wood and accomplished his other business on Saturday evening preparatory for the Sabbath, had his bible in his hand reading from the inspired pen the words of life. There appeared to be such a close congeniality of feeling and sentiment between him and the sacred writers, that nothing of a temporal nature was permitted to occupy his attention. But it appears that you are not so scrupulous in religious matters: you can brush about with your broom very dexterously, without showing any qualms of conscience. The lady replied that this was a work of necessity,—that it was necessary to set things in order. But she advised him to seek religion, and take Wm. Ross for his example on the Sabbath. This little exhortation, I believe, was not in vain; for the man came to the mourners' bench that night, and rested not until he found peace in his Redeemer. Oh, what a different result might have been seen under other circumstances! Had not these professors been on the watch tower of the Lord, performing the their religious duties, this man's course might have been turned to infidelity.

It is perhaps generally known that this circuit, lying in Morgan county, is a small branch taken from Cambridge circuit. This division was effected with more than ordinary unanimity, which is evident from the friendship manifested by both of them in visiting and assisting each other. This little circuit is acting on the principle of the noble one of which it formerly was a part, in supporting its ministers; and it shows no disposition to hinder reformation by a haughty spirit of dictation, or refusal to bear its part of the labors of the Cross. From these favorable symptoms there is a foundation for hope in relation to the accomplishment of future good; especially so, as we, by the blessing of Providence, have succeeded in killing off all the devil's humbugs, with which our little circuit has been infested. This can also be done wherever they exist if the discipline of our church is patiently and prayerfully adhered to. We are still united in peace and love, and solicit the prayers of the praying part of the community for our further prosperity.

I trust our brethren on the different circuits composing this Conference District, will in future not neglect to give us some account of the state of the same. Yours, &c.
C. WOODRUFF, Sup. Pisgah ct.

Extracts from the Minutes of the fourth session of the Illinois Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.—Concluded.

THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Item 1. The Stewards and Class Leaders of each circuit shall be constituted a committee on finance; to meet at some suitable place within the first six weeks after the adjournment of the Annual Conference; a majority of whom shall constitute a quorum to do business.

2. They shall proceed to estimate the expenses of the circuit or station for the year; after which, upon a free interchange of opinion, as to the ability of the circuit or station, they shall by a vote of a majority of all present, make an equitable apportionment.

3. Each Leader, shall at the next meeting of his class, inform them of the sum of their apportionment; whereupon, the class is recommended to take such measures for raising their apportionment as they may deem most expedient.

4. Let each class so arrange its contributions, that one fourth part be paid into the hands of the Steward before the first Quarterly meeting, and in like manner until the whole is paid.

5. The Stewards shall keep a record of the apportionment of each class, and give each class credit for what it pays in, and make a report of the sum to each Quarterly Conference.

6. Should a majority of the Stewards and Leaders fail to attend the appointed meeting, then the apportionment shall be made at the first Quarterly Conference.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Resolved, That each itinerant and all other members of this Conference be requested to use their influence in the cause of TEMPERANCE.

Resolved, That we recommend to our brethren and friends throughout the District to liberally patronise the "Methodist Protestant and Family Visiter," "The Western Recorder" and the "Methodist Protestant Letter-Press."

Resolved, That the preamble and resolutions of the Illinois Annual Conference of 1838 on the subject of SLAVERY be adopted. As follows:

"WHEREAS, the Declaration of American Independence, formed by the patriots of 1776, asserts that all men are born free and equal, possessing certain unalienable rights, among which are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness;

"And whereas, the States severally, in their Constitutions, acquiesce in the sentiment, which so highly adorns the above named Declaration;

"And whereas, the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the highest authority among men, says to its votaries, 'Do unto all men as ye would they should do unto you;'

"And whereas, the Methodist Protestant church holds, as one of her elementary principles, that 'every man has an unalienable right to private judgment in matters of religion; and an equal right to express his opinion, in any way which will not violate the laws of God, or the rights of his fellow men;'

"And whereas, Ministers and Churches who countenance slaveholding, as it exists in these United States, thereby present an influence, the tendency of which is to overthrow the above principles, and sustain iniquity—

"Therefore,

"1. Resolved. That the holding of men, women and children in bondage, from generation to generation, is condemned by the laws of God, the principles of humanity, and the above named Declaration.

"2. Resolved, That the attempts made by certain Divines to amalgamate the pure principles of Christianity with the unrighteous and unjustifiable system of Slavery, are altogether inconsistent with the character of the Christian Ministry.

"3. Resolved, That the great safeguard of the Christian Church is the propagation and firm maintenance of scriptural holiness.

"4. Resolved, That the sacred and endearing interests of the Church cannot be, in the least, endangered, by maintaining the principles of righteousness.

"5. Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Conference, while the Gospel shines, the characters of Philanthropist, Christian, and Slaveholder in heart, cannot meet in the same person."

Resolved, That this Conference do hold that according to the principles of delegation and mutual rights, and the constitution of the Methodist Protestant church, the delegates of unstationed ministers, at each session of the Annual Conference, previous to the sitting of the General Conference, are entitled to their seats during the entire session, and all the rights and privileges of other members of said Conference.

The next session of the Illinois Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant church, is to be at Virginia, Cass county, Illinois, to commence on the first Thursday of September, 1840.

Resolved, That we do highly appreciate the rigorous efforts of the Ohio Annual Conference, and most heartily accord with them in the setting off the State of Indiana as a separate District, to be called the Indiana District of the Methodist Protesant church.

The following persons were elected to be the standing District committee, viz: T. Prather, R. Horn, J. Williamson, ministers; J. Kirkpatrick, Wm. S. Horn and A. S. West, laymen.

M. Jarred, W. H. Collins, M. T. Johnson and Dr. Helm, were appointed a committee to inquire into the expediency of publishing a periodical under the direction and control of the Illinois Conference.

W. H. COLLINS, President.

M. T. JOHNSON, R. T. BOIL, } Secretaries.

J. BIDDLECOME, M. T. JOHNSON, F. S. D. MARSHALL, } Pub. Committe.

FOR THE YOUNG.

From the Youth's Cabinet.

"LIKE WHAT IS YOUTH?"

As late an aged man I passed,
Whose locks were silvered brightly,
I spoke—an anxious glance he cast,
Nor did he answer lightly.

"'Like what is youth?' say, would'st thou learn,
While through it swiftly gliding?
Come, then, with me, thy footsteps turn,
View nature's emblems striking.

"'Tis like the opening month of spring,
When solar rays seem brightest,
When all the groves with music ring,
And nature's robe is lightest.

"O prize it well—'tis like the morn;
Its brightness first increases,
But evening shades come stealing on,
When day's brief glory ceases:—

"Or like the sparkling mountain rill,
With varying onward motion,
It gathers strength, but onward still
Is hurried to the ocean.

"'Tis like the floweret of the field,
Its freshness transitory,
Seek then, the good its hours may yield,
Then will it end in glory." H. G. B.

Topsham, Maine.

From the Youth's Cabinet.

IMPORTANCE OF CULTIVATING THE MIND.—The human mind is one of the most wonderful and most mysterious works of the creation. That one property which it has of retaining ideas and calling back things which have transpired in past time, is a sufficient proof that its Author must have been a being of infinite wisdom.

How curious the process by which the scenes and occurrences of by-gone days are brought back to the mind, in all their originality, notwithstanding months and years have intervened! Even the scenes of childhood are recalled in old age, by the power of memory. Yet memory is but one of the many mysterious properties of that immortal mind with which every human being is endowed by the Author of his existence. The most complicated and curious machine which the ingenuity of man has sought out, is infinitely inferior in its structure and the nicety of its operations to the mind, & shrinks into insignificance in comparison with it. It is the mind that distinguishes man from the brutes that perish, that fits him for society, gives him influence over his fellow beings, and enables him to sustain that exalted station in the scale of beings—next to the angels that surround the throne of the Most High.

And was this inestimable gift, this invaluable treasure, given to man to be misimproved or left in a dormant state? Were all its wonderful powers and faculties which display in every operation the wisdom and goodness of the Deity, to be forever hidden and wrapped in ignorance? Certainly not. The immortal mind is of too much consequence to be left uncultivated and unimproved. That individual, whether young or old, who neglects a most important duty which he owes not only to himself but to his Maker. Man was formed for usefulness, and his principal aim, his grand ruling motive should be to do good. But in order for a person to be useful, nothing is more essentially requisite than a cultivated mind; a mind well stored with useful knowledge. A person's utility depends chiefly upon the influence which he has over his fellow being; and in proportion as this influence is powerful and extensive, he has the means of doing good.—But unless he has influence, unless he has some control over the minds of his fellow beings, and can in some degree bias their conduct and opinions by his own, he cannot be extensively useful. In order, therefore, that an individual may be useful, he must have influence. But that a person may have influence, he must be possessed of a cultivated mind, an enlarged understanding and ■ sound judgment. It is almost universally the case, that the man who has a cultivated and well improved mind, does exert an effectual influence in society, whether he be a good or a bad man.

If then, a person's utility depends upon the influence which he exerts, and if that influence is increased or diminished as his mind is improved or neglected, the cultivation, of the mind, is one of the most important, most noble, and most exalted employments in which man can engage. The mind is like a garden. If cultivated and improved, enriched and enlarged, it is one of the most prolific sources of true happiness to man; but if left uncultivated, the tender plants of virtue and morality are stifled and choked with the intruding weeds of immorality and superstition, and the noxious thorns of prejudice spring up in every nook and corner, and convert this little fertile spot into ■ desolation.

My young friends, would you be respected, would you have that influence which will make you capable of doing some good to those around you? cultivate and improve your minds. If, when you retire from the scene of action, your heads silvered o'er with age, you would look back with pleasure and not with regret upon your past lives; neglect not the precious opportunities which you now enjoy. Remember, the golden moments of youth will soon be past, and being once past, they are gone forever. M.

Commington, Nov. 18, 1839.

ORIGIN OF THANKSGIVING DAY IN NEW ENGLAND.—The pious colonists, surrounded by difficulties and hardships in this wilderness country, sought relief from Heaven by laying their wants and distresses before the Lord on frequent set days of fasting and prayer.

On one occasion, at a meeting when it was contemplated to have another of these days, a farmer of plain sense arose, and remarked, that in his opinion, their inconveniences and sufferings had not been so great as they might have expected; and that, furthermore, they were diminishing every day: that the earth began to reward their toil, and to furnish liberally for their subsistance; that the seas and rivers were full of fish; the air was sweet, the climate healthy, and above all they were in the enjoyment of Civil and Religious Liberty: he therefore thought that it would be more becoming the gratitude they owed to God, if instead of a fast at that time, they should appoint a Thanksgiving.

His advice was taken, and every year since, there has been a public Thanksgiving day in New England.—Buck's Works.

Captains in the Russian Imperial Navy, have the authority of life and death over their crew; and an instance occurred last summer of a captain's beating one to death.

Louis Phillippe was 68 years old on the 6th of October last.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

THURSDAY, ... DECEMBER 26, 1839.

FACTORY GIRLS.—The following remarks, by Dr. Alcott, will not be without their interest in a community, from which hundreds of females have recently been shipped to the Lowell factories.

"Of all the sufferers, however, which we have seen from bad air, the females of our factories, such as those for example, in some of our cotton mills, are much the greatest. There are many thousands in our land who are in this way—that is, by breathing bad air so large a portion of their time—gradually undermining the vigor of their constitutions, if not sowing the seeds of dangerous diseases. We have seen about one hundred in a single room, of whom not one was in perfect health; and do not believe this was a solitary instance of the kind.

"It is not to be denied that the females in our factories are often diseased before they go there. This, however, instead of furnishing an apology for sending them, is the very reason why they should have some other employment—one which will give them a purer air. House work would be almost infinitely better for the tender young girl of ten, twelve, or fourteen, especially if she has a light or pale complexion, with a long neck and projecting shoulders, indicating feeble or diseased lungs, than a burial—for it is little better, and often no better—in a cotton factory. We have witnessed too many facts not to know that, though we should seem severe, we do not speak on this subject at all unadvisedly.

"We believe it to be in our power to carry on our manufactories of every kind, without employing females more than six or eight hours a day in any of them; and we believe it quite possible for them to breathe a tolerably pure air while in actual employ. To venture to predict when an event so important to human happiness will be realized, would be to foretell at what period christianity will have attained its final triumph over the selfishness and the avarice of man, and the love of our neighbor will be co-extensive with the love of ourselves. So long as the public opinion sets him down as a good man who sacrifices the health of his neighbor—to say nothing of his intellect and his heart—to his own cupidity, it is vain, perhaps, to hope for any thing better than the effectual, though it should be gradual, destruction of hundreds and thousands of our fellow beings in various ways, even by those who profess the name of christians.

"Does the word destruction, in this connection, seem to be too harsh an epithet? We wish with all our heart, we had one more appropriate. But what else can it be called? If there is a better name for a flagrant crime, we wish those who have it would furnish us with it.

"Let us trace the course of the factory girl, and see if she is not as truly destroyed, although it be a little more slowly, as if she should have the jugular vein of the neck severed, or the heart or the lungs pierced or lacerated.

"She is bereft, perhaps early, of one or both parents. She is often left with a scrofulous constitution—the natural and inevitable consequence of a parent's temperate, dispeptic or licentious habits.—This constitution is one which, above all others, requires plenty of wholesome but plain food, and abundance of exercise in the free open air. If this is not allowed her, a scrofulous constitution becomes a consumptive one. Her chest, naturally rather slender, and made still more so, perhaps by her dress, at length becomes the seat of disease; to which in all probability, is soon joined, disease of the spine and of the whole glandular system. Her fair thin skin and red cheeks give place first to a sickly delicacy, and afterwards to a uniform paleness, mingled with blue. She cannot labor at house-hold work, it is thought; she has not strength enough; and her friends and relations—if she has any—unwilling or unable to support her without labor, send her to the factory.

"There she is immured from twelve to sixteen hours every day, except Sunday, in that bad atmosphere of which I have spoken. Not only is it wanting in oxygen, the vital principle, and abundant in carbonic acid, a most noxious agent, but it is also filled with fine particles of one substance or another, which is perpetually inhaled, and is perpetually a source of irritation to the already tender and delicate internal surface of the lungs.

"But not only is she confined above half her twenty-four hours in the bad air of the factory—she is also buried in slumber, in an atmosphere but little better, almost all the other half. Ventilation of a sleeping chamber cannot be expected in a boarding house, which without being of extraordinary size, is made to hold—not to accommodate—from fifty to one hundred female boarders. Nor is the air of such a house perfectly pure at any time, above all, at meal times. The consequence is, that the young factory girl is confined to a poisoned atmosphere, at least twenty hours of every twenty-four, often more. And where is she the rest of the time? Does she breathe as she should? Is she employed in washing, ironing, gardening or walking? She is indisposed to every species of exertion, except, perhaps a little novel reading at a worse hour still.

"Is it to be wondered at, that after a few years—sometimes even before the lapse of six months—the factory girl grows feeble, loses her appetite, becomes emaciated, goes home—if indeed she has a home—sickens and dies? But is not this, in substance, the history of many a female, even of our own goodly New England? And are not such females slowly, though it be without malicious intent, murdered? If he who loveth not his brother or sister, is in the gospel sense a murderer,—is not this murder?"

DRESS OF GIRLS AS CONNECTED WITH HEALTH.—The same general principle which should regulate the dress of boys is applicable to that of girls, but there are besides circumstances peculiar to the sex which require a distinct management.—The greater delicacy of the female frame would lead to the rational inference that the surface of the body requires to be more protected from atmospherical alternations, and kept warmer in girls than in boys. The opposite custom, however, prevails; and while boys are clad in warm woollen vestments, which cover every part of the trunk, the shoulders, chest and arms of girls are left exposed, & even that part of the body which is covered can scarcely be said to be kept warm, from the very nature of the apparel which fashion dictates to be proper for females.

But as one of the felicities of life arises from the contemplation of beauty, and as the perfection of this is to be found in the female form, it would be absurd to think of covering our fair country women like the inmates of the Zenana, who are carefully shrouded by their vestments when travelling, lest they should happen to fall under any other eyes than those of a husband or a father. It is owing to this contrariety to the demands of nature, that so many of this lovliest part of creation fall victims to consumption in the morning of life. If the pleasure, therefore, which we enjoy from the beauty displayed in the female form requires that part of it be left exposed to the eye, let us at least secure it in health and vigor, until it attain that perfection which is its attractive essence, and by which only it can fascinate. The propriety of elegance in the fashion of female attire, and of delicacy and lightness in the material of which it is composed, we are willing to admit, but while the outer garments are guaze or lace, the surface of the body should be cased in flannel or in calico, according to the severity of the season, and the dresses so constructed as to cover the chest completely.

But it is the form of the modern attire, rather than its texture, which proves so injurious to the growing girl; for as the irritability of the frame is great at that period, every thing which can impede its functions produces a tendency to disease; and in conjunction with exposure of the surface to cold and atmospherical variations, symptoms of grandular obstructions make their appearance—the assimilation of the food is incomplete, and enlargements of the joints occur, which generally, as the girl advances in growth terminate in distortion of the spine. To prevent the evil, which is generally regarded as the consequence rather of natural delicacy of constitution than of management, various contrivances have been produced at different periods; of these the most ancient is the stays, or stiff boddice, which is nevertheless, a most frequent cause of distortion among girls.

We are aware that it is almost hopeless to preach this doctrine to those mothers who attend more to model the figure, than to develope the intellectual faculties of their daugters, and in whose eyes the hour-glass shape, or some other equally preposterous, the transitory creation of fashion, is the perfection of the female form. To those, however, who more rationally regard beauty of face, and symmetrical elegance of person, desirable only when heightened by the glow and vigor of health, we need only mention that the present fashion of stays, by pressing upon the liver, the stomach and other organs of digestion, obstructs their natural functions from being properly executed; and although the chest appears to be expanded and free, yet the pressure below, by preventing the due descent of the diaphragm, interferes greatly with the functions of respiration, on the proper performance of which the preservation of health almost wholly depends.

If, for instance, the blood, which is the nutricious principle for building up the fabric and supplying the natural waste of the frame, be not properly revivified by exposure to the action of the air in the lungs, the heart soon looses its power for propelling it with sufficient energy through the blood vessels; these becoming enfeebled, are incapable of maintaining duly the vital fluid in its current, until it reach the extreme capillaries and the secreting organs, which being improperly supplied with the pabulum of their productions, the assimilation must be defeated, and even if diseases do not supervene, the body falls into a state of direct debility. It is a very frequent remark, that whilst we find one crooked boy, there are twenty deformed girls. We will not deny that this is partly to be attributed to the greater freedom in exercise permitted to boys, and to their exemption from many restraints imposed upon girls; but it is also partly attributable to those errors in dress on which we are remarking, and which are erroneously supposed to improve the elegance of the female form.

It is indeed, a singular anomaly, that amidst the modern improvements in female education, and the elevation of mind and greater correctness of judgment which have consequently resulted, American women should continue to yield up their mind in matters of taste—to be enslaved by the convicts of the ignorant and presumptuous, and allow themselves to be beguiled into the belief that the monstrous forms in which these ministers of fashion occasionally disguise the most perfect of the labors of the Divinity, are elegant or attractive. The writer of this essay has pointed out the injurious effects of compression of the body by dress upon growing girls, which his daily observation and experience have displayed and confirmed: but independent of this, he ventures to assert, in the face of all the most approved modellers of figures, that he can instance females who have never worn a corset, nor never been laced in the armor of the stays, who, for symmetry of form, elegance of attitude, and ease and gracefulness, of gesture, far surpass all those who have ever been tortured into shape by the caprice of fashion. And after all, whatever may be the judgment of the arbiters of taste, health, it cannot be denied, is the most important consideration. It is this alone which diffuses a charm over beauty, enlarges the sphere of utility, and enhances the felicities of life.—New York Sun.

THE NUMBER SEVEN SACRED.—In the six days creation was perfected, and the 7th was consecrated to rest. On the 7th of the 7th month a holy observance was ordained to the children of Israel, who fasted 7 days, and remained 7 days in their tents; the 7th year was directed to be a Sabbath to all things; and at the end of 7 times 7 years commenced the grand jubilee; every 7th year the lay follow; every 7th year there was a general release from all debts and all bond-men were set free. From this may have orignated the custom of binding young men to 7 years' apprenticeships, and of punishing incorrigible offenders by transportation for 7, twice 7 years; every 7th year the law was directed to be read to the people; Jacob served 7 years for the possession of Rachel, and also another 7 years; Noah had 7 days warning of the flood, and was commanded to take the fowls of the air into the ark by 7's, and the clean beasts by 7's; the ark touched the ground on the 7th month; and in 7 days a dove was sent, and again in 7 days after. The 7 years of plenty, and the 7 years of famine were foretold in Pharoah's dreams by the 7 fat and 7 lean beasts, and the 7 ears of full corn and the 7 ears of withered corn. The young animals were to remain with the dam 7 days and at the close of the 7th taken away. By the old law, man was commanded to forgive his offending brother 7 times, but the meckness of the last revealed religion extended his humility and forbearance to 70 times 7 times. 'If Cain shall be revenged 7 fold, truly Lamech 70 times 7.' In the destruction of Jericho 7 priests bore trumpets 7 days; and the 7th day surrounded the walls 7 times, and after the 7th time the walls fell. Balaam prepared 7 bullocks and 7 rams for a sacrifice; 7 of Saul's sons were hanged to stay a famine; Laban pursued Jacob 7 days' journey; Job's friend sat with him 7 days and 7 nights, and offered 7 bullocks and 7 rams as an atonement for that wickedness; David in bringing up the ark offered 7 bullocks and 7 rams; Elijah sent his servant 7 times to look for the cloud; Hezekiah, in cleansing the temple, offered 7 bullocks and 7 rams and 7 he-goats for a sin-offering. The children of Israel, when Hezekiah took away the strange altars, kept the feast of unleaven bread 7 days, and again other 7 days. King Ahasueras had 7 chamberlains, a 7 days feast, sent for the Queen on the 7th day, and in the 7th year of his reign she was taken to him.

Queen Esther had 7 maids to attend her; Solomon was 7 years building the temple at the dedication of which he feasted 7 days, in the tabernacle was 7 lamps, and 7 days were appointed for an atonement upon the altar; the priest's son was ordained to wear his father's garments 7 days; the children of Israel ate unleaven bread 7 days; Abraham gave 7 ewe lambs to Abimelech as a memorial for a well; Joseph mourned 7 days for Jacob; the Rabbins say God employed the power of answering his number to perfect the greatness of Samuel, his name answering the value of the letters in the Hebrew word which signify 7 when Hannah, his mother, in her thanks says, "that the barren had brought forth seven." In scripture are enumerated 7 resurrections, the widow's sons by Elias, the Shunamite's son by Elisha, the soldier who touched the bones of the prophet, the daughter of the ruler of the synagogue, the widow's son of Nain, Lazarus, and our blessed Lord. Out of Mary Magdalene was cast 7 devils. The apostles chose 7 deacons; Enoch who was translated, was the 7th after Adam, and Jesus the 77th in a direct line. Our Saviour spoke 7 times from the cross, on which he remained 7 hours; he appeared 7 times; after 7 times 7 days he sent the Holy Ghost.

In the Lord's prayer are 7 petitions; expressly in 7 times 7 words, omitting those of mere grammatical connection. Within this number are contained all the mysteries of the Apocalypse, revealed to the 7 churches of Asia; there appeared 7 golden candlesticks, and 7 stars in the hand of him that was in the midst of 7 lamps, being the 7 spirits of God. The book with 7 seals, the lamb with 7 horns and 7 eyes, 7 angles with 7 scales; 7 kings, 7 thunders, 7 thousand men slain. The dragon with 7 heads and the 7 angels bearing 7 vials of wrath. The fiery furnace was made 7 times hotter for Shadrick, Meshack, and Abednego; Nebuchadnazzar ate the grass on the field 7 years. The elders of Israel were 70.

There are also numbered 7 heavens, 7 planets, 7 stars, 7 wise men, 7 champions of Christendom, 7 notes in music, 7 primary colors, 7 deadly sins, 7 sacraments in the Roman Catholic church; the 7th son was considered as endowed with pre-eminent wisdom. The 7th son of the 7th son is still thought by some to possess the power of healing diseases spontaneously. Perfection is likened to gold 7 times purified in the fire; and we yet say, "you frighten me out of my 7 senses." Anciently a child was not named before seven days, not being accounted fully to have life before that periodical day. The teeth spring out in the 7th month, and are shed and renewed in the 7th year, when infancy is changed into childhood. And thrice 7 years, the faculties are developed, manhood commences and we become competent to all civil acts; at four times 7 man is in full possession of all his strength; at five times 7 he is in his apogee, and from that time he decays. At eight times 7 he is in his first climacteric; at nine times 7, or sixty-three he is in his grand climacteric, or year of danger; at ten times 7, or three score years and ten, has by the royal prophet been pronounced the natural period of human life.

There are 7 chiefs before Thebes.—The blood was sprinkled 7 times upon the altar. Naaman was to be dipped 7 times in Jordan. Apulcias speaks of the dipping the head 7 times in the sea for purification. In all solemn rites of purgation, dedication, and consecration, the oil or water was 7 times sprinkled. The house of wisdom in the Proverbs had 7 pillars.

[PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.]

THE ALGEBRAIST.

Translated from the "Histories Paraboles of P. Bonoventure.

A philosopher accustomed to algebraic calculations, having heard a sermon upon eternity, was dissatisfied with the suppositions and examples proposed by the preacher; and returning home, and retiring to his study, he set himself to think upon the subject, and threw his thoughts together upon paper as they arose, in the following manner:—

1. Finite, or what has an end, compared with infinite, or what has no end, is nothing. A hundred millions of years, compared with eternity, are nothing.

2. There is more proportion between the least finite and greatest finite, than there is between the greatest finite and infinite. There is more proportion between an hour and a hundred million of years, than there is between a hundred million of years and eternity; because the least finite makes part of the greatest, whereas the greatest finite makes no part of infinite. An hour makes a part of a hundred millions of years, because a hundred millions of years are only an hour repeated a certain number of times; whereas a hundred millions of years make no part of eternity, and eternity is not a hundred millions repeated a certain number of times.

3. With regard to infinite, the least or the greatest finite are the same thing: with regard to eternity, an hour or a hundred millions of years are the same thing: the duration of the life of man, or the duration of the world are the same thing, because both of them are nothing, and nothing admits not of more or less.

All this being evident and granted, I now suppose God to grant you who read this but a quarter of an hour to live, wherein to secure an eternity of happiness and avoid an eternity of misery; and, at the same time, to reveal to you that the world itself should come to an end an hour after your death; I ask you, upon this supposition, what account you would make of the world and its judgment? What account would you make of its pains or pleasures during your lives? With what care would you not think yourselves obliged to employ yourselves for God, and every moment of your lives to prepare yourselves for death! O fools that ye are! do ye not perceive with respect to God, with respect to eternity, the supposition I have just made is indeed a relative; that the duration of your lives, compared with eternity, is less than a quarter of an hour; and the duration of the universe less than an hour?

I also make another supposition:—If you had a hundred years to live, and, for your support the whole of this period, must only have what you could carry off in the space of an hour, from a treasury of gold and silver coin, the entrance to which should be left open during that hour; I ask, in what would you employ the hour? In sleeping, walking, feasting, or diversions? Doubtless not; but in amassing riches, and even in loading yourselves with gold in preference to silver. O fools that we are! we must exist to all eternity, and during this eternity we should have the reward secured in time, and during the short space of our lives; and yet we employ not all our time in endeavoring to obtain a great reward.

But you will say to me, during our lives it is necessary to sleep, to drink, to eat, and to take some recreation. I grant it: but what hinders, but like St. Paul, you may do all for the love of God, and thereby obtain a recompense for all? It must be confessed, that the passions are so lively, and opportunities so seducing, that it is a wonder there should be one righteous man upon earth: nevertheless there are such; and it is the effect of the mercy of God, and the grace of the Redeemer. On the other hand, death, judgment, eternity, are truths so terrible that it is astonishing there should be one sinner upon earth: such however, there are: this is the effect of these great truths being forgotton. Let us then meditate, watch, and pray, that we may be of the number of the righteous in time and in eternity.

Such was the sermon our philosopher made for himself, and with which he was so satisfied that he read it every day—he did more, he profited by it, and led a holy life, conformable to the great truth he had continually before his eyes.—Philadelphian.

WASHINGTON—BYRON.—"A good boy generally makes a good man," said the mother of Washington. "George was always a good boy." Here we see one great secret of his greatness, Geo. Washington had a mother who made him a good boy, and instilled into his heart those principles which raised him to be the benefactor of his country, and one of the brightest ornaments of the world. The mother of Washington is entitled to a nation's gratitude.—She taught her boy the principles of obedience, and moral courage, and virtue.—She, in a great measure, formed the character of the hero and the statesman. It was by her own fireside that she taught her playful boy to govern himself, and thus was he prepared for the brilliant career of usefulness which he afterwards pursued. We are indebted to God for the gift of Washington; but we are indebted to Him for the gift of his inestimable mother. Had she been a weak and indulgent and unfaithful parent, the unchecked energies of Washington might have elevated him to the throne of a tyrant, or youthful disobedience might have prepared the way for a life of crime, and a dishonored grave.

Byron had a mother just the reverse of lady Washington; and the character of the mother was transferred to the son.—We cannot wonder then at his character and conduct, for we see them to be almost a necessary consequence of the education he received and the scenes he witnessed in his mother's parlor. She would at one time allow him to disobey her with impunity; again she would fly into a rage and beat him. She thus taught him to defy authority, human and divine; to indulge without restraint in sin; to give himself up to every maddening passion. It was the mother of Byron who laid the foundation of his pre-eminence in guilt. She taught him to plunge into the sea of profligacy and wretchedness, upon whose agitated waves he was tossed thro' life. If the crimes of the poet deserve the execration of the world—the world cannot forget, that it was the mother, who fostered in his youthful heart, those passions which made the son a curse to his fellow men. Had Byron and Washington exchanged cradles during the first month of their infancy, it is very certain their characters would have been entirely changed; and it is by no means improbable, that Washington might have been the licentious profligate, and Byron the exemplar of virtue and benefactor of nations.—Mother at Home, by Abbott.

From the N. Y. Sunday Morning Atlas.

THE GREAT F. R. S.

Upon the first arrival here of the Great Western steam ship, there came two Fellows of the Royal Society, London. They took up their residence at the great mammonth building in Broadway, erected to swell the pride of a millionaire, and called after him the Astor House. The same vanity that induced the erection of the great and ungainly establishment we presume, caused the production of the work called Astoria, upon which no less a personage than Washington Irving wasted his great energies, and came out, as the common people say, at the small end of the horn.

Whether these two Fellows of the Royal Society, London, imagined that the vast edifice was erected upon fur skins—whether they carelessly dived into the wrongs of the Indians—spoliations of trappers and traders, and wondered how much of wrong to the aborigines, might or might not have been connected with the suddenly acquired stupendous fortune, that caused the mammoth building to rise darkly and frowningly, in the heart of Broadway, is not for us to say. With them or with their thoughts we have nothing to do. Having brought them from the then mammoth ship of the waters, to the mammoth house of the city, we shall leave them, nor refer to them any more.

At the same time arrived at the Astor House, a distinguished Philadelphian, a man who had many a time and oft, astonished the natives. He was the 'N. H.' of Philadelphia. In short he was an Oyster and clam man. As his name has been given to us in the strictest confidence, we do not feel at liberty to divulge it,—but 'what's in a name?' we will get him another as good. Let us see, any thing will do, something uncommon now—uncommon, Smith, ay Smith,—John Smith, that will do right excellently.

Mr. John Smith arrived, as we have stated. He entered his name upon the book of the establishment.

"I want to stay here," said he—"can you accommodate me."

Now, John Smith, though boasting an uncommon name, did not seem altogether an uncommon person. So the person he addressed, paid him no very particular attention, but said he would see, and muttered something about being full and having an apartment to spare at the top of the house.

"Well," said John, "any thing will do, settle it as you like. I'll go and take a drink; put me where you please."

John took his drink. It was a brandy sling. We love to be particular. He then smacked his lips—took a choice segar smoked it—felt comfortable in his inward man and went into the reading room. Here he was waited upon by a person who bowed very low and told him that he had provided a room for him on the second floor; that they could not think of putting him any higher.

"Well," said John Smith, "I don't like to travel too high in the world. That's all well."

John retired to his apartment and was surprised to find it large and commodious, furnished most elegantly.

"They are taking care of me," said John.—"What time do you take supper?"

"That is of no consequence," said the waiter. "You can take supper here in your room at any time you please."

"Oh, I don't like to trouble you much."

"No trouble sir. Most happy to accommodate you."

"Well bring me any thing good. Some oysters and a few nick nacks and a bottle of campaigne"

The waiter withdrew.

"They are very polite here," said John to himself, "and I will encourage them."

John that night lay himself down upon a superb bed and said it was nice.

On the following morning the waiter entered the room with a variety of cards for him.—Among the rest was one from a gentleman then waiting. John Smith took it and read, "Professor Addlebrain A. S. S." He asked the professor to walk up.

"It's odd," said John. "I never knew of any of these A. S. S. professors. What can he want with me?"

His cogitations were here interrupted by the professor himself, a tall, lank personage dressed in sables. He wore a pair of kid gloves that had seen rather too much service and sported a cane, and consumptive looking as himself, which was gold mounted.

"Mr. Smith, I believe I have the honor of addressing," said the professor.

John bowed.

"I am delighted in forming your acquaintance," said the professor.

"Happy to se you, sir," said John.

"You are too kind, Mr. Smith: believe me, although heretofore personally unacquainted with you, your fame has reached this city. You are highly estimated in your own city."

"Well, the boys do think something of me," said John.

"You have classes then," said the professor.

"Oh yes," said John, who thought his new friend was referring to the various kinds of oysters and clams. "I have several classes."

"Do you not find them laborious, Mr. Smith. Is it not irksome to attend to them all?"

"Well, it is when the boys keep me up too late. We have a new plan of opening them in our place, which saves a great deal of trouble."

The professor was in ecstacy. A new plan of opening or developing the mind, the professor thought John Smith alluded to, he said in reply.

"We do a little in your way in our city."

"So I have heard," said John.

"You will not leave without examining our practice," said the professor.

"No," said John.

"I will do myself the pleasure of calling again," said the professor. In parting John gave him a shake of the hand that brought tears into the eyes of the A. S. S.

John lived a right merry life during his stay, which was only for a week. He had every attendance, and all the great literary people of the city paid him marked attention. At last he called for the bill.

"Ullo, how's this, waiter," said he.—One hundred dollars for a week's board! My conscience? Here's a naught too much. Get the bill corrected and I'll 'shell out.'"

The waiter, whose hopes of perquisites vanished at this speech, assumed an erect position at once and said the bill was correct and could not be altered.

"Get out of the room you impudent scoundrel and call your master here."

Jack made up his mind that his friend was about to be o-p-h without paying. He therefore said he should not leave without the money, and John Smith was on the point of knocking the waiter down and walking over him, when one of the proprietors walked in.

"Ullo," said John, "what's this? Do you charge a Philadelphia oysterman $100 for a week's board."

"A what?" said the proprietor.

"A Philadelphia oysterman."

The proprietor laughed immoderately—said there had been a mistake—rectified the bill and called for a bottle of champaigne and drank it with John Smith, who then returned to Philadelphia.

One evening as John was 'astonishing the natives' on his own premises, he recounted this adventure, and said he could never account for the great respect with which he was treated, by the waiters, the professors, &c.

"I can tell you," said a young man present "they all took you for a Fellow of the Royal Society, London."

"How could that be?" said John.

"Why," said the gay fellow. "I was at the Astor House and saw some names entered with F. R. S. appended, which stands for Fellow of the Royal Society, so I thought I would add your titles and put to your name F. R. S. which certainly belongs to you."

"How so?"

"Why, it gives your trade with your name, and stands for Fried, Roasted, and Stewed."

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

THURSDAY, ... DECEMBER 26, 1839.

Our paper goes to press on Monday evening. p to this date we have no President's Message. n the 16th instant, on the 11th ballotting, the louse succeeded in electing R. M. T. HUNTER, Va., Speaker. He is said to be a Whig, but a tate Right and Sub-Treasury man. The folwing is his address after he took the chair:

ADDRESS OF THE SPEAKER OF CONGRESS.—Mr. unter, on the meeting of the House of Repreentatives on Tuesday, the 17th inst. delivered e following neat address:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives:

The high and undeserved honor which you have onferred upon me, has been so unexpected, that ven now I can scarcely find terms in which to xpress my grateful sense of your kindness. I rust, however, to be able to offer a better evience of that sentiment in the earnest efforts hich I shall make to discharge my duties justly nd impartially. Called as I have been to this igh station, not so much from any merits of my wn as from the independence of my position, I hall feel it especially due from me to you to preide as the Speaker, not of a party, but of the House. Whilst I shall deem it my duty, upon ll proper occasions, to sustain the principles on which I stand pledged before the country, I shall hold myself bound, at the same time, to afford every facility within my power to the full and air expression of the wishes and sentiments of every section of this great Confederacy. You will doubtless deem it your duty, gentlemen, as the grand inquest of the nation, to investigate all matters of which the people ought to be informed; to retrench expenditures which are unnecessary or unconstitutional; to maintain the just relations between all of the great interests of the country, and to preserve inviolate the Constitution, which you will be sworn to support, whilst it will be mine to aid you in such labors with all of the means within my power. And although deeply impressed with the painful sense of my inexperience, and of the difficulties of a new and untried station, I am yet cheered by the hope that you will sustain me in my efforts to preserve the order of business and the decorum of debate. I am aware that party fervor is occasionally impatient of the restraint which it is the duty of the Chair to impose upon the asperities of debate, but at the same time I know that the just of all parties will sustain a Speaker who is honestly eneavoring to preserve the dignity of the House, and the harmony of its members.

Permit me, in conclusion, gentlemen, to tender you the homage of my heartfelt thanks for the honor which you have conferred upon me, and to express the hope that your counsels may be so guided by wisdom as to redound to your own reputation, and the welfare of our common country.

The House was still contending, the last accounts we received, about the admission of the Jersey members.

The ground of the difficulty, in reference to the Jersey members in Congress, as near as we can learn, seems to be this: the clerks rejected one or two townships, because their votes were returned too late, which would have given the five administration members a considerable majority. Without these rejected townships, the whigs had a bare majority. As the whigs were returned to him, by the clerks, as duly elected, the Governor issued his certificates of election to them. So one set of delegates claim their seats because they have the legal official documents, and the other, because they were the choice of the people.

We give the following different opinions in reference to the merits of this question:

"The New Jersey members who have got the Governor's commission will obtain their seats in the preparatory organization of the House. It is clear that if you do not recognize the official testimony of membership, which the laws of New Jersey designate, the whole question of the contested election must be entered into. It is alleged that the Governor's commissions are fraudulent, because he did not count all the votes, which gave a majority to the Democrats. This does not follow, is the reply; the majority is not with you, for many of those votes were illegal votes—and we can prove it. Can you preclude the verification of this reply? Clearly not. Then the House must in this and all other cases resolve itself into a committee of privileges of elections, send for persons and papers, hear testimony, &c., and when will such an investigation end?—Charleston (S. C.) Mercury.

"The more I reflect upon the points raised, in organizing Congress, the stronger are my impressions, that the course pursued by the Clerk, as far as he was permitted to go, is the safest for the protection of every interest. The New Jersey case is one of a real contest, where the contending parties act in good faith toward each other, and towards the public. One set of members claim their seats against the majority of votes actually polled, at the election. In their support it is urged that they are fortified by the acknowledged forms of law, which so far make a present right. But this is not a safe rule. The House is the exclusive and final judge, and I think it should take up the contest, in its first stages, and carry it back to the original facts.

"If rights can be founded upon official papers, independent of the real facts, scoundrel functionaries may always be found in office, to furnish such papers, to subserve party purposes."—Cincinnati Gazette.

The above, are two leading journals of the country, the former an administration and the latter a whig paper. It is somewhat creditable to their candor, that, so far as the organization of the House is concerned, they have each given judgment in opposition to their respective parties. We seem rather inclined to the views of the Charleston paper.

Col. R. M. Johnson, the Vice President of the United States, passed through our town on his way to Washington city, last week. In passing through Columbus on the 19th, he was invited by the administration members of the legislature, and other political friends to partake of a public dinner, but he declined on the score of his engagements.

By the last "Bloomington Post," we were favored with the Message of Gov. WALLACE, to the Legislature of Indiana, delivered on the 3d instant. This is a very dignified and intelligent document. It is mainly occupied in discussing the subject of finance and their system of internal improvement, which he represents in a very embarrassed condition from the pressure of the times.

He states the debt of Indiana, created by the sale of State Bonds, at various times, for bank loans and internal improvements, amount to $10,064,000.

With respect to the causes and remedies of the public embarrassment, the Governor remarks:

"I have before intimated that the financial concerns of the country, are at this time, in a condition to excite universal anxiety and alarm. A sudden blight has come over our prospects; the active and enterprising are discouraged; and the abundant products of the soil seem to have been gathered in vain. Our true policy, without doubt, is to aim at remedies for these disastrous results rather than to inquire curiously for their causes, yet we may briefly hint at some of those which have contributed to our difficulties. The gold bill for a time occasioned an unnatural importation of specie, not in the usual way of trade, and its influx seems to be leaving us bare. Local banks have been too much encouraged at one time and oppressed at another. As the tariff on foreign merchandize has decreased, importations have been made to the injury of home manufactures, and more than the country can well pay. There have been, perhaps, less industry and economy amongst us than there should have been, and more speculation in lands and lots than policy would justify. Each one for himself must now see where he has been in error, and it is hoped, are so situated that they can do much to extricate themselves. But something also is looked for on the part of public functionaries. By an encouraging tone, by maintaining what is right and correcting what is wrong, by forgetting party and personal contests and aiming to maintain at all hazards the credit of the State, proper feelings and spirit will be kept up amongst our citizens.

"The medium of circulation now used in most if not all the civilized countries with which we have intercourse is composed of specie and paper, and, in reference to this, property has been valued, agreements made and debts contracted; we cannot, therefore, deal with other States and countries on equal terms, unless we have a medium of circulation much like theirs in value.—Fluctuations in these matters are, perhaps, not to be avoided. Yet, legislation should aim at as much uniformity as possible, or, debts contracted in one medium may be collected in another of far more value."

The 9th of February last, GEN. WM. H. HARRISON, was sixty-six years of age.

The following, from the New York Luminary, of the 17th instant, is the finest specimen of EGOTISM we have seen for sometime:

"TO OUR FRIENDS.—When we look abroad upon the M. P. Church, and ask ourselves the question: 'Is the New York Luminary necessary to the prosperity of the Church?' we can find but one answer, and that is always in the affirmative. The Methodist Protestant and Family Visitor, as you may see by reference to the article headed, 'The Press Untrammelled,' in last week's paper, is so perfectly under the pro-slavery influence, that the official doings of the Church cannot be known by the Church through its columns However well conducted a paper may be in every other respect, while it is thus trammelled it can never answer the demands of a free and independent people. The 'Western Recorder,' were it right in principles, is so far from us in the North, that its general news would appear to us stale before we should get it, as much of it depends upon the news of our city; but then we fear that the editor is so careful in 'carrying water upon both shoulders,' that we should never be able to discover his course; he appears perfectly non-committal. The Letter-Press is so small, and so seldom published that it cannot become a vehicle of general intelligence to our people, nor do we suppose that the proprietor ever contemplated this object. And the Olive Branch, although much may be said in its favor, we think is too much seasoned with lightness to answer the purposes of the Church, as a religious paper. We would not wish to detract from the character of any of the above papers, they are not inferior, perhaps, in general interest, to any of the periodicals of the day, but we honestly believe for the reasons above named, that it was, and is necessary for the welfare of the Church, that the New York Luminary should be published and circulated. Our location gives us an advantage that is not enjoyed in any other part of the nation, for making our paper useful and interesting, and we think that the patrons of our humble sheet will bear us witness, that after laying aside the anti-slavery matter, to which some object, they have a better variety of matter for family reading than can be found in any other paper of the same size."

Now, all this looks like raising one's self by pulling down our neighbors to stand upon. This brother editor seems to imagine himself seated in the midst of the emporium of wisdom and news, and looking round upon his fellows, determines that one is trammelled, another is too trifling, a third is non-committal, or equivocal, and a fourth is too small to be of much service, while he has the thing that every body wants,—"a better variety of matter for family reading than can be found in any other paper of the same size." Brother, let another praise thee and not thine own lips. You have a good paper, and we most sincerely wish you success with it; but, for the life of us, we cannot see that it is any way superior to those of your neighbors. You seem to be struggling hard for existence, and you shall have our best wishes for long life and prosperity But if you must die, don't groan so hard; go off as easy as possible.

As it respects "carrying water on both shoulders," we do. We carry some on one shoulder to throw on our abolition brethren when they get too much heated, to cool them off,—some on the other shoulder to throw on their opponents when they need it in the same way, and for the same purpose.

With respect to our being non-committal; we are committed to the subject of religious liberty, and no other.

Many of our friends will recollect the attention and kindness with which they were treated, at the Lancaster Conference, by the Rev. C. R. Baldwin, preacher in charge of the Methodist Episcopal church, of that place. The W. C. Advocate announces his death. He has fallen in the very prime of life. It is said, his end was peace.

Moses Jared, superintendent of Bellville circuit, Illinois, in a letter dated, December 12th, says, prospects of religion are not very flattering on his circuit; yet, he had recently witnessed the exultation of some precious souls emerging from nature's night. He promises us every thing of interest, which comes under his notice for the Recorder.

THE CASE OF THE AMISTAD.—The National Intelligencer, of the 22d ultimo, says: it appears by the following statement, to which we have no doubt entire credit is due, that the view which we took the other day of the imperative obligation upon our government, under the treaty with Spain, to restore the Spanish vessel (the Amistad) with her cargo and equipment unimpaired to the Spanish owners, has been taken also by the Executive of the United States:

Correspondence of the Courier and Enquirer.

Hartford, Monday Evening.

"The District Court commences its session to-morrow. It is a special term, and the case of the Amistad is the only one to be tried.

"It is understood here that Mr. Secretary Forsyth has expressed the opinion in emphatic and decided terms, that the case cannot properly be litigated in any of our courts; that it is a question to be settled by the Executive, and not by the Judiciary, and that our treaty stipulations with Spain render the obligation on the President imperative to deliver the vessel and cargo into the custody of the Spanish Minister, without injury or diminution. He thinks that it is not competent for us to call in question the legality of the license and clearance papers furnished to the purchasers of the slaves by the regularly constituted authorities at Havana.

"The Spanish Minister recommends to the claimants to abstain from all action in the premises, and to rely on the good faith of our government for justice."

We rejoice to perceive by the British Emancipator, that our vigilant friends on the other side of the Atlantic, have taken up this subject in earnest. Memorials to Lord Palmerston have been sent from Glasgow, praying the interference of Her Majesty's Government, in relation to the Africans of the Amistad. The Emancipator says:

"The affair now becomes one of negotiation between governments; and we sincerely hope that Lord Palmerston, as the organ of the British government in this matter, has been prompt and decisive in his interference. Not only by the law of nations, but by the laws both of the United States and of Spain, which unequivocally declare the slave trade unlawful, these persons are stolen, and are not property. And bound as Spain is, by explicit and most solemn treaties with this country, to carry the principle of this law into practice, no power is so well entitled as England to interfere on this occasion, not only to deter the Spanish government from sanctioning the claim most iniquitously and impudently put forward by its Minister at Washington, but to demand the just and condign punishment of the wretches who have exposed themselves to the penalties of piracy."

ITEMS.

A court martial in Canada has been broken up by a mob, who drove out the judges, and destroyed the papers.

Jonathan Chapman, whig, was elected Mayor of this city, on Monday last, by about twelve hundred majority. The Whig Board of Aldermen were also elected.—Olive Branch (Boston) 14th instant.

A wagoner standing in the gallery of the House of Representatives at Washington, listening to the wordy harangues of the members, had his pocket picket of four hundred dollars.

The Grand Jury of Baltimore have found true bills against the persons in that city, who were charged with being concerned in the slave-trade.

The powder mill of Mr. Moyer, near Summington, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, was lately blown up. A man named Abram Wambold was killed.

REV. JOSEPH WOLF, THE MISSIONARY.—This eccentric convert from Judaism, after wandering twenty years in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, proclaiming every where the gospel of Jesus Christ, has settled down the pastor of a small parish in Yorkshire, England.

One of the Fire Insurance Offices in Wall street, (and we do not know but more than one) has come to the determination not to take fire risks on Distilleries, Theatres, Breweries, Establishments for Rectifying Spirits, nor in any property in slave States.—Emancipator.

The grist mill of Jacob Young, near Achortown, this county, it is reported, was destroyed by fire on Monday night last. The light of the fire was seen in town, although about twelve miles off, at some where about two o'clock.—New Lisbon, O., Aurora, Dec. 20.

An extensive gold mine is said to have been discovered in Randolph county, Alabama. In a single day gold to the amount of $4000 had been obtained. One lump was found worth over $320. It is supposed to be the richest in North America.

RESUMPTION IN PROVIDENCE.—Seventeen of the twenty-one Banks in Providence resumed specie payments on Tuesday. Says the Providence Journal, "The Banks not represented at the meeting will, without doubt, we think, adopt the same course. Most of the country Banks, we learn, have expressed their readiness to pay specie so soon as the Banks in the city should resume."

A WEDDING IN HIGH LIFE.—It is reported in Washington city, that the Russian Minister is about to lead to the altar the daughter of one of the principal clerks of the departments of that city. The wedding is to be conducted on the most splendid scale. He has sent a pattern of his bride's shoe, hat and dress, to Russia, in order to have articles of the same kind made in the most costly manner, and after the style of that country. The wedding is to take place on the Russian Emperor's birth day. So says the Baltimore Sun.

MOST HORRIBLE!—Cook and Carter, who had been confined in the jail in Scott county, Miss., for murder, were lately taken out of the prison by a mob and hung without a trial.

THE MORMONS.—The West Chester Village Record says—"The Mormons are holding a protracted meeting at the Nantmeal Seminary, in this county.—We understand that about forty members have been baptized in all."

Robert E. B. Bayler, formerly a member of Congress, from the Tuscalusa District, Ala. has given up the practice of the law, taken orders for preaching, and gone to Texas.

R. W. Allen of Baltimore, charged with a violation of the act of Congress, prohibiting the slave trade was tried before the U. S. Circuit court on Friday, 6th—The jury disagreed—and a new trial is ordered.

Judge Wilkinson, the Colonization agent, at Washington, writes that his prospects of sending out colored emigrants are cheering.

The number of deaths at Charleston by the fever this year was 134—104 of these were male adults, 14 female adults, 15 children, and 1 negro.

The Pottsville, (Pa.) Emporium says Dr. Dyott is winding bobbins, and Dr. Chauncey is making shoes in the Eastern penitentiary. 'How are the mighty fallen.'

A resolution recommending Martin Van Buren for re-election as President, and John Forsyth as a candidate for the Vice Presidency, has been offered by the Senate of Georgia.

There is to be a National Convention of Whig Young Men at Baltimore, on the first Monday of May next.

The New Orleans True American states, that during the week ending on the 29th ult., about ten thousand persons arrived in that city.

The N. O. True American of the 19th ult. says, on the list of arrivals, putting up at the St. Charles Hotel we see the name of Louis Napoleon Bonaparte.

The United States Bank of Pennsylvania, has published a statement of its affairs, by which it appears that, after deducting for losses by bad debts, that institution has a clear surplus of over four millions of dollars, after paying off all its liabilities and after returning to its stockholders the amount paid by them for stock.—Steubenville Herald.

The population of Cincinnati and its suburbs, is 47,900.

CONGRESSIONAL DIGNITY.—We have been reading the proceedings of the House of Representatives of the United States, on Saturday last, as reported in the National Intelligencer. We know the character of those reports, and have seen enough, ourselves, in years not long gone by, to corroborate that portion of them to which we would now particularly refer; or we could hardly believe that such a speech as that from which the following extract is made, could ever have excited "general laughter," among a body of men, theoretically the elite of America.

A Mr. Duncan is reported to have used the following language, in his place on Saturday. We copy verbatim, from the Intelligencer:

'The whole argument put him in mind of a little book he had once read on logic. He had never studied it; but there were logicians here; and although he had tho't nothing of that book for a long time, yet he heard gentlemen of learning & astuteness arguing for four or five days, and advancing no other principle of logic but what that book contained; as, for instance, "Gentlemen wear boots; A B wears boots, therefore A B is a gentleman." "Ladies wear corsets; Miss A wears corsets, therefore Miss A is a lady." According to this logic, that a gentleman wore boots was prima facie evidence that he was a gentleman. Now, he held that it was not prima facie evidence. He knew many persons who wore boots who were not gentlemen; and, indeed so very general was it, that to wear boots was not even prima facie evidence that a man was a gentleman. He knew many women and girls who wore corsets who were not ladies. [General laughter.] And, indeed, so very general was the fact, that wearing corsets was net even prima facie evidence of a lady. So it was with members of Congress."

So long as such wretched buffoonery as this is permitted to be played off, under the encouraging 'general laughter' of the Representatives of the American people, upon the floors of Congress, it is unreasonable to expect that scenes like those, which, for the last week, have disgraced Congress, can be prevented. And it is well worthy the attention of those "potent, grave, and reverend signors," who sit in those halls, at the great expense of the country, nominally to make laws for their constituents, whether they are not acting the parts of dishonest stewards by countenancing the time-consuming balderdash of such a mountebank as this same Duncan seems to have pride in proving himself to be.—Brother Jonathan.

From the Olive Branch.

The following is from the Wesleyan Journal, and shows that abolitionism has but little to do with the cause of the Springfield brethren. It is probable that they think it duty to secure their own liberty, as well as that of the negroes. However, respect to Congregationalism, we advise our brethren to remember that no body of Methodists have ever succeeded as such Methodists require federal operation, and most certainly the Protestants secure every congregational right of the societies, and with it an efficient discipline with a widely extended federal action. The United States have a much better government, than if every little town was an independant little democracy. Remember brethren, that union is strength, division weakness. Let all Methodist dissenters unite in one body.

SPRINGFIELD DISTRICT.—A gentleman of high respectability and intelligence, residing in Springfield District writes us as follows:—'A leading abolitionist, a member of the church said to me the other day, the difficulty with us now, is not so much about slavery. On this question we should not differ much with the Presiding Elder. But the difficulty is the subject of rights.—We are congregationalists;—we don't believe in episcopacy.' The same writer observes, 'Others frankly confess that they do not feel much interest in the affairs of the Methodist Episcopal church. Doubtless they are expecting a separate organization after the next General Conference.

Our readers will probably remember the definition which we gave sometime since of Spurious Abolitionism. 'It is that which losing sight of its primary object, the correction of public sentiment and the emancipation of the enslaved, assails with ruthless hand every institution however valuable, which will not immediately succumb to its demand; that which seeks to devide the church when its unity is so indispensibly necessary to the accomplishment of the great objects which the principle of emancipation contemplates.'

LOOK OUT FOR A VILLAIN.—A man who calls himself James Kirkpatrick, arrived here early last spring, with the avowed intention of spending a few months at least in this neighborhood. He gave out that he had recently lost his wife, in the State of Missouri, where he owned a large and well-stocked farm, together with a handsome dwelling house and other appurtenances; but that, in consequence of the death of his companion, to whom he had been tenderly attached, and with whom he had long lived in uninterrupted harmony, he could not endure the thought of returning to his desolate home, unless accompanied by one qualified to take her place, and preside over his household.—Under this assumed character, to which he added that of a Local Preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church—at whose ordinances he was allowed occasionally to officiate—he visited a respectable widow of this city, in comfortable circumstances, succeeded in gaining her affections, and was finally married to her in April last. After the performance of the ceremony, he so won upon her confidence as to induce her to part with her whole property, real and personal, under the pretence that it would be to their mutual interest to remove to his own plantation, where, as he alledged, every thing necessary for house-keeping was to be found in abundance, and to intrust him with the proceeds. Having by this means become possessed of her all, his next step was to send her son by a former marriage to his pretended residence in Missouri, in order to bring down a team for the removal of the family; and immediately after the young man's departure, he set off himself in a market wagon, purchased a few days before, as well as the valuable mare by which it is drawn, with his wife's money, for the ostensible purpose of peddling off a quantity of books—chiefly "Gunn's Domestic Medicine"—promising to return the ensuing day. He has not, however, since been heard from; and as the unfortunate widow's son, on his arrival at the place designated, satisfactorily ascertained that Kirkpatrick not only owned no property there, but had also absconded some time before, leaving a wife, to whom he had been married 43 years, in need of the common necessaries of life, it is evident that he is a rank impostor, who, under the cloak of religion, has added swindling to bigamy, and perhaps other crimes still more heinous. What, if possible, adds to the atrocity of his conduct, is the fact that, after having despoiled the unhappily too-confiding woman to whom he was last married of her peace of mind, as well as all her worldly goods, he left her on a sick bed, and in a state of utter helplessness and destitution.—The villian is about sixty-five years of age, of the ordinary height, but somewhat thin, has a remarkable wen under the jaw, and walks with a limping gait, in consequence of a gun-shot wound in one of his knees. It is not known which way he may have gone; but the hope is entertained that the above account of his villainy will lead to his apprehension and ultimate punishment. Newspapers in the western country, and especially those connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church, may further the ends of justice by noticing the above.—Alton Telegraph.

BORDER TROUBLES.—The Iowa Gazette of the 9th ult. contains a letter of V. P. Van Antwerp, Adjutant General of the Iowa militia, in reference to the dispute between that territory and the State of Missouri. He says, there is no doubt that, on a further refusal of the citizens of the Territory in dispute to pay taxes to the authorities of Missouri, a strong armed force will be put in immediate requisition by the latter to enforce their collection. He also declared that they will meet with prompt and indignant rejection. The Sheriff of Clark county, Missiouri, was expected to enter the disputed Territory on the 5th inst. with the view of collecting the taxes; in which case, Gen. Van Antwerp affirms, he would be arrested and brought before the proper judicial tribunals to be dealt with according to law.—In that case, an open outbreak between Missouri and Iowa will be inevitable.

Rents are much reduced in New York. The New York New World says:—"A friend of ours had last year a house in St. Mark's place, for which he paid seven hundred and fifty dollars; the year previous it had been rented for one thousand dollars and the year before that, the sum of sixteen hundred dollars had been paid for it. It was offered to our friend this year for seven hundred dollars; he refused to give it, and the house is unoccupied to-day.

AGRICULTURAL.

BEES.—Some persons that keep bees neglect to take them up until some weeks after they have been consuming the honey in the hive. The bees cease to procure honey as fast as they consume it earlier in the season than is generelly supposed. They lose after the 1st of September unless they have access to buck-wheat that is in bloom. They will not generally collect honey enough to support them in the two last weeks of August unless the weather is very favorable to their laboring, and the season is wet, so as to keep a supply of honey in the flowers. We have sometimes weighed hives every week or fortnight, and have found that in a dry season the hives were heaviest the last of July. A hive that gained ten pounds a week in the last of June and first of July, lost three pounds from July 23, to August 6th. During this fortnight, the weather was as warm as it had been any time in the season, but it was very dry, and of course the flowers afforded but little honey. If any person supposes that bees will gain, at this season of the year, let him weigh his hive every week, and he will soon be convinced to the contrary, unless his bees have unusually good pastures.—Yankee Farmer.

TO PREVENT THE BEE-MOTH.—The two following methods have been tried with entire success by practical farmers, who have been in the habit of raising bees for many years. Which of them is preferable will be proved by experience.

First Method.—Raise the hive about half an inch from its foundation by letting each corner rest upon a very small smooth block, or a large nail or spike with the head expanded, driven into the board at each corner for the hive to rest upon; take a very strong brine made of good salt, and simply throw under the hive twice or thrice a week, during the months that the moths are apt to commit their depredations, and your bees are safe.

Second Method.—Take simply spirits of turpentine, and with a small brush apply it to and round about the edge of the holes where the bees enter, and no moths will trouble your hives.—This is also to be applied two or three times a week, during the spring and summer months, when the miller is in the habit of making his destructive visits.—Western Farmer.

From the Genessee Farmer.

CAUTION TO READERS AND WRITERS.—We have frequently heard an expression of disappointment from readers of agricultural publications, that many of the recommendations they contain are of little practical value; and that experiments detailed as remarbably successful, prove on repetition partial or entire failures.—This is owing to several causes. A very common one is, that the experiments are not allowed a fair trial.—An important part of the operation is perhaps overlooked or omitted, and disappointment is the result. This is sometimes owing to a want of precision in the writer, but perhaps more frequently to carelessness in the reader. A neighbor, who had a fine piece of sandy ground for his garden, but which had not been much enriched with manure, had read or heard much of the benefit of ashes as manure. He accordingly applied unleached ashes in large quantities, throwing down each load in a heap and spreading it afterwards, but still leaving a layer two or three inches thick where each heap stood. This was but very imperfectly mixed with the soil. As an inevitable consequence, the crop on those spots was nearly destroyed, and ashes was denounced. Another farmer had read much of the facility of raising and the great profits and advantages, of ruta baga. But the writers who detailed the successful experiments did not distinctly mention that they had a light or very rich soil to work upon. The experiment was repeated upon a wet clay, and failed as a matter of course. Another has a good soil, but he suffered the crop to be overrun with weeds in its early stage of growth; the crop as a consequence was greatly diminished in amount, and the labor increased four-fold. The ruta baga was considered as a very unprofitable crop. Another, who succeeded in raising a good crop considered it as of little value because he never applied it to the proper use.

It is highly necessary that accuracy of plan and of observation be made use of in culture of new crops, or in new operations, and that nothing be overlooked. It is also very desirable that there be as great accuracy of detail in describing experiments as practicable. Difference of soil or of climate sometimes materially affects the success of a crop; hence before attempting an untried experiment, it would be of great advantage to know precisely the nature and difference of soils, and a comparison of climates from accurate observations. Great looseness of expression prevails in describing soils. Thus, it is general to give nothing more definite than the expressions "clayey" or "sandy," "clayey loam" "or "sandy loam," "rich mould" or "heavy clay," as the case may be. But what would be termed sandy in one region would be considered clayey in another; we have known land to be described as sandy, which in fact contained so much clay as to be incapable of being worked without causing baking, except in dry weather. Yet it was the lightest soil to be found in that section of the country. The most effectual remedy for such want of precision would be, analysis of soils; but this could be properly performed by a few only. The degree of tenacity exhibited by worked specimens, would probably, in this case, be a good substitute. A more general knowledge of the different soils of the country would also be advantageous.

In all newly recommended experiments, it is absolutely necessary that they be tested by judgment and experience before trial. Many requisites for success, yet unknown to be such, almost always exist; and what is advantageous and profitable in one place may not be so in another. But limited experiments are cheap; the greatest benefits sometimes result from them, the judgment is greatly improved by them, and common sense will generally dictate whether new recommendations are, or are not worthy of trial.

S. J. T.

FOR PARENTS.

My Mother never tells Lies.—Calling on the family of a friend, a year since in a distant city, the conversation turned on the duties and responsibilities of parents. The mother with whom I was conversing, at once kindled with the theme. She seemed like one whose eyes had just been opened upon a new world. As she was lamenting her deficiencies and mistakes, she remarked:

"A few evenings since, I heard a lesson on that subject, which I shall not soon forget. Several ladies of my acquaintance, had come to spend the evening.—The child of one of them had accompanied her. In the course of the evening, the child, who was about five years old, became very rude and boisterous, much to the annoyance of the company, and especially to her mother.

"Sarah," said her mother, "you must be quiet." The child soon forgot the reproof, and became as noisy as ever. The mother spake again, kindly but firmly, "Sarah, if you do so again, I shall punish you." But Sarah soon forgot again, and repeated her improper conduct. As the company were departing, Sarah's mother stepped into a neighbor's house, intending to return for her child. During her absence, the preparations made by the ladies for their departure reminded Sarah of home. The recollection turned her rudeness into sorrow, and she was presently seen in tears.

One of the ladies attempted to pacify her, on learning what occasioned her grief, and said:

"Never mind, I'll ask your mother not to punish you." "O!" said Sarah, "she will, I know she will. My mother never tells lies."

"I saw in an instant," said my friend "how guilty I had been in the education of my children. Often I've told them some little thing, either in the way of promise or threatening, and forgot it perhaps the next minute. But my children did not forget; and thus I have been teaching them that their own mother was a liar.

I don't wonder that my children are so unmanageable. I trust I shall be very careful hereafter, as to what I promise; and when I do promise, as careful to perform: that my children too may be able to say: "My mother never tells lies."

This lesson has never been forgot by

A Parent.

A Husband's Duty.—When a man's circumstances are embarrassed, his conduct in his domestic relation is of the greatest importance. As the prudent man foreseeth the "evil and hideth himself," so should he always be careful that the partner of his worldly fortunes, who should be his steadfast friend, is frequently reminded in prosperity that misfortune may come. When they do come, he will not withhold from her the fullest confidence.

We need not the consent of poets and orators to assure us that virtue of woman shines out in the greatest luster in the hour of adversity.—Then it is, true affection is tried. Then it is, that a man finds himself possessed of a treasure which he knew not of. The tender and delicate being whom he never permitted "the winds of heaven to visit too roughly," suddenly displays a strength of character—an unyielding spirit and endurance and perseverance, of which no one could have supposed her capable. A woman who truly loves her husband regards his affection and his honor as her dearest earthly treasures. For the preservation of these she will endure any privation, bear any reverse, encounter any labor.

Such being the fact, it becomes a husband's duty when cares press and dangers threaten, to make full disclosures to his wife respecting them, and also to take care that no pressure of outward ills be allowed to disturb the serenity of home Let the sun of religious hope, and the dews of pure affection fall gently on that dear sanctuary, while the storm threatens abroad, and when at last the winds and thunders come, it will afford a secure retreat. If the defeated king could proudly say in his captivity, 'all is lost but our honor,' the husband who has acted thus wisely, may say in his adversity, 'all is lost but my honor and my home.' The peace and affection which has thus preserved unimpaired, comprehend all that is most essential in the grand solace of the wounded spirit.

"Old Women."—This designation, as a term of reproach, is too often found in our newspapers. If a party editor, or a speaker, wishes to bestow an epithet of contempt or of low malice upon an opponent, he calls him "an old woman," and imagines that he has disgraced him forever. The use of this term always strikes me with a kind of horror. It is, I think, so frequently employed and so generally approved, (or at least, not apparently disapproved,) indubitable evidence of a half-civilized people.

Does an editor know that when he makes use of these words in this way he thereby deliberately insults his mother or his grandmother? Or if he be an old man, as many editors are, that he insults his wife or his sister? Is he aware that he offers a gross rudeness to every elderly lady of his acquaintance, to half the families with which he associates, to his most obliging and estimable neighbors, to a portion of the families of the greater part of his subscribers? There are very few editors, party writers, and political men who have arrived to any degree of celebrity or importance, whose mothers, and perhaps, wives, have not become "old women"—elderly ladies, gradually descending the hill of life. Most of them have acted well their parts, and are justly entitled to respect. Even as women, they are entitled to civility, to negative politeness at least, from all gentlemen, if not to that gallantry and deference which every well-bred man is willing to accord to every well-behaved reputable person of the other sex

Let every man think of the obligations he is under to his mother. Let him think of her care, labor, anxiety, and suffering for him, in his infancy and youth. Let him think of her unceasing love and fondness, under all circumstances: her constant care for his health and physical comfort and welfare; and, above all, most zealous, unwearied endeavors to form his mind and character, to preserve him from vice, and to make him a good, moral, virtuous, respectable, and estimable man.—Let him meditate on these things. Let him arouse in his dormant breast some due emotions of gratitude for inestimable, disinterested services, which he can never repay; and he will cease to employ, as a term of reproach, what should excite in the bosom only emotions of inexpressible love and respect

I am seriously of opinon that elderly ladies, as a class, are the most estimable portion of the creation. In their days of youth and beauty, their passions and propensities are mostly directed towards power, and show, and the love of admiration. They are ambitious of the homage of the other sex and desirous of being the successful rivals of their own. They, too, often are absorbed in flirtations, and balls and dresses, and fine houses, and furniture, and vanities of this kind; but when youth and beauty have passed away, and they can no longer shine pre-eminent in parties of pleasure when their children have grown up and become settled in the world, their affections, their good feelings, their love of action, take another and better direction. They become the most kind and affectionate nurses to their husbands and their children in sickness or declining age. They become angels of charity, seeking out the poor and miserable, the sick and distressed, visiting their humble dwellings, administering personally to their wants, not deterred by the most disgusting scenes, nor diverted from their benevolent purposes even by the revolting consequences of vice itself.

Elder women are not more ardent and disinterested in what is positively virtuous than are elder men; they are negatively more pure and honest, less disposed to vicious habits and propensities. If pure religion be to visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction, and to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, then elderly women may be said to be pre-eminently possessed of pure religion.

We advise those who are in the habit of employing the term "old woman," in the way of reproach, to peruse attentively, before using it, Cowper's beautiful verses, written on contemplating his mother's picture. If, after its perusal, any one can write the odious term in this sense, I should never repose the least confidence in his principles, or depend on his possessing any genuine feelings of kindness and humanity.—Boston Post.

VARIETY.

[published by request.]

PRAYER.

Let us pray when morn's first light
Pierceth through the shades of night;
Whilst the flowers are dewy yet,
Ere the twinkling stars are set,
Ere the strife and stir begin
Of this world of woe and sin;
For a blessing on the day,
To its master, let us pray.

Let us pray when over heaven,
Comes the dusky light of even,—
When the distant vesper hymn,
Rising through the twilight dim,
On the evening wings sweep by,
Like an air-harp's melody,—
When the distant sea is gray,
At that soft hour let us pray.

Let us pray when winter drear,
Closeth in the vanished year,—
Wrapt in snow the lofty hill,
Chains in frost the murmuring rill,
When let loose the chilling breeze,—
Sweeps the last leaves from the trees,
When the summer flowers decay,
Looking on, then, let us pray.

Let no prayer around the hearth,—
Check the voice of childish mirth,
Ere they go to rest in peace,
Bids the infant prattle cease,—
Teach the spotless heart to rise,
With its evening sacrifice,
While the artless prayer they say,
With our children let us pray.

Let us pray when summer flies,
And the sad tear dims our eyes,—
When there is no voice nor sound,
In the midnight stillness round;
When gloomy fears forboding start,
Clouding o'er the morning heart;
For bright hopes consoling day,
In that silence let us pray.

Let us pray when at the last,
Woe and sorrow shall have passed;
When around our dying bed,
Sighs are breathed and tears are shed;
In that hour of awful thought,
Ere its blessing be forgot,—
Ere the spirit flies away,
For heaven's mercy let us pray.

From the Globe.

South America.—The political condition of the Republics of this continent, is a subject of equal interest to the statesman and the philanthropist. The United States look with especial concern upon the progress of events in this hemisphere, where the problem is to be solved of the capacities of man for self-government, under the system of elective representation. The Anglo-Saxon colonies on this continent, had perhaps, nothing to learn in the science of civil Government, little change to effect in the exercise of rational liberty. Our ancestors sprung into an existence of political independence and of religious freedom, full-armed, like the goddess of wisdom. From political science they had no lessons to receive upon the universality of popular rights and the sovereignty of popular will.—They brought with them the principles of Magna Charta, of habeas corpus, and the bill of rights—the great charters of human liberties, by which nullus liber homo, no freeman shall in any manner be proceded against but by the judgment of his peers, and by the laws of the land.—In Britain was the victory of human liberties achieved; and here, as there, maxims of civil Government and of religious tolerance, have been acted upon as first principles.

To the people of South America the adoption of constitutional Government was an experiment, new and untried.—The example of the United States, hastened or precipitated a revolt against colonial bondage, and with it prompted a desire to copy the forms of political institutions, which with us had succeeded to the colonial regimen; differing from the Anglo-Saxon, the Spanish colonist had all to learn in the science of civil government. If the theories of the few were correct, the many were ignorant; and all were unaccustomed to the duties and to the practice of free institutions.—Not familiar with civil liberty, they still adhered to religious slavery; nor at this day have the Republics of South America learned that religious tolerance precedes civil freedom. Whilst the power of religion has been restricted to purely spiritual corncerns, the Constitutions of these Republics consecrates a religion of the State. The Republics of New Granada, Ecuador, and Venezuela, are, however, approaching towards the final separation of civil from spiritual affairs. This, to us, is an assurance that the rapid and flattering progress which they have made in political reform and improvement, will be continued.

The past history of many, and the present condition of some, of the South American Republics, show the severe school in which they are learning lessons of political wisdom. Mexico, Guatemala, and Peru, have presented alternate spectacles of anarchy and military despotism. Buenos Ayres and Uruguay are in civil war; Brazil is in revolt, and Chili wars with Puru. From this fiery ordeal they will doubtless pass, to order and tranquility, and to the exercise of the elective francise, instead of the use of arms, the last argument of power. General education, and the liberty of the press, will eventually inspire a public and private morality, which, diffused among the people, will control their ambitious and designing chiefs.

Of the Governments of South America, as now organized, we present to our readers the following list of Presidents:

Mexico,	General Bustamente.
Guatemala,	This Republic is broken up into as many independent States as there were formerly provinces. The Confederation is dissolved.
New Granada,	Dr. Marques.
Venezuela,	General Paez,
Ecuador,	General Flores.
Brazil,	Don Pedro II, Emperor. During his minority the Empire is administered by a Regent.
Buenos Ayres,	General Rosas.
Uruguay,	General Rivera.
Chili,	General Prieto.
Bolivia,	General Velasco.
Peru,	General Gamarra.

The British Artarctic Expedition.—On Tuesday the Terror, Capt. Crosier, dropped down from off the Dock-yard at Chatham, to Gillingham, with all her white canvass spread and looking like a bird of passage preparing to wing its way to another clime; and on Thursday, or as soon after as possible, her companion, the Erebus, Captain James Clark Ross, was appointed to follow, and then proceed on their voyage together. Having gone to take our farewell, a short description of the vessels, &c., cannot be unacceptable to our readers.

The Ereubus and Terror seem to be twin ships, alike in built, in colors, in masts and rigging, and, indeed, in every external appearance. An inexperienced eye could not tell the one from the other. The Erebus is about 370 tons; the Terror 340. In each the full complement of officers and men is 64, 128 in all. Nothing that the art of the shipwright could accomplish has been omitted to fit them for their perilous undertaking. Below, not only have the ribs been strengthened by transverse timber, but these again have been interlaced by cross beams at certain angles, so as to offer resistance to any invading body, such as ice, which would require a mighty force to overcome.—Thus, internally powerful, beyond any former example, the outward hull has also been so shaped (curving from near the centre, something like the turning off edge of a glass or a tea-cup) as to throw the converging ice from the chain plates; and thus protect the rigging from being crushed or invaded. The deck, too, is double; and the whole has a compactness and firmness which gives an assurance of security from the worst element to which their gallant crews can ever be exposed. A spare rudder, which could be shipped immediately in case of accident to the other, is safely stowed amidships: each vessel is provided with eight boats, two of them whalers, and framed to encounter rough seas and weather in separate expeditions, to explore passages and lands where the ships cannot penetrate. Six guns are borne in each, viz: 4 six pounders, and 2 salute guns. The apparatus for keeping the vessels at an equable temperature is admirable, and consists of a square iron tube, above a foot in diameter running all round the sides, and distributing a comfortable warmth to every birth in the ship. The ventilation is not less attended to. There are also stoves in the captain's cabin, and the gun room messes which adjoin: and the cooking conveniences are as ample and as fit for every purpose as they could be on shore. There is a large kettle to dissolve ice into fresh water; another for dressing salt meat; another for fish; another for fresh meat & an oven for baking. The mate's cabins are well constructed, and those for the officers to sleep in, though small, are arranged with all a seaman's skill and dexterity in making much of a little. The sick berths are forward, and so contrived that the invalids are kept apart from the healthy, for their own sake as well as for the general safety. Immense ice saws are ranged along the lower deck, some of them thirty or more feet long, and looking like the jaws of sharks, competent to cut through any besetting adversary.

They are victualled with fresh provisions for three years; and pemmacan and prepared meat in cases are stowed away in the least possible compass.

The earlier proceedings of the voyage will lead them to St. Helena, where Lieutenant Eardly Wilmot of the Royal Engineers, who goes out in the Erebus, will be left in charge of the new observatory.—Next, at the Cape will be landed, for the like purpose, another officer. The vessels will then make their way across the ocean touching at and examining Kerguelen's Land, Amsterdam, and other islands, either known or imperfectly reported in that vast expanse of waters. Arrived at Van Diemen's Land, the instruments, &c., for the observatory will be sent ashore, and whilst it is erecting, they will cruise to various points where the scientific pursuits of the expedition are most likely to be advanced. On their return they will start de novo in a direct southern course, between 120 degrees and 160 degrees east longitude towards the Antarctic Pole; and it is a singular and fortunate thing, that in this direction, during the present season, a ship of Mr. Enderby's has discovered land on both sides of the longitudes we have indicated in about 65 and 68 degrees of south latitude. These shores have been named Sabrina Land, seen March, 1839: and Balleny Isle, seen February, 1839; and between them, as well as upon them, the efforts of the Erebus and Terror will, in the first instance, be employed. How far they may penetrate it is in the hands of Providence They will afterwards circumnavigate the Pole, and try in every quarter to reach the highest point, whether near Enderby's Land, discovered in 1832, or by Captain Weddell's furthest reach, about 73 degrees, in 1823.

It is between Sabrina land and Belleny Isle, to the northward, in about latitude 50 degrees, and east longitude 140 degrees, that it is expected the south magnetic pole will be found. We had forgotten to mention that the vessels are constructed on the plan which divides them into three compartments; so that either extremity or the middle might be stove in, and yet the remainder be a safe hold for the crew.—Literary Gazette.

Kentucky Improvements.—There are now completed and in use four hundred and sixty-four miles of turnpike roads; under contract, and in a state of forwardness, three hundred and forty-nine miles more; making in all eight hundred and thirteen miles of road.

Upon Green river two Locks and Dams have been finished and the third will be completed by the first of January 1840, affording one hundred and twenty-six miles of constant and safe navigation to the trade of that interesting portion of the State.

Upon the Kentucky river three Locks and Dams are nearly completed, and will, in a few days, give upon that river nearly eighty miles of safe navigation from its mouth. Other Locks and Dams upon the three rivers are in a state of construction.—Late Governor's Message.

Prejudice Overcome.—A Jew, traveling on the Erie canal a few years since, was very much injured in passing under a bridge. A pious lady on the boat sympathized very deeply with him, and rendered him all the attention and assistance in her power. A few days after, when the lady was about to leave the boat, he inquired of some of the passengers who she was. It was told him that she was a protestant Christian. "Ah," said he, "Christianity is better than Judaism."—Here was a Jew completely disarmed of his prejudices by the influence of example.

It is said that if the Amistad negroes, now in confinement at New Haven, are returned to Cuba, every one of them will be put to death. This is understood by every body at Havana; for their act in rising against their owners, and striking a blow for freedom, is looked upon as a deed of peculiar atrocity in the island, and as deserving the most signal punishment,

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. Robinson, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.

Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Bicknell's Detector.

MONEY and business matters have increased to such an extent in this country, that we shall soon find it impossible to give an accurate and detailed account of all the Banking Institutions and Counterfeit Bank Notes within the limits of the thirty-two pages of our monthly pamphlet Detector. We propose therefore to increase the size of that publication sixteen pages in each number. We must either do one of two things, publish an imperfect and incomplete Detector, or enlarge our limits. We have determined upon the latter course, unwilling to do injustice to the public, and anxious as heretofore, to issue the only perfect sheet of the kind in the United States. We cannot do this however, without some increase in price; and hence we shall be compelled to charge $1 50 per annum for the enlarged Detector, instead of $1, the price of our present publication. We promise to make very considerable improvements, to give in addition to the present information, the names of the Cashiers of the various Banks as far as they can be ascertained—to renew the type, to obtain better paper, and, in short, to render our monthly accurate in every particular, and entitled in a still greater degree to the confidence so generously reposed in it by the public. The increase in the price, however, may not give satisfaction to all, although it must be apparent to every individual, that in enlarging and improving, we shall necessarily be compelled to increase our expenses to a very considerable extent. Such, however, as are unwilling to receive the enlarged Detector at $1 50 per annum, will be good enough to notify us to that effect, immediately after receiving the first number of the new volume. We may add, those who subscribe to the Weekly Reporter, in addition to the Monthly Detector, will continue to be furnished with the latter at $1 per annum. We are anxious to do every thing in our power to retain our entire list, as well as to secure new patrons; and would make no increase in price, but we find on calculating the impossibility of publishing the enlarged and improved monthly, at the existing rates. Deeply grateful for liberal patronage enjoyed, we shall still keep on the even tenor of our way, exerting every energy to render both the Reporter and Detector acceptable, as well as useful and instructive.

Mathew T. Miller,

No. 76 South Third-street, Philadelphia.

November 21, 1839. 14

New York Mirror.

☞THE PRESENT VOLUME.

THE conductors of the New York Mirror are determined that no periodical in the world shall exceed this in the interest and variety of its literary contents, the elegance and finish of its pictorial embellishments, the beauty and popularity of its music, and the neatness and superiority of its typographical appearance.

The number for the 19th of October is adorned with one of the most costly and magnificent steel engravings ever published in this or any other country. It is a representation of the "Landing at Jamestown," painted and designed by Chapman, and engraved by Danforth, two American artists of whom their country may be justly proud.

This is the third exquisite engraving that has already appeared in the present volume of the Mirror, the first number of which was issued on the first of July last, all the numbers of which can be supplied to new subscribers, if immediate application be made.

The New York Mirror is the oldest, and unquestionably, the cheapest periodical, extant.—Every number contains a great variety of useful, interesting and amusing matter, on every subject connected with polite literature and the fine arts; and they form, at the end of the year, an immense volume of four hundred and sixteen imperial quarto pages, with vignette title-page, table of contents, splendid engravings, and fifty pieces of popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, guitar, &c.—a library in itself—and all this is afforded at the very trifling cost of five dollars a year, a sum almost inadequate for the extraordinary equivalent rendered to subscribers.

Six superb engravings (including three now issued) will be given, engraved by Danforth, Parker, etc. from original designs and portraits by Weir, Inman, Chapman, etc.

A number of curious etchings on wood will also be published in the present volume, engraved by Adams, Anderson, Johnson, etc. from original designs.

Nothing shall be left undone to render this work, in its literary character, its engravings, its music, and its typography, equal, if not superior, to any periodical of the day.

Conditions.—The Mirror is published every Saturday, at No. 1, Barclay-street, next door to Broadway. It is elegantly printed in the extra super-royal quarto form, with brevier, minion and nonpariel type. It is embellished once every three months, with a splendid super-royal quarto engraving, and every week with a popular piece of music, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, etc. For each volume an exquisitely engraved vignette title-page, and a copious index, are furnished. The terms are $5 per annum, payable, in all cases, in advance.

December 10, 1839. 3t16

Dr. A. W. Knight,

(Formerly of Philadelphia, but for the last si years in Muskingum county, Ohio,)

HAS removed to MT. STERLING, and n respectfully tenders his professional se ces to the citizens of this place and the surrou ing country: he may at all times be found, wi not absent on professional business, at his r idence. He hopes that undivided attention the duties of his profession, together with an perience derived from twelve years' practice the various branches of a profession, and part that time in the Philadelphia Hospital as one the house physicians, will enable him to me and receive a liberal share of public patronage

Mt. Sterling, Ohio, Oct. 31, 1839. 11tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a n and improved mode of ascending and d scending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. Th improvement supercedes the necessity of horse stationary power, by giving to the locomotive e gine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles the motive, which connects with an extra railin laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. the engine approaches the plain, the pilot whe on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with t extra railing and propels her onward. The co struction and connection of the pilot wheel a extra railing is of such a character that it not on necessarily advances, but advances perfect smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congea ing of ice, the connection of the wheel and rai ing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wantin further information, will please address the sub scriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has ob tained the right of the State of Maryland by pu chase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who h the right of Georgia, North and South Carolin on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Brother Jonathan.

THE LARGEST PAPER IN THE WORLD.

THE proprietors of this sheet—the "Grea Western" among the newspapers, hav the pleasure of spreading before the reading pub lic a weekly periodical containing a greater vari ty and amount of useful and entertaining mis cellany, than is to be found in any similar pub lication in the world.

Each number of the paper contains as large a amount of reading matter as is found in volume of ordinary duodecimo, which cost two dollars—and more than is contained in a volume of Ir ving's Columbus, or Bancroft's History of Amer ica, which cost three dollars a volume—and al for SIX CENTS a number, or Three Dollars a year.

Brother Jonathan being a genuine Yankee and thinking that some things can be done as well as others, is determined to present his read ers a MEDLEY hitherto unrivalled by any oth er paper of Anecdotes, Amusements, Allegories, Accidents, Biography, Bon Mots, Conversation, Crimes, Dramatics, Drolleries, Erratics, Essays, Eloquence, Facetia, Geography, History, Jests, Learning, Morality, Marvels, Music, News, Novelties, Oratory, Poetry, Philosophy, Quiddities, Religion, Romance, Sports, Spectacles, Sorrows, Sufferings, Tales, Trials, Truths, Teachings, Wisdom, Wonders, Wit, &c. &c.

As a family newspaper, Brother Jonathan will be found to present attractions beyond any other.

——"He comes the herald of a noisy world,
News from all nations lumbering at his back."

The earliest intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, and the latest novelties of the Literary World, will be promptly served up for the gratification of the reader.

Strictly neutral in politics, it will contain nothing in favor or against any party, and will as seduously avoid any of the controversies which agitate the religious community. Strict morality, temperance, industry and good order, benevolence, and usefulness to our common country and our fellow men, will be advocated and in every page of Brother Jonathan.

Terms of Brother Jonathan—Three Dollars a year in advance.

For five dollars two copies will be sent one year, or one copy two years.

The Evening Tattler is published every day at the same office, and is put to press at meridian, in season for the great Northern, Eastern and Southern mails, which all close about two o'clock, P. M.

☞All country papers who give this prospectus three insertions, will be entitled to an exchange, on sending a number of their paper to this office containing the advertisement.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed postage paid to

Griswold & Company,
162 Nasau-street New York city.

November 14, 1839. 13

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The Western Recorder will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the Western Recorder will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The Recorder will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

olume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 1, 1840. Number 19.

FURTHER EXTRACTS FROM THE MINUTES OF THE OHIO ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—1839.

GENERAL EXHIBIT OF THE CONFERENCE STEWARD.

Portions of the Work.	Preachers who served last year.	Allowance.	Receipts.	Deficiency.
io District,	A. McGuire, President,	$400 00	$243 00	$157 00
cinnati station,	M. M. Henkle,	Will be	made	good.
ingfield "	A. C. Barnes,	220 00	220 00
acinnati circuit,	Isaac Hunt,	260 00	243 27	16 73
hoboth "	J. Betson, part year,	93 50	93 50
gle "	B. Goldsbury, James Rose,	200 00	44 31	155 69
nia "	Sandford Evans,	250 00	38 36	211 64
ghland "	John Guest,	220 00	197 00	23 00
ashington "	R. Dobbins, Wm. Williams,	200 00	121 00	79 00
ion "	Jonathan Flood,	200 00	200 00
ami "	R. M. Dalbey, 3 months,	260 00	170 00	90 00
ma "	Joseph Parke,	25 00	12 00	13 00
wrenceburgh "	R. M Dalbey, 3 months, Aldon Bessey, 10 months,	210 00	136 35	73 65
dison "	John Clarke,	25 00	5 00	20 00
arlestown "	Th. Hicklin,	53 62	53 62
hite River "	Geo. Wheatley,	300 00	300 00
ncer "	D. H. Stephens,	100 00	100 00
gar Creek "	G. Evans,	200 00	65 00	135 00
abash "	R. G. H. Hanna,	200 00	200 00
ddle's Mills "	J. Simpson,	100 00	71 25	28 75
College Agent (local,)	D. Crall,	200 00	175 87	24 13
College Ag't (trav'ling,)	A. H. Bassett,	260 00	139 70	120 30
		200 00	87 00	113 00
		260 00	260 00
		200 00	145 33	54 67

c'd of Cincinnati Prs.' Aid Society, cash,	$126	43¾
" Twin Creek circuit, Conf. collection,	5	37½
" Highland " " "	5	37½
" Eagle " " "	3	72
" Lawrenceburgh " " "	5	62
" Br. McGuire's Family Mite Society,	2	00
	148	53¼

Paid to deficient Preachers,	$146	65¾
" expenses of Conference,	1	87½
	148	53¼

WM. B. EVANS, Conf. Steward.

LOVE-FEASTS AND GENERAL RULES.

Resolved, That each Superintendent be requested to adhere strictly to the Rules laid down in the Discipline, page 62, regulating Love-feasts.

Resolved, That each Superintendent be requested to read to his people the General Rules, as often as once a quarter, if practicable.

DIVISION OF THE DISTRICT.

Resolved, 1. That in the opinion of this Conference, the interests of the Church would be promoted by a different arrangement of the boundaries and limits of this Conference District; that in the judgment, so much of this District as lies west of the State of Ohio, including such portion of Illinois as may be agreed upon, should be erected into a separate District; that the remaining part of the Ohio District should be attached to the Pittsburgh District, or if found more expedient and convenient, that the above territory, with a portion of the Pittsburgh District, be erected into a separate District.

Resolved, 2. That two committees of three be appointed, the one to confer with the Pittsburgh Conference, and make any arrangements that may be necessary to carry into effect the objects above contemplated, including the power to fix a time and place for the meeting of a Conference of said contemplated District, should one be formed; and the other to confer with the Illinois Conference, for the like purposes, and with the like powers.

Resolved, 3. That should any change be concurred in by the Conferences, as above contemplated, the committees provided for shall give due notice of the change, and of the time and place of holding the next Conference or Conferences, through one or more of our periodicals.

The following named brethren were appointed to constitute the committees provided for in the second resolution:

For the Indiana part—H. P. Bennett, A. H. Bassett, T. P. Armstrong.

For the Ohio part—Wm. B. Evans, E. K. Mahan, M. M. Henkle.

A. H. BASSETT, M. M. HENKLE, A. C. BARNES, } Publishing Committee.

[Concluded in our next.]

COMMUNICATIONS.

CONNELSVILLE, PA., DEC. 17, 1839.

Dear Brother Springer:—We hear cheering intelligence of the work of the Lord, from a distance, through the medium of your valuable paper. I have thought proper to send a communication, to inform you and the friends of Zion generally, what the Lord is doing for us on Union circuit. Our first quarterly meeting commenced in Connelsville, Nov'r. 16th. We were favored with the ministerial aid of our worthy friend, J. Brown; he labored with zeal and to the entire satisfaction of the respectable part of our citizens, who attended his administration on that occasion. But, the best of all, the Lord was with us,—it was a refreshing time to believers.

On Monday night we held our love-feast, which was a feast of love indeed: to many of the members, it was a refreshing time from the presence of the Lord. Our President spoke, and gave information of the prosperous condition of the Church, so far as he had visited the circuits. It was truly heart cheering to the friends of religious liberty. He adverted to the reports put in circulation by the enemies of our cause; that, as a Church, were going down. Yes, said he, going down like the beautiful Ohio river, getting deeper and wider as it progresses. I was very forcibly struck with the applicability of the likeness.

The result of the labors of this meeting, was the accession of eight members to the Church on probation; of whom, the greater part professed to have found peace in believing in Christ.

On December 7th, a protracted meeting commenced at the Franklin meeting house, which has continued nine days. Through the course of this meeting there were forty-eight members added to the Church on probation; the greater part of whom, professed to have found peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. I have attended a large number of protracted meetings, but never, in my recollection, was in attendance at a meeting where there appeared to be such a manifest display of the awakening and converting power of God. There appeared to be an increased interest felt as the meeting progressed. It looked to me like the people of God had a mind to work,—and the ark of the Lord moved forward, and the Lord worked gloriously; there was a death-like silence that pervaded the whole assembly, from time to time. All sectarian feelings were lost; two members of the Presbyterian church labored zealously through the whole revival. This is as it should be.

The ground on which the Franklin meeting house is built, is memorable from the circumstance that it stands within a short distance of the ground on which the first camp meeting was held on this circuit, on the land of our old and much esteemed citizen, Col. Paul, in the days of old under the superintendence of Moses Scott. With emotions of heart-felt gratitude, I look back to that eventful period and recollect the refreshing seasons that were enjoyed by many on that occasion. It appears to be a sacred and lovely place in the memory of many in this section of the country. Some who became the subjects of converting grace at that meeting have passed through the house of their pilgrimage below and have joined the unnumbered millions of the redeemed in the kingdom of God. Many more are on their way to Zion with their faces thitherward. Methodist Protestantism received an impetus at that meeting that will not soon be forgotten on this circuit.

All we want as a Church is a zealous ministry who will preach the practical truths of the gospel of Christ, and be more interested in the salvation of souls than to understand metaphysical and abstract principles in theology. We are in hopes that the days are gone by, that our ministers will act Judas-like, and for the sake of being fed out of the cribs of ecclesiastical supremacy, sacrifice principle and go away murmuring that no provision was making in the land of religious liberty for the widows of worn out preachers.—Others who profess to be in favor of our principles have remained in the old hive to grow fat on the honey of episcopacy. But it is a source of encouragement to think that there are some noble spirited men who stand to principle, and like hardy pioneers have faced the storm of clerical power. The influence they have exerted will, at no remote period, prove a blessing to the christian world. Their names will live in the memory of thousands when they are dead, and their spirits gone to enjoy a rich reward in heaven. My beloved brethren, the Methodist Protestant Church is destined to live, and we have cause to thank Almighty God that through his blessing, we, as a Church, have prospered. Let our trust be in His almighty arm and our prayers for Zion be offered through the mediation of His Son our Saviour, and our march will be onward. O Lord! revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known, in wrath remember mercy.

Yours, in the bonds of a peaceable Gospel,
J. W. FRANCIS.

FARMINGTON, DEC. 17, 1839.

Brother Springer:—Having to write to you on business, it may not be out of the way to drop a few remarks touching our condition and prospects as a circuit.

I find myself agreeably situated among a people, many of whom, I am happy in believing, are whole-hearted patrons of a free and liberal ecclesiastical polity, and zealously disposed to aid in advancing the interests of Christ's spiritual kingdom. Therefore, my appointment to me is a very pleasant one. But when I reflect that this circuit has for the most part, been favored with ministers of age, experience and talent. I am convinced that any good it may be the subject of this year, must be through the special assistance of that grace which is the strength of every saint. I rejoice to have it to say, of a truth, that though our condition is not such, in every respect, as the faithful christian would most naturally desire; yet, it is far from being of a hope-forbidding character. Many strong and encouraging omens of good and of better days are already evinced, which encourages us to believe that God is about to revive His work in this part of His heritage. May the God of mercies grant to disappoint us not.

Our first quarterly meeting was held in this place some few weeks ago, and was one of much encouragement. We were favored with the assistance of Bro. Thomas, a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Bro. Huntsman, of Mt. Pleasant circuit, whose labors were not only zealous, but well received, and I trust of much profit. Our Episcopal brother manifested much of the christian spirit and a zeal for the glory of God. How pleasant it is to see heralds of different denominations, side by side, in the sacred desk, showing to spectators that they are under the spirit of unity and bonds of peace. This makes me think that they can live happy in each others company in heaven; but without such union here, I doubt an union there. Two united with the church on the occasion.

I returned home on Tuesday evening from a meeting in Georgetown, which commenced on Saturday last, and I suppose closed the night after I, of necessity, had to leave. The only help, in word and doctrine, that I had on the occasion were brothers Scott and Mercer, unstationed ministers of this circuit, who, tho' standing on their own door sill, so to speak, were in the hands of God instruments of much, and I hope lasting good to the many who sat under their preaching and exhortations. Truly, this meeting has been favored of the Lord, in a precious manner. The saint of God could say my cup is full; my soul exults in lively anticipation of a glorious immortality, while the backslider was bro't to remember his forsaken Redeemer, and sinners to groan bitterly under a sense of slighted mercies. Our love-feast on Monday, was one among the most solemn and precious I ever attended. It was here that the presence of God was first manifested in a powerful manner. On Monday night, several designated themselves at the altar of prayer, as seekers of redemption through the blood of Christ. May the parent of all mercies lead them to certain victory here, and crown them heirs of eternal life. It was not a few who were the subjects of conviction. A heavenly atmosphere seemed to brood over the congregation, and many, if not every sinner on the occasion evidently felt the sin reproving officer at work in their heart. Fifteen united with the church, two by certificate and thirteen on probation; which make in all, since Conference, an addition of twenty-one to the class at Georgetown. Several more are expected. I rejoice that Georgetown has witnessed the dawn of a promising revival; which, may God grant to carry on to perfection.

Affectionately, yours, &c.
GEORGE CLANCY.

PITTSBURGH, DEC. 21, 1839.

Mr. Editor:—We are always pleased to hear of the religious prosperity of our Church through the medium of our laborious and indefatigable Intinerants.

Were we disposed to censure them for neglect of duty in any particular, it would be in this apparent neglect to communicate intelligence of their success in the field of their ministerial operations.—We think there is a falling off, in this useful department of your paper, since the days of the "Correspondent." Will not our superintendents of circuits and stations, esteem it a privilege to have access to the colums of the "Recorder," to give publicity to the most interesting and important facts, connected with our organization, as a Church, that we may mutually "joy and rejoice" together in the Lord? Though sixteen numbers have been issued but a few communications have been received, from our much esteemed brethren, who have received appointments from the last Annual Conference. The salutary tendency of revival intelligence is powerful,—its value is incalculable; the feeble and enervated are strengthened—the languid and drooping spirits are cheered, and to the whole "body" it is as "good news from a far country." We make these remarks, that our brethren may understand that regular and impartial accounts of the state of religion in their respective appointments, are not only peculiarly interesting to the church, in this place, but above all other matter furnished by your very useful paper, they meet with a decided preference. We were pleased to read in the sixteenth number of the 'R' an "epitome" of the travels of our Literary Agent since Conference. Well aware of the arduous and unpleasant duty of an Agent, in these times of monetary pressure, we were pleasingly disappointed, in reading of his "warm receptions;" the cordial and zealous co-operation of friends and their 'pretty successful efforts to obtain subscriptions." Surely all this betokens good. And should excite gratitude to the "giver of every good and perfect gift." But we were led particularly to notice, that after his arrival in the "city of smoke" we hear nothing of him until after his departure.

WILLIAM PITT.

For the Western Recorder.

POMPEII.

"Such is Vesuvius! and these things take place in it every year. But all eruptions which have happened since would be trifling, even if all sumed into one, compared to what occurred at the period we refer to. * * * * * * * Day was turned into night, and night into darkness—an inexpressible quantity of dust and ashes was poured out, deluging land, and sea, and air, and burying two entire cities, Herculaneum and Pompeii, while the people were sitting in the theatre."—Dim. Cassius, lib. lxiv.

In days of old of deed renown,
A city lived in point of fame,
She strove to rival many a name,
And in a day it tumbled down;
In haughty pride and luxury
She wished to have out-liv'd a day,
And to have gained imperial sway,
And held the world a votary.
She heaped up toys in endless treasure,
But not to meet the wants of time,
Regardless of the depths of crime,
She yawned and grasp'd at pleasure:
She little thot one day would come,
When fiery wath would strike her down,
And strip her altars of renown,
And leave her gods and temples dumb.
In her old Bacchus had a name,
Minerva veil'd her pretty face,
Pure virtue scarcely had a place,
And Epicurius lapp'd on fame.
She ill knew the gods she nursed,
Nor cared to know the great first cause,
Who asks obedience to his laws,
And ever holds the guilty cursed.
The 'vengeful day at last it came,
My pen cannot describe the wail,
The ghastly mien of faces pale,
Which was when justice told her claim;
None heeded now the glittering spires,
Of little worth was glittering gold,
Lost was the courage of the bold,
Dire the rage of old Visuvia's fires;
Darkness was black and here and there
Shot fiery streams of baleful light
At mid-day—changed to worse than night,
And mortals wondered every where.
Friend scarce knew friend nor wished to know
The ties that bind the small and great,
But strove to shun approaching fate,
At risk of every thing below;
Yet some there was of conscience sear'd,
For sordid gold plunged into crime,
And tho't the scene would hide the crime,
Nor friend nor fate nor justice fear'd.
The scene rag'd on, a fiery flood
Fiercely hot deep cover'd every wall,
Regardless of the great or small,
Nor paused where flowed the richest blood.
We change the scene—the day is past,
Her place is lost—on history's page,
The story ran from age to age,
And moderns found her place at last.
May modern cities learn her fate,
And early learn to shun her crimes,
The paths of virtue walk betimes,
Nor have to learn when its too late.

November, 1839. V.

THE EDITOR TO THE PUBLIC.

In the Western Recorder of the 7th of November, I published the following article:

"We call the attention of the reader to the advertisement of S. B. Johnson & Co., who have recently taken the Glass Works below town.—From the reputation of the principal member of the firm, as a workman, we think the public need not fear those impositions which have heretofore been practiced at that establishment. As our own mechanics should always have the preference when they do us equal justice, let us call and give them a trial."

In the Ohio Republican, of the 14th of December, the following notices appeared among the advertisements of that paper:

"MR. PETERS:—In a late number of the Western Recorder published by the Rev. C. Springer, under the editorial head I am charged with having 'practiced imposition upon the public at the Glass Works below town,' as a history of the transaction which gave rise to that charge would place the spiritual leader of a flock in rather an unenviable situation, and not wishing to return evil for evil, but willing to do him all the good I can, I would ask him to turn to Exodus 23d 1st—Romans 12 from 17—Titus 3 2nd—Eph. 4—31, 32—Luke 3, 14—1st Tim. 1,2—Matthew 5, 39—and read with a proper spirit the passages of scripture there recorded. I do think they will exert a happy influence. R. P. ROBINSON.
"December 5, 1839."

"MR. PETERS:—Some time since we handed the Rev. C. Springer our advertisement which has since regularly appeared in his paper. In the number Nov. 7th, in an article under the Editorial head he attempts to build up our reputation to the injury of the one who preceded us in the Glass business. This we do not wsih should be done. The person alluded to has for some time had the advantage of the services of the one who is called in that article the principal in our firm and we believe our predecessor could not in justice be charged with imposition.
"Dec. 5, 1839. S. B. JOHNSON & Co."

The first thing that strikes our attention in the above notices, is the taste still retained in the Robinson family for quoting Scripture, under the pretext of doing "good." When R. P's father met our Lord in the wilderness, under the guise of persuading Him to do right, he quotes a passage from the Psalms. See Matt. iv. 1, 11.

Mr. R. positively asserts I have "charged him with practicing impositions," &c. How does he learn that? I have not mentioned his name, and the establishment has passed through a number of hands. Why, "guilty conscience needs no accuser." Now, the facts upon which I rely for justification in publishing the above notice, so far as I am personally concerned, are these:—I have bought, for my own use, from that establishment, within fifteen years past, at different times, four separate boxes of glass. Three out of the four, I consider were gross impositions; the evidence to prove which is still in my possession. But, as only one of these were got of R. P. I will give the particulars relating to that transaction. Some time about the last of May, past, or the first of June, I bought a box of this gentleman, which he sold to me for double glass, and for which, I was to pay him ten dollars the first of July, single or common glass being only $3 50 a $3 75. When I came to use the glass I found I was imposed on. [See certificates below.] When Mr. R. forwarded his bill, about the first of July, I gave the bearer eight dollars, and would have given him the whole amount agreed upon, if the glass had been such as was sold to me. I thought to have called shortly on Mr. Robinson and have this matter settled; but through press of business, I either had not time or did not think of it, until some two or three months ago, he mentioned the thing to me on the street. I told him that the glass was not such as he had sold to me; that I had already paid him more than it was worth. I saw at once, from his movements, he was a "picayune" man, and paid him his full demand to get rid of him.

These are the facts which the gentleman says would place the "leader of a flock in rather an unenviable situation." We admit it: they shew that we are so soft as to let R. P. Robinson cheat us out of some four or five dollars in a transaction of ten. And, it is a humiliating fact, that any person so incapable of attending to his own, is not fit to take charge of the public interest; is not fit to be the "leader of a flock." But, if our "flock" will only forgive us, this time, we promise them most faithfully, that R. P. shall never cheat us again till the morning of the resurrection, should we both live so long.

As the gentleman appears to be fond of quoting scripture to do "good," in taking leave of him, I will give him a passage. "He that is unjust in that which is least, is unjust in that which is much,"—Luke 16. That is: he who would pick your pocket of one cent, would pick it of 10,000 dollars; he that would cheat you out of one pane of glass, would swindle you out of your farm—if opportunity offered.

As it respects S. B. Johnson & Co., we cannot but compliment them on their superior descernment. Even, though we did not mainly allude to Mr. Robinson, and though they were destitute of a knowledge of the facts upon which we predicated our charge against the establishment, yet their superior powers enabled them to see in us an "attempt" to "injure" their worthy "predecessor," whom they profess to "believe, (without a knowledge of the facts in the case) could not in justice be charged with imposition." It is a pitty that such splendid talents should be wasted in a glass factory. But, as all the public places are monopolized in this country, we would advise Judge Johnson and Company, to close their business soon as possible, and put out for Texas, where their merit could not fail to raise them to political eminence, in that "rising republic." I should judge too, from the specimen before me, that their moral principle is well suited to the meridian of Houston. The only act that I ever performed toward the Judge & Co., is contained in the note at the head of this article; I there commended them favorably to the public patronage. It was an act of kindness. For this they have been capable of lending themselves in an attempt to throw some dirt upon me; they have treated me ungratefully.—It is generally considered by casuists that ingratitude is the highest crime of which a moral being is capable; that if a man be so depraved as to be guilty of a deliberate act of ingratitude, he is prepared for any other species of CRIME,—of course, they are well adapted to the moral atmosphere of Texas. I would rather be disposed to hope, however, that the Judge & Co., in this case have acted prematurely and unthoughtedly.

But the most exceptionable part of this thing remains yet to be noticed. When I saw these defamatory advertisements in the columns of the Ohio Republican, I wrote to the editor to know if he would permit me to reply to the attack upon my reputation, he had admitted into his paper. His answer, verbally returned, was, that he would; but the bearer understood him that he expected me to pay for the use of his columns. Loth to believe such of an old friend, and wishing to ascertain definitely, I wrote a second time, requesting him specifically to state in writing if he intended to charge me, and if so, by what rule he would regulate his charges. The following is his reply:

"ZANESVILLE, OHIO, DEC. 17, 1839.

"Mr. C. Springer:—I thought I was definite enough with Mr. White, in respect to what you wished to say in reply to Messrs. R. & J. & Co. The charge will be regulated by my terms—one insertion (that their matter received) for fourteen lines, fifty cents.
"Resp. &c. ADAM PETERS."

I never intended to pay Mr. Peters for what he was under an obligation, as an honest man and a gentleman, of extending to me, viz: the use of his columns, to defend my reputation against the aspersions which he had admitted into them. I thought it prudent, however, at this stage of the matter, to let him know my intention. Accordingly, I wrote him a note to the effect, that I was opposed to the principle of dedicating the press to the purposes of slander, for pay, and could give him nothing for the use of his columns; that, if he compelled me to seek another medium of defence, I should feel bound to make some severe strictures on his course; but, if he would yield me this reasonable request, I would say nothing in reference to him. The following is his answer:

"ZANESVILLE, OHIO, 23d DEC., 1839.

"Mr. C. Springer:—You have the terms upon which I will insert your advertisement.
"Resp., &c. A. PETERS."

I have always treated Mr. Peters friendly. I have given the Zanesville press, within a few years past, some ten or 1200 dollars for work. In every instance, I have given him the preference of a job. It is true, I have paid him but little; but the reason is, he would not work on as accommodating terms as his neighbors. My connexions have been his political friends. But notwithstanding, he would open his columns for fifty cents, to slander me,—and then refuse me an opportunity to reply; except, on terms, that no honorable mind would submit to.

The gentleman professes to be a "Republican," and has the appellation imprinted at the head of his paper. How republican this principle of making his columns a medium of slander for pay!—The rich will find room for as many defamatory "Advertisements" as they please. But the poor will have to bleed under their inflictions, because they cannot raise the means of defence. O consistency! where is thy blush? We would advise brother Peters immediately to alter the heading of his journal, and henceforth call it the OHIO RUSTYCAT.

Again—a press which will open its columns to slander, for pay, cannot be regarded in any other light than a calamity on any community. Making money the motive of its action, it will be continually exciting quarrels and disputations within the sphere of its influence.

A man, whose soul is so chilled with avarice, that he could thus sacrifice an old friend, and thus prostitute the press, one of Heaven's kindest blessings, at the shrine of Mammon, I should suppose, would do almost any thing for money. Such a mind can scarcely have three ideas above a dollar. Would not a press, so sordid, countenance a mob, for one subscriber?

It may be said this is a trifling thing and not worth noticing. I admit, it is a little matter; but still, it involves very important principles.—Such is the character of man, if we let him trample and impose upon us, he is always ready to do so; but if we resist him, we put him on his guard, and he will be careful how he comes in conflict with us. But this consideration has little to do in calling forth this reply. I have a public as well as a private character to guard. It is indicated that I have "charge of a flock"—now, although this is not true, yet, I have scores of personal friends, scattered abroad through the west, who would be much mortified to know that I was capable of acting dishonorably. This mode of attack, where nothing is stated, but the blank is left to be filled up by the malignance of an enemy, many of whom I have that would be willing to wield any thing against the cause with which I am identified, makes it necessary for me to develope this matter.

In conclusion, I would state to my brethren of the press, in this town, that it would be very desirable on my part, that we could agree on some general rules to regulate our relations with each other. I am not particularly in love with my neighbors of the quill; yet, I hold such a decent respect for them, as makes me solicitous to live on agreeable and friendly terms with them. Indeed, our own peace, our reputation, and the credit and welfare of our place, all call for this. There is a certain decorum we owe to each other, which if not observed, will lead to collisions and bickerings of the press, which will be disagreeable to ourselves, and will have a bad influence upon the community. In view of this, to me, very desirable object, could we not meet and agree upon a few rules that would be of salutary tendency? Whether this proposition be responded to or not, I feel in duty bound to make it. I would give this very case to illustrate the importance of such rules; there was no necessity for Mr. Robinson, &c., to go to Mr. Peters for an opportunity to reply to my remarks. I would have published for them without pay; for I hold myself bound, on the principles of justice, to give every man an opportunity to defend himself, who may be impeached in my columns, through the same medium, free of cost. Now, if there had been a rule agreed upon between the editorial corps of this place, prohibiting an editor from receiving such communications, until the complainant was refused a hearing in the paper where he thought himself agrieved, this editorial difficulty would not have occurred.

C. SPRINGER.

CERTIFCATES.

This is to certify, that in June last, I used 108 lights of a box of glass for C. Springer, which he said he got at the factory of Mr. Robinson, in Zanesville, in glazing his office windows, which I consider, at ten dollars, the price he said he paid for it, was an imposition on any man. Many of the panes were what might be termed "double" at one edge and single at the other—double in the middle and single at both edges, and most of them so warped that it was difficult to use them. Ten or twelve broke in the glazing, from their being so much warped, some of them so badly, that they could not be used at all.

P. P. MORGAN.

December 21, 1839.

This is to certify, that I have this day examined the glass above refered to in C. Springer's office, and I consider the facts above stated substantially correct. It is not half so good glass, as I have seen from the same factory, at the same price. JOSHUA BENJAMIN, Carpenter.

December 23, 1839.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 1, 1840.

Our paper, again, goes to press on Monday evening, as we wish to prepare for New Year's.

There is nothing of general interest doing, we believe, in the Ohio Legislature.

The reader will find on the first page, some matters attended to, that relate to our neighbor, the Ohio Republican.

There has been no eastern arrivals for five or six days. It is said the snow in the mountains is the cause.

Mr. Walters, of the Hamilton (Ohio) Intelligencer has disposed of his establishment to Wm. C. Howells, who takes charge of it some time this month.

No President's Message yet, nor no late news from Washington. On the 20th, the House of Representatives decided, by a vote of 116 to 112 that the New Jersey members having the credentials of the Governor of the State should not be sworn in.

The citizens of Washington have taken such an interest in, it is said, and have been so much excited at the disorderly wrangling in the House of Congress, during the day, that they have lost their appetites for the evening amusements of the city. The play actors and the like have found their occupations rather a dull business.

The Hon. James Wilson, of Steubenville, O., is named, by a writer in the Ohio Republican, as a suitable person to be run for Governor of Ohio, at the next election. That's right, and if he be elected, we will go all the way to Columbus, to pay him a visit; for it does us much good to enjoy the company of such a good humored quizzical man as he.

A contest has been going on in this town, for some time, between a Corporate company, and the old Canal and Manufacturing company, as to who should control the bequest in the McIntire Will, made for the benefit of poor children. The Court in Bank, at Columbus, have recently decided in favor of the latter; and "that the bequest for the school was a valid trust and is now well vested in the company, so that the Heir has no right to take the property—that the poor children must reach the benefit of this trust, through the selection of this company, for THEY alone are authorised by the Will to select the objects of the Testator's bounty."

The Lexington, Ky., Observer, speaking of Gen. Harrison, the present Whig candidate for the Presidency, says:

"His father's name is upon the immortal Declaration of Independence. The son is now up for the Presidency of this great Nation, which, at that time, was looked upon as a set of revolted colonies.

"We go for the man, who, when a stripling, penetrated this western wilderness and fought under Wayne, to conquer the savage. We go for the man, who has a commission, in his pocket from nearly every American President, from Washington down. We go for the man, who, in peace and in war, has had more public money to pass through his hands, than perhaps any other American citizen, and who is now an humble Clerk of a Court in Cincinnati, earning his bread by the sweat of his brow."

There are in the present Legislature at Columbus, Ohio, 47 farmers, 23 lawyers and attorneys, 6 merchants, 6 physicians, 4 mechanics, 3 printers, 2 tailors, 2 farmers and physicians, 1 saddler, 1 lumber merchant, 1 blacksmith, 1 manufacturer, 1 clerk, 1 carpenter, 1 tanner, 1 miller, 1 moulder, 1 farmer and lawyer, 1 commission merchant, and 1 farmer and merchant. Of these 34 were born in Pennsylvania, 24 in Ohio, 15 in Virginia, 8 in Connecticut, 6 in New York, 5 in New Jersey, 3 in Kentucky, 3 in Massachusett, 3 in Maryland, 2 in Delaware, 2 in Vermont, 2 in Ireland, 1 in Tennessee, 1 in New Hampshire, and 1 in North Carolina. The youngest member is 27—the oldest 72. There are 15 over 50 years of age, 4 over 60, and 1 over 70. Dowty Utter, of Clermont, a native of Pennsylvania, has been a resident of this State for 44 years, which is the longest residence of any member.—Geo. J. Smith, of Warren, is 40 years of age, being the oldest native member.

In the table we examined the representatives from Ross are omitted.

POSTAGE.—The editors of all papers in the United States in favor of a reduction of postage, will please insert the following address and petition.

To the People of the United States.

The British Government has set an example to this country well worthy of imitation. It is a reduction of postage.

In a country where every farthing that can be raised by taxation, direct and indirect is wanted to carry on the government, the postage has been reduced all over the kingdom to one penny for every letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight. The Parliament has yielded to the wishes and petitions of the whole people, upon reasonable proof that the revenue would be as great by a low as by a high rate of postage.

It is as important to our people as it is to the English that there should be the cheapest possible communication through the mails—for the purpose of business—and for the sake of humanity and virtue. Our condition, is, however, different, owing to the great extent of the United States. If, however, the postage of England can be reduced to a penny without regard to distance, is it not probable that ours can be reduced to two cents, five cents, and ten cents, according to the distance which the mail has to be carried? The advantages of such a reduction are apparent to every man, woman, and child having intercourse of business or friendship out of their own immediate neighborhood.

There is but one way to get it down, and that is to send in petitions from all quarters of the country. We therefore recommend the following form of petition:

To the Senate and House of Representatives, in Congress assembled:

Your petitioners believe that it would be a great benefit to the people of the United States, social, moral, political and pecuniary, greatly to reduce the postage on letters. They therefore pray that it may be reduced, so that the greatest postage on any single letter shall not exceed ten cents.—New York Evening Post.

A NEW ORDER OF NOBILITY.—We find, by the proceedings of the United States Senate, that Mr. Tappan has offered a resolution, the purport of which is to permit all officers of the army above sixty years of age, to retire upon half pay.—This proposition is exactly the same, with the exception of the age required, that was broached at the termination of our revolutionary war, and was rejected by the Democratic party on account of its monarchical features. The people, at that day, could see no good reason why an officer who received, perhaps, $4,000 a year, should be permitted to retire upon a pension of two thousand dollars a year, whilst the poor war-worn soldier was sent adrift without a copper in his pocket. The public mind must, at this day, have greatly degenerated, if it shall countenance any such project as is now proposed. There is good reason for doing something handsome for our 'old revolutioners,' and for sustaining officers and soldiers who have been wounded in the service of their country, but to establish a pension list of officers, on account of age, without regarding the claims of the soldiers, would be the perfection of Aristocracy and a close imitation of the British system. It would be an approach to "Kings, Lords and Commons"—a kind of body guard for the King.—Steubenville Gazette.

HOPE.

The influence of hope is seen and felt in all the secular affairs of life; in all its business and operations, this polar star of happiness shines out conspicuously, and with surprising lustre. To the man of business, of toil and labor, it is the reward of all his exertions, pointing him to the goal of his wishes, and inducing him to persevere in gaining them. To the Mariner, when he spreads his sails to the breezes of heaven, hope is the only friend that points out the way and leads his proud ship across the deep, in search of wealth and gain. It beckons him on with the assurance of a delightful and prosperous voyage, nor suffers him to dream of adverse winds, of storms and shipwreck.

To the man of pleasure, hope is the only solace when every worldly joy flits away, and happiness is nipped by the chilling frosts of earth. To the man in adversity, hope speaks out in kindness to the heart, and soothes its pangs, by promising him a state of existence free from trials. To the christian, hope is the only reward for all his efforts of christian enterprise. To him it is a pleasant boon, from all the cares and subterfuges of this vain and imperfect world.

Hope transports the mind away from earth to other regions, where kindreds dwell freed from sin, under a glorious and eternal sunshine. It befriends us when friends forsake, when fate is against us, and when the world looks cold and wretched. In a word, our bleeding and lacerated bosoms would be left open to the keenest pangs and bitterest woes, were it not for hope—the friendly voice of HOPE.—Lowell Souvenier.

ANECDOTE OF EMMET.—Some years ago, a journeyman saddler in New York, by his industry and economy, had accumulated a few hundred dollars in money, resolved to establish himself in business, in an adjacent village. After securing a situation for a shop, he returned to the city with $200 to purchase his stock.—He put up at one of the public house, kept by N— W—, and confiding in the integrity of the landlord, put the money into his hands for safe keeping, till he should call for it. He then traversed the city in search of a favorable chance to purchase his stock, and after finding that which suited him, he returned to his quarters, and called for his money. "Your money!" said the landlord, "you put no money in my hands." He had no evidence of the fact, and finding all his efforts to induce his host to give up the money were fruitless, the desponding & indignant saddler repaired to Mr. Emmet for counsel.—After hearing a statement of the facts, and taking such measures as satisfied him that the saddler was a man of the strictest integrity, he rebuked him for putting his money into such hands, without evidence; "but," said he, "if you will do as I tell you, I will obtain your money for you." The saddler very readily promised a strict obedience to his direction. "Well," said Emmet, "go back to the landlord, and tell him when no one is present, that you owe him an apology—that you have found your money, and was mistaken in supposing you put it into his hands; you will then return to me." The saddler did so, and the landlord expressed great satisfaction, that the saddler had discovered his mistake.

Mr. Emmet then gave the saddler $200 and told him to go and deposit it in the hands of the landlord, but before you enter the house, procure some gentleman of respectability, to go in and call for a glass of beer, and request him then to take his seat and carelessly pass away the time in reading the news till you arrive. You will then enter the room, and, in his presence, tell the landlord you now wish him to take the $200 for safe keeping, until you call for it. This done, the saddler again returned to Mr. Emmet, who directed him to continue his lodging at the house for two days and be regular at his meals; and then when no one is present, tell the landlord that you will take your money. This the saddler did, and the unsuspecting landlord without hesitation refunded the money, which the saddler restored to Mr. Emmet, who directed him to take a good witness with him, and go and demand the $200—which you delivered in his hands for safe keeping in the presence of the gentleman who called for the beer.

The saddler accordingly proceeded to the house in company with another gentleman, and demanded his money. "Your money!" said the astonished landlord, "I have just handed it to you." "No, sir," replied the saddler, "I have not received my money, and if you refuse to deliver it to me, I shall take measures to obtain it." The landlord dared him to "do his best," and Mr. Emmet instituted a suit against him in favor of the saddler. The landlord finding himself outwitted, paid the $200.

From the Palladium and Anulet.

THE SOURCE OF TRUE ENJOYMENT.

BY REV. ZENAS THOMPSON.

That Divine knowledge is the basis of true enjoyment, we think unquestionable. By divine knowledge we mean the knowledge of divine things—the knowledge of God, of ourselves, and of the destiny that awaits us.

"When earth's troubled scenes are o'er."

When the mind obtains clear and convincing light, respecting these important subjects, the foundation of pure enjoyment is laid. It is evident, then, that our religious freedom, or enjoyment, will be the same, in degree, as our knowledge of truth.—This is a different view of the subject from that most commonly taken, but we are confident that it will stand the test of scrutiny. Almost every person, to be sure, professes to be the happier for his possession of religion. But we are of opinion that, in many cases, this acknowledgment is made more to accord with the common opinion of mankind, as to what the effect of religion should be, than from any actual or positive increase of true enjoyment. Persons under the excitement of the imagination, will be thrown into paroxisms of rapture or of wretchedness, according to the nature of the circumstances under which they imagine themselves to be placed. But these effects of the imagination should not be denominated religious influences. How often we have seen something like the following in the lives of professors. A person is first excited by terrific descriptions of another world until he is led to view himself just on the crumbling verge of perdition; then by a sudden transition of the scene, which those accustomed to the management of 'revivals' know well how to produce, he is presented with a view of the land of the blessed, and encouraged to hope that mercy is abundant, and his salvation more and more probable, until he imagines himself snatched as a brand from the devouring flames and placed upon a safe foundation. Here the person feels an exstacy of rapture which breaks forth in the most violent enthusiasm.—Every thing is now neglected for religious meetings and exercises; the excitement endured for a little time, then dies away; the person grows cold and unhappy—he wonders what can be the matter with him—why he does not feel as he did a little time past. He now mourns over his condition and is even more unhappy than ever. This, we venture to say, is true to a greater or less extent, with the mass of modern professors.

But is not the cause of this very obvious? Surely; for none, of which we have spoken, were those of true religion but of the excited imagination. The mind not being instructed in divine knowledge, there was no foundation for rational and permanent enjoyment. When the flame of excitement, not no longer fed, of course, it expired, and this being extinct, all within was cold and dead. Had the mind—the understanding, but been enlightened by a knowledge of the Scriptures—of the true character of God—of human duty—of our highest good and the glorious destiny of our race—a foundation would have been laid, in the mind, which no fortune—which no earthly calamity, could reach.—Oh the tranquility of soul resulting from a clear and rational view of Divine truth! The infinite love of God beams forth and glows in every scene of earth, producing that "Which nothing earthly gives or can destroy,

The soul's calm sunshine and the heartfelt joy."

For what other purpose has God made a revelation of his truth to mankind, but that he should understand it and be made thereby wiser, better, happier? Surely then we ought to look to the bible for true knowledge—the foundation and source of true happiness. We should carefully employ every means of storing our minds with a knowledge of what God has implanted within us and spread out around us. To neglect all this and seek for religion, or true enjoyment, in mere excitements of passion or flights of fancy is one of the most unfortunate errors of modern times.

AGRICULTURAL.

MANAGEMENT OF THE DAIRY.

BY DR. ANDERSON.

First.—It is of importance that the cows should be always milked as near the dairy as possible, to prevent the necessity of carrying and cooling the milk before it is put into the dishes; and, as cows are much hurt by far driving, it must be a great advantage, in a dairy farm, to have the principal grass fields as near the dairy, or homestead, as possible.

Secondly.—The practice of putting the milk of all the cows of a large dairy into one vessel, as it is milked, there to remain till the whole milking is finished, before any part of it is put into the milk-pans, seems to be highly injudicious; not only on account of the loss that is sustained by agitation and cooling, but also, more especially, because it prevents the owner of the dairy from distinguishing the good from the bad cow's milk, so as to separate these from each other, where it is necessary. He may thus have the whole of his dairy product greatly debased by the milk of one bad cow, for years together, without being able to discover it.* A better practice therefore would be, to have the milk drawn from each cow put separately into the creaming-pans as soon as it is milked, without being ever mixed with any other. Thus would the careful dairy-man be able, on all occasions, to observe the particular quality of each individual cow's milk, as well as its quantity, and to know with precision which of his cows it was his interest to dispose of, and which of them he ought to keep and breed from.

Thirdly.—If it be intended to make butter of a very fine quality, it will be advisable, in all cases, to keep the milk that is first drawn separate from that which comes last; as it is obvious, that if this be not done, the quality of the butter will be greatly debased, without much augmenting its quantity. It is also obvious, that the quality of the butter will be improved, in proportion to the smallness of the quantity of the last drawn milk that is retained; so that those who wish to be singularly nice in this respect, will do well to retain only a very small portion of the last drawn milk.

To those owners of dairies who have profit only in view, it must ever be a matter of trial and calculation, how far it is expedient for them to carry the improving of the quality of their butter, at the expence of diminishing its quantity. In different situations, prudence will point out different kinds of practice, as most eligible; and all persons must be left, after making accurate trials, to determine for themselves. It is likewise a consideration of no small importance, to determine in what way the inferior milk, that is thus to be set apart where fine butter is wanted, can be employed with the greatest profit. In the Highlands of Scotland they have adopted, without thinking of the improvement of their butter, a very simple and economical practice in this respect. As the rearing of calves is there a principal object with the farmer, every cow is allowed to suckle her own calf with a part of her milk, the remainder only being employed in the dairy. To give the calf its portion regularly, it is separated from the cow, and kept in an enclosure, with all the other calves belonging to the same farm. At regular times, the cows are driven to the door of the inclosure, where the young calves fail not to meet them. Each calf is then separately let out, and runs directly to its mother, where it sucks till the dairy-maid judges it has had enough; she then orders it to be driven away, having previously shackled the hinder legs of the mother, by a very simple contrivance, to oblige her to stand still. Boys drive away the calf with switches, and return it to the enclosure, while the dairy-maid milks off what was left by the calf: thus they proceed, till the whole of the cows are milked. They obtain only a small quantity of milk, it is true; but that milk is of an exceeding rich quality; which, in the hands of such of the inhabitants as know how to manage it, is manufactured into the richest marrowy butter that can be any where met with. This richness of the Highland butter is universally ascribed to the old grass the cows feed upon in their remote glens; but it is in fact chiefly to be attributed to the practice here described, which has long prevailed in these regions.† Whether a similar practice could be economically adopted elsewhere, I do not take upon me to say; but doubtless other secondary uses might be found for the milk of inferior quality. On some occasions, it might be converted into butter of an inferior quality: on other occasions, it might be sold sweet, where the situation of the farm was within reach of a market-town: and on others, it might be converted into cheese, which, by being made of sweet milk, would be of a very fine quality if carefully made.*—Still other uses might be devised for its application, which I cannot stop to enumerate.†

Fourthly.—If the quality of the butter be the chief object attended to, it will be necessary, not only to separate the first from the last drawn milk, but also to take nothing but the cream that is first separated from the best milk, as it is this first rising cream alone that is of the prime quality. The remainder of the milk, which will be still sweet, may be either employed for the purpose of making sweet milk cheeses, or may be allowed to stand to throw up cream for making butter of an inferior quality, as circumstances may direct.

Fifthly.—From the above facts we are enabled to perceive, that butter of the very best possible quality can only be obtained from a dairy of considerable extent, judiciously managed; for, when only a small portion of each cow's milk can be set apart for throwing up cream, and when only a small proportion of that cream can be reserved, of the prime quality, it follows, (the quantity of milk being upon the whole very inconsiderable,) that the quantity of prime cream produced would be so small, as to be scarcely worth manufacturing separately.

Sixthly.—From these premises we are also led to draw another conclusion, extremely different from the opinion that is commonly entertained on this subject, viz: that it seems probable, that the very best butter could be made, with economy, in those dairies only where the manufacture of cheese is the principal object.—The reasons are obvious: if only a small portion of the milk should be set apart for butter, all the rest may be made into cheese, while it is yet warm from the cow, and perfectly sweet; and if only that portion of cream which rises during the first three or four hours after milking is to be reserved for butter, the rich milk which is left after that cream is separated, being still perfectly sweet, may be converted into cheese, with as great advantage nearly as the newly-milked milk itself.

But as it is not probable that many persons could be found, who would be willing to purchase the very finest butter, made in the manner above pointed out, at a price that would be sufficient to indemnify the farmer for his trouble in making it, these hints are thrown out merely to shew the curious, in what way butter possessing this superior degree of excellence may be obtained, if they choose to be at the expense; but, for an ordinary market, I am satisfied, from experience and attentive observation, that if, in general, about the first drawn half of the milk be separated at each milking, and the remainder only set up for producing cream; and if that milk be allowed to stand to throw up the whole of its cream, (even till it begins sensibly to taste sourish,) and that cream be afterwards carefully managed, the butter thus obtained will be of a quality greatly superior to what can usually be procured at market, and its quantity not considerably less than if the whole of the milk had been treated alike. This, therefore, is the practice that I should think most likely to suit the frugal farmer, as his butter though of a superior quality could be afforded at a price that would always ensure it a rapid sale.

THE MILK-HOUSE.

No dairy can be managed with profit, unless a place properly adapted for keeping the milk, and for carrying on the different operation of the dairy, be first provided. The necessary requites of a good milk-house are, that it be cool in summer, and warm in winter, so as to preserve a temperature nearly the same throughout the whole year; and that it be dry, so as to admit of being kept clean and sweet at all times. As it is on most occasions difficult to contrive a place within the dwelling-house, that can possess all the requisites, I would advise that a separate building should be always erected; which, on the plan I shall now describe, may in every situation be reared at a very small expense, and will answer the purpose much better than any of those expensive structures I have seen, that were built by noblemen or gentlemen for this use.

This building ought, if possible, to be erected near a cool spring, or running water, to which easy access can be had by the cows, and which is not liable to be incommoded by stagnant water.

The whole of the apartment should be neatly plastered with lime, on the inside of the walls and ceiling. It ought also to be paved with flat stones, which should be raised six inches higher than the surface of the ground without, having slant gutters, readily to convey water or any other liquid that might be accidentally spilt there; but it is a slovenly dairy-maid who slabbers her floor. The walls all round should be furnished with shelves of a convenient breadth, in ranges one above the other, on which the dishes may be placed; and in the middle should stand a large table, which, if made of stone will be found to be more cleanly and convenient than of any other material. Beneath it, a part of the pavement, about a foot in breadth, should be raised all round six inches higher than the level of the floor, so as to form a trough within it for holding water, the uses of which will be afterwards specified. This bason may be emptied entirely at pleasure, by opening a hole that allows the water to run into the common gutters.

The intention of all these contrivances, as will easily appear, is to enable the attentive owner of a dairy to keep his milk in a proper degree of temperature both during the summer and the winter season, without much trouble or expense to himself; as any considerable variation in the degree of heat tends greatly to derange his operations, and to diminish the value of the products of his dairy. If the heat be too great, the milk suddenly coagulates, without admitting any separation of the cream, and it is so suddenly rendered sour as greatly to mar every operation: if, on the other hand, the milk be kept in too cold a temperature, the cream separates from it slowly, and with difficulty; it acquires a bitter and disagreeable taste; the butter can scarcely be made to come at all; and, when it is obtained, is so pale in color, so small in quantity, so poor to the taste, so hard and brittle in consistence, and of so little value in every respect, as to bring a very low price at market, compared to what it would have produced had it been preserved in a proper degree of warmth.—To avoid, therefore, as much as possible both these extremes, the milk-house, properly so called should be placed in the centre of the building, into which there is no access directly from the open air, not even from the porch, but through a double door, one door of which ought always to be shut before the other is opened when either the heat or the cold of the weather is excessive, though at other times this precaution, may be omitted.—The walls of this part of the building should be made of earth; which, as well as the roof of thatch, is directed to be made very thick. It is found that these substances transmit heat or cold with less facility than any others that can easily be had; so that a very long continuance either of hot or cold weather, would have no sensible effect in altering the temperature of this chamber; and, if it should at any time acquire a small degree of heat or cold more than was desirable, and if this were corrected by artificial means, it would retain that artificial temperature for a long time. These are the advantages proposed to be derived from the mode of construction here proposed.

ABSURDITIES.—To attempt to borrow money on the plea of poverty. To lose money at play, and then fly into a passion about it. To ask the publisher of a new periodical how many copies he sells per week. To ask a wine merchant how old his wine is. To make yourself generally disagreeable, and wonder that nobody will visit you, unless they gain some palpable advantage by it. To get drunk and complain the next morning of a headache. To spend your earnings in liquor and wonder that you are ragged. To sit shivering in the cold because you won't have a fire till November. To suppose that reviewers generally read more than the title page of the works they praise or condemn. To judge of people's piety by their attendance at church. To keep your clerks on miserable salaries, and wonder at their robbing you. Not to go to bed when you are tired and sleepy because "it is not bed time." To make your servants tell lies for you, and afterwards be angry because they tell for themselves. To tell your own secrets and believe other people will keep them. To expect to make people honest by putting them in jail, and afterwards sending them adrift without the means of getting work. To fancy a thing is cheap because a low price is asked for it. To say that a man is charitable because he subscribes to a hospital. To keep a cat or a dog on short allowance and complain of its being a thief. To degrade human nature in the hope of improving it. To expect your trades-people will give you long credit if they generally see you in shabby clothes. To arrive at the age of fifty and be surprised at any vice, folly, or absurdity their fellow creatures may be guilty of.—Anon.

*The making of cheese has never yet been reduced to scientific principles, and consequently the reasoning relating to it is very inconclusive. It is in general supposed, that the goodness of cheese depends almost entirely upon its richness, by which is meant the proportion of oily matter, whether natural or extraneous, it contains; nothing, however, is more certain, than that this opinion is erroneous. Sometimes a very lean cheese is much better tasted than one that is much fatter; and, which will appear to most persons still more extraordinary, it frequently happens that a cheese that tastes soft and fat, is much leaner than one that is hard, dry and sticky. The mode of manufacturing it occasions this, and not the quantity of cream it contains. It is very possible, by art, to make poor skim-milk cheese assume the soft butter taste and appearance even of cream cheese. This subject, therefore, deserves highly to be more particularly elucidated than it has hitherto been.

Connected as they are with the object discussed in the text, I beg leave to suggest the following particulars, as proper objects of examination and experiment, viz: is the quantity of caseous matter afforded by milk necessarily connected with the proportion of cream that milk contains, or does it depend upon some other principle, not hitherto investigated? Without pretending to decide this question, I feel myself strongly inclined to believe that it does not depend upon the quantity of cream.

How to Manage Sour Milk.—Take common skimmed milk, when it has begun to turn sour, put it into an upright stand-churn, or a barrel with one of its ends out, or any other convenient vessel. Heat some water and pour it into a tub that is large enough to contain, with ease, the vessel in which the milk was put. Set the vessel containing the milk into the hot water, and let it remain there for the space of one night. In the morning it will be found that the milk has separated into two parts; a thick cream-like substance, which occupies the upper part of the vessel, and a thin watery part, that remains at the bottom. Draw off the thin part, (called here wigg,) by opening a stop-cock, placed for that purpose close above the bottom, and reserve the cream for use. Not much less than half of the milk is thus converted into a sort of cream, which, when well made, seems to be as rich and fat as real cream itself: and is only distinguishable from it by its sourness. It is eaten with sugar, and esteemed a great delicacy, and usually sells at double the price of fresh unskimmed milk. It requires practice, however, to be able to make this nicely; the degree of the heat of the water, and many other circumstances, greatly affecting the operation. These things practice best discovers.

*I once saw a cow that gave milk which could never be made to yield any butter at all, though it had the appearance of being very rich milk.—The person who sold that cow had had her several years, along with a good many others, without having so much as had any suspicion of this peculiarity. It was only discovered when she came into the possession of a person who had no other cow.

†Perhaps also in some measure to the nature of the cows.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 1, 1840.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

1. In every instance where a communication forwarded to us for publication, the proper name must accompany it, or no attention will be paid thereto.

2. Any one who may wish to animadvert upon any of the functionaries of the church, the provisions of the discipline, or any of the exciting topics of the day, must permit us, at our own discretion, to connect his proper name with any communication he may write on any of these subjects.

3. We will cheerfully publish any selected extracts, our friends may desire, not inconsistent with the character of our paper; provided, they will send, addressed to the "Western Recorder" the paper or pamphlet containing them. But, if sent in writing, we cannot attend to them.

4. We are willing to pay postage on the following letters: 1. All that we have especially invited to write for our paper. 2. The communications of the Presidents of the Districts, giving an account of the spiritual condition of their charges. 3. All letters containing at least five new subscribers. 4. All which contain ten dollars cash;—5. or all which contain at least two new subscribers and five dollars cash. If any person wishes an agent to write to us when these terms cannot be complied with, he must advance to such agent the postage of the letter. If these rules are violated, we will notice it on the reception of the letter, so as to bring them to the recollection of our friends.

The Maine Wesleyan Journal and Zion's Watchman are both papers patronized by the members of the M E. church, the former edited by the Rev. Moses Springer, and the latter by the Rev. La Roy Sunderland. This is in favor of Abolitionism, that is opposed thereto. The way these gentlemen quarrel and abuse each other is a caution; though brethren of the same church, they employ, in their controversies with each other the severest epithets. We do not wish to give any opinion on the merits of their difficulty, nor should we meddle with their contest if they did not haul their neighbors into the scrape.

We give the following article from the Watchman of the 21st ultimo. The Boston Olive Branch, alluded to, is a paper edited by a minister of the M. P. church, and has but a limited circulation through this region, whereas Zion's Watchman has considerable; therefore, in justice to our cause we feel bound to notice it. In allusion to the Wesleyan Journal says the Watchman:

"But there is another article in the number of the Journal above named, which shows the editor's abolitionism, and his real love for Episcopal Methodism to admirable advantage. I refer to the one which he quotes from what he calls the 'organ of the Methodist Protestant church in Boston;' a paper which, it is well known, has published some of the severest slanders against the Methodist Episcopal church, that were ever uttered by any of her bitterest foes; charging such men as Dr. Coke, Mr. Asbury, and the founders of the church, with barefaced 'deception, fraud and falsehood!' A paper confessedly so far beneath notice, that no respectable Journal of the M. E. church holds any kind of intercourse with it, and yet from this vehicle of misrepresentation, this determined foe of the Methodist E. church, this slanderer of 'our fathers,' this traducer of the dead, the Maine Wesleyan Journal draws his arrows to level at the character of Zion's Watchman!"

This severity is all endorsed by the editor of the Watchman, in the following language:

"The article referred to above, we thought too low to merit any notice from us. And some of it, it seems, even the M. W. Journal, thought too vile to appear in its columns. The assertions about our having bought the Watchman, &c. are malignant falsehoods.—Ed. Watch."

The Olive Branch is here denounced as a "slanderer of our fathers," a "traducer of the dead," and as being "confessedly beneath notice," &c. &c. Now, if this be the character of that paper, we never want to see it again in our office. But, how are these allegations made out? Why, it is said to have charged Messrs. "Coke and Asbury" with "deception, fraud and falsehood." "Severe" charges these, indeed, but are they true; have these gentlemen been thus guilty? if so, the Olive Branch is clear; if not, it is justly censurable.

Now there is nothing specifically given in the article before us, but we presume it alludes to the old matter of organizing the M. E. church in America. Messrs Coke and Asbury, who were the principal actors in this organization, have placed upon the records of the church, the declaration, that Mr. Wesley "recommended the Episcopal mode of government" for the American Methodists. That Mr. W. ever gave such recommendation has been doubted and denied; and the M. E church has been called on, in every way, to produce the warrant for stating that Mr. Wesley ever gave this recommendation, yet, this warrant, up to the present time, has not been forthcoming. But, as far as negative testimony can prove any proposition, it has been proved that Mr. Wesley never could have given such "recommendation."

Now, brother Editor of the Watchman, that these men were capable of forgery we will prove from your own admission. In your number for October 19th, you say in reference to the rule on slavery, "this rule was not one of Wesley's. It was added by the abolitionists who organized the M. E. church; and it shows how anxious they were to keep slavery out of the church." Thus to add a rule to Mr. Wesley's code, and pass it off under the sanction of his name, was most assuredly forgery. And the men who were capable of doing this, would do the other also; for he that is unjust in that which is little, is unjust also in that which is much. It will not help the matter to say they added this rule under the sanction of Mr. W's name to promote a worthy object, for they could just as easily persuade themselves, that the world would be greatly benefited by their being clothed with the power and the appendages of episcopacy, and of course that it was right in them to use the same sanction in view of the same object.

In reference to Mr. Wesley, he was born an Episcopalian; and in a sermon he wrote in the early part of his life, he said he was in favor of the episcopal mode of government; but in the letter he wrote to the American Methodist church, dated Bristol, September, 1784, he says, "Lord King's account of the primitive church convinced me many years ago, that bishops and presbyters are the same order, and consequently have the same right to ordain." Though Mr. W. was born an Episcopalian, yet he was converted through the instrumentality of his Lordship, and died a Presbyterian in reference to church order. The letter which he wrote to Mr. Asbury, dated London, September, 1788, in which he abjures him by all that is sacred to put away the title of "bishop," is decisive evidence that he never gave his "recommendation" for the adoption of the episcopal mode of government, in this country. His name was only used as a passport to ecclesiastical honors.

Now, my brethren of the Watchman, what is the use of getting in such a pet when these things are prest home upon you? There can be no doubt but that the present government of the M. E. church was surreptitiously got up and imposed on the societies, under the sanction of Mr. Wesley's name. And all these hard words used toward those who tell you of it, discerning men will see, are but the blusterings of conscious guilt. Men of experience know the mouths that want argument are generally filled with abuse.

We have thought our brother Norris was sometimes too severe in stating truth; and we had it in mind several times to rebuke him a little on that subject. But, then we were afraid he would throw back, over the "Alleghenies" upon us, with great truth and force, "physician heal thyself!" So we were mum. But that his paper is so contemptible is altogether a mistake. It is a spirited and ably conducted journal.

We have been inquired of by subscribers how they shall send us the money for our paper. Send, POST PAID, by letter, at our risk. As the Post Master General has decided that "a Post Master may enclose money to pay the subscription of a third person, and frank the letter, if he writes it himself," they could generally get the favor of them to foward the pay. Will our agents also, attend to this matter, if they please?

We have several communications on hand that we will have to defer 'till our next.

COMMUNICATION.

PITTSBURGH, PA., DEC. 24, 1839.

Mr. Editor:—When in Ohio circuit, finding that no missionary work had been reported to our Conference missionary by the superintendents through the Recorder, in answer to my call published some time ago, I gave him additional instructions, so far as he could, compatably with the missionary labors first assigned him, to assist our brethren in the circuits and stations at their protracted meetings. It is probable, therefore, that document, which in your last number, you supposed to be counterfeit, is realy genuine, badly written indeed, informal in its character and not intended when written for publication.—Though, after it was written, I told him it might be best to publish it. Or, what you suppose to be a counterfeit, may be simply, a copy, in Bro. P's own hand writing, of the document I gave him.

I have deemed it a duty to hasten to give this explanation, in view of the great principles of brotherly love, which I very much desire to promote so long as I live. Please insert this communication in the Recorder, so soon as practicable.

And, now while I am writing on this subject, I say again to our brethren, who are superintendents in the circuits and stations, that I sincerely wish them to call the attention of our Conference missionary, through the medium of the Recorder, to any, and all places, where his missionary labors can be advantageously employed,—where churches can be formed and support obtained. And also, let him be called to aid in holding protracted meetings, and assisted as his necessities may require, for why should we make a man Conference missionary, and not try to open his way and sustain him.

Since I last wrote you, my soul has been greatly encouraged. Our brethren Addis and Turner, on Clearfield circuit, had just closed their second protracted meeting when I got there—both were valuable meetings,—a goodly number had been added to the church. I have seen but few better meetings than the one I attended at Mt. Zion meeting house on that circuit. When I left on Monday, eleven members had been received, and the meeting was to be protracted through the week. Clearfield is rising daily.

At the meeting which I attended on the Pittsburgh circuit, at Sharpsburgh, at the opening of their beautiful new meeting house THIRTY-SEVEN members were added to the church, and brother J. Clarke is still continuing the meeting with fine success,—a number have joined since.

In this station there is a very pleasant state of things. Brother Dalbey had been engaged for some time, in a protracted meeting, when I came. The meeting is still in progress—about TWENTY-TWO have been added, and the members of the church in general, are much revived and pretty hearty in the work. So you see, my brother, we have some whole hearted laborers in the vineyard, and thanks be unto God, they do not labor in vain in the Lord. I look for far more exceeding, abundant blessings, to attend the labors of our ministry, than ever heretofore. O for a glorious out-pouring of the Holy Spirit upon the entire Church! Others may predict evil if they will, but my faith has its eye on the good things to come, and my hopes are much revived. Glory be to the Lord our God for ever and ever.

Yours, truly,

GEORGE BROWN.

Tho. Humphrey, of Montgomery county, N. Y., has recovered $4000 damages from Dr. James Anderson for a libellous pamphlet, published by the latter, charging the former with certain crimes and misdemeanors.

ITEMS.

FINE SPEED.—On Wednesday last, the Rail Road cars ran from Philadelphia to Baltimore in five hours and three quarters.

Mrs. Barbary Emmett, of York, Pa. aged 81, was burnt to death on the 28th ultimo, by her clothes taking fire, while she was standing near the mouth of a stove.

A silk convention assembled at Lancaster, Pa. a few days since. and was addressed by the Hon. Calvin Blithe and several other gentlemen. Measures were taken to promote both the culture and manufacture of silk.

Matthew Carey says, that in 14 years he has lost by endorsing between thirty and forty thousand dollars, and was once brought to the verge of stopping! He cautions young tradesmen against endorsing.

The Iron Steamer Valley Forge arrived here yesterday from Pittsburgh, and was visited by hundreds of the curious. She has been so often described that we think further effort at description unnecessary.—Wheeling Times.

The Iron Steamer Valley Forge arrived at our wharf on Sunday, and yesterday departed for New Orleans. We understand she was visited by a large number of citizens.—Cincinnati Daily Gazette, 17th Dec.

COAL MINES.—It is estimated that the coal mines of Pennsylvania for 1839, will yield a product worth $5,000,000,000.—We allude as well to the western bituminous coal as to the anthracite.

Moses Hoyt, jr. has been elected Representative from Salem, but as there are three of the name, the good people are sadly troubled to tell which they have chosen. There is a chance for a disputed election.

LIBERAL.—Judge Wilkeson acknowledges the receipt of $280 from Rev. Dr. Sprague of Albany, being a contribution taken in his church for the benefit of the thirty four slaves conditionally emancipated by the will of Mr. H. of Virginia.—N. Y. Jour. of Com.

Mr. Michael E. Israel Cashier of the Western Bank of Philadelphia, went to Camden, N. J. on Tuesday last, where he entered a piece of woods and shot himself. The wound not proving fatal, he returned to Philadelphia in such a state of exhaustion, that his remarks as to the cause of his rash act were incoherent and unsatisfactory.

HONOR TO THE BRAVE.—A sword was presented on Saturday last by the Governor of Delaware to Col. Samuel B. Davis, as a testimonial, from the Legislature of that State, of his gallantry in defending Lewistown from an attack of the British, during the late war. The ceremony of presentation took place in the City Hall of Wilmington.

The Genesee Farmer and Albany Cultivator have been united, since the death of Judge Buel. The Farmer has 18,000 subscribers and the Cultivator 15,000.—The first No. will be issued at Albany on the first January, by J. Buel and Co., under the editorial direction of Willis Gaylord and Luther Tucker, of the Farmer, at $1 a year.

CURIOUS CUSTOM.—In the canton of Castle, in Switzerland, there is a law which compels every new married couple to plant six trees immediately after the ceremony, and two more on the birth of every child. They are planted on commons, frequently near the high road, and the greater part being fruit trees, are at one and the same time both useful and ornamental. The number planted is said to amount to 10,000 annually.

A HEAVY DOSE.—Dr. Brandreth has obtained a verdict for $6,233 against Benjamin B. Muzzey, of Boston, as damages for selling spurious Brandreth's Pills.—Mr. Muzzey can pay the damages and then come off first best, for he has driven nearly as large a business as Brandreth himself during the last two or three years, whilst Brandreth has borne the expenses of advertising.—Baltimore Post.

MISSOURI AND IOWA.—The boundary squabble between the State and Territory is assuming rather a serious character. Our latest dates, by way of St. Louis, are to the effect that the Iowa people had arrested and imprisoned a Missouri sheriff, while in the discharge of his duty; and that Brigadier General Allen and Major General Willock had orders from the Executive of Missouri to march a large force to the frontier. Our latest advices from Iowa are contained in an extra from the Burlington Hawk Eye, which contains statements to the effect that the mail had been detained at the Missouri line by armed force, and that wagons loaded with goods, had been searched and deprived of warlike stores.—Springfield Republican.

A SERIOUS MATTER.—Some three or four years since, a slave escaped from Georgia in a Maine vessel by concealing himself secretly on board. He soon disclosed himself, and was landed in freedom when she reached her northern port. On this state of facts, the Governor of Georgia made a requisition on the Governor of Maine for the surrender of Kelleran and Philbrook, master and mate of the vessel, to be tried for a felony in abetting the escape of a slave. Governor Kent refused to surrender them; and a second application to Gov. Fairfield has met with no better success. Hereupon, a bill is now before the legislature of Georgia which enacts that whenever a citizen of Maine shall be found within the jurisdiction of Georgia, he shall be considered as being there for no other purpose than to steal negroes, and shall be put into the penitentiary! There is very little doubt, we understand, that this bill will become a law.—N. Yorker.

FLORIDA WAR.—A writer in the Charleston Courier, who seems to be familiar with the subject, estimates the cost of a bushel of corn as fed out to the mules used for carrying military stores from Black Creek, at five dollars. It is said that a cargo of oats fed out at Fort Dade, 43 miles from Tampa Bay, cost, when all the items of expenses connected with it were cast up, thirty-five dollars a bushel! Few of our honest yeomanry have had any idea of the sums of money expended in the attempt to drive out the Indians from that last loophole of their retreat, and fewer yet have known that they themselves were every day contributing to supply the money for these enormous expenses, in the form of taxes on the articles of necessity and comfort, which they purchase with the sweat of their brow.—North American.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.—Our readers are no doubt well enough versed in the manner of proceeding in a State Legislature, to predict that ours has as yet, dispatched but little if any business of importance. Every member must have time and opportunity, to show off his talents (if he has any) before he can think of transacting business for constituents. A half dozen speeches per day, for two or three weeks, from each member, about nothing, is hardly sufficient to establish a member's character as an orator, and consequently, we may expect several weeks to elapse before much is done.—There is now a proposition before the Senate to inquire into the expediency of authorizing our State Bank to issue small bills. This proposition meets with a warm opposition but it is thought it will succeed. There is also a proposition to issue State Scrip for the purpose of relieving Contractors on the public works. This measure will probably succeed. In the House the bill to abolish imprisonment for debt, was lost on the final vote.

No doubt remains but all the public works but one, will be suspended, and when that is finished, another taken up, and so until all are completed.—Bloomington Post.

LONG PRAYERS.

I. Long prayers in the pulpit.—Different men vary as to length; some occupying in "the long prayer," ten, some fifteen, some twenty, some thirty, and some even forty and fifty minutes. How long should prayers be? Evidently the length should vary somewhat with circumstances. Common sense teaches that, when an auditory becomes weary, and begins to be restless, changing the position frequently, and sitting down, thus showing that their most fervent prayer is that the minister may find a close soon, he should have stopped before. We shall find if we examine scripture, that there are neither examples nor instructions in favor of long prayers in public. The longest prayer recorded or spoken of, I think, is that of Solomon, at the dedication of the temple, (2 Chr. vi.) which can not have occupied more than fifteen minutes, and I hardly think more than ten. If the instructions of Christ are of any weight on this point, they are at least an admonition to be short.

II. Long prayers in the social meetings.—All the arguments against long prayers in the pulpit will apply to social meetings. And such meetings, if they are what the term indicates, are social, and should not be monopolized by a long prayer. Short prayers, short speeches, and short hymns, are the life of these meetings. It is an outrage of propriety to occupy fifteen minutes in a prayer at such seasons; and yet it is often done.

III. Long prayers in the family.—I have sometimes been in families when I actually dreaded the hour of family prayers. First, a whole chapter is read from the Bible, if sixty verses long, and a mere record of names, and date—no matter, it must be read. Then comes the prayer. Perhaps it is 9 o'clock in the evening, the family all tired and sleepy; and they are held upon their knees until wearied nature yields to the power of sleep. But a few days since an instance of the kind occurred, where prayers are usually from ten to fifteen minutes long. The little fellow felt mortified about it; but I have no doubt who was the most to blame. I can not conceive of the propriety or the use of such unreasonable habits of devotion. It may be replied, that we ought to be willing to hear long prayers. I care not for that; I not only doubt the assertion, but know the practice will never present the Christian duties to those who are not pious, in any other than an unlovely and unattractive aspect. We are not to be driven from Christ, but drawn. Love is the true attractive. Were I to give an opinion as to the length of prayers, I should unhesitatingly say—and reason, experience, and scripture, favor the opinion—that prayers in the pulpit should seldom exceed ten minutes; and in private meetings and families, they should not ordinarily exceed five.

IV. Long prayers in secret.—Pray in secret as long as you please. The example of the good patriarch Jacob, who wrestled with the angel "till the breaking of the day," and of Christ, who frequently went into the deserts and mountains, and prayed all night, will justify you in spending so much time in secret devotions, and I presume that no one will condemn it. The reverse of the above doctrine is too true in practice. The rule, or motto of man, appears to be, long prayers in public, short ones in secret, or none at all. Does not this appear a little pharisaical? Some seem to think they must wander all over creation in public prayers—first a blessing, perhaps, upon the meeting, the church, the impenitent, the pastor, the Sabbath-school, the sailor, the Indian, the missionary, the heathen, "the latter day glory," then back again to the meeting, repeating half they had said before, mixing up all manner of things to make out a good long prayer. Not so did the good patriarchs, Christ, and his apostles, teach. One subject filled their minds, and they presented it earnestly and directly to God. Notice the prayers recorded; they are short, comprehensive, plain, direct, earnest, effectual. Men frequently say that they do not wish to be trammeled by a request that they offer a short prayer; they wish to pray as long as they please. But is it right to feel thus? Who would wish to pray, when the most sincere prayer of the brethren is that he may go through soon? Had he not better retire to his closet, and there wait on God who seeth in secret, and who hath promised to reward him openly? I apprehend that those who make long prayers are not generally aware of the length of time they occupy; and it may be well to suggest that a little more careful attention be given to the time-piece. Some will be greatly surprised at the length of their prayer.—Boston Recorder.

Wholesale Prices Current.

CORRECTED WEEKLY FOR THE WESTERN RECORDER, BY SPERRY & ABBOT,
(Successors to Geo. Reeve & Son,)
Wholesale and Retail Grocers, No. 96, Main St. Zanesville, Ohio.

ARTICLES.		FROM.	TO.
Almonds, hard shell, -	pound.	8	9
" soft shell, - -	"	16	20
Allum, - - - -	"		9
Alspice, - - - -	"		12½
Apples, green picked, -	barrel.	1.12½	1.50
Bacon, Hams, - -	pound.		12½
" Shoulders, - -	"		10
" Sides, - - -	"	10½	11
Beans, white, - - -	bush'l.		1.00
Butter, keg, - -	pound.		12½
Beeswax, - - - -	"	23	25
Brazil Nuts, - - -	"	10	11
Corn, in ear, - - -	bush'l.	31	33
Candles, Sperm, - -	pound	48	49
" Mould, - -	"	22	23
" Dipped, - -	"		14
Coffee, Rio, - - -	"	14	14½
" Java, - - -	"	17	18
" Havana, - -	"		14½
" Laguira, - -	"	15	16½
Cheese, Western Reserve,	"	9	10
" Country, - -	"		8
Copperas, - - -	"	4½	5½
Cinnamon, - - -	"		25
Cloves, - - - -	"		45
Feathers, - - -	"		50
Flaxseed, - - -	bush'l.		62½
Flour, - - - -	barrel.		3.00
Filberts, - - - -	pound.	8	9
Fish—Mackerel, No. 1, -	barrel.
" No. 2,	"	18.50
" No. 3, -	"	14.50
Dry Cod, - -	pound.	6	6½
Herring, - -	box.	1.37	1.50
Ground Ginger, - -	"	13	15
Glass, 7 by 9, - -	box.		3.75
" 8 by 10, - -	"		3.75
" 10 by 12, - -	"		4.75
Hay, - - - -	ton.	7	8
Indigo, - - - -	pound.	1.50	2 25
Leather, Spanish Sole, -	"	26	28
" Country " -	"	26	27
Lead, bar, - - -	"		8
Nutmegs, - - -	"		162½
Madder, - - - -	"	15½	18
Molasses, New Orleans, -	gallon.		65
" West India, -	"	63	65
Oil, Flaxseed, - -	"		112½
" W. Sperm, -	"	1.35	1.45
" Refined whale, - -	"	80	85
Oats, - - - -	bush'l.	18	20
Pepper, - - - -	pound.		12½
Potatoes, - - -	bush'l.	20	22
Plaster Paris, - -	ton.	23.00	2500
Rice, North Carolina, -	pound.		8
Raisins, Bloom, -	box.	3 00	3.25
" Smyrna, - -	"		3.50
" Muscatil. - -	"	2.50	3.00
Soap, Rosin, - - -	pound.		7
" Castile, -	"	19	20
Shot, Nos. 2, 3 and 4, -	bag.		237½
Salt, - - - -	bush'l.	38	40
Sugar, New Orleans, -	pound.	9½	10
" Muscavado, - -	"	8½	10
" White Havana, -	"		15
" Brown " -	"		13½
Tea, Young Hyson, -	"	55	85
" Gunpowder, -	"	70	75
" Imperial, - -	"	65	70
" Black, - - -	"	60	70
Tobacco, Kentucky Twist,	"	15½	17
" Cavendish, -	"	31	44
Tallow, Rendered, - -	"		11
Vinegar, - - - -	barrel.	4.50	6.00
Wheat, - - - -	bush'l.		50

PRICES OF IRON AND NAILS.

BY D. APPLEGATE & CO.

WHOLESALE PRICES.

Bar Iron, assorted sizes,	pound.		6
Round and square, -	"	6¾	10
Nails, 10d, 12d, 16d, 20d,	"		6¾
" 8d and 9d, - -	"		7
" 6d, - - -	"		7½
" 5d, - - -	"		7¾
" 4d, - - -	"		8¼
" 3d, - - -	"		9¼
Retail Nails, by the keg, - -	1 cent advance.
" Iron, - - - - - -	1 " "

PRICE OF CORDAGE.

BY G. L. SHINNICK.

Manilla Bedcords, - -	90 feet.	3 25
" " - -	60 "	2 00
Hemp " - -	90 "	3 00
" " - -	60 "	2 00
Plough Lines, - - -	30 "	1 00

HYMENEAL.

Married—On the 12th November last, by the Rev. James H. Overstreet, Dr. N. Q. HALL, of Jeffersonville, Indiana, to Miss REBECCA WHIPPS, of Jefferson county, Kentucky.

Business Department.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS OF THIS PAPER.

1. In remitting money, give the person's name to whom credit is to be given, the State in which he lives, and the Post-office where he receives his paper.

2. In forwarding subscribers, be careful to give the Post-office, county and State, where the papers are to be sent, writing the name, office and county in a fair hand.

3. When a paper is to be transferred, give the place whence it is to be taken, as well as the place where it is to be directed.

4. In all cases where moneys are paid for papers, receipts should be taken; without these we shall consider our subscribers responsible. Experience in conducting a paper, has shown us that attention to this rule is essentially necessary to secure justice to a publisher.

5. Our paper is $2 per annum on the reception of the first No. On the first opportunity, therefore, be so good as to hand this amount to an agent, or remit, post paid, (except $10 be sent) by mail, at our risk. If any of our agents have made different stipulations with subscribers as it respects the time of payment, we cheerfully abide their arrangement. But in all other cases, and in future, we shall expect our "Terms" to be complied with. This will be absolutely necessary to enable us to continue our paper.

Credits will be given in our paper for the moneys we have received.

☞All the travelling preachers are considered agents for this paper.

GRANGER, O., DEC. 17, 1839.

Bro. Springer: Could it be possible for you to send me 40 or 50 Hymn Books, and 15 or 20 Disciplines, for our people want them badly? If not, please let me know where I can get them, and oblige

Yours, R. BAMFORD.

We have no books,—they are kept in Baltimore;—a letter addressed to the Book Committee of the M. P. church there, would find the establishment.

CORRECTIONS.

We send a paper to Mr. Ellis, Harrison, Hamilton; a friend writes us he is of opinion that is a mistake;—he thinks the paper should be addressed to Obediah Ellis, Preston, Hamilton, Ohio. Will Bro. Simpson please inform us?

We gave notice some time since that after sending a paper to J. Shull and two others up to the 14th No. to Tuscarawas, &c, O., the P. M. gave us notice there were no such persons in his vicinity. We received a note the other day from the Post Master at Plainfield, Ohio, that J. Shull and J. Pinkerton did not take their papers from that office, and that he knew of no such persons. It is probable that this is the same J. Shull as above. Here are five names that one brother has sent us in error, if the Post Masters be correct. The paper alone that we have sent to these has cost us seventy-five cents—this is pretty hard boring. Will Bro. Warren inform us about these names.

We have been sending a paper from the commencement to Wm. Cox, Pittsburg, Pa., being so directed. Some time since the P. M. of that place informed us this paper was not taken from the office;—within a few days we received a letter from the P. Master at Wilkins that there is where this paper should have been sent.

DELINQUENTS.

The Post Master at Morgantown, Va., informs us that N. Carr, after receiving our paper up to this date has left the State; he has not paid us.

Bro. Beatty, of Alleghenytown, Pa., says, "B. Grey subscribed for the Recorder, and left this before the arrival of the first number. I sent his paper to him, but they are returned by the P. M." A man who will act thus must be dishonest.

RECEIVED PAY FOR FIRST VOL. RECORDER.

Of A. Hamilton, ...	$1 00
Per M. Jared,
W. Johnson, ...	1 00
Per J. Beatty, ...	1 00
For T. H. Gibson and R. Milligan, in full, having received $1 before.
Per T. M'Ilroy,
J. Saunders, ...	1 00
Per G. Clancy, ...	3 00
For J. Wells, and one on account.
Per W. Marshall,
P. B. Sarchit, ...	2 00
Of J. Martin, six months, . . .	1 00
Per J. Burns,
R. H. Halsted, ...	2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

M. Jared, J. C. W. Gure, J. Beatty, T. M'Ilroy, R. Bamford, W. Marshall, A. C. Barnes, I. W. Francis, N. B. Madera, J. Degarmo, A. H. Bassett, G. Clancy, J. R. Talentire, J. Burns, VARIETY.

JUDGE MARSHALL.

BY THE HON. C. MURRAY.

"I had read so much extravagant praise of the beauty of Richmond, that I was somewhat disappointed; nevertheless, the view of the city, the rapids, intersected with a thousand Lilliputian islands, and the wooded hills in the background, form a very pleasing picture. The society numbers among its members some of the most distinguished men in the Union; their friendly attention and hospitality to me warrant my assertion that their private and social qualities are by no means inferior to their high public reputation.—The names of Judge Marshall, B. W. Leigh, and Mr. Wickham, are familiar to all who have taken any interest in American law or politics.

"Judge Marshall, who is Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and, in fact, Lord Chancellor of the United States, is one of the most remarkable and distinguished men that has adorned the Legislature of either shore of the Atlantic. He began life as a soldier during the American war; served in the militia, where he rose to the rank of general; after which he came to the bar, and passed through all its gradations to his present high situation, which is, in my opinion, the proudest that an American can enjoy, not excepting that of President; inasmuch as it is less subject 'arbitrio popularis aurœ;' and as the court over which he presides can affirm and decide what is and what is not the Constitution of the United States. The Judge is a tall venerable man, about 80 years of age, his hair tied in a cue, according to olden custom, and with a countenance indicating that simplicity of mind and benignity which so eminently distinguish his character. As a Judge he has no rival, his knowledge being profound, his judgment clear and just, and his quickness in approaching either the fallacy or truth of an argument is surprising. I had the pleasure of several long conversations with him, and was struck with admiration at the extraordinary union of modesty and power, gentleness, and force, which his mind displays. What he knows he communicates without reserve, he speaks with a clearness of expression, and in a tone of simple truth, which compel conviction, and on all subjects on which his knowledge is not certain, or which admit of doubt or arguments, he delivers his opinion with a candid didffience, and with a deference for that of others, almost to timidity; still, it is a timidity which would disarm the most violent opponent, and with respect and credence from any auditor. I remember having observed a similar characteristic attributed to the immortal Newton. The simplicity of his character is not more singular than that of his life; pride, ostentation, and hypocrisy are 'Greek to him,' and he really lives up to the letter and spirit of republicanism, while he maintaines all the dignity due to his age and office.

"His house is small, and more humble in appearance than those of the average of successful lawyers or merchants. I called three times upon him; there is no bell to the door; once I turned the handle of it, and walked in unannounced; on the other two occasions he had seen me coming, and lifted the latch and received me at the door, although he was at the time suffering from some very severe contusions received in the stage while travelling on the road from Fredericksburg to Richmond, which I have before described. I verily believe there is not a particle of vanity in his composition, unless it be of that venial and hospitable nature which induces him to pride himself on giving to his friends the best glass of Maderia in Virginia. In short blending as he does the simplicity of a child and the plainness of a republican with the learning and ability of a lawyer, the venerable dignity of his appearance would not suffer in comparison with that of the most respected and distinguised looking person in the British House of Lords."

WELDING IRON AND STEEL.—Perhaps many of our smiths who have not seen the following may derive some advantage from its perusal.

As iron and steel are compounded more or less with sulphur, copper, and arsenic, which, if they predominate too much, will prevent their being welded sound, it may be of some importance to blacksmiths to know what remedies to apply in such cases. When iron is compounded with sulphur, it is apt to burn before a welding heat can be raised. In this case a little unslacked stone lime, pounded up very fine will absord the sulphur and enable the smith to weld it sound. If but a small quantity of copper enters into the composition of iron, it will render it brittle when hot, and rough when cold. In this case, salt, or sal amoniac, should be used with the sand, which will evaporate the copper and prevent the iron from breaking when it is very hot. Arsenic generally predominates in iron that is very brittle when cold. A small quantity of salt-petre should then be used with the sand for welding. Iron or steel that is entirely free from either of those pernicious substances will work sound, weld with ease, and be very tough when cold. This is what is called good iron. The same may be said of steel.

A fault too often found with blacksmiths is, that their work is not sound, when in fact the fault is in the iron they work. As a little attention to ascertain the qualities of iron, and to apply the proper remedies, will enable them to make their work sound, or, at least, as good as the quality of the iron will admit. In welding iron and steel together for edge tools it will be of service, [at least it can do no harm, even if the iron and steel be ever so good,] to have a little lime, salt, and salt-petre mixed in the sand commonly used in welding. This mixture makes an excellent flux for welding, and at the same time prevents the iron from burning, and enables the smith to raise a sufficient heat to weld it perfectly sound, even to the very centre of the bar.—Mechanic's Magazine.

POWER OF A SWORD FISH.—We yesterday had the pleasure of inspecting a piece of wood, cut out of one of the forplanks of a vessel, the Priscilla, from Pernambucco, now in the port, through which was stuck about eighteen inches of the sword of the sword fish. How it came there needs not to be explained. The force with which it must have been driven in, affords a striking exemplification of the power and ferocity of the fish. The spot in which the vessel was struck was about half way between the commencement of the coppering and keel. Penetrating the copper, the sword had made its way first through the outer plank of Scotch larch, three inches and a half in thickness, then, traversing an open space of ten or twelve inches, it had encountered another plank of oak, and about four inches in thickness, which was also pierced, the point of the sword coming clear through to the other side. What renders this feat the more surprising is that the Priscilla is quite a new vessel, this having been her first voyage. Captain Taylor, her commander, states that when near the Azores, as he was walking the quarter deck at night a shock was felt which brought all hands from below, under the impression that the ship had touched upon a rock. This was, no doubt the time when the occurrence took place. A great number of whales had been seen playing about the vessel the day before, and it is probable that the sword fish, which is a deadly enemy to the whale, had mistaken the Priscilla for one of the objects to which it was in chase; in other words, it had thought her "very like a whale." On the passage home the vessel was observed to leak a great deal, on which account, after discharging her cargo, she was hauled into the Graving Dock, and, having yesterday undergone an examination, the discovery was made to what had happened. The plank had been split as well as pierced, so that, though the sword remained in the aperture it had made, it was not sufficient entirely to keep out the water. —Liverpool Courier.

MILITARY HOSPITAL AFTER A BATTLE.—This awful description is from a new work entitled "Victories of the British Army," by the author of "Stories of Waterloo."

"In the yard of a quinta, or nobleman's house, I looked through the grating and saw about two hundred wounded soldiers waiting to have their limbs amputated, while others were arriving every moment. It would be difficult to convey an idea of the frightful appearance of these men; they had been wounded on the 5th and this was the 7th; their limbs were swollen to an enormous size, and the smell from the gunshot wounds was dreadful. Some were sitting upright against a wall, under the shade of a number of chesnut-trees, and, as many of them were wounded in the head as well as limbs, the ghastly countenances of these poor fellows presented a dismal sight. The streams of gore which had trickled down their cheeks were quite hardened with the sun, and gave their faces a glazed and copper colored hue; their eyes were sunk and fixed, and what between the effects of the sun, of exhaustion, and despair, they resembled more a group of bronze figures then any thing human. There they set, silent and statue-like, waiting for their turn to be carried to the amputation tables. At the other side of the yard lay several whose state was too helpless to sit up; a feeble cry from them occasionally, to those who were passing, for a drink of water, was all they uttered."

EVENING.—When the shadow of evening deepen around and the hum of busy life is for a season hushed into silence, it is the part of wisdom to call home the wandering mind; to forget awhile our connection with earth and its pursuits, and hold converse with that world whose glorious sun never sets, but the Lamb in the midst is the light thereof—where sin cannot enter, where the eye shall never more be suffused with tears, where bewildering care shall never again brood darkly and heavily over the soul.

Is it not enough that the day be devoted to the world? Why should we voluntarily surrender the night also, to its exorbitant demands? The arrangements of infinite wisdom evince to us, that there should be practical withdrawal of the mind from secular pursuits, and seasons have been mercifully allotted to this purpose. As the fond mother gently draws the curtain upon the sweet slumber of her little offspring, so does our Heavenly Father slowly close the shades of night around his wearied children, kindly reminding them that it is time to retire from the strife of earthly care and toil, and seek, in refreshing social intercourse, and quiet repose, new vigor for the labors of the ensuing day.

But thoughtless man often turns this peaceful hour into a season of sensual and riotous indulgence. Whilst the twilight yet lingers in the horizon, the painted enchantress throws her portals invitingly open, and as the shades deepen around, the unthinking multitude crowd her unhallowed vestibule, and sacrifice at her shrine the hours designed for noble and holy purposes. They steal from Heaven and consecrate the theft to the god of this world. How infinitely more delightful and worthy the powers of a rational soul, to retire from the tumult and strife and vanity of this perishable world, and in the hallowed stillness of the eventide, raise the social altar, and upon it offer to Him, in whom we live and breathe and move, the incense of humble gratitude for all His mercies—and there bending low in prayer, present the heart in warm supplication before Him who has promised to listen to the cry of his needy children, and not despise their prayer.—Blessed, animating employment—it assimilates us to heaven, and to that holy brotherhood whose prayers on earth are changed to praise in the abodes of ineffable light. We taste of the streams of that river which flow through the city of New Jerusalem, and anticipate that glorious day, fast hastening on the wings of time, when we shall wander along its verdant banks, and strike our harps of living melody to the song which swells through the mansions of the redeemed.

"There the bright and blest
Are crowned forever 'midst that shining band,
Gathered to Heaven's own wreath from ev'ry land,
Our spirits shall find rest." N. Y. Luminary.

THE DEATH OF A MOTHER.—I remember vividly the circumstance of her departure. Consumption had already done its powerful work. Unlike many who are smitten with this disease, she preferred to die in the bosom of her family. Why should the stag pierced to the heart in its own thickets, seek refuge in the deeper glades, to bleed to death? It is a wrong idea, this, of searching in a land of strangers for health which is "clean gone forever"—how many are thus yearly cut down in the midst of their wanderings! In some desolate chamber they lie in the agonies of death. No soft hand presses their brow, no familiar voice whispers in the ear; no cherished friend performs their funeral obsequies. Death is indeed bitter under such circumstances, being without its usual allevations. It is a sweet consolation to die at home:

"On some fond breast the parting soul relies,
Some pious drops the closing eye requires;
Even from the tomb the voice of nature cries,
Even in our ashes live their wonted fires."

There is something dreadful, yet beautiful in consumption. It comes stealing so softly and so silently. It comes too, in the garb of mockery and deception, and clothes its victims in beautiful garments for the grave. The hectic flush, the snowy brow, the brilliant eye; who could believe that these were death's precusors, the signet of the conqueror! It invests the patient with a preternatural patience and sweetness under suffering, keeping alive at the same time in her breast, the illusion of hope. Even in her moments of keenest suffering, she looks forward to days of returning happiness, and while the worm is forever preying at the core, and her slender form becomes each day more feeble and attenuate, she hails before her a gilded prospect, and the mind and spirits are buoyant with the thought. But when the final struggle has at last commenced, how sublime is the spectacle. To behold the immortal mind, so calm, so tranquil, and so triumphant; waxing brighter, while the tenement which contains it is but a poor fleshless skeleton; to behold the eye beeming with undiminished lustre towards the objects of its affection, until the soul at last bursting the charnel vault which has too long confined it, takes one triumphant bound. Then is the body still and silent. The feather is unruffled by the breath, and the glass retains its polish; for the dust has returned to dust again and the spirit unto God who gave it.

It was a tempestuous night. The rain poured down in torrents. The lightning gleamed luridly. At midnight I entered the apartment. A solitary taper gleamed dismally on the hearth. The forms of those in the room appeared like gloomy shadows, flitting to and fro. A stifled sob, and the ticking of a watch on the table, were the only sounds, and they struck like a barbed arrow to my heart. I observed her hand beckoning. Her head was raised with pillows. A smile shot from her glazing eyes. She essayed to speak. I bent down my head with eagerness, to catch the last whispering of her voice. There was a pause. She made a signal to those around her to suppress their emotions as they valued her last legacy. The sobs ceased, the groans were scarcely audible, and the tear stood still upon the cheek of the mourner.—"Ah! that kind," she began in a voice as soft as music—Nature must have her course. The fountains of grief were too full. They burst the barriers which prudence would have fain erected, and poured forth in a torrent, sweeping all before them. A cry, long, loud, and piercing filled the apartment. She cast back a look of sorrowful reproach.

She arose in the couch. A paroxysm of coughing seized her. She writhed for a moment in convulsive agonies, and then fell back upon the pillow. A gleam of lightning, bright, dazzling, appalling, shot through the casement. She was DEAD! "Let us pray!" exclaims the reverened pastor; and with one accord the assembly knelt down, while, at the noon of night, he offered up a fervent prayer. It was short but clothed in the poetic language of the scriptures. It spoke of the silver chord being loosed, and the golden bowl being broken. It was finished. We arose from our knees, cast one look at the emanciated form of the departed, and left the apartment.—Knickerbocker.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Youth's Cabinet.

EDITED BY N. SOUTHARD.

Prospectus of vol. III. Commencing Jan. 2, '40.

THIS paper which was begun without a subscriber, has existed two years, in the midst of a host of competitors, securing many friends, and receiving the warm commendation of about one hundred editors, and many parents and teachers.

"You have no idea of the eagerness with which my little girl gets your paper," said a father a few days ago. "It would be a grand thing to introduce as a reading book into common schools," said a distinguished laborer in the cause of education.

"It is just such a paper as we desire to have placed weekly in the hands of our children," says the Christian Herald. "We have never known a paper in which children take so deep an interest," says the Waldo (Maine) Gazette.

"We have seen no paper expressly devoted to the young, which combines with more felicity amusement and sound principles," says the Bristol (R. I.) Phenix.

Its object is to do the greatest possible good to the hearts and minds of its young readers, in the most pleasing manner. To accomplish this object an increasing list of subscribers will enable the editor to devote an increasing amount of time and attention, while a number of able correspondents among the friends of the young at home, and missionaries abroad, will give it variety and interest.

Its engravings, which average two or three each week, are not intended merely to please the fancy, but illustrate truth, convey instruction, and deepen good impressions.

While it is confidently presented to the favorable notice of all who love the improvement of the young, it has special claims on those who desire the immediate extinction of all forms of oppression, and who believe the best security for our own liberties is a sacred regard for the rights of others.

It is published weekly at No. 9, Spruce street, New York, and No. 25, Cornhill, Boston, at only $1 per year in advance; ten copies for 8 dollars; twenty copies for 14 dollars; thirty copies for 18 dollars.

All editors who wish to promote the great objects of the Cabinet, are requested to favor us by giving this one or two insertions.

Our exchange list having swelled so as greatly to tax our time and means, we shall be constrained to confine it mostly to those who show us this kindness. Jan. 1, 1840. 19

The Casket,

AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

THE unparalleled success which has attended the Casket since it has come into the hands of the new proprietors, induces them to begin a volume with still further attractions on the first of January next. Its literary character, which has called forth so many comments, will undergo no change, as it will continue under the control of the same editors. Several new contributors, however, of high talent, has been engaged beside those who have already been enlisted in its favor. The Magazine will be enlarged, and will contain a greater quantity of reading matter than any periodical published at the same price in this country.

The work will appear in a new and beautiful type, cast expressly for the purpose, and will be printed on the finest paper. It will also be ornamented with the finest steel engravings, provided at a heavy expense, and executed from the choicest designs. To vary the style of these illustrations, the services of distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish at intervals, mezzotints for the ensuing volume. The heads of several distinguished American writers will appear in the course of the year. The publishers, determined to leave nothing undone to merit the patronage of a liberal public, have resolved, after much solicitation from many of their fair readers, to publish quarterly, as an extra, a correct plate of the latest fashion, highly colored, and executed in the first style of the art. This department will be under the control of a French gentleman, of much taste and experience, and will be found to excel any thing ever attempted in this line in America. The extra in the November number, may be considered a fair specimen of what these fashion plates will be. The music department, as heretofore, will be under the charge of Messrs. G. W. Hewitt & Co., and the fine pieces of copyright music which they have hitherto furnished are sufficient guarantee for the future

The flattering terms in which the Casket has been noticed by the journals in every section of the Union, establish beyond a doubt its claims to support generally. It will surpass any other work in the return it gives for the readers' money.

TERMS: Three dollars per annum, invariably in advance, or two copies for five dollars.

All communications to be addressed, post paid, to GEORGE R. GRAHAM & Co.,
December 30, 1839. Philadelphia.

P. S.—Editors publishing this Prospectus will be entitled to a copy of the Casket during the volume. No exchange is solicited, except when noticing the reception of the Magazine.

For Sale.

LARGE MAPS of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations, Land Districts, Townships, &c. engraved from the government surveys and plans in the General Land Office, Washington city, by E. Gilman, Draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. TAYLOR, Book Seller, Washington city, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are published on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State, as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Offices relative to water courses, township lines, Indian Land Reservations, Land Districts, &c., and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in these points. They can be sent to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. Price $2, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for $5. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or any who will buy to sell again. Dec. 10, 1839. 3t16

☞Editors of newspapers any where who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it to the advertiser.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.
Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Cloverseed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

Bicknell's Detector.

MONEY and business matters have increased to such an extent in this country, that we shall soon find it impossible to give an accurate and detailed account of all the Banking Institutions and Counterfeit Bank Notes within the limits of the thirty-two pages of our monthly pamphlet Detector. We propose therefore to increase the size of that publication sixteen pages in each number. We must either do one of two things, publish an imperfect and incomplete Detector, or enlarge our limits. We have determined upon the latter course, unwilling to do injustice to the public, and anxious as heretofore, to issue the only perfect sheet of the kind in the United States. We cannot do this however, without some increase in price; and hence we shall be compelled to charge $1 50 per annum for the enlarged Detector, instead of $1, the price of our present publication. We promise to make very considerable improvements, to give in addition to the present information, the names of the Cashiers of the various Banks as far as they can be ascertained—to renew the type, to obtain better paper, and, in short, to render our monthly accurate in every particular, and entitled in a still greater degree to the confidence so generously reposed in it by the public. The increase in the price, however, may not give satisfaction to all, although it must be apparent to every individual, that in enlarging and improving, we shall necessarily be compelled to increase our expenses to a very considerable extent. Such, however, as are unwilling to receive the enlarged Detector at $1 50 per annum, will be good enough to notify us to that effect, immediately after receiving the first number of the new volume. We may add, those who subscribe to the Weekly Reporter, in addition to the Monthly Detector, will continue to be furnished with the latter at $1 per annum. We are anxious to do every thing in our power to retain our entire list, as well as to secure new patrons; and would make no increase in price, but we find on calculating the impossibility of publishing the enlarged and improved monthly, at the existing rates. Deeply grateful for liberal patronage enjoyed, we shall still keep on the even tenor of our way, exerting every energy to render both the Reporter and Detector acceptable, as well as useful and instructive. MATHEW T. MILLER,

No. 76 South Third-street, Philadelphia.
November 21, 1839. 14

New York Mirror.

☞THE PRESENT VOLUME.

THE conductors of the New York Mirror are determined that no periodical in the world shall exceed this in the interest and variety of its literary contents, the elegance and finish of its pictorial embellishments, the beauty and popularity of its music, and the neatness and superiority of its typographical appearance.

The number for the 19th of October is adorned with one of the most costly and magnificent steel engravings ever published in this or any other country. It is a representation of the "Landing at Jamestown," painted and designed by Chapman, and engraved by Danforth, two American artists of whom their country may be justly proud.

This is the third exquisite engraving that has already appeared in the present volume of the Mirror, the first number of which was issued on the first of July last, all the numbers of which can be supplied to new subscribers, if immediate application be made.

The New York Mirror is the oldest, and unquestionably, the cheapest periodical, extant.—Every number contains a great variety of useful, interesting and amusing matter, on every subject connected with polite literature and the fine arts; and they form, at the end of the year, an immense volume of four hundred and sixteen imperial quarto pages, with vignette title-page, table of contents, splendid engravings, and fifty pieces of popular music, arranged for the piano-forte, guitar, &c.—a library in itself—and all this is afforded at the very trifling cost of five dollars a year, a sum almost inadequate for the extraordinary equivalent rendered to subscribers.

Six superb engravings (including three now issued) will be given, engraved by Danforth, Parker, etc. from original designs and portraits by Weir, Inman, Chapman, etc.

A number of curious etchings on wood will also be published in the present volume, engraved by Adams, Anderson, Johnson, etc. from original designs.

Nothing shall be left undone to render this work, in its literary character, its engravings, its music, and its typography, equal, if not superior, to any periodical of the day.

CONDITIONS.—The Mirror is published every Saturday, at No. 1, Barclay-street, next door to Broadway. It is elegantly printed in the extra super-royal quarto form, with brevier, minion and nonpariel type. It is embellished once every three months, with a SPLENDID SUPER-ROYAL QUARTO ENGRAVING, and every week with a popular piece of MUSIC, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, etc. For each volume an exquisitely engraved VIGNETTE TITLE-PAGE, and a copious INDEX, are furnished. The terms are $5 per annum, payable, in all cases, IN ADVANCE.

December 10, 1839. 3t16

Dr. A. W. Knight,

(Formerly of Philadelphia, but for the last six years in Muskingum county, Ohio,)

HAS removed to MT. STERLING, and now respectfully tenders his professional services to the citizens of this place and the surrounding country: he may at all times be found, when not absent on professional business, at his residence. He hopes that undivided attention to the duties of his profession, together with an experience derived from twelve years' practice of the various branches of a profession, and part of that time in the Philadelphia Hospital as one of the house physicians, will enable him to merit and receive a liberal share of public patronage.

Mt. Sterling, Ohio, Oct. 31, 1839. 11tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

Brother Jonathan.

THE LARGEST PAPER IN THE WORLD.

THE proprietors of this sheet—the "Great Western" among the newspapers, have the pleasure of spreading before the reading public a weekly periodical containing a greater variety and amount of useful and entertaining miscellany, than is to be found in any similar publication in the world.

Each number of the paper contains as large an amount of reading matter as is found in volumes of ordinary duodecimo, which cost two dollars—and more than is contained in a volume of Irving's Columbus, or Bancroft's History of America, which cost three dollars a volume—and all for SIX CENTS a number, or Three Dollars a year.

BROTHER JONATHAN being a genuine Yankee, and thinking that some things can be done as well as others, is determined to present his readers a MEDLEY hitherto unrivalled by any other paper of Anecdotes, Amusements, Allegories, Accidents, Biography, Bon Mots, Conversation, Crimes, Dramatics, Drolleries, Erratics, Essays, Eloquence, Facetia, Geography, History, Jests, Learning, Morality, Marvels, Music, News, Novelties, Oratory, Poetry, Philosophy, Quiddities, Religion, Romance, Sports, Spectacles, Sorrows, Sufferings, Tales, Trials, Truths, Teachings, Wisdom, Wonders, Wit, &c. &c.

As a family newspaper, BROTHER JONATHAN will be found to present attractions beyond any other.

——"He comes the herald of a noisy world,
News from all nations lumbering at his back."

The earliest intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, and the latest novelties of the Literary World, will be promptly served up for the gratification of the reader.

Strictly neutral in politics, it will contain nothing in favor or against any party, and will as seduously avoid any of the controversies which agitate the religious community. Strict morality, temperance, industry and good order, benevolence, and usefulness to our common country and our fellow men, will be advocated and in every page of Brother Jonathan.

TERMS OF BROTHER JONATHAN—Three Dollars a year in advance.

For five dollars two copies will be sent one year, or one copy two years.

The EVENING TATTLER is published every day at the same office, and is put to press at meridian, in season for the great Northern, Eastern and Southern mails, which all close about two o'clock, P. M.

☞All country papers who give this prospectus three insertions, will be entitled to an exchange, on sending a number of their paper to this office containing the advertisement.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed postage paid to

GRISWOLD & COMPANY,
162 Nasau-street New York city.
November 14, 1839. 13

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1840. Number 20.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 8, 1840.

President's Message.

Fellow-citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

I regret that I cannot, on this occasion, congratulate you that the past year has been one of unalloyed prosperity. The ravages of fire and disease have painfully afflicted otherwise flourishing portions of our country; and very serious embarrassments yet derange the trade of many of our cities. But, notwithstanding these circumstances, that general prosperity which has been heretofore so bountifully bestowed upon us by the Author of all good, still continues to call for our warmest gratitude. Especially have we reason to rejoice in the exuberant harvests which have lavishly recompensed well-directed industry, and given to it that sure reward which is vainly sought in visionary speculations. I cannot indeed view, without peculiar satisfaction, the evidences afforded by the past season of the benefits that spring from the steady devotion of the husbandman to his honorable pursuit. No means of individual comfort is more certain, and no source of national prosperity is so sure. Nothing can compensate a people for a dependance upon others for the bread they eat: and that cheerful abundance on which the happiness of every one so much depends, is to be looked for no where with such sure reliance as in the industry of the agriculturalist and the bounties of the earth.

With foreign countries, our relations exhibit the same favorable aspect which was presented in my last annual message and afford continued proof of the wisdom of the pacific, just and forbearing policy adopted by the first administration of the Federal Government, and pursued by its successors. The extraordinary powers vested in me by an act of Congress, for the defence of the country in an emergency, considered so far probable as to require that the Executive should possess ample means to meet it, have not been exerted. They have, therefore, been attended with no other result than to increase, by the confidence thus reposed in me, my obligations to maintain, with religious exactness, the cardinal principles that govern our intercourse with other nations. Happily, in our pending questions with Great Britain, out of which this unusual grant of authority arose, nothing has occurred to require its exertion; and as it is about to return to the legislature, I trust no future necessity may call for its exercise by them, or its delegation to another department of the government.

For the settlement of our north eastern boundary, the proposition promised by Great Britain for a commission of exploration and survey, has been received, and a counter project, including also a provision for the certain and final adjustment of the limits in dispute, is now before the British Government for its consideration. A just regard to the delicate state of this question and a proper respect for the natural impatience of Maine not less than a conviction that the negotiation has already been protracted longer than is prudent on the part of either Government, have led me to believe that the present favorable moment should on no account be suffered to pass without putting the question forever at rest. I feel confident that the Government of her Britannic Majesty will take the same view of this subject, as I am persuaded it is governed by desires equally strong and sincere for the amicable termination of the controversy.

To the intrinsic difficulties of questions of boundary lines, especially those described in regions unoccupied and but partially known, is to be added in our country the embarrassment necessarily arising out of our Constitution, by which the General Government is made the organ of negotiating and deciding upon the particular interests of the States on whose frontiers these lines are to be traced. To avoid another controversy in which a State Government might rightfully claim to have her wishes consulted, previous to the conclusion of conventional arrangement concerning her rights of jurisdiction or territory, I have thought it necessary to call the attention of the Government of Great Britain to another portion of our conterminous dominion, of which the division still remains to be adjusted. I refer to the line from the entrance of Lake Superior to the most north western point of the Lake of the Woods, stipulations for the settlement of which are to be found in the seventh article of the treaty of Ghent. The commissioners appointed under that article by the two Governments having differed in their opinions, made separate reports, according to its stipulations, upon the points of disagreement, and these differences are now to be submitted to the arbitration of some friendly sovereign or State. The disputed points should be settled, and the line designated, before the territorial government, of which it is one of the boundaries, takes its place in the Union as a State; and I rely upon the cordial co-operation of the British Government to effect that object.

There is every reason to believe that disturbances like those which lately agitated the neighboring British Provinces will not again prove the sources of border contentions, or interpose obstacles to the continuance of that good understanding which it is the mutual interest of Great Britain and the United States to preserve and maintain.

Within the Provinces themselves tranquility is restored, and on our frontier that misguided sympathy in favor of what was presumed to be a general effort in behalf of popular rights, and which in some instances misled a few of our more inexperienced citizens, has subsided into a rational conviction strongly opposed to all intermeddling with the internal affairs of our neighbors. The people of the U. S. feel, as it is hoped they always will, a warm solicitude for the success of all who are sincerely endeavoring to improve the political condition of mankind. This generous feeling they cherish towards the most distant nations; and it was natural, therefore, that it should be awakened with more than common warmth in behalf of their immediate neighbors. But it does not belong to their character, as a community, to seek the gratification of those feelings in acts which violate their duty as citizens, endanger the peace of their country, and tend to bring upon it the stain of a violated faith towards foreign nations. If, zealous to confer benefits on others, they appear for a moment to lose sight of the permanent obligations imposed upon them as citizens, they are seldom long misled. From all the information I receive confirmed, to some extent, by personal observation, I am satisfied that no one can now hope to engage in such enterprises without encouraging public indignation, in addition to the severest penalties of the law.

Recent information also leads me to hope that the emigrants from her Majesty's Provinces, who have sought refuge within our boundaries, are disposed to become peaceable residents, and to abstain from all attempts to endanger the peace of that country which has afforded them an asylum. On a review of the occurrences on both sides of the line, it is satisfactory to reflect, that in almost every complaint against our country, the offence may be traced to emigrants from the Provinces who have sought refuge here. In the few instances in which they were aided by the citizens of the United States, the acts of these misguided men were not only in direct contravention of the laws and well known wishes of their own Government, but met with the decided disapprobation of the people of the United States.

I regret to state the appearance of a different spirit among her Majesty's subjects in the Canadas. The sentiments of hostility to our people and institutions, which have been so frequently expressed there, and the disregard of our rights which have been manifested on some occasions, have, I am sorry to say, been applauded and encouraged by the people, and even by some of the subordinate local authorities of the Provinces. The chief officers in Canada fortunately have not entertained the same feeling, and have probably prevented excesses that must have been fatal to the peace of the two countries.

I look forward anxiously to a period when all the transactions which have grown out of this condition of our affairs, and which have been made the subjects of complaint and remonstrance by the two Governments respectively, shall be fully examined, and the proper satisfaction given where it is due from either side.

Nothing has occurred to disturb the harmony of our intercourse with Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Naples, Portugal, Prussia, Russia, or Sweeden. The internal state of Spain has sensibly improved and a well grounded hope exists that the return of peace will restore to the people of that country their former prosperity, and enable the Government to fulfil all its obligations at home and abroad. The Government of Portugal, I have the satisfaction to state, has paid in full the eleventh and last instalment due to our citizens for the claims embraced in the settlement made with it on the 3d of March, 1837.

I lay before you treaties of commerce negotiated with the Kings of Sardinia and of the Netherlands, the ratifications of which have been exchanged since the adjournment of Congress. The liberal principles of these treaties will recommend them to your approbation. That with Sardinia is the first treaty of commerce formed by that kingdom, and it will, I trust, answer the expectations of the present sovereign, by aiding the developement of the resources of his country and stimulating the enterprise of his people. That with the Netherlands happily terminates a long existing subject of dispute, and removes from our future commercial intercourse all apprehension of embarrassment. The King of the Netherlands has also, in further illustration of his character for justice, and of his desire to remove every cause of dissatisfaction, made compensation for an American vessel captured in 1800 by a French privateer, and carried into Curacan, where the proceeds were appropriated to the use of the colony, then, and for a short time after, under the dominion of Holland.

The death of the late Sultan has produced no alteration in our relations with Turkey. Our newly appointed Minister Resident has reached Constantinople, and I have received assurances from the present Ruler that the obligations of our treaty, and those of friendship, will be fulfilled by himself in the same spirit that actuated his illustrious father.

I regret to be obliged to inform you that no convention for the settlement of the claims of our citizens upon Mexico has yet been ratified by the Government of that country. The first convention formed for that purpose was not presented by the President of Mexico for the approbation of its Congress, from a belief that the King of Prussia, the arbitrator in case of disagreement in the joint commission to be appointed by the United States and Mexico, would not consent to take upon himself that friendly office.—Although not entirely satisfied with the course pursued by Mexico, I felt no hesitation in receiving in the most conciliatory spirit the explanation offered, and also cheerfully consented to a new convention, in order to arrange the payments proposed to be made to our citizens, in a manner which, while equally just to them, was deemed less enormous and inconvenient to the Mexican Government. Relying confidently upon the intentions of that Government, Mr. Ellis was directed to repair to Mexico, and diplomatic intercourse has been resumed between the two countries. The new convention has, he informs us, been recently submitted by the President of that Republic to its Congress, under circumstances which promise a speedy ratification; a result which I cannot allow myself to doubt.

Instructions have been given to the Commissioner of the United States under our Convention with Texas, for the demarcation of the line which separates us from that Republic. The commissioners of both Governments met in New Orleans in August last. The joint commission was organized, and adjourned to convene at the same place on the 12th of October. It is presumed to be now in the performance of its duties.

The new Government of Texas has shown its desire to cultivate friendly relations with us, by a prompt reparation for injuries complained of in the cases of two vessels of the United States.

With Central America a convention has been concluded for the renewal of its former treaty with the United States.—This was not ratified before the departure of our late Charge d'Affairs to send a special agent to Central America, to close the affairs of our mission there, and to arrange with the Government an extension of the time for the exchange of ratifications.

The commission created by the States which formerly composed the Republic of Columbia, for adjusting the claims against that Government, has, by a very unexpected construction of the treaty under which it acts, decided that no provision was made for those claims of citizens of the United States which arose from captures by Columbian privateers, and were adjudged against the claimants in the judicial tribunals. This decision will compel the United States to apply to the several Governments formerly united for redress. With all these—New Granada, Venezuela, and Ecuador, a perfectly good understanding exists. Our treaty with Venezuela is faithfully carried into execution, and that country, in the enjoyment of tranquility, is gradually advancing in prosperity under the guidance of its present distinguished President, General Paez. With Ecuador, a liberal commercial convention has lately been concluded, which will be transmitted to the Senate at an early day.

With the great American Empire of Brazil relations continue unchanged, as does our friendly intercourse with the other Governments of South America—the Argentine Republic and the Republics of Uruguay, Chili, Peru and Bolivia.—The dissolution of the Peru Bolivian Confederation may occasion some temporary inconvenience to our citizens in that quarter, but the obligations on the new Governments which have arisen out of that Confederation to observe its treaty stipulations, will no doubt be soon understood, and it is presumed that no indisposition will exist to fulfil those which it contracted with the United States.

The financial operations of the Government during the present year have, I am happy to say, been very successful. The difficulties under which the Treasury Department has labored from known defects in the existing laws relative to the safe keeping of the public moneys, aggravated by the suspension of specie payments by several of the banks holding public deposites, or indebted to public officers for notes received in payment of public dues, have been surmounted to a very gratifying extent. The large current expenditures have been punctually met, and the faith of the Government in all its pecuniary concerns has been scrupulously maintained.

The nineteen millions of Treasury notes authorized by the act of Congress of 1837, and the modifications thereof, with a view to the indulgence of merchants on their duty bonds, and of the deposite banks in the payment of public moneys held by them, have been so punctually redeemed as to leave less than the original ten millions outstanding at any one time, and the whole amount unredeemed now falls short of three millions. Of these the chief portion is not due till next year, and the whole would have been already extinguished could the Treasury have realized the payments due to it from the banks. If those due from them during the next year shall be punctually made, and if Congress shall keep the appropriations within the estimates, there is every reason to believe that all the outstanding Treasury notes can be redeemed and the ordinary expenses defrayed, without imposing on the people any additional burden, either of loans or increased taxes.

To avoid this, and to keep the expenditures within reasonable bounds, is a duty second only in importance to the preservation of our national character, and the protection of our citizens in their civil and political rights. The creation, in time of peace, of a debt likely to become permanent, is an evil for which there is no equivalent. The rapidity with which many of the States are apparently approaching to this condition, admonishes us of our own duties, in a manner too impressive to be disregarded. One, not the least important, is to keep the Federal Government always in a condition to discharge with ease and vigor, its highest functions, should their exercise be required by any sudden conjuncture of public affairs—a condition to which we are always exposed, and which may occur when it is least expected. To this end, it is indispensable that its finances should be untrammelled, and its resources, as far as practicable, unincumbered. No circumstance could present greater obstacles to the accomplishment of these vitally important objects, than the creation of an onerous national debt. Our own experience, and also that of other nations, have demonstrated the unavoidable and fearful rapidity with which a public debt is increased, when the Government has once surrendered itself to the ruinous practice of supplying its supposed necessities by new loans. The struggle, therefore, on our part, to be successful, must be made at the threshold. To make our efforts effective, severe economy is necessary. This is the surest provision for the national welfare; and it is, at the same time the best preservative of the principles on which our institutions rest. Simplicity and economy in the affairs of state have never failed to chasten and invigorate Republican principles, while these have been as surely subverted by national prodigality, under whatever specious pretext it may have been introduced or fostered.

These considerations cannot be lost upon a people who have never been inattentive to the effect of their policy upon the institutions they have created for themselves; but at the present moment their force is augmented by the necessity which a decreasing revenue must impose. The check lately given to importations of articles subject to duties, the derangements in the operations of internal trade, and especially the reduction gradually taking place in our tariff of duties, all tend materially to lessen our receipts; indeed it is probable that the diminution resulting in the last cause alone, will not fall short of five millions of dollars, in the year 1842, as the final reduction of all duties to twenty per cent. then takes effect. The whole revenue then accruing from the customs, and from the sales of public lands, if not more, will undoubtedly be wanted to defray the necessary expenses of the Government under the most prudent administration of its affairs. These are circumstances that impose the necessity of rigid economy, and require its prompt and constant exercise. With the Legislature rest the power and duty of so adjusting the public expenditure as to promote this end. By the provisions of the Constitution, it is only in consequence of appropriations made by law, that money can be drawn from the Treasury; no instance has occurred since the establishment of the Government in which the Executive, though a competent part of the Legislative power, has interposed an objection to an appropriation bill on the sole ground of its extravagance. His duty in this respect has been considered fulfilled by requesting such appropriations only as the public service may be reasonably expected to require. In the present earnest direction of the public mind towards this subject, both the Executive and the Legislature have evidence of the strict responsibility to which they will be held; and while I am conscious of my own anxious efforts to perform with fidelity this portion of my public functions, it is a satisfaction to me to be able to count on a cordial co-operation from you.

At the time I entered upon my present duties, our ordinary disbursements—without including those on account of the public debt, the post office, and the trust funds in charge of the Government—had been largely increased by appropriations for the removals of the Indians, for repelling Indian hostilities, and for other less urgent expenses which grew out of an overflowing Treasury. Independent of the redemption of the public debt and trusts, the gross expenditures of seventeen and eighteen millions in 1834 and 1835 had, by these causes, swelled to twenty-nine millions in 1836; and the appropriations for 1837, made previously to the 4th of March, caused the expenditure to rise to the very large amount of thirty-three millions.—We were enabled during the year 1838, notwithstanding the continuance of our Indian embarrassments, somewhat to reduce this amount; and that for the present year, 1839, will not in all probability exceed twenty-six millions, or six millions less than it was last year. With a determination so far as depends on me to continue this reduction, I have directed the estimates for 1840 to be subjected to the severest scrutiny, and to be limited to the absolute requirements of the public service. They will be found less than the expenditures of 1839 by over five millions of dollars.

The precautionary measures which will be recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury, to protect faithfully the public credit under the fluctuations and contingencies to which our receipts and expenditures are exposed, and especially in a commercial crisis like the present, are commended to your early attention.

On a former occasion your attention was invited to various considerations in support of a pre-emption law in behalf of the settlers on the public lands; and also of a law graduating the prices for such lands as had long been in the market unsold, in consequence of their inferior quality. The execution of the act which was passed on the first subject has been attended with the happiest consequences, in quieting titles, and securing improvements to the industrious; and it has also, to a very gratifying extent, been exempt from the frauds which were practised under previous pre-emption laws. It has, at the same time, as was anticipated, contributed liberally during the present year to the receipts of the Treasury.

The passage of a graduation law, with the guards before recommended, would also, I am persuaded, add considerably to the revenue for several years, and prove in other respects just and beneficial.

Your early consideration of the subject is, therefore, once more earnestly requested.

The present condition of the defences of our principle seaports and navy yards, as represented by the accompanying report of the Secretary of War, calls for the early and serious attention of Congress; and, as connecting itself intimately with this subject, I cannot recommend too strongly to your consideration the plan submitted by that officer for the organization of the militia of the United States.

In conformity with the expressed wishes of Congress, an attempt was made in the spring to terminate the Florida war by negotiation. It is to be regretted that these humane intentions should have been frustrated, and that the effort to bring these unhappy difficulties to a satisfactory conclusion should have failed. But, after entering into solemn engagements with the Commanding General, the Indians, without any provocation, re-commenced their acts of treachery and murder. The renewal of hostilities in that Territory renders it necessary that I should recommend to your favorable consideration the plan which will be submitted to you by the Secretary of War, in order to enable that department to conduct them to a successful issue.

Having had an opportunity of personally inspecting a portion of the troops during the last summer, it gives me pleasure to bear testimony to the success of the effort to improve their discipline, by keeping them together in as large bodies as the nature of our service will permit. I recommend, therefore, that commodious and permanent barracks be constructed at the several posts designated by the Secretary of War. Notwithstanding the high state of their discipline and excellent police, the evils resulting to the service from the deficiency of company officers, were very apparent, and I recommend that the staff officers be permanently separated from the line.

The navy has been usefully and honorably employed in protecting the rights and property of our citizens, wherever the condition of affairs seemed to require its presence. With the exception of one instance, where outrage, accompanied by murder, was committed on a vessel of the United States while engaged in lawful commerce, nothing is known to have occurred to impede or molest the enterprise of our citizens on that element where it is so signally displayed. On learning this daring act of piracy, Commodore Reed proceeded immediately to the spot, and receiving no satisfaction, either in the surrender of the murderers, or the restoration of the plundered property, inflicted severe and merited chastisement on the barbarians.

It will be seen by the report of the Secretary of the Navy respecting the disposition of our ships of war, that it has been deemed necessary to station a competent force on the coast of Africa to prevent a fraudulent use of our flag by foreigners.

Recent experience has shown that the provisions in our existing laws which relate to the sale and transfer of American vessels while abroad, are extremely defective. Advantage has been taken of these defects to give to vessels wholly belonging to foreigners, and navigating the ocean, an apparent American ownership. This character has been so well simulated as to afford them comparative security in prosecuting the slave trade, a traffic emphatically denounced in our statutes, regarded with abhorrence by our citizens, and of which the effectual suppression is no where more sincerely desired than in the United States. These circumstances make it proper to recommend to your early attention a careful revision of these laws, so that, without impeding the freedom and facilities of our navigation, or impairing an important branch of our industry connected with it, the integrity and honor of our flag may be carefully preserved. Information derived from our Consul at Havaga, showing the necessity of this, was communicated to a committee of the Senate near the close of the last session, but too late, as it appeared, to be acted upon. It will be brought to your notice by the proper department, with additional communications from other sources.

The latest account from the Exploring Expedition represent it as proceeding successfully in its objects, and promising results no less useful to trade and navigation than to science.

The extent of post roads covered by mail service on the 1st of July last, was about 133,999 miles, and the rate of annual transportion upon them 34,495,878 miles. The number of post offices on that day was 12,780, and on the 30th ultimo, 13,028.

The revenue of the Post Office Department for the year ending the 30th of June last, was $4,476,638—exhibiting an increase over the preceding year of $241,560. The engagements and liabilities of the department for the same period are $4,624,117.

The excess of liabilities over the revenue for the two last years has been met out of the surplus which had previously accumulated. The cash on hand on the 30th ultimo, was about $206,701 95, and the current income of the department varies little from the rate of current expenditures. Most of the service suspended last year has been restored, and most of the new routes established by the act of 7th of July, 1838, have been set in operation at the annual cost of $136,963. Notwithstanding the pecuniary difficulties of the country, the revenue of the department appears to be increasing; and unless it shall be seriously checked by the recent suspension of payment by so many of the banks, it will be able not only to maintain the present mail service, but in a a short time to extend it. It is gratifying to witness the promptitude and fidelity with which the agents of this department in general perform their public duties.

Some difficulty have arisen in relation to contracts for the transportation of the mails by rail-road and steam boat companies. It appears that the maximum of compensation provided by Congress for the transportation of the mails upon railroads is not sufficient to induce some of the companies to convey them at such hours as are required for the accommodation of the public. It is one of the most important duties of the General Government to provide and maintain for the use of the people of the States the best practicable mail establishment. To arrive at that end it is indispensable that the Post Office Department shall be enabled to control the hours at which the mails shall be carried over railroads, as it now does over all other roads. Should serious inconveniences arise from the inadequacy of the compensation now provided by law, or from unreasonable demands by any of the railroad companies, the subject is of such general importance as to require the prompt attention of Congress.

In relation to steam boat lines, the most efficient remedy is obvious, and has been suggested by the Post Master General. The War and Navy Departments already employ steam boats in their service, and although it is by no means desirable that the Government should undertake the transportation of passengers or freight as a business, there can be no reasonable objection to running boats, temporarily, whenever it may be necessary to put down attempts at extortion, to be discontinued as soon as reasonable contracts can be obtained.

The suggestions of the Post Master General relative to the inadequacy of the legal allowance to witnesses in cases of prosecutions for mail depredations; merit your serious consideration. The safety of the mails requires that such prosecutions shall be efficient, and justice to the citizen whose time is required to be given to the public, demands not only that his expenses shall be paid, but that he shall receive a reasonable compensation.

The reports from the War, Navy and Post Office Departments will accompany this communication, and one from the Treasury Department will be presented to Congress in a few days.

For various details in respect to the matters in charge of these departments, I would refer you to those important documents, satisfied that you will find in them many valuable suggestion, which will be found well deserving the attention of the Legislature.

From a report made in December of last year by the Secretary of State, to the Senate, showing the trial docket of each of the Circuit Courts, and the number of miles each judge has to travel in the performance of his duties, a great inequality appears in the amount of labor assigned to each judge. The number of terms to be held in each of the courts composing the ninth circuit, the distances between the places at which they sit, and from thence to the seat of Government, are represented to be such as to render it impossible for that circuit to perform, in a manner corresponding with the public exigencies, his term and circuit duties. A revision therefore, of the present arrangement of the circuits seem to be called for and is recommended to your notice.

I think it proper to call your attention to the power assumed by the Territorial Legislatures to authorize the issue of bonds by corporate companies on the guarantee of the Territory. Congress passed a law in 1836, providing that no act of a Territorial Legislature incorporating banks should have force of law, until approved by Congress, but acts of a very exceptionable character previously passed by the Legislature of Florida, were suffered to remain in force, by virtue of which bonds may be issued to a very large amount by those institutions, upon the faith of the Territory. A resolution intending to be a joint one passed the Senate at the same session, expressing the sense of Congress that the laws in question ought not to be permitted to remain in force unless amended in many material respects, but it failed in the House of Representatives for want of time, and the desired amendments have not been made. The interests involved are of great importance, and the subject deserves your early and careful attention.

The continued agitation of the question relative to the best mode of keeping and disbursing the public money, still injuriously affects the business of the country. The suspension of specie payments in 1839, rendered the use of deposite banks, as prescribed by the act of 1836, a source rather of embarrassment than aid, and of necessity placed the custody of most of the public moneys afterwards collected in charge of the public officers.—The new securities for its safety, which this required were a principal cause of my convening an extra session of Congress; but in consequence of a disagreement between the two Houses, neither then, nor at any subsequent period, has there been any legislation on the subject. The effort made at the last session to obtain the authority of Congress to punish the use of public money for private purposes as a crime, a measure attended under other Governments with a signal advantage, was unsuccessful, from diversities of opinion in that body, notwithstanding the anxiety doubtless felt by it to afford every practicable security.

The result of this is still to leave the custody of the public money without those safeguards which have been for several years earnestly desired by the Executive; and as the remedy is only to be found in the action of the Legislature, it imposes on me the duty of again submitting to you the propriety of passing a law providing for the safe keeping of the public moneys, and especially to ask that its use for private purposes by any officers entrusted with it, may be declared to be a felony, punishable with penalties proportioned to the magnitude of the offence.

These circumstances added to known defects in the existing law, and unusual derangement in the general operations of trade, have during the last three years, much increased the difficulties attendant on the collection, keeping, and disbursement of the revenue, and called forth corresponding exertions from those having them in charge. Happily these have been successful beyond expectation.—Vast sums have been collected and disbursed by the several departments with unexpected cheapness and ease, transfers have been readily made to every part of the Union, however distant; and defalcations have been far less than might have been anticipated, from the absence of adequate legal restraints. Since the officers of the Treasury and Post Office Departments were charged with the custody of most of the public moneys received by them, there have been collected sixty-six millions of dollars, and excluding the case of the late Collector at New York, the aggregate amount of losses sustained in the collection cannot, it is believed exceed sixty thousand dollars. The defalcation of the late collector at that city, of the extent and circumstances of which Congress has been fully informed, ran through all the modes of keeping the public money that have been hitherto in use, and was distinguished by an aggravated disregard of duty that broke through the restraint of every system, and cannot therefore, be usefully referred to as a test of the comparative safety of either. Additional information will also be furnished by the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, in reply to a call made upon that officer by the House of Representatives at the last session, requiring detailed information on the subject of defaults by public officers or agents under each Administration from 1789 to 1837. This document will be submitted to you in a few days. The general results (independent of the Post Office, which is kept separately and will be stated by itself,) so far as they bear upon this subject are, that the losses which have been and are likely to be, sustained by any class of agents, have been —the greatest by banks, including as required in the resolution, their depreciated paper received for public dues; that the next largest have been by disbursing officers, and the least by collectors and receivers. If the losses on duty bonds are included, they will be three-fold those by both collectors and receivers. Our whole experience, therefore, furnishes the strongest evidence that the desired legislation of Congress is alone wanting to insure in those operations the highest degree of security and facility. Such also appear to have been the experience of other nations. From the results of inquiries made by the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to the practice among them, I am enabled to state that in twenty-two out of twenty-seven foreign Governments from which undoubted information has been obtained, the public moneys are kept in charge of public officers. This concurrence of opinion in favor of that system is perhaps as great as exists on any question of internal administration.

In the modes of business and official restraints on disbursing officers, no legal change was produced by the suspension of specie payments. The report last referred to will be found to contain also much useful information in relation to this subject.

I have heretofore assigned to Congress my reasons for believing that the establishment of an Independent National Treasury, as contemplated by the Constitution, is neccessary to the safe action of the Federal Government. The suspension of specie payments in 1837, by the banks having the custody of the public money, showed in so alarming a degree our dependence on those institutions for the performance of duties required by law, that I then recommended the entire dissolution of that connection. This recommendation has been subjected, as I desired it should be, to severe scrutiny and animated discussion; and I allow myself to believe that, notwithstanding the natural diversities of opinion which may be anticipated on all subjects involing such important considerations, it has secured in its favor as general a concurrence of public sentiment as could be expected on one of such magnitude.

Recent events have also continued to develope new objections to such a connection. Seldom is any bank, under the existing system and practice, able to meet, on demand, all its liabilities for deposites and notes in circulation. It maintains specie payments, and transacts profitable business, only by the confidence of the public in its solvency; and whenever this is destroyed, the demands of its depositors and noteholders—pressed more rapidly than it can make collections from its debtors—force it to stop payment.—This loss of confidence with its consequences occurred in 1837, and afforded the apology of the banks for their suspension. The public then acquiesced in the validity of the excuse; and, while the State Legislatures did not exact from them their forfeited charter, Congress, in accordance with the recommendation of the Executive, allowed them time to pay over the public money they held, although compelled to issue Treasury notes to supply the deficiency thus created.

It now appears that there are other motives than a want of public confidence under which the banks seek to justify themselves in a refusal to meet their obligations. Scarcely were the country and Government relieved, in a degree, from the difficulties occasioned by the general suspension of 1837, when a partial one, occurring within thirty months of the former, produced new and serious embarrassments, though it had no palliation in such circumstances as were alleged in justification of that which had previously taken place. There was nothing in the condition of the country to endanger a well managed banking institution; commerce was deranged by no foreign war; every branch of manufacturing industry was crowned with rich rewards; and the more than usual abundance of our harvests, after supplying our domestic wants, had left our granaries and store-houses filled with a surplus for exportation. It is in the midst of this, that an irredeemable and depreciated paper currency is entailed upon the people by a large portion of the banks. They are not driven to it by the exhibition of a loss of public confidence, or of a sudden pressure from their depositors or note holders, but they excuse themselves by alleging that the current of business, and exchange with foreign countries, which draws the precious metals from their vaults, would require, in order to meet it, a larger curtailment of their loans to a comparatively small portion of the community, than it will be convenient for them to bear, or perhaps safe for the banks to exact. The plea has ceased to be one of necessity. Convenience and policy are now deemed sufficient to warrant these institutions in disregarding their solemn obligations. Such conduct is not merely an injury to individual creditors, but it is a wrong to the whole community, from whose liberality they hold most valuable privileges—whose rights they violate, whose business they derange, and the value of whose property they render unstable and insecure. It must be evident that this new ground for bank suspensions, in reference to which their action is not only disconnected with, but wholly independent of, that of the public, gives a character to their suspensions more alarming than any which they exhibited before, and greatly increases the impropriety of relying on the banks in the transactions of the Government.

A large and highly respectable portion of our banking institutions are, it affords me unfeigned pleasure to state, exempted from all blame on account of this second delinquency. They have, to their great credit, not only continued to meet their engagements, but have even repudiated the grounds of suspension now resorted to. It is only by such a course that the confidence and good will of the community can be preserved, and, in the sequel, the best interests of the institutions themselves promoted.

New dangers to the banks are also daily disclosed from the extension of that system of extravagant credit of which they are the pillars. Formerly our foreign commerce was principally founded on an exchange of commodities, including the precious metals, and leaving in its transactions but little foreign debt. Such is not now the case. Aided by the facilities afforded by the banks, mere credit has become too commonly the basis of trade. Many of the banks themselves, not content with largely stimulating this system among others, have usurped the business, while they impair the stability of the mercantile community: they have become borrowers instead of lenders; they establish their energies abroad; they deal largely in stocks and merchandise; they encourage the issue of State securities until the foreign market is glutted with them; and, unsatisfied with the legitimate use of their own capital and the exercise of their lawful privileges, they raise, by large loans, additional means for every variety of speculation. The disasters attendant on this deviation from the former course of business in this country, are now shared alike by banks and individuals, to an extent of which there is perhaps no previous example in the annals of our country.

So long as a willingness of the foreign lender, and a sufficient export of our productions to meet any necessary partial payment, leave the flow of credit undisturbed, all appears to be prosperous; but as soon as it is checked by any hesitation abroad, or by any inability to make payment there in our productions, the evils of the system are disclosed. The paper currency which might serve for domestic purposes, is useless to pay the debts due in Europe. Gold and silver are therefore drawn, in exchange for their notes, from the banks. To keep up their supply of coin, these institutions are obliged to call upon their own debtors, who pay them principally in their own notes, which are as unavailable to them as they are to the merchants to meet the foreign demand. The calls of the banks, therefore, in such emergencies, of necessity, exceed that demand, and produce a corresponding curtailment of their accommodations and of the currency, at the very moment when the state of trade renders it most inconvenient to be borne. The intensity of this pressure on the community is in proportion to the previous liberality of credit and consequent expansion of the currency; forced sales of property are made at the time when the means of purchasing are most reduced, and the worst calamities to individuals are only at last arrested, by an open violation of their obligations by the banks, a refusal to pay specie for their notes, and an imposition upon the community of a fluctuating and depreciated currency.

These consequences are inherent in the present system. They are not influenced by the banks being large or small, created by National or State governments. They are the results of the irresistable laws of trade and credit. In the recent events which have so strikingly illustrated the certain effects of these laws, we have seen the bank of the largest capital in the Union, established under a National charter, and lately strengthened, as we were authoritatively informed, by exchanging that for a State charter, with new and unusual privileges—in a condition too, as it was said, of entire soundness and great prosperity—not merely unable to resist these effects, but the first to yield to them.

Nor is it to be overlooked that there exists a chain of necessary dependence among these institutions which, obliges them, to a great extent, to follow the course of others, notwithstanding its injustice to their own immediate creditors, or injury to the particular community in which they are placed. This dependence of a bank, which is in proportion to the extent of its debts for circulation and deposites, is not merely on others in its own vicinity, but on all those which connect it with the centre of trade. Distant banks may fail, without seriously affecting those in our principal commercial cities; but the failure of the latter is felt at the extremities of the Union. The suspension at New York, in 1837, was every where, with very few exceptions, followed, as soon as it was known; that recently at Philadelphia immediately affected the banks of the South and West in a similar manner. This dependence of our whole banking system on the institutions in a few large cities, is not found in the laws of their organization, but in those of trade and exchange. The banks at that centre to which currency flows, and where it is required in payments for merchandize, hold the power of controlling those in regions whence it comes, while the latter possesses no means of restraining them; so that the value of individual property, and the prosperity of trade, through the whole interior of the country, are made to depend on the good or bad management of the banking institutions in the great seats of trade on the seaboard.

But this chain of dependence does not stop here. It does not terminate at Philadelphia or New York. It reaches across the ocean, and ends in London, the centre of the credit system. The same laws of trade, which give to the banks in our principal cities power over the whole banking system of the United States, subject the former, in their turn, to the money power in Great Britain. It is not denied that the suspension of the New York banks in 1837, which was followed in quick succession throughout the Union, was produced by an application of that power; and it is now alledged, in extenuation of the present condition of so large a portion of our banks, that their embarrassments have arisen from the same cause.

From this influence they cannot now entirely escape, for it has its origin in the credit currencies of the two countries; it is strengthened by the current of trade and exchange, which centres in London, and is rendered almost irresistible by the large debts contracted there by our merchants, our banks, and our States. It is thus that an introduction of a new bank into the most distant of our villages, places the business of that village within the influence of the money power in England. It is thus that every new debt which we contract in that country, seriously affects our own currency, and extends over the pursuits of our citizens its powerful influence. We cannot escape from this by making new banks, great or small, State or National. The same chains which bind those now existing to the centre of this system of paper credit, must equally fetter every similar institution we create. It is only by the extent to which this system has been pushed of late, that we have been made fully aware of its irresistible tendency to subject our own banks and currency to a vast controlling power in a foreign land; and it adds a new argument to those which illustrate their precarious situation.

Endangered in the first place by their own mismanagement, and again by the conduct of every institution which connects them with the centre of trade, in our own country, they are yet subjected, beyond all this, to the effect of whatever measures policy, necessity, or caprice, may induce those who control the credits of England to resort to. I mean not to comment upon these measures present or past, and much less to discourage the prosecution of fair commercial dealing between the two countries, based on reciprocal benefits; but it having now been made manifest that the power of inflicting these and similar injuries, is, by the resistless law of a credit currency and credit trade, equally capable of extending their consequences through all the ramifications of our banking system, and by that means indirectly obtaining, particularly when our banks are used as depositories of the public money, a dangerous political influence in the United States, I have deemed it my duty to bring the subject to your notice, and ask for it your serious consideration.

Is an argument required beyond the exposition of these facts, to show the impropriety of using our banking institution as depositories of the public money? Can we venture not only to encounter the risk of their individual and mutual mismanagement, but, at the same time, to place our foreign and domestic policy entirely under the control of a foreign moneyed interest? To do so is to impair the independence of our Government, as the present credit system has already impaired the independence of our banks. It is to submit all its important operations, whether of peace or war, to be controlled or thwarted at first by our own banks, and then by a power abroad greater than themselves. I cannot bring myself to depict the humiliation to which this Government and people might be sooner or later reduced, if the means for defending their rights are to be made dependent upon those who may have the most powerful of motives to impair them.

Nor is it only in reference to the effect of this state of things on the independence of our government or of our banks, that the subject presents itself for consideration; it is to be viewed also in its relations to the general trade of our country. The time is not long past when a deficiency of foreign crops was thought to afford a profitable market for the surplus of our industry; but now we await with feverish anxiety the news of the English harvest, not so much from motives of commendable sympathy, but fearful lest its anticipated failure should narrow the field of credit there. Does not this speak volumes to the patriot? Can a system be beneficent, wise or just, which creates greater anxiety for interests dependent on foreign credit, than for the general prosperity of our own country, and the profitable exportation of the surplus produce of our labor?

The circumstances to which I have thus adverted appear to me to afford weighty reasons, developed by late events, to be added to those which I have on former occasions offered, when submitting to your better knowledge and discernment the propriety of separating the custody of the public money from banking institutions. Nor has any thing occurred to lessen, in my opinion, the force of what has been heretofore urgued. The only ground on which that custody can be desired by the banks, is the profitable use which they may make of the money. Such use would be regarded in individuals as a breach of trust, or a crime of great magnitude, and yet it may reasonably be doubted whether, first and last, it is not attended with more mischievous consequences, when permitted to the former than to the latter. The practice of permitting the public money to be used by its keepers as here, is believed to be peculiar to this country, and to exist scarcely any where else. To procure it here, improper influences are appealed to; unwise connections are established between the Government and vast numbers of powerful State institutions; other motives than the public good are brought to bear both on the Executive and Legislative departments, and selfish combinations, leading to special legislation, are formed. It is made the interest of banking institutions and their stockholders throughout the Union to use their exertions for the increase of taxation and the accumulation of a surplus revenue; and, while an excuse is afforded, the means are furnished for those excessive issues which lean to extravagant trading and speculation, and are the forerunners of a vast debt abroad and a suspension of the banks at home.

Impressed, therefore, as I am, with the propriety of the funds of Government being withdrawn from the private use of either banks or individuals, and the public money kept by duly appointed public agents; and believing, as I do, that such also is the judgment which discussion, reflection and experience have produced on the public mind, I leave the subject with you. It is, at all events, essential to the interests of the community and the business of the Government, that a decision should be made.

Most of the arguments that dissuade us from employing banks, in the custody and disbursement of the public money, apply with equal force to the receipt of their notes for public dues. The difference is only in form. In one instance, the Government is a creditor for its deposites, and in another for the notes it holds. They afford the same opportunity for using the public moneys, and equally lead to all the evils attendant upon it since a bank can safely extend its discounts on a deposite of its notes in the hands of a public officer, as one made in its own vaults. On the other hand it would give to the Government no greater security for, in the case of failure, the claim of the note-holder would be no better than a depositor.

I am aware that the danger of inconvenience to the public, and unreasonable pressure upon sound banks, have been urged as objections to requiring the payment of the revenue in gold and silver.—These objections have greatly been exaggerated. From the best estimates we may safely fix the amount of specie in the country at eighty-five millions of dollars, and the portion of that which would be employed at any one time in the receipts and disbursements of the Government, even if the proposed change were made at once, would not it is now, after a fuller investigation, believed, exceed four or five millions. If the change were gradual, several years would elapse before that sum would be required, with annual opportunities in the mean time to alter the law, should experience prove it to be oppressive or inconvenient. The portions of the community on whose business the change would immediately operate, are comparatively small, nor is it believed that its effect would be in the least unjust or injurious to them.

In payment of duties, which constitute the greater portion of the revenue, a very large proportion is derived from foreign commission houses and agents of foreign manufacturers, who sell the goods consigned to them, generally at auction and after paying the duties out of the avails, remit the rest abroad in specie or its equivalent. That the amount of duties should, in such cases, be also retained in specie, can hardly be made a matter of complaint. Our own importing merchants by whom the residue of the duties is paid are not only peculiarly interested in maintaining a sound currency, which the measure in question will especially promote, but are, from the nature of their dealings, best able to know when specie will be needed, and to procure it with the least difficulty or sacrifice. Residing, too, almost universally in places where the revenue is received, and where the drafts used by the Government for its disbursements must concentrate, they have every opportunity to obtain, and use them in place of specie, should it be for their interest or convenience. Of the number of these drafts and the facilities they may afford, as well as of the rapidity with which the public funds are drawn and disbursed, an idea may be formed from the fact that, of nearly twenty millions of dollars paid to collectors and receivers during the present year, the average amount in their hands at any one time has not exceeded a million and a half; and of the fifteen millions received by the collector of New York alone during the present year, the average amount held by him, subject to draft during each week, has been less than half a million.

The ease and safety of the operations of the Treasury in keeping the public money, are promoted by the application of its own drafts to the public dues. The objection arising from having them too long outstanding, might be obviated, and they yet made to afford to merchants and banks holding them equivalent for specie, and in that way greatly lessen the amount actually required. Still less inconvenience will attend the requirement of specie in purchases of public lands. Such purchases, except when made on speculation, are, in general, but single transactions, rarely repeated by the same person; and it is a fact, that for the last year and a half, during which the notes of sound banks have been received, more than a moiety of these payments has been voluntarily made in specie, being a larger proportion than would have been required in three years under the graduation proposed.

It is moreover a principle than which none is better settled by experience, that the supply of the precious metals will always be found adequate to the uses for which they are required. They abound in countries where no other currency is allowed. In our own States, where small notes are excluded, gold and silver supply their place. When driven to their hiding places by bank suspensions, a little firmness in the community soon restores them in a sufficient quantity for ordinary purposes. Postage, and other public dues have been collected in coin, without serious inconvenience, even in States where a depreciated paper currency has existed for years, and this with the aid of Treasury notes for a part of the time, was done without interruption during the suspension of 1837. At the present moment, the receipts and disbursements of the Government are made in legal currency in the largest portion of the Union —no one suggests a departure from this rule; and if it can be successfully carried out, it will be surely attended with even less difficulty when bank notes are again redeemed in specie.

Indeed I cannot think that a serious objection would any where be raised to the receipt and payment of gold and silver in all public transactions, were it not from an apprehension that a surplus in the Treasury might withdraw a large portion of it from circulation, and lock it up unprofitably in the public vaults. It would not, in my opinion, be difficult to prevent such an inconvenience from occurring; but the authentic statements which I have already submitted to you in regard to the actual amount in the public Treasury at any one time during the period embraced in them, and the little probability of a different state of the Treasury for at least some years to come, seem to render it unnecessary to dwell upon it. Congress, moreover, as I have before observed, will in every year have an opportunity to guard against it, should the occurrence of any circumstances lead us to apprehend injury from this source. Viewing the subject in all its aspects, I cannot believe that any period will be more auspicious than the present for the adoption of all measures necessary to maintain the sanctity of our own engagements, and to aid in securing to the community that abundant supply of the precious metals which adds so much to their prosperity, and gives such increased stability to all their dealings.

In a country so commercial as ours, banks in some form will probably always exist; but this serves only to render it the more incumbent on us, notwithstanding the discouragements of the past, to strive in our respective stations to mitigate the evils they produce: to take from them as rapidly as the obligations of public faith and a careful consideration of the immediate interests of the community will permit, the unjust character of monopolies, to check so far as may be practicable by prudent legislation, those temptations of interest and those opportun for their dangerous indulgence, whic set them on every side, and to co them strictly to the performance of paramount duty, that of aiding the o tions of commerce, rather than consu their own exclusive advantage. T and other salutary reforms, may, it lieved, be accomplished without the lation of any of the great principle the social compact, the observanc which is indispensable to its existe or interfering in any way with the ful and profitable employment of real ital.

Institutions so framed have existed still exists elsewhere, giving to com cial intercourse all necessary facili without inflating or depreciating, the rency, or stimulating speculation. T accomplishing their legitimate ends, t have gained the surest guarantee their protection and encouragement the good will of the community. Am a people so just as ours, the same resu could not fail to attend a similar cou The direct supervision of the banks longs, from the nature of our Gove ment, to the States who authorize the It is to their Legislatures the peo must mainly look for action on that subje But as the conduct of the Federal G ernment, in the management of its re enue has also a powerful, though less i mediate influence upon them, it becon our duty to see that a proper direction given to it. While the keeping of t public revenue in a separate and Indepe dent Treasury, and of collecting it in go and silver, will have a salutary influen on the system of paper credit with whi all banks are connected, and thus aid tho that are sound and well managed, it w at the same time sensibly check such are otherwise, by at once withholding t means of extravagance afforded by t public funds, and restraining them fro excessive issues of notes which they wou be constantly called upon to redeem.

I am aware it has been urged that th control may be best attained and exerte by means of a National Bank. The co stitutional objections, which I am we known to entertain, would prevent me i any event from proposing or assenting t that remedy; but in addition to this, I can not, after past experience, bring myself t think that it can any longer be extensive ly regarded as effective for such a purpose The history of the late National Ban through all its mutations shows that i was not so. On the contrary, it may, af ter a careful consideration of the subject be, I think, safely stated, that at every period of banking excess it took the lead that in 1817 and 1818, in 1823, in 1831 and in 1834, its vast expansions, followe by distressing contractions, led to those o the State institutions. It swelled and maddened the tides of the banking system, but seldom allayed, or safely directed them. At a few periods only was a salutary control exercised, but an eager desire, on the contrary, exhibited for profit in the first place; and if, afterwards, its measures were severe towards other institutions, it was because its own safety compelled it to adopt them. It did not differ from them in principle or in form; its measures emanated from the same spirit of gain; it felt the same temptation to over-issue; it suffered from, and was totally unable to avert, those inevitable laws of trade, by which it was itself affected equally with them; and at least on one occasion, at an early day, it was saved only by extraordinary exertions from the same fate that attended the weakest institution it professed to supervise.

In 1837 it failed, equally with others, in redeeming its notes, though the two years allowed by its charter for that purpose had not expired, a large amount of which remains to the present time outstanding. It is true, that having so vast a capital, and strengthened by the revenue of the Government, it possessed more power; but while it was itself, by that circumstance, freed from the control which all require, its paramount object and inducement were left the same—to make the most for its stockholders, not to regulate the currency of the country. Nor has it, as far as we are advised, been found to be greatly otherwise elsewhere. The national character given to the Bank of England, has not prevented excessive fluctuations in their currency, and it proved unable to keep off a suspension of specie payments, which lasted for nearly a quarter of a century. And why should we expect it to be otherwise? A national institution, though deriving its charter from a different source than the State banks, is yet constituted upon the same principles; is conducted by men equally exposed to temptation; and is liable to the same disasters; with the additional disadvantage that its magnitude occasions an extent of confusion and distress which the mismanagement of smaller institutions could not produce. It can scarcely be doubted that the recent suspension of the United States Bank of Pennsylvania—of which the effects are felt not in that State alone, but over half the Union—had its origin in a course of business commenced while it was a national institution; and there is no good reason for supposing that the same consequences would not have followed, had it still derived its powers from the General Government. It is in vain, when the influences and impulses are the same, to look for a difference in conduct or results. By such creations, we do therefore but increase the mass of paper credit and paper currency, without checking their attendant evils and fluctuations. The extent of power and the efficiency of organization which we give, so far from being beneficial, are in practice positively injurious. They strengthen the chain of dependence throughout the Union, subject all parts more certainly to common disaster, and bind every bank more effectually, in the first instance, to those of our commercial cities, and in the end to a foreign power. In a word, I cannot but believe, that, with the full understanding of the operations of our banking system which experience has produced, public sentiment is not less opposed to the creation of a National Bank for purposes connected with currency and commerce, than for those connected with the fiscal operations of the Government.

Yet the commerce and currency of the country are suffering evils from the operations of the State banks which can not and ought not to be overlooked. By their means, we have been flooded with a depreciated paper, which it was evidently the design of the framers of the Constitution to prevent, when they required Congress to "coin money and regulate the value of foreign coins," and when they forbade the States "to coin money, emit bills of credit, make any thing but gold and silver a tender in payments of debts," or "pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts." If they did not guard more explicitly against the present state of things, it was because they could not have anticipated that the few banks then existing were to swell to an extent which would expell to so great a degree the gold and silver, for which they had provided, from the channels of circulation, and fill them with a currency that defeats the objects they had in view. The remedy for this must chiefly rest with the States from whose legislation it sprung. No good that might accrue in a particular case from the exercise of powers, not obviously conferred on the General Government, would authorize its interference, or justify a course that might, in the slightest degree increase, at the expense of the States, the power of the Federal authorities—nor do I doubt that the States will apply the remedy.

Within the last few years, events have appealed to them too strongly to be disregarded. They have seen that the Constitution, though theoretically adhered to, is subverted in practice; that while on the statute books there is no legal tender but gold and silver, no law impairing the obligations of contracts, yet that in point of fact, the privileges conferred on banking corporations have made their notes the currency of the country; that the obligations imposed by these notes are violated under the impulses of interest or convenience; and that the number and power of the persons connected with these corporations, or placed under their influence, give them a fearful weight when their interest is in opposition to the spirit of the Constitution and laws. To the people it is immaterial whether these results are produced by open violations of the latter, or by the works of a system of which the result is the same. An inflexible execution even of the existing statutes of most of the States, would redress many evils now endured; would effectually show the banks the dangers of mismanagement which impunity encourages them to repeat; and would teach all corporations the useful lesson that they are the subjects of the law and the servants of the people. What is still wanting to effect these objects must be sought in additional legislation; or, if that be inadequate, in such further constitutional grants or restrictions as may bring us back into the path from which we have so widely wandered.

In the meantime, it is the duty of the General Government to co-operate with the States, by a wise exercise of its constitutional powers, and the enforcement of its existing laws. The extent to which it may do so by further enactments, I have already adverted to, and the wisdom of Congress may yet enlarge them. But, above all, it is incumbent upon us to hold erect the principles of morality and law, constantly executing our own contracts in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, and thus serving as a rallying point by which our whole country may be brought back to that safe and honored standard.

Our people will not long be insensible to the extent of the burdens entailed upon them by the false system that has been operating on their sanguine, energetic, and industrious character; nor to the means necessary to extricate themselves from these embarrassments. The weight which presses upon a large portion of the people and the States, is an enormous debt, foreign and domestic. The foreign debt of our States, corporations, and men of business, can scarcely be less than two hundred millions of dollars, requiring more than ten millions of dollars a year to pay the interest. This sum has to be paid out of the exports of the country, and must of necessity cut off imports to that extent or plunge the country more deeply in debt from year to year. It is easy to see that the increase of this foreign debt must augment the annual demand on the exports to pay the interest, and to the same extent diminish the imports; and in proportion to the enlargement of the foreign debt, and the consequent increase of interest, must be the decrease of the import trade. In lieu of the comforts which it now bring us, we might have our gigantic banking institutions, and splendid, but, in many instances, profitless, railroads and canals, absorbing to a great extent, in interest upon the capital borrowed to construct them, the surplus fruits of national industry for years to come, and securing to posterity no adequate return for the comforts which labors of their hands might otherwise have secured. It is not by the increase of this debt that relief is to be sought, but in its diminution. Upon this point, there is, I am happy to say, hope before us; not so much in the return of confidence abroad, which will enable the States to borrow more money, as in a change of public feeling at home, which prompts our people to pause in their career, and think of the means by which debts are to be paid before they are contracted.

If we would escape embarrassment, public and private, we must cease to run in debt, except for objects of necessity, or such as will yield a certain return.—Let the faith of the States, corporations, and individuals, already pledged, be kept with the most punctilious regard. It is due to our national character, as well as to justice, that this should, on the part of each, be a fixed principle of conduct. But it behooves us all to be more chary in pledging it hereafter. By ceasing to run in debt, and applying the surplus of our crops and incomes to the discharge of existing obligations, buying less and selling more, and managing all affairs, public and private, with strict economy and frugality, we shall see our country soon recover from a temporary depression, arising not from natural and permanent causes, but from those I have enumerated, and advanced with renewed vigor in her career of prosperity.

Fortunately for us, at this moment, when the balance of trade is greatly against us, and the difficulty of meeting it enhanced by the disturbed state of our money affairs, the bounties of Providence have come to relieve us from the consequences of past errors. A faithful application of the immense results of the labors of the last season will afford partial relief for the present, and perseverance in the same course will, in due season, accomplish the rest. We have had full experience, in times past, of the extraordinary results which can, in this respect, be brought about in a short period, by the united efforts of a community like ours. Our surplus profits, the energy and industry of our population, and the wonderful advantages which Providence has bestowed upon our country, in its climate, its various productions, indispensable to other nations, will, in due time, afford abundant means to perfect the most useful of those objects, for which the States have been plunging themselves of late in embarrassment and debt, without imposing on ourselves or our children such fearful burdens.

But let it be indelibly engraved on our minds that relief is not to be found in expedients. Indebtedness cannot be lessened by borrowing more money, or by changing the form of the debt. The balance of trade is not to be turned in our favor by creating new demands upon us abroad. Our currency cannot be improved by the creating of new banks or more issues from those which now exist. Although these devices sometimes appear to give temporary relief, they almost invariably aggravate the evil in the end. It is only by retrenchment and reform, by curtailing public and private expenditures, by paying our debts, and by reforming our banking system, that we are to expect effectual relief, security for the future and an enduring prosperity. In shaping the institutions and policy of the General Government so as to promote, so far as it can with its limited powers, these important ends, you may rely on my most cordial co-operation.

That there should have been, in the progress of recent events, doubts in many quarters, and in some a heated opposition to every change, cannot surprise us.—Doubts are properly attendant on all reform; and it is peculiarly in the nature of such abuses as we are encountering, to perpetuate their power by means of the influence they have been permitted to acquire. It is their result, if not their object, to gain for the few an ascendency over the many, by securing to them a monopoly of the currency, the medium through which most of the wants of mankind are supplied—to produce throughout society a chain of dependence which leads all classes to look to privileged associations for the means of speculation and extravagance,—to nourish, in preference to the manly virtues that give dignity to human nature, a craving desire for luxurious enjoyment and sudden wealth, which renders those who seek them dependent on those who supply them—to substitute for republican simplicity and economical habits a sickly appetite for effeminate indulgence, and an imitation of that reckless extravagance which impoverished and enslaved the industrious people of foreign lands; and at last, to fix upon us, instead of those equal political rights, the acquisition of which was alike the object and supposed reward of our revolutionary struggle, a system of exclusive privileges conferred by partial legislation. To remove the influences which had thus gradually grown up among us—to deprive them of their deceptive advantages—to test them by the light of wisdom and truth—to oppose the force which they concentrate in their support—all this was necessarily the work of time, even among a people so enlightened and pure as that of the United States. In most other countries, perhaps, it could only be accomplished through that series of revolutionary movements, which are too often found necessary to effect any great and radical reform; but it is the crowning merits of our institutions, that they create and nourish in the vast majority of our people, a disposition and a power peaceably to remedy abuses which have elsewhere caused the effusion of rivers of blood, and the sacrifice of thousands of the human race.—The result thus far is most honorable to the self-denial, the intelligence, and the patriotism of our citizens; it justifies the confident hope that they will carry thro the reform which has been so well begun, and that they will go still farther than they have yet gone in illustrating the important truth, that a people as free and enlightened as ours, will, whenever it becomes necessary, show themselves to be indeed capable of self-government by voluntarily adopting appropriate remedies for every abuse, and submitting to temporary sacrifices, however great, to insure their permanent welfare.

My own exertions for the furtherance of these desirable objects have been bestowed throughout my official career with a zeal that is nourished by ardent wishes for the welfare of my country, and by an unlimited reliance on the wisdom that marks its ultimate decision on all great and controverted questions. Impressed with the solemn obligations imposed upon me by the Constitution, desirous also of laying before my fellow-citizens, with whose confidence and support I have been so highly honored, such measures as appear to me to conduce to their prosperity; & anxious to submit to their fullest consideration the grounds upon which my opinions are formed, I have on this, as on preceding occasions, freely offered my views on those points of domestic policy that seem, at the present time, most prominently to require the action of the Government. I know that they will receive from Congress that full and able consideration which the importance of the subjects merits, and I can repeat the assurance heretofore made, that I shall cheerfully and readily co-operate with you in every measure that will tend to promote the welfare of the Union.

M. VAN BUREN.

December 2, 1839.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 8, 1840.

We give the President's Message in this number, to the exclusion of most other matter, as we presume many of our readers, who take no other paper, would like to see it.

Congress has got organized at last. Mr. Garland, the clerk of last year, was re-elected. The whole number of votes cast were 231. Mr. G. received 118, Mr. Clark 105, and Mr. C. Mason 6. Mr. R. Dorsey, the late incumbent, was elected Sergeant at Arms. The correspondent of Bicknell's Reporter, says the election of public printer was deferred until the 10th instant.

We were charged by the last Annual Conference with the duty of writing a Petition to the Legislature, in view of procuring an act, to defend the religious community, in the exercise of their rights at protracted and other meetings, &c.—We have procured a copy from our Episcopal Methodist brethren, which has in view the same object, and propose co-operating with them. We will strike a few copies in a day or two, and we hope those to whom they are forwarded will immediately get all the signatures they can and forward them to some member of the legislature.

The Snow.—At Columbus, previous to the 5th instant, there was scarcely enough to cover the ground; here it was about three inches deep. A letter before us dated the 23d ultimo, states it was on an average over two feet at Pittsburgh. Another of the 24th, from Wilmington, Del., says it was 8 or 10 inches deep at that place. In the mountains, it is stated to have fallen from three to five feet. It prevented the arrival of the Eastern mails for more than a week. We had an additional fall in this place on Sabbath evening last, of three or four inches.

A heavy snow storm has visited this city since our last publication. It commenced snowing about nine o'clock on Saturday night, and continued without abatement until Monday morning, the depth, as it remained on a level at the time it ceased, was estimated at 18 inches. The mails, in their arrivals and departures, were much interrupted.—Lyford's (Baltimore) Price Current.

The Snow and the Mails.—The unusual depth to which the snow had fallen, and the yet greater depth to which it had been drifted, in various places on the different thoroughfares, interposed serious obstacles to the transportation of the mails. There was in fact for several days after the snow storm, an almost total cessation of mail intercourse between this and the neighboring cities and towns in every direction. On the rail roads the difficulty was greater than on the other mail routes. In some places, on the former, the snow had drifted to the height of several feet, and frequently brought the locomotives, with the ploughs prefixed to them, to a dead stand; but skill and perseverance at length triumphed over these obstacles, and made good the passage. The arrivals and departures of the mails are now nearly restored, for the most part, to their accustomed regularity. The snow appears to have fallen the deepest northwest of this city. At Harrisburgh it lies about two feet, and something more, in the neighborhood of Gettysburgh, Pa.—Balt. Patriot.

Extract of a letter from Joseph Springer, Esq., dated, Wilmington, Del., Dec. 24th:

"Business seems to be very much flatted down in this country. Tax gathering here, is rather a slow business as well as in some other places; and money is becoming very difficult to obtain. We still get along, in market, on account of change tolerably well, though the merchants grumble a good deal about its scarcity. The charge against the city of Wilmington, for issuing $5000 in shin plasters is incorrect. The Farmers' Bank at Georgetown, issued some, but I understand they are recalling them. A few of these are the only plasters in circulation here. It is said great inconvenience is felt in Philadelphia for the want of small change, but I guess a great deal more for the want of large. Wheat is bringing $1 10, corn 50 cts., oats 28 a 30 cts., pork has ranged in market from 5 50 a 7 00 dolls. No salters buying, except small quantities, in consequence of the low price of pork in the west. Report here, has had it sometimes as low as two dollars and two dollars and fifty cents in Cincinnati. Col. Isaac Pierson and Z. Baily went west, some time since, to salt some; they took, say 20 or 25,000 dollars with them. There has been plenty of Ohio Bacon in Wilmington this summer. Butter brings from 28 to 31, chickens 40 to 56 a pair, geese 70 a 87, turkeys 80 a 100, beef is 6 a 7 dollars on foot."

Ohio Legislature.—The Senate of Ohio, have, by a vote of 18 to 14, "determined to make stockholders of all companies, whatever, liable in their individual capacity for the debts of the company."

A bill was passed in the House on the 31st ultimo, by a vote of 47 to 10, "making the robbing of graves a penitentiary offence."

☞We have a number of communications on hand, which will have to be deferred until our next, perhaps, some of them, longer.

From Bicknells Reporter, Dec. 31, 1839.

FOREIGN NEWS.

We are indebted to the Editors of the New York Herald, for an extra containing late and highly important intelligence from Europe. The advices were received by the packet ship Louis Philippe, in 23 days from Havre. The Paris dates are to Dec. 3d, the Havre to the 4th, London to the 1st, and Liverpool to November 30.

The Blockade of China.—The London Morning Herald states from a source worthy of belief, that Lord Palmerston has addressed a letter to the Ambassador of the United States in London, that her Majesty's government intends to blockade all the ports in the Chinese Empire, and that the circumstances under which this measure has been resolved upon, render it absolutely necessary for Great Britain to take this step. This is a most important movement; for it is most likely that all the British forces in India, flushed with victory from Afghanistan, will march with alacrity to China, and reduce the Emperor to submission and to make recompense. If to this we add the quarrel between Lin and the Emperor, the Chinese Empire is in an unpleasant predicament.

The money markets of London and Paris remain dull, but with little alteration. Cotton is a little lower in Havre.

A Circassian Victory.—Accounts from Odessa state that the Circassians have defeated all the Russian cavalry stationed along the lines of Sandja and the plains of Alazan.

Wales.—The Chartist insurrection on the hills of Glamorgan, Monmouthshire and Brecon, in Wales, still causes considerable uneasiness.

The Marriage of Victoria.—Her Majesty, Victoria, has officially announced to the Privy Council, and they have, by her permission, published the same to her subjects, that it is her intention to ally herself in marriage with the Prince Albert of Saxe Cobourg and Gotha.

Turkey and Egypt.—The Oriental question was considered as good as settled in Paris. According to the current rumor, Mehemet Ali is to be left the hereditary sovereignty of Egypt and Syria, with the enjoyment for life of the government of Candia, which at his death is to revert to the dominion of the Porte.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

Bro. Springer:—This circuit includes but three regular established preaching places: 1st. Bakerstown, a village about sixteen miles north from Pittsburgh, on the Butler turnpike, where our members, scattered though they are over about ten miles of territory, have lately finished one among the very neatest and most commodious houses of worship I have any where seen.—The basement is well finished and fitted up for the accommodation of prayer, class and business meetings, all of which are pretty well sustained, considering the scattered location of members. The second, or principal story is finished in a rich, yet plain style, and will accommodate in the most comfortable manner, about three hundred persons. In this house, we have hitherto had very orderly and solemnly attentive congregations, and many favorable indications, have served to encourage our hopes of future prosperity from the hand of the Lord. I have here, recently, participated in two interesting meetings in behalf of the benighted and oppressed slaves of our country; a society that promises to be effective in the glorious cause of emancipation was organized.

2d. Braddock's Fields—though last in order, I mention here, for reasons which will appear in the sequel. This place, so famed in the history of our country, is about nine miles east of Pittsburgh, and is a neighborhood of intelligent, orderly and generally wealthy citizens. Here we have a large new brick meeting house, all finished, save the plastering, for which it is now in readiness. This society contains some liberal, devoted souls, and several circumstances which mark the present condition of the society, are encouraging to our hopes of better times.

3d. Sharpsburgh—on the Pennsylvania canal, four and a half miles N. E. from Pittsburgh,—a thriving village. Here, our society, which up to last week, numbered fourteen members, have erected a house of worship that is a striking monument of the refined taste and exceeding liberality of the people. What influence the example at Bakerstown may have had in exciting to this praise-worthy enterprise, I know not; but in exactness of symmetry, just proportions and neatness of workmanship this house rather excels.—It was opened, on the 14th instant, for the worship of Almighty God, when our first quarterly meeting, for the current year, commenced in it; and, most truly, did God himself consecrate it by his presence. Such a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord—such clear demonstration that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation, has, I think, been but seldom witnessed in modern times. The congregations were uniformly large; on Sabbath crowded, and while the solemn truths of the Gospel were declared with plain and direct application to the consciences of the people, they were attended by the influences of the convincing Spirit of God; and the sceptical, the profane, the proud and hard hearted, were made to tremble and be disquieted by humiliating and alarming convictions for sin, and so as to be excited to earnest inquiries, "what must we do to be saved." A number of convinced sinners humbled themselves before the Lord, confessing and forsaking their sins, and obtained mercy. Under the influences of the Holy Spirit, they were not only enabled, gladly to receive the "word of salvation," but found peace and joy through believing in the Saviour, and having joined themselves to the Lord and his people, are now boldly professing the truth they once despised, and have delight in attending upon his ordinances, and in keeping his commandments. O may they all be faithful until death! What a delightful interesting sight to good men and angels, to see the altar at one time nearly encircled by young men and women, publicly renouncing the world, and dedicating themselves in the ordinance of baptism, to the Lord that bought them.

The meeting continued five days with unabating interest, when other engagements of brethren G. Brown and J. Beaty, the only ministering brethren in attendance with me, called them off, and being myself utterly disqualified by indisposition and fatigue for farther labors, had of necessity, to bring the meeting to a close. But the brethren continued in prayer to God, and He continued to carry on the work among them. After 2 days' respite I returned, and in visiting, conversation & praying from house to house, thro' the day, and holding public meetings in the church at night, I spent four days more among the people, as clearly witnessing and as sensibly realizing the gracious presence and saving power of God as ever I did in all my life before.—Other duties have now again called me off, but my heart returns in ardent affection and anxious solicitude to the church at Sharpsburgh.

As the result of the meeting, the church has fully quadrupled her numbers and strength, her moral power, which ever consists more in her purity of character and devotedness to God than in her numbers, is, I am persuaded, increased in greater proportion. I would here, for myself and the society, record our grateful remembrance of the faithful and successful labors of those two brethren who came to our assistance.

The Lord seems to favor most graciously our cause in this region. A protracted meeting has lately closed in Pittsburgh, which seems to have resulted in much good to the church. Another is now in a state of successful progression in Alleghany station. May the set time to favor Zion now come. Amen.

Yours, in the Gospel of Liberty.

John Clarke, Sup.

Alleghany, Dec. 26, 1839. Pitt'h. ct.

Xenia, Ohio, Dec. 30, 1839.

Dear Brother Springer:—Having some matter to attend to in relation to your paper, and feeling disposed to cast in my mite to the encouraging of our friends through the medium of the Recorder, to hold on and put their trust in God, for truly He is willing to bless us, even us, tho' a small people.

For the truth of the above, I will give some account of what He has recently done by His word and grace at a protracted meeting which was held at the village of Port William, on Xenia circuit. Our meeting commenced on Saturday the 21st instant, and continued until Friday following. We had the assistance of my old brethren McGuire and Flood, and also brother W. W. Paul, the preacher in charge on Washington circuit, all of whom labored with much zeal and faith in the promises of the Head of the church.

Our meeting being well attended, and the people seeming to pay attention to the preaching of the word of life and salvation, we were encouraged therefore to exert ourselves, God being our helper, that peradventure He might bless our efforts ere our meeting might come to a close, which He did do. Praised be His name. Sinners were brought to bow at the foot-stool of mercy and a number were heard to praise a sin pardoning God who had given them a clean heart and renewed a right spirit within them. During the progress of the meeting we had the pleasure of adding to the church about TWENTY names, all of whom, I pray God, we may meet in glory.

We believe much more might have been done had it been in our power to have continued the meeting; but this we could not do, owing to the fact, that myself and my aged brethren found ourselves too nigh worn out to continue,—and having also, other engagements. O! may God raise up young men to take our places, (for we are near the end of our journey) who will not only be able, but willing to continue a meeting so long as God manifests himself among the people as He did on this occasion.

Pray for me, your almost worn out brother in Christ,

Robert Dobbins.

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 25, 1839.

Brother Springer:—I am very much pleased with the Western Recorder. There is but a small class of Protestant Methodists in this place, though few, we are not cast down. We have passed through many difficulties, but we feel determined to go through many more for the cause we have espoused. Our society has been favored with many good members, but one after another have removed till we are left small in number. Though among this people I have found the pearl of great price about seventeen months ago, yet I too have to leave them and pitch my tent in a distant region. Tho' our number has been small we have found the promises of God verified, "where two or three are met in my name, there will I be in the midst" to bless.

The Episcopal Methodist brethren, of this place, have been putting forth efforts to promote a revival. But they seem divided among themselves. Their meeting house and lot is deeded to the Methodist society in Dayton, and not according to the form of deed in the Discipline. But the preachers are doing their best to get the control over the house. The preacher in charge delivered a lecture, to day, to the society, on church government. He tried to make the people believe that to have a free ecclesiastical government was to have no government at all. He told them there was no better government on earth than the government of the M. E. church; and that a travelling ministry could not be kept up without such a government, &c. &c. &c.

If an itinerancy cannot be kept up without putting all the church property, and all the ecclesiastical right of the laity, at the absolute control of the clergy, what a compliment this must be upon the system. It is really humiliating to hear such miserable stuff attempted to be imposed upon the people in this enlightened age.—Such a system of pretensions will most assuredly, ultimately, be scouted.

Yours, &c. Wm. Fish.

Indiana, Dec. 25, 1839.

Dear Brother:—We have good times on this circuit; fifteen have recently been added to the church. Our preacher, Bro. McMasters, is well received. May the Lord bless the people.

Yours, with respect, J. W. O'Haver.

Sleeping with the Head Covered.—Before the danger of sleeping with the head covered can be rendered sufficiently plain, it will be necessary to state one fact in physiology to which we have not yet adverted.

The same change of the blood from bad to good—from pure to impure—which is effected in the lungs, is effected also, in some degree, on the whole surface of the body. Some insects or worms may be said to breathe entirely on the surface of the body. They have no lungs whatever. As we rise in the scale of existence, to snakes, &c., we begin to find lungs or gills, in which a part of the change of blood to which we allude is effected. Rising still further in the scale of being, we find the lungs larger and larger, and the skin less and less concerned in the change, till we come to man, and some few other animals, in whom the change is almost wholly accomplished by the lungs. Still, we repeat it, the skin, even in man, has some share of the work of renovating the blood, to perform, as may be readily shown by a very simple experiment, like the following:

When a person has lain several hours in a bed, closely covered to the neck with thick covering—say with the modern article called a comfortable—let a candle or lamp be introduced under the clothing, and it will soon be extinguished. The oxygen is so much diminished, and the carbonic acid gas so much increased, as to be incapable of supporting combustion; and by the same rule unfit for respiration. Let it be also distinctly understood that this change is wholly effected without the agency of the breath; though, when the head is covered, it is, of course, accomplished much faster.

This fact, that we breathe, as it were, that is to say, purify the blood and poison the air with the whole surface of our body, as well as by means of the lungs, is of the utmost practical importance. It is of importance to be understood by those on whom we urge the duty of keeping the skin clean; for how can a foul skin—a skin varnished over with dust, perform its delicate and important functions? It is of importance to be understood in order to know how to clothe ourselves; for all those forms and circumstances of our clothing which tend to embarrass or interrupt the action of the skin, in its work of assisting the lungs to purify the blood, are, of course, objectionable. It is, however, of still higher importance that it should be well understood by mothers in the management of their infants, not only in regard to cleanliness and dress, but particularly in regard to sleep.

For, in the first place, the bed clothing ought to be as loose and porous as it can be, and yet at the same time, retain a sufficient amount of heat, in order that the carbonic acid gas may have opportunity to escape, and the purer air to find its way through it. Secondly. The cothes ought to be often thrown open, and the air under them thus exchanged for better. Thirdly. The child ought never to be allowed to sleep with its head under the clothing. Immense is the mischief done in this way, as we have already said, by ignorant parents, and even by those whose fault is more that of carelessness than of ignorance. Fourthly. He should sleep alone as much as possible, either in a bed or a crib, rather than with parents, brothers, sisters, &c. Fifthly.—He should never be permitted to have domestic animals, as favorite dogs or cats, sleep in the bed with him—a practice quite too common in our country—especially that of having a puppy in the bed. The child's body poisons the imprisoned air quite fast enough without any aid from dogs and cats, or from other human bodies; and, above all without being aided by his own breath.

What has been said in relation to management of infants will be generally applicable—the principles which it involves will at least be so—in the management of childhood and youth, and manhood and old age. Fires without flues, lamps, candles, breathing, the action of the skin, (if not prevented by dirt, improper clothing, &c.) and many more causes, will continue to operate to deteriorate the atmosphere at every period of existence.—There will be no moment of our lives when we shall not need the whole active force of a free, vigorous pair of lungs, and a healthy skin, to form and reform the blood, and to cast off the poisonous carbonic acid gas which is formed by these important processes. There will be no waking moment of our lives when we shall not need to be constantly on the watch—at least as much as our circumstances and employment will admit—against an agent which will threaten our destruction, and which, after we have done our best, will probably gain, more or less, the dominion over us.

Hence the importance which philosophers, in all periods of the world's history, have attached to pure air, and the concessions which have been made—proud as mankind have been, and ashamed of and averse to labor—in favor of agricultural employments. The habitual breathing of pure air, with plenty of active exercise, will counteract, in no little degree, the bad tendency of a host of the ordinary physical transgressions.

FOR THE YOUNG.

STORY OF LITTLE WILLIAM AND JAMES.—The following affecting story from the Southern Christian Advocate, should encourage teachers and parents to be faithful in sowing good seed, praying earnestly for God's blessing upon it.

It was my privilege to visit the New England States in July last, and arriving at a beautiful village near Boston, I, together with those in company with me, concluded to remain there several days. I resolved one morning to take a long walk into the country, and perceived, after advancing three quarters of a mile, two little boys sitting under the shade of a venerable looking tree, near the edge of a little stream, with a basket in each hand. It was my intention to proceed further, but on approaching, I found they were in deep conversation, and resolved to listen to those interesting little children, although they were unconscious any one was near. The following conversation was overheard by me.

"William," said James, "How were you pleased with Sunday school, and your new teacher yesterday?"

"Very much indeed," replied James, "for my teacher told me how I must live, if I wanted to go to heaven when I die, and you know I want to go there."

"Did he tell you, Willy, any thing about that wicked place of which we heard the preacher talk the Sunday we went to church together?"

"O, yes, James: he told me I must keep all God's commands, or I would go to that place, where all boys go who lie, curse and steal. So I read my bible every morning and night, and get one commandment every day to say by heart to mother; for she has promised me 50 cents when I know the whole ten, and I mean to give the money to the missionary society; for I want all the heathen children to know all about Jesus."

"Well," said James, "my teacher does not tell me about Jesus or heaven, but only learns me to read; but I remember what my good mother used to tell me about Jesus, when she was alive, and I have a bible which she gave me a little while before she died, begging me to read it, and she said if I did all God said, I would go to heaven where angels live.—So I learn a verse every day, but have no mother, like you, to whom to recite, but recite to an old lady, who takes care of me; and tells me about God, and Jesus, who died to save all little boys."

Here little James' heart was too full to utter one more word, and he gave full vent to his sorrows.

"Don't cry, Jimmy," said his little friend; "don't cry, because my teacher says, God will take care of all boys who have no parents, and loves them."

I felt then as if I could refrain no longer from speaking, and walked in front of the dear children, who appeared startled at my appearance, having supposed themselves to be far beyond the view or hearing of any individual.

My little boys, said I, how do you do? And where are you going?

"Quite well, ma'am," was the reply, "and we are resting under this tree."

Are you not afraid of being lost? for you must be some distance from home.—Don't you see you are almost in the country, and there is no house near us?

"We are not afraid, ma'am, of being lost, for we are here very often, and near this spot is the place we gather whortleberries, such as we now have."

Perceiving the little boy wipe from his cheek the tear which had involuntarily stolen down, I inquired the cause of his trouble.

"Why, ma'am, I was talking to Willy about my good mother, who died a few months ago, and who gave me all I wanted;—but now,"—and here he stopped.

And do you not have all you want now, my little boy?

"No, ma'am, I sometimes go to Sunday school without any shoes, for I cannot always get them, but I will go to my Sunday school."

When you do have shoes, who gives them to you?

"Well, ma'am, I get up early in the morning, take these baskets you see, and walk a mile, to pick whortleberries, and sell them for four cents a quart, and this is the way I buy shoes; but it takes me a long time to buy a pair; because I belong to the missionary society, and save three cents a week, so as to help send a preacher to the heathen children, who have no Bible, and no preacher to tell them about Jesus, and how to get to heaven."

What is your name, little boy, said I, and how old are you?

"James B———, and my age is eight years.—This little boy is named Willy F———."

And have you, James, neither father or mother?

"Neither, ma'am. Yonder are the graves of both whom I loved very much, and who always told me to love God; not to lie, curse nor steal; and I always remember what they told me."

"Well, my little boy," said I, "here is one dollar; take it, and buy shoes."

"Thank you, ma'am, thank you. I have now one dollar and a half, and after buying shoes, I will give the rest to my teacher on Sunday, for the society."

Who is your teacher, James?

Mr. B———, a young gentleman I knew a long time."

Turning to the other boy, I inquired if his parents were alive, and if he could get shoes whenever he wanted them, or if he sold whortleberries to buy them.

"Both my parents are alive, and I always have shoes. These berries are not mine, but Jimmy's. I promised to help him pick to-day, and see how many we have; four baskets are filled, and this afternoon we will sell them."

Come, boys, said I, it is near dinner-time, let us be going.

So on we walked, three in company, and all the way I talked to the little boy, who picked berries to sell, in order to buy shoes, and give the society three cents a week. He said he lived with a poor lady, whom he loved much; that if I would go some distance, I would see her; but being too far from my lodgings, we took an affectionate farewell.

How much can be learned, thought I, from such an interview. First, the good of Sabbath schools; secondly, the necessity of suitable teachers; thirdly, the admonition of parents; fourthly, the necessity of impressing upon the minds of youth, missionary operations; and fifthly, let all children, who read this piece, remember how little Willy helped James, and how hard James worked, and took his earnings to give to the heathen; and let all little boys and girls follow his example. LOUISA.

Charleston, Nov. 27, 1839.

From the Youth's Cabinet.

CHILDREN CAN WRITE FOR CHILDREN.

Friend Southard:—For so I call you, because I believe you are as much the friend of little girls as of little boys. I have just finished reading the last number of the "Youth's Cabinet," and was so well pleased with some articles in it, that I felt a wish that I could write one myself. I will try if I can, and if you think it suitable for your paper, and insert it, perhaps it will encourage some more of your young readers to write also. I have often thought that children could write better for children than grown people do. Children think about the same things, and use nearly the same language; hence they understand each other better than they do those who, having lived longer, seem to forget that young people have less experience than themselves. They use words too of which we do not know the meaning, because we have not read, listened, or talked enough to make them familiar.

This morning a pretty smart little boy was discouraged because he could not commit his task to memory. An older person sat by, who asked him if he understood it. "Not well," was the reply. It was carefully explained to him in such language as he commonly uses, when he soon learned it. One line was:

"How gained his cheeks such pallid shade?"

He had no idea of what was meant, until he was told that "pallid" meant pale. An hour after the explanation, the little boy returned to the room and thanked the person who gave it. We should surely like our lessons much better if we understood them perfectly, and we should understand them if those who write them would remember that we are children, and that they must think like us, and talk like us, to be useful to us. I don't ask them to talk baby talk, but children's talk. Such books would be useful to adults, or grown persons. I have heard my father say he is more instructed by reading well written books for children, than those which are designed for older minds. He is much pleased with many articles in the Cabinet, and wishes me to speak to cousin S. T., and R. H.' (two smart girls who have no suitable books) about taking it. He thinks their fathers had better discontinue their party papers, and subscribe for yours, if they cannot afford to pay for both. I think so too, and that your subscribers ought to pay you punctually. But if I write too long, you will not wish me to write again.

MARY ANN.

COMMUNICATIONS.

STEUBENVILLE, OHIO, DEC. 27, 1839.

Bro. Springer:—A very pleasant and interesting letter to me, written by Bro. Woodruff, who is laboring among my old friends, on what was a part of Cambridge circuit, sets me down to say a few things through the medium of your non-committal paper, to the friends of a good cause.

After closing a very pleasant and profitable year with my Steubenville friends, I attended an interesting Conference in New Lisbon, from which, I was returned to the same pleasant appointment, and have renewed my labors in the vineyard of the Lord. The same happy state of things continue to exist. We have here considerable prosperity. Our first quarterly meeting is past sometime since. At it, we were favored with the labors of brothers Clarke and Dalbey, which were both acceptable and profitable. Seventeen were added to the church during the meeting, which continued about a week.—All our meetings are uniformly good. Christmas day, to us, was one of much profit. We commenced with a prayer meeting in the morning, five o'clock, at brother Lucas', whose house is sometimes called the "Second Church," because of so many meetings being held in it. At 11 o'clock, we had preaching at the church and general class at night; and truly, the presence of God was with us—of His fullness we received grace. I have just come in from our Friday night prayer meeting, which was a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

The Church is generally alive and sinners are inquiring the way to Zion; five have been added to the church this week,—making in all, since Conference, THIRTY, and there were about the same number of conversions.

We expect to commence a protracted meeting on New Year's eve, to embrace brother Brown's visit, and will try to trust in the Lord for success. We ask the prayers of our friends. We close for the present, hoping to have something more to communicate before the close of the year, if the Lord should bless.

Yours, &c. JOHN BURNS.

CIRCULAR

TO THE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH, WITHIN THE STATE OF INDIANA.

Dear Brethren:—It is known to you that our Ohio Conference, at the last session, adopted Resolutions expressive of the opinion that it is expedient to institute a separate Conference within this State. It is also known to you that two committees were appointed, one in Ohio to confer with the Pittsburgh Conference, the other in Indiana to confer with the Illinois Conference, asking their concurrence in this arrangement;—and that in case of their approval, these committees were authorized to appoint the time and place for the holding of a Conference for each of the divisions of the Ohio District. The undersigned compose the committee of the Indiana part.

Now, be it known unto you, that each of the committees did attend to the duty assigned them, and that they have since received the replies of both the Pittsburgh and Illinois Conferences, expressive of their action in the case. We are now prepared to inform you that the Pittsburgh Conference voted a disapproval, for the present, of our proposed division of the Ohio District. The reasons they assign, through their President, Bro. Brown, are as follows: "1. Because it would leave both divisions too weak—it would narrow down the circulation and interchange of ministerial laborers, on both sides of the line. 2. Because if the thing must be done on this side of the General Conference, the consent of the Illinois Conference would legalize the act. Our Conference would rather not be consenting thereto, not having thought enough upon the matter. 3. Because, by the next General Conference, in 1842, the boundaries of Districts can be so fixed as to suit the wishes and convenience of all parties. The Muskingum river may then be the line east of the Ohio District, and Indiana west."

The Illinois Conference, upon the other hand, have unanimously concurred in our proposed division of the Ohio District. The following resolutions express their action in the case:

"Resolved, 1. That this Conference concur with the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church in the division of their District.

"Resolved, 2. That the line dividing the States of Indiana and Illinois, be the division line between the Indiana and Illinois Districts."

Now the committee are aware that by provisions of the Constitution and Discipline, the joint action of the Ohio and Illinois Conferences legalizes the setting off of a new District in this State. And they feel themselves duly authorized to proceed to appoint the time and place for holding the first session of an Indiana Conference. But they feel impressed with the weight of responsibility laid upon them, and would not act hastily or unadvisedly in a matter of such importance. Though satisfied that the proposed measure, if gone into, is sanctioned by law, yet the committee hesitate to proceed and appoint an Indiana Conference, for the reasons following. 1. Because, in the language of the Ohio Conference it is provided that "should the change be concurred in by the Conferences, as above contemplated, the committees shall give due notice," &c. And but one of the Conferences has concurred. 2. Because, whereas, there was an impression at our last Conference that we should obtain the Grandview circuit, in the bordering part of Illinois, our sister Conference has said that the State line shall be the District line.—This however leaves us some four or five appointments of that circuit, on the east side of the line. 3. Because we know that several intelligent brethren who advocated this measure at the last Conference, now doubt its expediency, at this time, and desire us to forbear. 4. Because we candidly fear that this may be the case with others—perhaps even with a majority who voted for the resolutions. With Bro. Brown, perhaps, they had not thought enough upon the matter—it was not sufficiently matured.

We wish it understood that the committee are expressing no opinion on the merits of the case, and that they would advance nothing to discourage or turn aside those who think the measure for the best. It may indeed prove the very thing to give new life and energy to our ranks, and facilitate the building up of our cause in this young State. We could name some very judicious brethren who are of this opinion. There are in this State, according to last report, 1100 members; 18 travelling preachers, including the supernumerary assistants; 9 circuits and 3 missions, which will, we trust, become circuits, besides the portion of Grandview circuit falling to our lot. We have withal, 30 unstationed ministers and preachers. And with a Conference at home, amongst them, perhaps some of them may be induced to turn out and travel.

Upon the whole, our conclusion is, to make a call upon our brethren throughout the State, to give an expression of their judgment in this matter, that we may know what is the general voice. We request that each ministerial member of the Ohio Annual Conference within the State of Indiana, and each Quarterly Conference of a circuit or mission within the State, at their next meeting declare by Aye or Nay whether or not they are in favor of the immediate creation of an Indiana Conference, and that the same be communicated without delay through the Western Recorder. In case a majority of the itinerant ministers and Quarterly Conferences approve, so soon as we learn the fact, we shall proceed to appoint the time and place for holding the first session of the Indiana Annual Conference, and announce it accordingly. But should it appear that a majority disapprove, we shall recommend to our brethren to continue their adherence to the Ohio Conference for another year, and to meet with that body in August next (1840,) at Cincinnati, according to order of last adjournment. There are urgent reasons why this question should be disposed of, so soon as may be, that in case of our having a new Conference, the necessary steps may be taken, preparatory, and due notice given. We therefore urge it upon our brethren, the superintendents, to be prompt in responding to this call, and also to see that the subject be brought before their Quarterly Conferences, severally, at the very next session after the publication of this request,—and then that they promptly communicate, through the paper, as above proposed.

We are, dear brethren, yours in Christ,

H. P. BENNETT,
A. H. BASSETT, Sec.
T. P. ARMSTRONG,
Committee.

Utica, Indiana, Dec. 16, 1839.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Youth's Cabinet.

EDITED BY N. SOUTHARD.

Prospectus of vol. III. Commencing Jan. 2, '40.

THIS paper which was begun without a subscriber, has existed two years, in the midst of a host of competitors, securing many friends, and receiving the warm commendation of about one hundred editors, and many parents and teachers.

"You have no idea of the eagerness with which my little girl gets your paper," said a father a few days ago. "It would be a grand thing to introduce as a reading book into common schools," said a distinguished laborer in the cause of education.

"It is just such a paper as we desire to have placed weekly in the hands of our children," says the Christian Herald. "We have never known a paper in which children take so deep an interest," says the Waldo (Maine) Gazette.

"We have seen no paper expressly devoted to the young, which combines with more felicity amusement and sound principles," says the Bristol (R. I.) Phenix.

Its object is to do the greatest possible good to the hearts and minds of its young readers, in the most pleasing manner. To accomplish this object an increasing list of subscribers will enable the editor to devote an increasing amount of time and attention, while a number of able correspondents among the friends of the young at home, and missionaries abroad, will give it variety and interest.

Its engravings, which average two or three each week, are not intended merely to please the fancy, but illustrate truth, convey instruction, and deepen good impressions.

While it is confidently presented to the favorable notice of all who love the improvement of the young, it has special claims on those who desire the immediate extinction of all forms of oppression, and who believe the best security for our own liberties is a sacred regard for the rights of others.

It is published weekly at No. 9, Spruce street, New York, and No. 25, Cornhill, Boston, at only $1 per year in advance; ten copies for 8 dollars; twenty copies for 14 dollars; thirty copies for 18 dollars.

All editors who wish to promote the great objects of the Cabinet, are requested to favor us by giving this one or two insertions.

Our exchange list having swelled so as greatly to tax our time and means, we shall be constrained to confine it mostly to those who show us this kindness. Jan. 1, 1840. 19

The Casket,

AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

THE unparalleled success which has attended the Casket since it has come into the hands of the new proprietors, induces them to begin a volume with still further attractions on the first of January next. Its literary character, which has called forth so many comments, will undergo no change, as it will continue under the control of the same editors. Several new contributors, however, of high talent, has been engaged beside those who have already been enlisted in its favor. The Magazine will be enlarged, and will contain a greater quantity of reading matter than any periodical published at the same price in this country.

The work will appear in a new and beautiful type, cast expressly for the purpose, and will be printed on the finest paper. It will also be ornamented with the finest steel engravings, provided at a heavy expense, and executed from the choicest designs. To vary the style of these illustrations, the services of distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish at intervals, mezzotints for the ensuing volume. The heads of several distinguished American writers will appear in the course of the year. The publishers, determined to leave nothing undone to merit the patronage of a liberal public, have resolved, after much solicitation from many of their fair readers, to publish quarterly, as an extra, a correct plate of the latest fashion, highly colored, and executed in the first style of the art. This department will be under the control of a French gentleman, of much taste and experience, and will be found to excel any thing ever attempted in this line in America. The extra in the November number, may be considered a fair specimen of what these fashion plates will be. The music department, as heretofore, will be under the charge of Messrs. G. W. Hewitt & Co., and the fine pieces of copyright music which they have hitherto furnished are sufficient guarantee for the future

The flattering terms in which the Casket has been noticed by the journals in every section of the Union, establish beyond a doubt its claims to support generally. It will surpass any other work in the return it gives for the readers' money.

TERMS: Three dollars per annum, invariably in advance, or two copies for five dollars.

All communications to be addressed, post paid, to GEORGE R. GRAHAM & Co.,
December 30, 1839. Philadelphia.

P. S.—Editors publishing this Prospectus will be entitled to a copy of the Casket during the volume. No exchange is solicited, except when noticing the reception of the Magazine.

For Sale.

LARGE MAPS of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations, Land Districts, Townships, &c. engraved from the government surveys and plans in the General Land Office, Washington city, by E. Gilman, Draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. TAYLOR, Book Seller, Washington city, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are published on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State, as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Offices relative to water courses, township lines, Indian Land Reservations, Land Districts, &c., and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in these points. They can be sent to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. Price $3, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for $5. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or any who will buy to sell again. Dec. 10, 1839. 3t16

☞Editors of newspapers any where who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it to the advertiser.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips; between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.

Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Bicknell's Detector.

MONEY and business matters have increased to such an extent in this country, that we shall soon find it impossible to give an accurate and detailed account of all the Banking Institutions and Counterfeit Bank Notes within the limits of the thirty-two pages of our monthly pamphlet Detector. We propose therefore to increase the size of that publication sixteen pages in each number. We must either do one of two things, publish an imperfect and incomplete Detector, or enlarge our limits. We have determined upon the latter course, unwilling to do injustice to the public, and anxious as heretofore, to issue the only perfect sheet of the kind in the United States. We cannot do this however, without some increase in price; and hence we shall be compelled to charge $1 50 per annum for the enlarged Detector, instead of $1, the price of our present publication. We promise to make very considerable improvements, to give in addition to the present information, the names of the Cashiers of the various Banks as far as they can be ascertained—to renew the type, to obtain better paper, and, in short, to render our monthly accurate in every particular, and entitled in a still greater degree to the confidence so generously reposed in it by the public. The increase in the price, however, may not give satisfaction to all, although it must be apparent to every individual, that in enlarging and improving, we shall necessarily be compelled to increase our expenses to a very considerable extent. Such, however, as are unwilling to receive the enlarged Detector at $1 50 per annum, will be good enough to notify us to that effect, immediately after receiving the first number of the new volume. We may add, those who subscribe to the Weekly Reporter, in addition to the Monthly Detector, will continue to be furnished with the latter at $1 per annum. We are anxious to do every thing in our power to retain our entire list, as well as to secure new patrons; and would make no increase in price, but we find on calculating the impossibility of publishing the enlarged and improved monthly, at the existing rates. Deeply grateful for liberal patronage enjoyed, we shall still keep on the even tenor of our way, exerting every energy to render both the Reporter and Detector acceptable, as well as useful and instructive. MATHEW T. MILLER,

No. 76 South Third-street, Philadelphia.

November 21, 1839. 14

New York Mirror.

☞THE PRESENT VOLUME.

THE conductors of the New York Mirror are determined that no periodical in the world shall exceed this in the interest and variety of its literary contents, the elegance and finish of its pictorial embellishments, the beauty and popularity of its music, and the neatness and superiority of its typographical appearance.

The number for the 19th of October is adorned with one of the most costly and magnificent steel engravings ever published in this or any other country. It is a representation of the "Landing at Jamestown," painted and designed by Chapman, and engraved by Danforth, two American artists of whom their country may be justly proud.

This is the third exquisite engraving that has already appeared in the present volume of the Mirror, the first number of which was issued on the first of July last, all the numbers of which can be supplied to new subscribers, if immediate application be made.

The New York Mirror is the oldest, and unquestionably, the cheapest periodical, extant.—Every number contains a great variety of useful, interesting and amusing matter, on every subject connected with polite literature and the fine arts; and they form, at the end of the year, an immense volume of four hundred and sixteen imperial quarto pages, with vignette title-page, table of contents, splendid engravings, and fifty pieces of popular music, arranged for the piano-forte, guitar, &c.—a library in itself—and all this is afforded at the very trifling cost of five dollars a year, a sum almost inadequate for the extraordinary equivalent rendered to subscribers.

Six superb engravings (including three now issued) will be given, engraved by Danforth, Parker, etc. from original designs and portraits by Weir, Inman, Chapman; etc.

A number of curious etchings on wood will also be published in the present volume, engraved by Adams, Anderson, Johnson, etc. from original designs.

Nothing shall be left undone to render this work, in its literary character, its engravings, its music, and its typography, equal, if not superior, to any periodical of the day.

CONDITIONS.—The Mirror is published every Saturday, at No. 1, Barclay-street, next door to Broadway. It is elegantly printed in the extra super-royal quarto form, with brevier, minion and nonpariel type. It is embellished once every three months, with a SPLENDID SUPER-ROYAL QUARTO ENGRAVING, and every week with a popular piece of MUSIC, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, etc. For each volume an exquisitely engraved VIGNETTE TITLE-PAGE, and a copious INDEX, are furnished. The terms are $5 per annum, payable, in all cases, IN ADVANCE.

December 10, 1839. 3t16

Dr. A. W. Knight,

(Formerly of Philadelphia, but for the last six years in Muskingum county, Ohio,)

HAS removed to MT. STERLING, and now respectfully tenders his professional services to the citizens of this place and the surrounding country: he may at all times be found, when not absent on professional business, at his residence. He hopes that undivided attention to the duties of his profession, together with an experience derived from twelve years' practice of the various branches of a profession, and part of that time in the Philadelphia Hospital as one of the house physicians, will enable him to merit and receive a liberal share of public patronage.

Mt. Sterling, Ohio, Oct. 31, 1839. 11tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Brother Jonathan.

THE LARGEST PAPER IN THE WORLD.

THE proprietors of this sheet—the "Great Western" among the newspapers, have the pleasure of spreading before the reading public a weekly periodical containing a greater variety and amount of useful and entertaining miscellany, than is to be found in any similar publication in the world.

Each number of the paper contains as large an amount of reading matter as is found in volumes of ordinary duodecimo, which cost two dollars—and more than is contained in a volume of Irving's Columbus, or Bancroft's History of America, which cost three dollars a volume—and all for SIX CENTS a number, or Three Dollars a year.

BROTHER JONATHAN being a genuine Yankee, and thinking that some things can be done as well as others, is determined to present his readers a MEDLEY hitherto unrivalled by any other paper of Anecdotes, Amusements, Allegories, Accidents, Biography, Bon Mots, Conversation, Crimes, Dramatics, Drolleries, Erratics, Essays, Eloquence, Facetia, Geography, History, Jests, Learning, Morality, Marvels, Music, News, Novelties, Oratory, Poetry, Philosophy, Quiddities, Religion, Romance, Sports, Spectacles, Sorrows, Sufferings, Tales, Trials, Truths, Teachings, Wisdom, Wonders, Wit, &c. &c.

As a family newspaper, BROTHER JONATHAN will be found to present attractions beyond any other.

———"He comes the herald of a noisy world,
News from all nations lumbering at his back."

The earliest intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, and the latest novelties of the Literary World, will be promptly served up for the gratification of the reader.

Strictly neutral in politics, it will contain nothing in favor or against any party, and will as seduously avoid any of the controversies which agitate the religious community. Strict morality, temperance, industry and good order, benevolence, and usefulness to our common country and our fellow men, will be advocated and in every page of Brother Jonathan.

TERMS OF BROTHER JONATHAN—Three Dollars a year in advance.

For five dollars two copies will be sent one year, or one copy two years.

The EVENING TATTLER is published every day at the same office, and is put to press at meridian, in season for the great Northern, Eastern and Southern mails, which all close about two o'clock, P. M.

☞All country papers who give this prospectus three insertions, will be entitled to an exchange, on sending a number of their paper to this office containing the advertisement.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed postage paid to

GRISWOLD & COMPANY,
162 Nasau-street New York city.

November 14, 1839. 13

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

olume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1840. Number 21.

COUNTING HOUSE ALMANAC,

For the Year 1840.

	Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday.	Saturday	On Sun rises H M	Sat'ys Sun sets. H M	MOON'S PHASES.
JANUARY				1	2	3	4	7 23	4 37	New Moon the 4th, at 3 o'clk 49m P.M.
	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	7 19	4 41	First Quarter 12th, at 2 o'clk 26m A.M.
	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	7 14	4 46	Full Moon 18th, at 7 o'clk 2m P M.
	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	7 7	4 53	Last Quarter 25th, at 8 o'clk 3m A.M.
	26	27	28	29	30	31
FEBRUARY							1	6 53	5 7	New Moon 3d, at 8 o'clk 58m A.M.
	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	6 44	5 17	First Quarter 10th, at 10 o'clk 44m A.M
	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	6 35	5 25	Full Moon 17th, at 8 o'clk 22m A.M.
	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	6 26	5 35	Last Quarter 25th, at 5 o'clk 22m A.M.
	23	24	25	26	27	28	29
MARCH	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	6 17	5 43	New Moon 3d, at 10 o'clk 34m P.M.
	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	6 8	5 52	First Quarter 10th, at 5 o'clk 37m P.M.
	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	5 51	6 2	Full Moon 17th, at 11 o'clk 10m P.M.
	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	5 49	6 11	Last Quarter 26th, at 1 o'clk 10m A.M.
	29	30	31
APRIL				1	2	3	4	5 40	6 20	New Moon 2d, at 9 o'clk 45m A.M.
	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	5 31	6 29	First Quarter 9th, at 12 o'clk 52m A.M.
	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	5 23	6 37	Full Moon 16th, at 2 o'clk 24m P.M.
	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	5 14	6 46	Last Quarter 24th, at 6 o'clk 16m P.M.
	26	27	28	29	30
MAY						1	2	4 59	7 1	New Moon 1st, at 6 o'clk 35m P.M.
	3	4	5	6	6	8	9	4 52	7 8	First Quarter 8th, at 9 o'clk 19m A.M.
	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	4 46	7 14	Full Moon 16th, at 5 o'clk 19m A.M.
	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	4 41	7 19	New Moon 31st, at 1 o'clk 14m A.M.
	24	25	26	27	28	29	30
	31
JUNE	1	2	3	4	5	6		4 38	7 22	First Quarter 6th, at 8 o'clk 32m A.M.
	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	4 36	7 24	Full Moon 14th, at 11 o'clk 59m A.M.
	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	4 35	7 25	Last Quarter 22d, at 1 o'clk 15m A.M.
	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	4 35	7 25	New Moon 28th, at 3 o'clk 57m P.M.
	28	29	30
JULY				1	2	3	4	4 37	7 23	First Quarter 6th, at 2 o'clk 46m P.M.
	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	4 40	7 21	Full Moon 14th, at 9 o'clk 18m P.M.
	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	4 45	7 15	Last Quarter 22d, at 6 o'clk P.M.
	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	4 51	7 9	New Moon 29th, at 8 o'clk 27m A.M.
	26	27	28	29	30	31
AUGUST							1	5 4	6 56	First Quarter 4th, at 11 o'clk 45m P.M
	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	5 12	6 48	Full Moon 13th, at 1 o'clk 44m A.M.
	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	5 20	6 40	Last Quarter 20th, at 6 o'clk 46m A.M.
	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	5 29	6 31	New Moon 27th, at 1 o'clk 13m A.M.
	23	24	25	26	27	28	29
	30	31
SEPTEMBER			1	2	3	4	5	5 38	6 22	First Quarter 3d, at 5 o'clk 7m P.M.
	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	5 47	6 13	Full Moon 11th, at 2 o'clk 17m P.M.
	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	6 55	6 4	Last Quarter 18th, at 12 o'clk 1m M.
	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	5	5 55	New Moon 25th, at 12 o'clk 5m P.M.
	27	28	29	30
OCTOBER					1	2	3	6 14	5 46	First Quarter 3d, at 12 o'clk 7m M.
	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	6 23	5 37	Full Moon 11th, at 1 o'clk 43m A.M.
	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	6 32	5 28	Last Quarter 17th, at 6 o'clk 27m P.M.
	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	6 50	5 10	New Moon 25th, at 3 o'clk 27m A.M.
	25	26	27	28	29	30	31
NOV'R	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	6 57	5 3	First Quarter 2d, at 7 o'clk 33m A.M.
	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	7 5	4 55	Full Moon 9th, at 12 o'clk 19m M.
	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	7 11	4 49	Last Quarter 16th, at 3 o'clk 22m A.M.
	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	7 17	4 43	New Moon 33d, at 8 o'clk 41m P.M
	29	30
DECEMBER			1	2	3	4	5	7 21	4 39	First Quarter 2d, at 1 o'clk 47m A.M.
	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	7 24	4 37	Full Moon 8th, at 10 o'clk 46m P.M.
	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	7 25	4 37	Last Quarter 15th, at 3 o'clk 33m P M.
	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	7 25	4 35	New Moon 23d, at 3 o'clk 53m P.M.
	27	28	29	30	31

There will be four Eclipses this year,—two of the Sun and two of the Moon, viz:

The first is an insignificant Eclipse of the Moon, on the 17th of February, at 3 o'clock 22 minutes in the morning,—not visible in these parts.

The second is an annular Eclipse of the Sun, on the 3d of March, at 10 o'clock 38 minutes in the evening,—invisible here,—but visible in China, and in the adjoining seas and territories.

The third is a partial Eclipse of the Moon, on the 18th of August, in the morning,—visible. Commencement, 12 o'clock 22 minutes in the morning; medium, 1 o'clock 47 minutes; end, 3 o'clock 12 minutes in the evening; 7¼ inches of the upper northern part of the Moon will be eclipsed by the southern part of the earth's shade.

The fourth is a total Eclipse of the Sun, on the 27th of August, at 1 o'clock 13 minutes in the morning,—invisible in these parts. The Sun will be totally eclipsed on the Pacific, in longitude east from Philadelphia 147 deg. 13 min., and in southern latitude 34 deg. 44 min. On the Cape of Good Hope and New Holland the Sun will be partly obscured.

Western Recorder Office, Zanesville, Ohio.

TO THE HONORABLE, THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF OHIO:

THE undersigned, citizens of the State of Ohio, respectfully represent—that they have witnessed, with extreme pain, the infraction of those rights and privileges guaranteed by the Constitution of this State in worshipping God according to a pure and enlightened conscience. We view it as an inalienable right, contemplated by the Constitution of the country, that every sect of Christians may adopt that mode of worship and religious economy, which does not conflict with reason and militate against the peace and morals of community. Upon this acknowledged principle, each branch of the church has based certain usages, distinctive in their character, and deemed essential and vital to their peculiar economy; and also indispensable in carrying forward the dispensation of grace to man, as coming from the hand of our beneficient and merciful Redeemer. Hence, the METHODIST CHURCH has deemed it proper to establish several means of grace, designed to promote the individual comfort of its own members, as well as the general interests of morality and religion; and in the use of these means, the undersigned, your memorialists, have either witnessed, or been assured from other sources, that individuals have attempted to countervail the original intention of their adoption, and not unfrequently disturbed and outraged the feelings of the peaceable worshippers, contrary to the honor, peace and good order of this State.—The special means to which reference is now made, are two days', protracted, quarterly and camp meetings. Your memorialists are aware that some of these usages are almost entirely peculiar to the METHODIST CHURCH; but they repeat the sentiment, that, in their judgment, the Constitution fully guaranties to every denomination of Christians, the right to adopt such modes of worship as they may deem proper; and they would respectfully express it as their deliberate opinion, that these means, carried out according to their primitive design, do not contravene the moral condition of society, but eminently promote the religious affections and moral aspect of community. And for the purpose of receiving reasonable protection in the use of these and any other means, deemed important to the economy of the METHODIST CHURCH, as well as other denominations of christians, your memorialists humbly approach your honorable body, invoking your guardian hand, and the interposition of that legal power, which you alone have the prerogative to extend. We, therefore, respectfully pray the amendment of the act, entitled, "An act for the prevention of certain immoral practices." The present law is deemed, in some measure, inefficient, and not fully adapted to the wants of community. The points to which we would direct your attention, are these: 1. Distance. 2. Articles prohibited. 3. Penalty. We would respectfully represent, that, in our opinion, any distance less than two miles will not compass the object desired; and we ask the present law so to be amended as to prevent the approach of trespassers nearer than that distance. In regard to the articles prohibited, we deem it not only necessary to contraband all articles of intoxication, but also goods, wares, or merchandise of any description. The reason for this prayer is, that in numerous instances, great annoyance and disturbance have arisen, from the fact of individuals, actuated more by pecuniary considerations than a regard for the cause of morality and religion, exposing on sale articles of merchandise at the place, and during the time of service. And past experience impels us to believe, that Legislative interference is indispensably necessary. In case of a violation of the above provisions, your memorialists respectfully pray that an amendment be made, subjecting the offender or offenders to the penalty of a forfeiture of the articles on sale, together with the apparatus used in the trade, in addition to the fine of any sum not exceeding twenty dollars, as provided in the present Act, and the avails thereof applied to education, or such other objects as may best subserve the public good. These provisions and changes in the law, here recommended, and such others as your honorable body may deem proper, are esteemed expedient and indispensably necessary—demanded by the interests of society, subservient to the interests of morality and religion, and which will be acquiesced in and sustained by the good sense and moral influence of every individual who regards the peace, harmony and good order of community.

And as in duty bound, your memorialists will ever pray, &c.

COMMUNICATIONS.

MAHONING, OHIO, DEC, 23, 1839.

Brother Springer:—It becomes my duty to inform you of the afflictive dispensation of Providence towards me. My mother, M. TALLENTIRE, departed this life at Deersville, the 19th of September, 1839.

She was converted to God in her youth, and from that time to the day of her death, she adorned her christian profession by a holy life. Since the death of my father, she chose to reside with me, and willingly and cheerfully brooked with me the toils of an itinerate life, and was highly esteemed as a prudent and pious woman in every circuit where we were stationed. She trained her children in the way they should go, and left before them a fine example of every christian duty.

She had been as usual in her health till a day before the sitting of the Annual Conference, when she began to complain and requested me to stay a day or two to see how it might terminate. Her disease soon assumed a malignant form; she said her stay with us would be short; seven days previous to her death, her sufferings were great, but the last day and night of her life, the Lord relieved her of those sufferings, and her last moments were less afflictive than might have been expected from the nature of her complaint. During her affliction, she often said, "all is well," "the Lord is with me," "my trust is in Him." She loved the ordinances of God's house, and was attached to the ministers of religion; she held a high regard for the pious members of the church; she was remarkably circumspect in all her ways, and tenderly attached to her children; she was patient and submissive, and ever ready to forgive. She was humble and unassuming, and followed peace with all men and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord. Thus on the 19th of September, she peacefully entered the joy of her Lord.

Thou art gone to thy place of repose,
The mansion of rest in the sky;
Escaped from this wearisome world and its woes
To the home of the blessed on high.
The griefs that assail'd thee on earth,
Will trouble thy spirit no more;
The anguish of tears and the madness of mirth,
For ever and ever are o'er.
There is in the feeling that comes o'er thee now,
No pang for thy bosom, no cloud for thy brow.

Thou hast left us to tears and regret,
But we breathe not a sigh of despair;
O no! in our grief we will never forget
The rapture there was in thy prayer.
Hope gilds with its radience the gloom,
That closed on thy mortal career;
We look on the shades that environ thy tomb—
The darkness that mantle thy bier.
And think that thy spirit has taken its flight,
To blend in the lustre of heaven's own light.

We follow the path thou hast trod—
A pilgrim all weary and faint;
Assured thou art now on the bosom of God,
A blessed and a beautified saint.
Thou hast left us alone in the world,
A prey to its perils and strife;
Oh no! the Redeemer that guided the safe,
Shall lead us to mansions of peace,
Where friendship immortal shall reign,
And paradise welcome our feet.

Her funeral was preached by the Rev. G. D. Kinnear, of the M. E. church.

J. R. TALLENTIRE.

CONNELSVILLE, PA., DEC 24, 1839.

Brother Springer:—I reached my appointment the first week in October, and found the people of Union circuit just as they had been represented to me, "a kind and agreeable people." My colleague, brother Shearer, had arrived sometime before me, and I found him like a man of God, doing his master's business,—preaching, visiting the people, praying and conversing with them on the important concerns of religion.—My soul rejoiced that I had such a yoke-fellow, and with a cheerful heart I went to work. Prospects seemed a little gloomy at first, but we went forward, nothing doubting, but that God would revive His work; and, we rejoice to have it to say, that so far, our expectations have been more than realized. He has poured out His spirit in a manner unexampled by any thing that I have seen. Several professed religion during our quarterly meeting, and eight joined the church.

At a protracted meeting held at the Franklin meeting house, between Uniontown and Connelsville, more than forty professed to obtain the pearl of great price, and between forty and fifty joined the church. This meeting commenced on Saturday the 7th of December, and closed on the evening of the 16th. When the meeting commenced, we exhorted the people to lay aside their temporal business as far as they could conveniently, and "come up to the help of the Lord." They, almost, unanimously did so; this was, no doubt, well pleasing to God, for He abundantly rewarded them for their sacrifice of time. Many parents had the satisfaction of seeing their children converted and happy in the Lord. The members of the different churches in the neighborhood took hold of the work and labored harmoniously and successfully in the vineyard of the Lord. This made the place appear like a heaven in miniature. The members of different orders rejoiced together in witnessing the salvation of their neighbors and relations.

My colleague labored zealously and successfully. Our unstationed brethren, Francis, Carell and Catlin, laid hold of the work like men of God, who had the good of souls at heart. There are no jars or disorders among us,—peace and love pervade our borders. The salvation of souls is what we labor for, and we feel thankful that our labor is not in vain in the Lord; but we realize that "The hill of Zion yields,

A thousand sacred sweets."

On Tuesday evening, after I returned from our protracted meeting, I rode into the country a few miles to fill an appointment, but I felt so exhausted that I could scarcely speak at first.—However, the Lord gave me strength and utterance, so that I was enabled to warn sinners with unusual freedom,—several cried for mercy and one found peace. I hope the day is not far distant when God will pour out His spirit abundantly upon that appointment.

I feel happy, because I am surrounded with agreeable circumstances. I am in the midst of a people who seem, not only disposed to relieve my necessities, but to anticipate my wishes.—But the best of all is, I am in a revival, and in this I had rather be than in the courts of kings. I feel happy in prosecuting my labors,—the Lord is blessing us abundantly and powerfully. The work is spreading, and I have no doubt but will soon be round our circuit in one continued flame of sacred fire. "Hallelujah! the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." JAMES ROBISON, Sup.
Union circuit.

MORGAN COUNTY, O., JAN. 8, 1840.

Bro. Springer: Our anticipations of continued prosperity, indicated in my last, at Pisgah, where our first revival began, have been to some extent realized. The work, there, is still progressing.—At my last visit two more were added to the church, and others are under awakenings.

At a protracted meeting, held at Ebenezer, commencing the 28th December and closing the 2d inst., we enjoyed a most gracious dispensation of grace. On New Year's day we attended to the sacrament of the Lord's supper; the board was surrounded by Presbyterians, Baptists and Methodists of the different schools. The occasion was interesting in the highest degree.—When the different tribes of Israel thus unite in the work of the Lord, hell itself must feel the influence. Thirteen united with the church, on the occasion; all from the world except one. A number of them embraced religion.

The ministers of the different orders, in this quarter, are manifesting much fidelity and zeal in the discharge of their duty, which by the aid of Providence is being powerfully successful in weakening the devil's kingdom. Sinners of deepest dye are deserting his ranks and crowding to the church like doves to the window.

Yours, &c. C. WOODRUFF,
Sup't Pis'h Ct.

TEMPERANCE.

ADDRESS

On the Origin and Objects of the Temperance Society—delivered at a meeting of the Holliday's Cove Temperance Society, by John Andrews, M. D., of Steubenville, Ohio.

During that period of the world's history which is usually and appropriately designated as "the dark age," two objects of laborious and anxious research stimulated the industry, and quickened the ingenuity of some of its most learned men. These were, the discovery of the method of transmuting the base metals into gold and silver, and of the means of removing all the seeds of disease from the human body—thus conferring upon it the vigor, and beauty, and the pleasures, of prepetual youth. It may readily be supposed, that two such potent principles of action as the "love of life," and the "aurisacra fames," put in requistion the whole resource of the art of Alchemy, then in the full tide of its mysterious researches into the arcana of Nature; and many were the laborious hours, many the valuable lives, which were wasted in ingenious and complicated experiments to procure the "menstruum universale," before it was finally abandoned as a hopeless experiment—at least in Alchemy. But, in the 14th century, Arnauld de Villeneuve, a French Chemist and Physician, announced to the world the important discovery of what he denominated "eau de vie," or the water of life. "Who would believe," he exclaims in astonished exultation, "who would believe that one can draw from wine, by chemical process, that which has not the color of wine, nor the ordinary effects of wine. This water of wine is called by some the water of life: and it well deserve the name, since it is truly a water of immortality. It prolongs one's life; it dissipates superfluous and vicious humors; it revives the heart, and perpetutes youth." The world could not be slow in tasting the virtues of so wonderful a product of the arts. Whether from an innate principle of easy credulity, or from over-anxiety after that which is new, the fact is indisputable, the announcement of a new nostrum in the healing art—something that promises to do more and better service than ever was known or heard of before—never fails to be received with ready confidence by the generality of mankind. Such is the history of the human mind from the days of Esculapius to the present time. Such proved to be the fact in reference to the discovery of De Villeneuve. The rich, the poor, the young, the old, the sick, the well, all stood in great need of a little of this precious "water of life," and doubtless all felt that, by its magic powers, life was prolonged, bad humors dissipated, the heart revived, and the beauty and pleasures of youth renewed. For a long time its mode of preparation was known only to the "adepts," and the precious medicine was retailed from the Apothecary shops in such doses only as were deemed suited to particular cases—the medium dose, for an adult, being one drachm, or the 8th part of an oz., equal to about a "thimble full." It is surprising how rapidly its use was extended in the world.—Statesmen—those magnates of their race, who are usually selected from the mass of mankind on account of their superior intellectual attainments, and entrusted with the care of the national welfare—could not fail to discern the immense advantages that must result to their respective countries, from a liberal distribution of the "water of immortality" among the soldiers whom they were compelled to keep in constant employ. Accordingly, being introduced into England in the 16th century, it was soon adopted as an essential part of the rations of soldiers, in that Christian Country.

Our natural appetites are satisfied with the regular use of definite quantity of such substances as are adapted to them; but those which are artificial, of man's own creation, are not regulated by any such instinctive law of the animal economy. These, being generated and sustained by artificial stimuli, will, of necessity, be augmented and quickened, rather than allayed, when the stimulus is taken. All poisons act in conformity to this principle; they blunt the natural sensibilities, and therefore require an increased strength or quantity of the article to produce the same effect. It is thus with opium, hellebore, stramonium, corrosive sublimate, arsenic, and their like. Thus the 8th part of an oz. was no longer a dram, in the drunkard's dialect, but the term was retained as synonymous with "quantum sufficit." or what the case may require! Thus, as well from the increased quantity required for each individual, as from the extension of its use to a wider circle of subjects: to the high and the low, the father and the son, the husband, wife, and child, the quantity annually consumed in England alone, attained the enormous amount of 40 millions of gallons! Yes, 40 millions of gallons a year for England, with a population of about 12 millions of souls, or near 3 1-2 gallons for every man, woman and child!

Meanwhile, however, this new world was discovered, and that tide of emigration, which seems to set in with annually renewed and augmented momentum, began to flow westward. All Europe gave contributions to its formation; but England was particularly active in establishing her colonies in its Northern division. This favored land seemed to include every variety of climate, of soil, and of natural products. Its unrivalled fatness supplied, sometimes of spontaneous growth, and always with care and labor of man, his natural wants, whilst the artificial were so few in the new and rude state of society, as to prompt to no great exertion to supply the wants either of mind or body. Many, therefore were the inducements to the free, unrestrained use of the precious "eau de vie." Grapes were not readily obtained, from the juice of which it might be gathered—but the secret of its preparation was now out, and it was found that Indian Corn, Rye, and other nutritive fruits of the earth susceptible of fermentation, would produce it even cheaper and more abundantly. Whiskey, Gin, Apple Brandy, Peach Brandy, Rum, Cherry Bounce, &c. made a variety which could not fail to supply a favorite to every taste. The Government, too of this favored land, (for in the mean time the colonists had put into operation a government machine of their own invention, and framed after their own liking,) unwilling to be surpassed in the adoption of measures promotive of the general good, by the antiquated establishment of the old world, incorporated into their system the wise and wholesome provision of supplying it to the soldier as a part of his daily rations. Three gills a day, I believe, when on active service, were deemed sufficient to give him a brave heart, a sound body, and a martial mind. The Officers, too, must needs secure, by the same means, this "mens sona in corpors sano." But it was not only the soldiers who required it: it was found that the ships would not sail without it;—mechanics could not work without it; farmers could neither plough nor sow, but above all, they could not reap, nor mow, nor husk corn, without it; the lawyer could not plead, nor the doctor prescribe, without it; but, worse than all, the ministers of justice were unable to deal out, "equal justice to all" without it. Indeed, it was the universal panacea, and was considered even essential to smooth the friction of the newly cast government wheels, especially in their workings on election days. At meals, before meals, after meals, some one or other of the catalogue was freely employed, as a provoker, digester, stomachic, prophylatic, or for some other satisfactory purpose.—"At eleven o'clock, while mixtures under various peculiar names—sling, toddy, flip, &c.—solicited the appetite at the bar of the common tippling shop, the office of professional men, and the counting room, dismissed their occupants for a half hour, to regale themselves at a neighbor's or a coffee house, with punch, hot or iced, according to the season—and females and valetudinaries courted an appetite with medicated rum, under the chaste name of Huxham's Tincture, or Stoughton's Elixir. The dinner hour arrived, according to the different customs of different districts of country, whiskey and water, curiously flavored with apples, or brandy and water, introduced the feast; whiskey or brandy, with water, helped it through, and whiskey or brandy, without water, often secured its safe digestion, not again to be used in any more formal manner than for the relief of occasional thirst, or for the entertainment of a friend, until the last appeal should be made to them to secure a sound night's sleep." Rum, seasoned with cherries, protected against the cold; rum, seasoned with cherries, protected against the heat; rum, with a little mint, quieted the stomach; rum, saturated with peach nuts, was astringent; rum, with aloes, was aperient; and rum, doubly poisoned opium, under the name of paregoric, quieted the infant's cries, and rendered it stupid and incapable of troubling its fond mother by indicating, in its natural way, its pains and its desires. This general use of the article by citizen and soldier, farmer, mechanic, lawyer, physician, patient, and every other class of society, it may readily be supposed, consumed a large quantity of the article: and accordingly in the year 1830, facts were thought to justify the inference that 72 millions of gallons of distilled spirits were consumed in this country, near half a gill a day, or six gallons a year for every man, woman and child in the land! This, certainly, was giving the discovery of De Villeneuve a fair trial, and abundant opportunity for the developement of its virtues. However, it was occasionally observed that an individual under its influence was suddenly surprised with an apoplexy, or something of the kind, and his life instantly extinguished. Such an occurrence, especially when often repeated, was calculated to excite some doubt as to its power "to prolong life:" but then it was accounted for satisfactorily by supposing that such an one had taken 'a drop too much.' Another, heated by the liquor coursing through his veins, was known to have attempted, and perhaps with a fatal success, the life of his unoffending neighbor, friend, or relative.—This was strange, considering its known power of 'dissipating vicious humors,' and producing hilarity and good feelings—but then such an one had certainly taken 'too little'—he had come short of the point which produces "the feast of reason and the flow of soul!" Another, driven to desperation by its uninterrupted use, had restored to the knife, the halter, or the precipice, to obtain peace to his troubled conscience; but he used it like a brute, and how could it be expected "to revive the heart" when thus used? It had been once supposed to "perpetuate youth," but the question was early decided, that there was a real distinction between a bloated form and one of well proportioned em bon point, between the blending of the rose and the lily of youth, and the efflorescence of the devoted Bacchanalian. Among the strangest effects observed to be in some way or other connected with, although not certainly to be ascribed to it, was a strange propensity developed in those who used it, to abuse and maltreat their helpless children and their heart-broken wives—and this, perhaps, in one whose natural disposition was amiable, and his affections warm and confiding. Jails, Poor houses, Mad-houses, Hospitals, it was thought had been unusually well supplied with inmates since its use had become so common.—Some were so curious as to look into the comparative numbers among these receptacles of vice and wretchedness, of those who were addicted to its use and those who were not, and were astonished at the preponderance of the former. Lawyers marked an immense disproportion between the numbers of their temperate and their intemperate clients. Physicians, too, began to feel the importance of inquiring into the habits of their patients, as it was found that the intemperate died where the temperate recovered—the latter could bear active treatment, the former sunk under it. The cause of this important distinction became a subject of serious investigation; and as the exterior demonstrations, such as inflamed eyes, bloated skin, carbuncled nose, blistered tongue and lip, tremulous hand, unsteady step, were insufficient to account for it, they adopted the plan resorted to by the vates of old—they consulted the viscera. The omens were most unpropitious for the "healthful properties" of the drug; water and blood effused upon the brain, inflamation, ulceration, cancer of the stomach, enlargements of the heart, obstruction, abscess, disorganization of the liver and spleen, general and local dropsies, too plainly indicated that Intemperance ——"Is full of all disease; her bones

Are rotten; consumption licks her blood, and drinks
Her marrow up; her breath smells mortally,
And in her bowels plague and fever lurk,
And in her very heart, and reins, and life,
Corruption's worm gnaws greedily unseen."

The Ministers of our Holy Religion, also, began seriously to direct their attention to the growing and alarming evil. Observation confirmed the truth and justice of the declaration "No drunkard can enter the kingdom of Heaven." Man is a compound being: the constituents are soul and body; and however dark and mysterious the nature of the connection, one thing is certain, that when in union, they mutually influence and react upon each other. Ardent spirits act primarily on the physical organization, but they stop not here—they extend their malign influence through it to the immortal spirit; they sear its conscience, blunt its moral sensibilities, debilitate and derange its intellectual faculties, brutalize its affections, and degrade the objects of its pursuit.—These things were often seen and felt by the messenger of God's holy word: he deplored them, he wept bitterly over them, he expostulated, he entreated, he extorted promises of amendment—faithless promises! which, as experience too frequently taught him, only added to the guilt of him who made them.

Nor was the Patriot insensible to the calamities wich seemed to threaten his beloved country. Her liberty was dear to him—it had been purchased at the price of many a brave heart's blood. Her civil institutions had become the wonder and admiration of the world: through much anxiety and labor, they had been established by men, of whose patriotism and wisdom they were a splendid monument. The ballot-box is the palladium of their safety, but through it, so easily accessible, so designedly unguarded, and ready to receive the impress of the public mind, this liberty and these institutions were ever liable to assault. And what could he expect of the citizen in support of them, who was not only a slave, bound in chains which he could not break, but whose debased mind was wholly incapaciated for estimating their value. What! a nation of drunkards be a nation of freemen!—Preposterous idea! The mere pecuniary cost, although amounting to 100 millions of dollars anually: the drain upon human life, although equal to 35,000 souls a year, were awful considerations, yet they were doubly afflicting when associated with the risk of poisoning that fountain of all our civil blessings, the ballot box—for what other than shipwreck and ruin could befal that vessel whose crew and passengers were given up to intemperance?—Thus this national evil began to be regarded in a serious aspect, as not only destructive of individual welfare and happiness, but as tending to sap the life blood from our social and civil institutions. Public attention having been directed to the subject, facts were sought after in order that the full extent of the evil might be disclosed, and that the people of this country, especially, who are so deeply interested in whatever affects the public sentiments and morals, might know its full length, and breadth, and depth among themselves. Accordingly, it was ascertained on indisputable authority, that of 781 maniacs in different insane hospitals, 392 were rendered such by strong drink—that of 3740 paupers in the public charities of New York, Pennsylvania, and Maryland, 3433, or all but 307, were made such by strong drink—and that of 906 criminals confined to various jails throughout the country for every grade of crime known to the catalogue of criminal jurisprudence, 684 were addicted to its use, and most of their crimes committed under its influence. But this was not all. Not only did the blood of its murdered victim call from the earth for justice, but the cries of the famished infant, the prayers of the heart-broken wife and parents, of the aged and infirm, neglected and despised by their ungrateful offspring, ascended up to Heaven for relief. These cries and these prayers rang throughout the land, but what, alas! could be done? The detection of the disease, and of its horrible inroads upon the constitution, is but the first step towards effecting the cure. A remedy is next to be found, an effectual remedy, and this must be carefully and often perseveringly applied. This was an object of no easy accomplishment. Already had the Pulpit and the Press, those mighty engines in revolutionizing the feelings and impressing the judgment, essayed to the combat. Their admonitions, their entreaties, their arguments, and the dreadful terrors which they held up to view, both here and hereafter, as the reward of the drunkard, were heard: but they were heard only to be spoken of and then forgotten, if not depised. And how could it be otherwise, since reason and reflection, the affections and all the finer feelings of the soul, no longer abide with the intemperate. In their bosoms, the chords which were wont to vibrate when these notes were touched, are unstrung at least, if not totally and irreparably disunited. Can argument or persuasion, can the feelings of parental love or filial affection, can the strongest mental powers, or the finest sensibilities of our nature, arrest the progress of physical disease? Sooner this, than destroy the appetite, once formed, for ardent spirits, or remove that morbid craving from within which still cries, Give! Give! and can know no satisfaction, because generated, nourished, and sustained, by that which is given to allay it. No—it cannot be otherwise. Changed in his physical being, a very brute in respect to moral attributes, the confirmed drunkard is a stranger to the influence of those powers whereby Providence designed that man should act upon his fellow man. Grown up, strengthened and confirmed in his habits of inebriation, like the skin of the Ethiopian, or the spots upon the leopard's hide, they are a part of his being, and only that Almighty Power which can create him anew, seems adequate to his reformation. What, then, was to be done? Must the splendid fabric of these political institutions be abandoned in despair? Must this last fond hope of civil and religious liberty on earth be consigned to the drunkard's keeping? Such, indeed, seemed to be the results foreboded by the Patriot and Philanthropist. But such was not the will of Him who is the Author of all good counsels, and of all just works. In this momentous crisis, an ecclesiastical body called the General Association of Massachusetts Proper, in the year 1813 formed a Society whose object should be "to check the progress of intemperance, viewed by the Association as an alarming and growing evil," and elected that eminent statesman, Samuel Dexter for its President. The means by which they proposed to accomplish this great object, were singularly simple and easy of application, viz., to form associations from all classes of the community, who should resolve "not to use ardent spirits, nor traffic in it; not to provide it as an article of entertainment, or for persons in their employ, and that, in all suitable ways, they would discountenance the use of it in the community." Here was a new principle of action incorporated into the body politic—an attempt to do good by simply ceasing to do evil. All former plans had failed—this was deemed worthy of trial. Fortunate idea! happy men who conceived it! "Generations yet unborn, to all future ages, saved by simply ceasing to do evil, and learning to do well, will rise up and call you blessed." The electric spark was communicated—and with a rapidity proper to itself, it was felt in every fibre of the body politic. Auxiliary societies every where in the country, where there was one sober breath to blow the horn of Temperance, sprang into existence, and a report from the Parent Society, made just 20 years after its first organization, exhibits that there were then more than 4000 auxiliary societies in the United States, numbering 600,000 members—that more than 4000 merchants had ceased to traffic in it; and that more than 4000 drunkards had ceased to use intoxicating drinks. It adds, "There is also reason to believe that more than 20,000 persons are now sober, who, had it not been for the temperance reformation, would, before now, have been sots; and that 20,000 families are now in ease and comfort, without a drunkard in them, or one who is becoming a drunkard who would otherwise have been in poverty, or cursed with a drunken inmate; and that 50,000 children are released from the blasting influence of drunken parents, and 100,000 more from that parental influence which tended to make them drunkards." At the present time, it is probable that these numbers have been more than doubled, and that this vast society, having struck its root deep in the land, and elevated its majestic head, and extended far and wide its branches among us affords a secure, and pleasant, and healthful retreat from danger, to more than 2,000,000 of human beings, who had else been exposed to the dangers of this sweeping storm. How many well meaning and virtuous individuals of both sexes it has exempted from the shame of ignorantly, through a false hospitality, ministering to this debased appetite, we shall not pretend to estimate. It is no longer considered unhospitable to withhold poison from a friend!

These are truly encouraging results: but a knowledge of them should only serve to stimulate to increased exertion in a cause so highly favored and prosperous. Foreign nations, beholding them from across the wide Atlantic, have anxiously seized hold of this simple and beautiful amulet for so frightful a disorder, and earnestly employed it among themselves. There should be no abatement of effort with those who first discovered it, and who have the best reason for its employment, so long as one drunkard remains to disgrace human nature in our land—and even then it should be worn as an effectual preventive, as well as cure, of the disorder. And let me tell you there will be no such abatement. The cause of temperance is the cause of our country—yet, it is even more, it is the cause of our God, it is the precursor of our Holy Religion, and therefore cannot fail.

It is needless, at this time, to dilate upon the objects of this Society. Like every other plan of doing good, it has its enemies, among whom are to be found some who, from ignorance or design, misrepresent the objects which it aims to accomplish. These, however, need no defence from me; abler minds have already discharged this duty. The off-spring of pure Benevolence and Patriotism, no evil consequences can legitimately spring from it. It aims only at the great and good effort of bringing every human being, but especially every one of our countrymen, within the sphere of its influence. It asserts no doubtful authority, it invades no sacred privilege, but simply appeals to the duty and the interest of every one, to come forth as the champion of abstinence, as the friend of peace and order in society, as the advocate of his country's good, and as the open and determined foe to Intemperance. I have heard of but one objection to it, which seems calculated, in some degree, to operate to its prejudice in an ingenious and virtous mind—which is, that it is unnecessary, that the ethics of the Christian religion are alone sufficient to regulate and direct our conduct in society. And so they are. But does any one propose the Temperance Society as a substitute for religion? If so, he has totally and shamefully misapprehended and misrepresented its ends. It is only the reducing of these ethics to practical application—an attempt to familiarize the world with the practical bearing of those injunctions of Holy Writ which are "pure, lovely, and of good report." And who is opposed to this? No one certainly calling himself a Christian. If there be, he has certainly fallen into a monstrous error, a most dangerous deception. Let him calmly survey the ground he occupies, and enquire who it is that is at the bottom of every suggestion against doing good? who it is that is ever ready to supply a reason for CAUTION, and DOUBT, and DISINCLINATION in such service.

A DESTRUCTIVE.—A writer in the last number of the Journal of the American Temperance Union makes the following specific charges against alcohol. He asserts that its occasions,

1. Three-fourths of the crime in the State of New York.
2. Seven-eights of the pauperism.
3. Three-fourths of the taxation.
4. One-third of the deaths of adult males.
5. Nearly half of the diseases.
6. From twenty to thirty thousand drunkards.
7. Loss of twelve years, on the average, from each drunkard's life.
8. The destruction of millions of property, annually, in one way and another.

But there is a great amount of evil produced by alcohol which is not usually referred to this source. A very great part of the listlessness, indifference, inattention to family affair, loss of time, want of enterprise and energy, and general delinquency, which are spoken of only as natural failings or moral defects are doubtless the result of drinking; and this too in many cases in which a character for intemperance is never acquired.

From the Western Christian Advocate.

METHODISM IN GERMANY.

Dear Brethren:—I received, a few days ago, the cheering intelligence, that the blessings of Methodism are now also communicated to my countrymen in the "Fatherland." Mr. Miller, a native German, who was converted and joined the Methodist society at London, and then returned as the Wesleyan missionary for the kingdom of Wurtemburg, his birth place, wrote to me, that the cause of God is prospering there, and would prosper still more, if there were not so great restriction laid upon their society by the government. The rationalistic clergy is most opposed to the Methodists; but even the orthodox party watches them closely, and keeps them rigidly within the narrow limits of their privileges. "Some bigotry," writes the missionary, "is felt by the most and best of them." The public press too, has come out against the new sect, and wishes to prove that there is no need of Methodism in a christian country, where there are so many evangelical preachers. The short answer of the missionary was, that whilst he saw the country deluged with wickedness, he must cry aloud and spare not, but that the Methodists would promise, as soon as they saw all their neighbors converted, to give them over to them, and seek another sphere of labor. I will give the remaining part of brother Miller's letter in his own words: "To the praise of God, out of the dust, I would say, the Lord has blest me, and made me a blessing to many souls. I am fully convinced that I was sent by the Lord to the right place. We are, thank God, building the walls of Jerusalem, though it is with sword in hand. We have in our society about 100 members, and I have about 60 men to help in the work. I visit forty appointments, and from many more places we receive the invitation, 'Come over & help us.' Our people hold about eighty meetings every week in the different societies. We have translated Mr. Wesley's Notes on the New Testament, and are far advanced in the translation of his sermons and hymns. My best assistant preacher, a powerful man to break up the ground, is now sick, and on the verge of eternity. If he recovers he has a desire to go to America, if you can make use of him.—They will not suffer him, in this country, to labor again, on account of the 'excitement' that follows his preaching. He was imprisioned several times on account of his revivals of religion. He is a man of about 30 years, of respectable parentage. He has just made a will of his property to about four charitable institutions, and to our mission, in case he should die. Can you make use of him, if his life should be spared?"

Not only through missionary operations, but through other channels, Methodism made its way into the very heart of Germany; and no doubt will prove more efficacious in regenerating this nation, then all their philosophical systems of religion. I learned that Watson's Life of Wesley, and Fletcher's Life, and Rutherford's Letters on Christian Perfection, have been lately translated in Germany, and attract the attention of the theologians, May the Lord make the holy fire burn brighter and brighter on the German alter on both sides of the Atlantic, and may its flames soon meet each other! WM. NAST.

Cincinnati, Dec. 6, 1839.

GILBERT Y. FRANCIS, who lately died at New Orleans, of yellow fever, led a most remarkable and romantic life. He has left a memoir for the press. In early life he was attached to the navy—then to the stage—travelled over the four quarters of the globe—was for two years a prisoner in the great desert of Arabia—afterwards a slave to the Bashaw of Tunis—then lieutenant of a Guerilla party in Spain and then master of a Dutch lugger trading to the Malaccas. He was subsequently overseer of a sugar estate in Jamaica—then engaged in cutting logwood in the forest of Campeachy—was for three months a prisoner among Banditti in Mexico—then a captive among the Camanches—was ransomed by some fur traders from Oregon—was employed by the Governor of the Russian settlements to command a brig in the wheat trade with Chili—finally visited his native State and married, and was extensively engaged in Texan operations when death arrested him, still in the prime of life. His education was defective, but he was a man of great energy of character.

JAMES KIRKPATRICK.—Since the publication of our last number, we have received a communication from Mrs. NANCY MERRY—the unfortunate woman who has been so cruelly deceived by the scoundrel above named,—in which she authorizes us to offer, in her behalf, a reward, of One Hundred Dollars to any person who will take him up, and deliver him, together with the horse and carriage which he carried off, either to herself, or at the jail of Madison county. She also states that the wen mentioned in our notice is about the size of a patridge's egg, and situated on or near the point of the chin; and that the wagon spoken of is a neat dearborn or buggy, suitable for traveling.—Alton Telegraph.

MORE VILLAINY.—Mr. Thomas H. Kimber, of Belleville, offers through the newspapers a reward of one hundred dollars for the apprehension of a man calling himself Eli Dyer, who came to the Marine Settlement, in this county, about the last of July, with the avowed intention of seeking a home in the West; and by means of forged letters of recommendation from the Hon. Levi Woodbury, as well as from the Rev. Albert Barnes and other clergymen, succeeded in defrauding sundry individuals of money and property to the value of several hundred dollars. This individual represents himself as a Minister in the Presbyterian Church, is apparently between 50 and 60 years of age, about five feet seven or eight inches high, very stout built, dark complexion, strong features, with deeply set grayish eyes. In preaching he is fluent, earnest, and solemn; and usually wears a brown or auburn wig, his own hair being quite white. He was accompanied by a young woman, who went by the name of Matilda Ann Jones, and passed for his niece; and they left Marine together on the 2d of October last.—ib.

LORD BROUGAAM.—Rev. Mr. Clark, in his "Glimpse of the Old World" thus describes the appearance of this celebrated orator.

Lord Brougham's appearance is rather striking. He is somewhat tall, quite thin rather careless in his personal appearance, with a face, into which, when he is speaking, is thrown infinite expression. I never saw a man who played off with so much felicity and effect, whole volleys of the most keen and caustic satire. When assailing an opponent, having cut off all possibility of retreat, he seems to stand and wave over him in taunt his shining scymitar before it descends with merciless and exterminating power. His words do not express half the meaning that is conveyed while he is speaking. He has the habit of drawing up one side of his face, and especially the left nostril, into such an aquiline shape, when about to utter anything particularly caustic, that every word seems to derive immense point from the peculiar expression of his countenance.

Useful Animals.—Mr. Breckinbridge in his tour on the Continent of Europe, says that the Goat and the Ass, are the never failing companions of the poor throughout temperate latitudes of Europe. The latter animal performs all his labor—the former supplies the greater part of his luxuries—and both the most abstemious of all creatures, and the least choice of all in the very portion of food needful for either of them, seem intended by nature as the peculiar heritage of poverty.

On the death of Major Lang, the enterprising traveller in Africa, the Africans took an inventory of his effects with a view of sending them to the British Admiral. They were sorely puzzled to make out the catalogue, and in utter despair, described a couple of tooth-brushes, as 'two scrapers made of pig's hair,' and set down his spectacles as 'two looking-glasses for the nose.'

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

THE PRESENT LIFE—IS IT A STATE OF RETRIBUTION?

Mr. Editor:—That this life is a state of trial and probation, rather than a state of retribution, is, I believe, the most generally received opinion. Doctors differ, and so do theologians, and as I conceive the most popular to be the erroneous view of this subject, and fraught with injurious consequences to those entertaining it, I will, with your permission, lay before your readers, a few of the reasons, why I maintain the contrary belief,—that this life is a state of retribution—With your sentiments, Mr. Editor, on this subject, I am entirely unacquainted, and know not whether you would answer the query at the head of this communication affirmatively or negatively; but, believing you to be friendly to free discussion, and a believer in the maxim of him, whose memory is dear to every friend of religious liberty, that "error of opinion is to be tolerated while reason is left free to combat it," I hesitate not to attempt the discussion of the question in your paper, although you might, peradventure, differ in opinion with me. I proceed then, Mr. Editor, premising, that, were I not fully persuaded that much of the misery and sufferings, physical and mental, endured by our fellow-men, are the result of conduct induced by a disbelief of the doctrine I am endeavoring to establish, I would not trouble you or your readers with any arguments on the subject. But such is my thorough conviction of the correctness of my views, that I hesitate not to make them known, being fully satisfied of the moral tendency and effects of a general concurrence therein or belief thereof, and of the demoralizing tendency of the contrary belief.

In the first place I will essay to establish the truth of the doctrine, that this life is a state of retribution, by recurring to some of the numerous accounts of God's dealings with offenders, under the Jewish dispensation, and during the first six ages of the world, as we find them recorded in the old Scriptures.

Our first parents were permitted to eat of every tree of the garden, but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil they were commanded not to eat; but our mother Eve, fancied that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree much to be desired to make one wise, partook of the fruit, "and gave also unto her husband with her, and he did eat," in express violation of a command of their Creator. And were they not immediately punished for their disobedience and curiosity, and was not this life a state of retribution to them? Hear the language of Him whose right it was to punish. Saith the Lord unto Eve, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." And unto Adam, he said, "because thou hast harkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, thou shalt not eat of it; cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return."

Cain rose up against his brother Abel and slew him. For this great crime he was sorely punished, so that in the depths of his misery he cried out unto God, my punishment is greater than I can bear. He felt himself to be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth, which was the punishment God pronounced against him, and that the earth should no longer yield unto him her strength. To him then, as well as to the progenitors of our fallen race, this life was a state of punishment—of retribution.

The antediluvians were visited with the retributive justice of Heaven, for their sins and crimes, in their total destruction, save Noah, a preacher of righteousness and his family. Their guilt and enormities called down on their devoted heads the displeasure of God, whose unalterable system of government, conceived in the councils of eternity, required the punishment of disobedience in Adam, the father of our race, and will continue to require it as long as any of the degenerate sons of a degenerate ancestry remain in hostility to its reasonable requirements. When God saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and he brought a flood of waters which destroyed all, save Noah and his family, a sore punishment inflicted on a guilty world, and incontestible proof that this life was then a state of retribution.

The unrighteous rebellion of Korah, Dathan and Abiram, was punished in a manner that should convince all, that God will mete out merited punishment to the guilty, in this life. They provoked the Lord, saith the scriptures, and it came to pass that the ground clave asunder that was under them, and the earth opened her mouth and swallowed them up, they and all that appertained to them went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them, and they perished from among the congregation.

The history of Ahaz, the son of David, who reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, also furnishes evidence that this life is a state of retribution. He did not that which was right in the sight of the Lord, but became an idolator, burnt incense in the valley of Hinnom, and burnt his children in the fire, after the abominations of the heathen; wherefore the Lord delivered him into the hands of the king of Syria, who smote him.

Solomon became an idolator, and went after Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites. And the Lord was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the Lord God of Israel, who had commanded him that he should not go after the gods. For violating this command, the Lord said unto Solomon, forasmuch as thou hast not kept my covenant and my statutes which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee and give it to thy servant.—And God stirred up two adversaries unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite and Rezon the son of Eliadah, who was adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon and Jeroboam. Solomon's servant also lifted up his hand against the king, all of which was clearly a punishment inflicted on Solomon for his idolatry, for permitting his wives to turn away his heart.

Those of your readers that are familiar with sacred history will remember that a hundred and twenty thousand were slain in Judah in one day, because, in the language of the scriptures, they had forsaken the Lord God of their fathers. Amnon, David's eldest son, was punished with death, for the crime of adultery.

Sodom and Gomorrah, and all the cities in the vale of Siddim, were destroyed for their wickedness, by fire and brimstone from heaven, save righteous Lot, who was saved from destruction—which is proof—irrefragable proof, that God does reward the virtuous and punishes the vicious, in the present life.

The above are only a few of the very many examples which might be added, under the old Testament dispensation, of the punishment, in this life, of the wicked, and of the reward of the righteous. I now proceed to furnish a few examples, under the gospel dispensation, in proof of the position I am endeavoring to maintain.

The history of the Jewish nation—a n peculiarly favored of the Lord, is now, a been for

'One millenium and more,'

a standing monument of the truth of the do
I maintain. The Jews disregarded the Sav prophecies respecting their city and nat rejected His gospel—depised His teaching counsels, and finally they crucified Him. A result of their unbelief and guilt, their the Holy City, is besieged, taken, sacked burnt by Titus, and more than one milli that devoted nation are destroyed in Jerus besides many thousands that in other plac
Judea, killed themselves and perished th famine, banishment and other miseries.
Jewish nation, that crucified their Lord, is scattered throughout all the earth, a bye-and reproach among all nations.

Annanias and Sapphira, it appears from first chapter of the Acts, were sorely puni for lying. At the rebuke of the Apostle P they both fell down dead

Herod persecuted the christians and k
James the brother of John, and imprisoned Pe and ordered the keepers of the prison to be to death. As a punishment for his cruelty pride, the angel of the Lord smote him, and was eaten of worms and gave up the ghost.

These examples suffice to show, that un the gospel dispensation, the wicked are punis and the righteous rewarded,—that this life i state of retribution. But what are the less of experience on this subject? We do well heed the voice of scripture and experience.
not the righteous man happy in this life, and wicked unhappy, miserable? He whose c science is void of offence towards God and m pursues the even tenor of his way through li happily and plesantly; while he who has u his conscience, guilt and crime, endures puni ment to which innocence is a stranger. He w has been guilty of infractions of human or divi laws, is in a state of punishment continually;
fancies he hears the tread of the executioner

'The rustling of every forest leaf,' while the virtuous man, quietly and smooth sails down the stream of time, conscious that h Father is at the helm of his little barque, a that he will at last be safely anchored in the pc of bliss.

In the language of scripture, there is no pea to the wicked; they are like the troubled se whose waters cast up mire and dirt. Peac angel guest! to the wicked thou art a strange Saith the wise man, the righteous shall be recon pensed in the earth much more the wicked an the sinner. In the house of the righteous much treasure, but in the revenues of the wicke is trouble.

The history and experience of every age, pr sent this doctrine in letters of living light, s that all who acquaint themselves therewith mus admit its truth. Is it not a truth, that ever class of offenders receive in some manner th punishment due to their offences? The burgla the parricide, the counterfeiter, the highway man, receives his punishment in the State' prison, while those guilty of offences of a les heinous nature are punished without our prison walls. The drunkard's punishment consists in loss of health, wealth, reputation and happiness
The offenders of a still less heinous or guilty character are suffering the gnawings of a guilty conscience, the loss of peace of mind and o comfort and happiness. Truly, as saith the scripture and experience, "the way of the transgressor is hard."

The disbelief of the doctrine that this life is a state of retribution, has, in my opinion, been the cause of the commission of much crime, and consequently has occasioned much suffering.—Think you, if all who are now expiating their crimes in our States' prisons, had, previous to the commission of those crimes, fully believed this life to be a state of retribution, and that the degradation and suffering they are now enduring were inevitable consequences of crime, from which they could not escape, that they would, notwithstanding such belief, have committed such crimes? I trow not. They did not believe that punishment in this life, certainly and inevitably followed crime. They expected to reap the benefits of their villainy and to escape punishment, by eluding the officers of justice. They thought to enjoy a life of pleasure and happiness in the ways of sin and crime.

The violator of the divine law, knows full well, whether he escapes the hands of the executioner or not, that this is a state of punishment—of retribution. True, all infractions of human laws have not in this life, been physically punished, but a full knowledge of the history of such as have thus escaped would show that mental is more intense than physical suffering, and that in regard to them as well as others, the scripture declaration is true, that they shall be recompensed in the earth, and that there is no peace to the wicked. LUTHER.

LUTHER's query—"is this life a state of retribution?" We answer this question affirmatively. We never heard the position doubted by any sound divine; so that thus far, Luther has proved what no man denies. But there is another question—"is this life a state of complete and final retribution?" To this we would reply negatively. That God exercises a moral government over this world, is one of the most prominent articles of our creed; He punishes vice, in this life, as vice, that is, as mischievous to society; and He rewards virtue, as virtue, that is, as beneficial to society. But, that this government is complete and final here, is contradicted by both scripture and matter of fact. If the government of God were perfect here, every man would be punished for sin, and all punishments, for similar offences, (and so of rewards,) would be equal. But who would pretend that this is the case? God does not perfect his moral government, in this life, otherwise it could not be a state of trial; neither is He indifferent to virtue and vice, so that the nations may learn righteousness. The fact that a moral government is begun and carried on, in this life, to a certain extent, excites a presumption that it will be completed hereafter. If God has now laid the foundation, he will ultimately raise the superstructure; hence an argument, from natural religion, in favor of a future judgment or "retribution." EDITOR.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 8, 1840.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

1. In every instance where a communication is forwarded to us for publication, the proper name must accompany it, or no attention will be paid thereto.

2. Any one who may wish to animadvert upon any of the functionaries of the church, the provisions of the discipline, or any of the exciting topics of the day, must permit us, at our own discretion, to connect his proper name with any communication he may write on any of these subjects.

3. We will cheerfully publish any selected extracts, our friends may desire, not inconsistent with the character of our paper; provided, they will send, addressed to the "Western Recorder" the paper or pamphlet containing them. But, if sent in writing, we cannot attend to them.

4. We are willing to pay postage on the following letters: 1. All that we have especially invited to write for our paper. 2. The communications of the Presidents of the Districts, giving an account of the spiritual condition of their charges. 3. All letters containing at least five new subscribers. 4. All which contain ten dollars cash;—5. or all which contain at least two new subscribers and five dollars cash. If any person wishes an agent to write to us when these terms cannot be complied with, he must advance to such agent the postage of the letter. If these rules are violated, we will notice it on the reception of the letter, so as to bring them to the recollection of our friends.

The following from the Jeffersonian of the 2d instant, published at Carrollton, Ohio, was marked for our notice:

"Western Recorder.—This is the title of a religious paper, published at Zanesville, Ohio, which we read, generally, with much interest.—We, however, take exceptions to this general rule, and read with mortification and regret, occasionally, selected articles which detract from the desired character of the paper and its pastoral editor, for candor and truth. The most objectionable article of the kind appeared in the 17th No., under date of December 19, the very caption of which contained a palpable falsehood. It is in these words—'Frauds upon the Indians by the highest officers of government,' copied from the tory 'Albany Advertiser.' The whole article, about one column in length, is a tissue of falsehoods, from beginning to end, without the semblance of truth for its foundation. Many of the charges therein, having long since been exploded and the authors exposed as falsifiers. We regret the appearance of such slanders in the religious Recorder, on several accounts. 1st. Because it is unjust and villanous in its design; (that is, in the design of the author;) consequently anti-christian and demoralizing in its effects. 2d. It destroys the usefulness and influence, to some extent, of the Recorder. 3d. It does injustice and reflects upon the character of the American people, and especially those who support the administration. Brother Springer, will you look to these things in future; or can you produce proof of the charges contained in that article."

We remark upon this article. 1st. We presume the difficulty with our brother Cable, is, he thinks our paper opposed to his party, in politics. We will quiet his fears, on that subject, by stating that the Recorder is not to be dedicated to party political purposes. But the religious press, being the guardian of the public morals, should faithfully rebuke dishonesty, no difference in what party it were found, or whether in high places or else where.

2. The gentleman accuses us of making "selections" "which detract from the character of the paper and its pastoral editor, for truth and candor" Now, we wonder if the worthy editor has examined the meaning of these terms. We have not endorsed any of these selections, and thus made ourself responsible for their statements; nor have we refused to publish any corrections or denials with regard to their facts, which have been forwarded to us. Our paper is extensively read by all the political parties, and the first objection of the kind, we have heard, is the one before us, which we have given a prompt insertion in our columns. Brother Cable, impeach our ignorance, if you see cause, but don't assail our candor or veracity, until you at least have an opportunity of testing these qualities of our mind.

3. As it respects the facts of the article under notice, we have not endorsed them; we gave them on the credit of the paper in which they were originally published, leaving the public to judge of the matter for themselves. But we were aware of one thing,—if they were true, that they would be denied by those to whom they were applicable, and their friends, with all the blusterings of conscious guilt.

Not only do we believe the "highest officers of government" capable of practicing "frauds upon the Indians," but we believe the government itself has defrauded them in a manner highly discreditable to the nation. The way the southern Indians have been bargained and jockied out of their possessions—driven from the homes of their fathers;—the war that is now carried on against the small remnant that contend for their rights, we consider, and we claim the right to our opinion, is disgraceful to any civilized nation.

With regard to "doing injustice and reflecting upon the character of the American people,"&c. it is a maxim with us, that those who want to be respected, must first respect themselves. We here feel impelled to announce a sentiment that we utter with great reluctance, because of the solicitude we feel for our national honor. It is our settled conviction that two-thirds, or more, of the leading men of both the political parties, of the present day, are a set of faithless demagogues,—not to be believed—not to be trusted. And as for the party press, generally, like the Kentuckian's Irishman, it lies by instinct. There is, we know, a large amount of intelligence, piety and honesty in this nation, but so completely has the demon of party taken possession of the public mind, for several years past, but few honest men will give their consent to have any thing to do with politics; and if they were even to enter the political arena, they cannot resort to that deception, fraud and falsehood, that seem necessary to ensure success in the present state of the public mind. We give the following from the Washington correspondent of the Ohio (Columbus,)Statesman, which our brother Cable will no doubt, consider good authority, confirmatory of these views:

Extract of a letter dated

Washington, Jan. 2, 1840.

I apprehend that the candid and intelligent are beginning generally to regard "Washington letter writers," et cetera, as great boors. I do not call myself one, though I write from Washington. You may, however, nevertheless regard this as a boor, and decline publishing. Consult, in the matter, your own judgment. But in case it should be published, I wish to say, that they, the letter writers, &c., profess, of course, to detail facts, which occur here from day to day, but so often have they been found "false witnesses," that honest people begin to pass their reiterated stories by rather as airy imaginings, than as sober realities. "Truth" with them, is emphatically "stranger than fiction," as they have much to do with the latter, but seldom find it expedient to resort to the former. What else can be expected, when men come here for the express purpose of making merchandise of their consciences, if it be not a solecism in language, to accord to most of them, any such a thing as conscience. They place themselves in market, and make bona fide sales of all that elevates man above the beasts of the field, to different purchasers, who acquire of them services totally dissimilar. By one, they are required to prove that truth is falsehood and visa versa. They have an all sufficient salvo however, to quiet the qualms of conscience, should the ghost of this murdered monitor ever disturb their lucubrations, in the "almighty dollar."—This demi-god points the arrow barbed with falsehood, against the good name of honest men—sucks the blood of reputation, and seeks to blacken the fair fame of the wisest and the best. How admirably have some of them acquired the trade of blowing hot and cold with the same breath!—One hour is spent in blackening the character of some prominent friend of the administration, who has dealt some blow against the hopes of Federalism. But behold! a 'charge comes o'er the spirit of his dream,' and the next perhaps, is employed by this veritable letter writer, in representing as an "angel of light" he, who but an hour ago, was as black as Belzebub. These two representations, as wide apart as the poles, are distined, of course, for different markets, and show what a "purchasable" thing is such a man's principles.

Now, what is here said of the letter writers at Washington, may be said with equal propriety of the political press and of political partizans generally. We cannot account for this state of things, only on the supposition, that this nation needs correction, and that the Ruler of the universe has let loose upon us the demon of party to chastise us for our national crimes. And it does seem to us, of all the varied afflictions of Providence, to be the most severe mode of chastisement.

The following article from the Brother Jonathan, of the 21st ultimo, a paper professing neutrality in politics, is appropos to our subject:

Rowdies.—We have been very forcibly struck with the following passage in one of the letters of Mr. McLoad, to the Times, of which he is an editor. He dates at Washington, and refers to the proceedings of the House of Representatives, upon Friday and Saturday last.

"I have not room nor time to-night to give a sketch of the spectacle the House presented to-night and last night—the by-play—the tricks of the whippers-in, &c. &c. There are more rowdies in the present House of Representatives, than in any I have know during my residence at Washington."

Knowing what we know of what Mr. McLoad must have known, during his residence at Washington, we are truly amazed at this declaration. For we have seen scenes upon that floor that would secure a lodgement for the actors in them in the watch-house over night, and the penitentiary, for years after, had they been played off in our own not very orderly city of New York, instead of the Capitol. We have seen two members, with their dirk and pistol, attemping to meet each other in the broad aisle of the House, in deadly struggle. We have seen one of the present candidates for the Speakership strike a colleague a blow in the face with his fist, during a debate. We have heard another member call the Speaker, in one of the lobbies, a dammed tyrant, and we have heard the words liar, scoundrel, puppy, and coward, reiterated ad nauseam, by one and another of these custodians of the public interests, these law makers for an intelligent, moral, and law-loving people.

We have in our eye some of the rowdies to which the junior editor of the Times has allusion in the paragraph we have quoted. We could (perhaps one day we may,) draw their potraits, so that their most intimate acquaintances would not be slow in recognizing the likeness. Perhaps we shall let them do this for themselves in our columns, during the lapse of the session just commencing, by giving them the benefit of a fair record of their sayings and doings, in their places at the Capitol.

But the end and aim we had in view in commencing this article was simply this: to ask the reader to pause for a moment over the consideration, whence does all this difficulty,—this discrepancy between the theory and the practice of the representative department of the government,—arise? Why is it, that, in a land like ours, where the blessings of moral culture and intellectual instruction are so widely, nay, so uniformly diffused,—the very essence of the national character for wisdom, probity and morality is not, (as the theory is as it should be,) distilled and concentrated in the halls of legislation? Why, with such a constitution, with such institutions, with such inducements to pursue an honorable, high minded and patriotic course, should it be that there should be any 'rowdies in the present House of Representatives' of the United States?

Does it not arise from the devotion paid, on all hands, by our countrymen, to that "fellest monster" Party? A demon whose hideousness was painted in letters of living light, by the Father of his Country, in that immortal "legacy" to his countrymen,—his farewell address, upon retiring from public to private life! This is the author of all these troubles. The upright, honorable, conscientious gentleman is loth to take the field against the loud talking, brawling, pot-house politician, feeling unable to compete with him in the use of those inflammatory and exaggerated appeals to the cupidity, the ignorance, and the wrong-headedness of the crowd around "the stump:" and thus it happens that the "rowdies" of whom Mr. McLoed speaks, come up in great numbers, to the halls of national legislation, to the everlasting disgrace of themselves, their constituency, and the country.

Electioneering morality is set down, by a consent far too general, as a very different thing from common morality. "All's fair in politics," is the maxim that politicians have set up as, in itself, a perfect and complete abrogation of the decalogue, so far as political action is concerned. And thus it comes to pass, that many do that, without compunction of conscience as politicians, and to effect a political purpose, which they would conscientiously scruple, or refuse absolutely to do, in the ordinary walks and relations of life. An untruth, which they as moral agents, would pronounce as a lie, in their common concerns is venial when told for political effect!—This is the secret of the trouble we deplore—and as this evil is one of our own creating, we have it also, in our power, most surely, to eradicate it. Hold as high the standard of political as of moral virtue. Require the same obedience to its dictates. Hold every person to the same strictness of account in the one case as the other. Make these the principles of public action: identify them with those that go to the formation of a good private character, as uniformly and universally estimated and acted on, by the force of public opinion—and the true theory of our free institutions will be reduced to practice. But not till then.

Will our brother of the Jeffersonian be so "candid" as to insert the above in his paper as our reply to his attack upon us?

The following remarks are taken from a political letter from the Columbus correspondent of the Zanesville Aurora. Our acquaintance with the world enables us to appreciate the correctnese and force of them. Every man, particularly in public life, would do well to be guided by the principles of this extract in selecting his particular friends:

"Just suffer me to throw in an observation or two here, by way of episode. There are perhaps, few men capable of a sincere, firm and unwavering friendship, who are destitute of moral courage and personal bravery. Without these qualities, intentions may be good, but there is not nerve enough to meet the storms of adversity, and stand by you in the hour of trial. I have looked at men somewhat, and have, long ago, come to the conclusion, that persons of these qualities are not to be depended on. In the hour of need, when you, or your cause are sinking, though their good wishes may still cling to you, you are left without their support. The other individual acts differently—the weaker you get, the more strong and ardent the manifestations of his friendship."

We have struck a number of copies of a Petition to the Legislature, praying for a law to protect the churches in the exercise of their rights at camp and other meetings, and forwarded them to the preachers and private members of our church, within this State. We hope those to whom they were forwarded, whether ministers or laymen, will immediately get all the signatures they can, and forward them, without delay, to some member of the Legislature. By a resolution of the last Annual Conference, published in our 10th number, it was recommended to each of its members, within the bounds of this State, to circulate such petition. Should any not get a copy of this petition, who felt like doing something on this subject, they might cut out the one in this number, and paste some blank paper to it and use it for the purpose contemplated.

PRICES CURRENT.

Zanesville.—Wheat in this town is 50 cents—flour 3 00 dollars.

New York.—The latest account we have from this place is 21st ult., our later papers being silent on the subject. Flour was ranging from $5 87½ to 6 12½—Pork—dressed had declined to 5½ cents per lb.

Philadelphia.—On the 31st ult. Bicknell quotes flour in this place at $5 50 a 5 62½.

Baltimore.—Lyford of the 4th inst. quotes flour from $5 25 to 5 50.

Pittsburgh.—Harris' Intelligencer of the 4th quotes flour as dull at $3 a 3 25 from wagons; 3 50 to 3 75 from stores. Hogs 4½ a 5 cents per lb.

We call the attention of our readers to the address of Dr. Andrews, of Steubenville, Ohio, in this number, on the subject of Temperance. It is not only an able discussion of the subject which it proposes to investigate, but, it, at the same time affords to the mind a fine literary treat. It is made doubly interesting to us from former recollections Two among the most happy years of our life, were spent under the same roof and around the same fireside with the Doctor, in the days of his boyhood, in his own pleasant town.—We did not anticipate, at that time, he would ever become so able an advocate for the cause of morality and Temperance.

We have as many communications and selections on hand as we shall be able to get into the paper for two or three numbers to come. We have received four or five letters of revival intelligence which came to hand after the arrangements for this paper were made. They shall be forthcoming in our next. We always give the preference to such.

The interesting letter of Bro. J. Robison, in this paper, was put into the hands of the compositor and was designed for our last number, but by mistake it was not in type when we came to make up the form.

We inform "a female member of the M. P. church," of Coshocton, Ohio, that our published rules give information; we can pay no attention to anonymous communications, especially where the postage is not paid.

The office, press and type of the Charleston Observer, has recently been destroyed by fire.—No insurance; the office will soon be refitted and the publication of the paper continued.

Ohio Legislature.—Mr. Wm. Cooper was elected on the 7th instant Associate Judge, for the county of Muskingum.

ITEMS.

An unsuccessful attempt has just been made in South Carolina to repeal the usury act.

A party of 100 emigrants from Norway passed through Chicago a few weeks ago to settle in Wisconsin.

Judge Porter, at Harrisburgh, Pa., fined two commissioners $25 dollars a piece for selecting jurors in an illegal manner.

The Houston Intelligencer, of the 28th ult., says Col. B. E. Bee and Gen. Hamilton had arrived in Texas.

The Rev. William McSherry, President of the Georgetown College, died on the 24th ult. after a short illness.

The Nashville Union says the Superintendent of Public Schools in Tennessee, is a defaulter to the amount of 123,000 dollars.

Vice Consul.—The President has recognized Richard Seldener as Vice Consul of Sweeden and Norway, for the port of Philadelphia.

The new Custom House in Boston will cost when completed, upwards of 150,000 dollars.—The one in New York is estimated at more than 300,000 dollars.

Fresh Salt.—The New York Star states that the Africans of the Amistad are delighted with the fun of shovelling snow, which they call fresh salt.

Caution to Boys.—At Marblehead, Mass., a few days since, a lad named Richard Cole, while practising the feat of standing on his head, burst a blood vessel, causing immediate death.

The London papers announce the death of John Lander, the brother and companion of Richard Lander, in his African travels. Richard Lander died some two years ago in Africa.

Costly.—The New Yorker says the quantum of intelligence, integrity, talent, sobriety and mechanical skill required to constitute a good Journeyman Printer, would serve to fit up two pettifoggers, three green doctors, four travelling dentists or lecturers on phrenology, and have enough scraps left to make any number of legislators and currency declaimers.—Lowell Sour.

The School Fund of Indiana amounts to two millions of dollars.

It is said that 25,000 Canadians have emigrated to the Western States within the past year.

The Rev. S. S. Parr has arrived at Zanesville, and commenced his labors as Pastor of the first Baptist church in this place.

The City of Houston, in Texas, numbers 3,500 inhabitants. The city of Austin, the new capital of Texas, contains already 1000 inhabitants.

Chaplain to the Senate.—The Rev. Mr. Coockman, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been elected chaplain to the Senate of the United States.

The cotton crop of the United States for the present year, is estimated at two millions of bales; or one hundred and fifty thousand more than in 1837.

A Michigan paper states that there are in the two Canadas, 3000 colored troops, many of whom are runaway slaves from the United States.

A Maine paper of the 21st inst. says that just before the late storm, the farmers in Calais and the towns in the vicinity were ploughing and sowing.

The Centenary subscriptions of the Methodists in England, are said to amount to £214,000, of which £102,500 have been paid into the hands of the treasurer.

A duel arising out of a political quarrel, occurred near Tallahassee, Florida, on the 12th in which Col. Augustus Alston was shot through the heart by Gen. L. Bead. Rifles, at twenty paces.

Mark of Respect.—The Mayor and Aldermen of Nashville have voted "the freedom of the city" to Gen. Gaines, as a mark of respect, on his becoming a resident of Nashville.

The lands in Canada belonging to Andrew Papineau, J. N. Cardinas, and sixteen other persons attained of high treason in the rebellion, have been sold under forefiture.

The land and slave property in Georgia is estimated at 200 millions; the commercial capital, 18 millions. The legislative report on the finances shows great inequality in the taxation.

Church Burnt.—We learn from the Raleigh Register of the 21st instant, that the Methodist Church in that place was destroyed by fire on the Wednesday morning previous. It was a wooden structure.

It is now stated in letters from Massachusetts, that German Baker, Esq., (Whig,) is elected to Congress from the Sixth District in that State, by a majority of eleven votes. A few days will give us the official returns.

A young gentleman called at our office on yesterday, and desired us to state: That two young men, whose names are J. C. Levi and John Sterritt, were recently put to death by a party of Indians, in Iowa Territory by whom they had been taken prisoners. The young men were travellers and left this place a short time since for Iowa. The father of Levi lives near Cynthiana, Ky. Sterritt is from Virginia and had travelled with Levi from Rising sun, Ind. For attempting to make their escape they were sacrificed. —Columbia (Mo.) Patriot.

Counterfeit money, purporting to be bills of the Bank of Oneida, N. Y., has been put into circulation in Michigan; and two men, named Kline and Quigly, have been arrested at Detroit for passing it, and committed for trial.

Important Decision of the Federal Court.—The Natchez Free Trader says: "We learn from undoubted authority that a most important decision has been made by the Federal Court at Jackson, Judge Gholson presiding, in the case of Hickmen vs. Rose, by which the doctrine is established, that all contracts for negroes brought into the State of Mississippi and sold "as merchandize," subsequent to the 1st day of May, in the year 1833, are illegal and as such, are NULL AND VOID.—This decision must of necessity, have an important bearing on Mississippi debts to northern negro-traders, to the amount of at least two millions of dollars. It is based on the second section of the article under the head of "slaves," in the amended constitution of the state, in these words:

"Sec. 2. The introduction of slaves into this state as merchandize, or for sale, shall be prohibited from and after the first day of May, 1833: Provided, that the actual settlers or settler shall not be prohibited from purchasing slaves in any state in this Union, and bringing them into this state for their individual use, until the year 1845."

Great Storm at the East.—After an uncommonly mild season thus far, we have been visited with one of the heaviest falls of snow that has been know in this city for many years. On Saturday night and Sunday last, the snow fell to the average depth of 18 inches. It was still heavier at the North of us. The Railroad cars were two days in clearing the track so as to get to Hartford. We have the prospect of a fine season of sleighing for some time to come. In N. York city there was little snow, but mostly sleet. The snow lies deep nearly the whole distance hence to New York.—The mails have been much interrupted by the snow.

The wind blew with considerable violence here during a part of this storm.—On the eastern coast of Massachusetts, it blew a violent gale, which did much damage, both on land and sea. At Gloucester, on Cape Ann, particularly, there was a great destruction of shipping with loss of life. About sixty vessels had put into the outer harbor, 20 or 25 of which were driven ashore, & all the others dismasted. Many lives were lost, not less than fifty. As many as seventeen vessels were dashed to pieces, and the shore was strewed with wrecks.—N. H. Rec.

Wholesale Prices Current.

CORRECTED WEEKLY FOR THE WESTERN RECORDER,
BY SPERRY & ABBOT,
(Successors to Geo. Reeve & Son,)
Wholesale and Retail Grocers, No. 96, Main St
Zanesville, Ohio.

ARTICLES.		FROM.	TO.
Almonds, hard shell, -	pound.	8	9
" soft shell, -	"	16	20
Allum, - - - -	"		9
Alspice, - - - -	"		12½
Apples, green picked, -	barrel.	1.12½	1.50
Bacon, Hams, - -	pound.		12½
" Shoulders, - -	"		10
" Sides, - - -	"	10½	11
Beans, white, - - -	bush'l.		1.00
Butter, keg, - -	pound.		12½
Beeswax, - - -	"	23	25
Brazil Nuts, - - -	"	10	11
Corn, in ear, - -	bush'l.	31	33
Candles, Sperm, - -	pound	48	49
" Mould, - -	"	22	23
" Dipped, - -	"		14
Coffee, Rio, - - -	"	14	14½
" Java, - - -	"	17	18
" Havana, - - -	"		14½
" Laguira, - -	"	15	1 6½
Cheese, Western Reserve,	"	9	10
" Country, - -	"		8
Copperas, - - -	"	4½	5½
Cinnamon, - - -	"		25
Cloves, - - - -	"		45
Feathers, - - -	"		50
Flaxseed, - - -	bush'l.		62½
Flour, - - - -	barrel.		3.00
Filberts, - - - -	pound.	8	9
Fish—Mackerel, No. 1, -	barrel.
" No. 2,	"	18.50
" No. 3, -	"	14.50
Dry Cod, - -	pound.	6	6½
Herring, - -	box.	1.37	1.50
Ground Ginger, - -	"	13	15
Glass, 7 by 9, - -	box.		3.75
" 8 by 10, - -	"		3.75
" 10 by 12, - -	"		4.75
Hay, - - - -	ton.	7	8
Indigo, - - - -	pound.	1.50	2 25
Leather, Spanish Sole, -	"	26	28
" Country " -	"	26	27
Lead, bar, - - -	"		8
Nutmegs, - - -	"		162½
Madder, - - - -	"	15½	18
Molasses, New Orleans, -	gallon.		65
" West India, -	"	63	65
Oil, Flaxseed, - - -	"		112½
" W. Sperm, - -	"	1.35	1.45
" Refined whale, - -	"	80	85
Oats, - - - -	bush'l.	18	20
Pepper, - - - -	pound.		12½
Potatoes, - - -	bush'l.	20	22
Plaster Paris, - - -	ton.	23.00	2500
Rice, North Carolina, -	pound.		8
Raisins, Bloom, - -	box.	3 00	3.25
" Smyrna, - -	"		3.50
" Muscatil. - -	"	2.50	3.00
Soap, Rosin, - - -	pound.		7
" Castile, - -	"	19	20
Shot, Nos. 2, 3 and 4, -	bag.		237½
Salt, - - - -	bush'l.	38	40
Sugar, New Orleans, -	pound.	9½	10
" White Havana, -	"	8½	15
" Brown " -	"		13½
Tea, Young Hyson, -	"	55	85
" Gunpowder, - -	"	70	75
" Imperial, - -	"	65	70
" Black, - - -	"	60	70
Tobacco, Kentucky Twist,	"	15½	17
" Cavendish, -	"	31	44
Tallow, Rendered, - -	"		11
Vinegar, - - - -	barrel.	4.50	6.00
Wheat, - - - -	bush'l.		50

PRICES OF IRON AND NAILS.

BY D. APPLEGATE & CO.

WHOLESALE PRICES.

Bar Iron, assorted sizes,	pound.		6
Round and square, -	"	6¾	10
Nails, 10d, 12d, 16d, 20d,	"		6¾
" 8d and 9d, - -	"		7
" 6d, - - -	"		7½
" 5d, - - -	"		7¾
" 4d, - - -	"		8¼
" 3d, - - -	"		9¼
Retail Nails, by the keg, - -	1 cent advance.
" Iron, - - - - - -	1 " "

PRICE OF CORDAGE.

BY G. L. SHINNICK.

Manilla Bedcords, - -	90 feet.	3	25
" " - -	60 "	2	00
Hemp " - -	90 "	3	00
" " - -	60 "	2	00
Plough Lines, - - -	30 "	1	00

Appointments by the President—By and with the advice and consent of the Senate.—Collectors of the Customs.—Charles C. P. Hunt, District of Miami, Ohio, from 13th inst., when the present commission will expire.

John W. Dough, District of Teche, Louisiana, from 30th ult. vice Edwin L. Cockle, deceased.

Land Officers.—Anthony W. Rabb, Receiver of Public Moneys, Washington, Mississippi, from 31st ult., when his late commission expired.

Registers.—James McGoffin, St. Stephens, Alabama, from 31st ult. when his late commission expired.

Alanson Saltmarsh, Cahaba, Alabama, from 24th of February, 1840, when his present commission will expire.

Kobler, the murderer, hung a few days since at Lancaster, Pa. was galvanized. The L. Intelligencer, speaking of it, says:

"When a dead man opens his eyes and looks about, moves his limbs, throws his arms upon his breast, grinds his teeth, and tries to catch you, it requires strong nerves to witness the spectacle."

The Vicksburg papers publish a statement from the owners of a flat boat, from Indiana, to the purport that they were assailed and repeatedly fired upon, in the night, by a gang of land pirates from the Arkansas shore of Mississipi, near the mouth of White river. Flat boatmen from the up country are advised to be on their guard.

Business Department.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS OF THIS PAPER.

1. In remitting money, give the person's name, to whom credit is to be given, the State in which he lives, and the Post-office where he receives his paper.

2. In forwarding subscribers, be careful to give the Post-office, county and State, where the papers are to be sent, writing the name, office and county in a fair hand.

3. When a paper is to be transferred, give the place whence it is to be taken, as well as the place where it is to be directed.

4. In all cases where moneys are paid for papers, receipts should be taken; without these we shall consider our subscribers responsible. Experience in conducting a paper, has shown us that attention to this rule is essentially necessary to secure justice to a publisher.

5. Our paper is $2 per annum on the reception of the first No. On the first opportunity, therefore, be so good as to hand this amount to an agent, or remit, post paid, (except $10 be sent) by mail, at our risk. If any of our agents have made different stipulations with subscribers as it respects the time of payment, we cheerfully abide their arrangement. But in all other cases, and in future, we shall expect our "Terms" to be complied with. This will be absolutely necessary to enable us to continue our paper.

Credits will be given in our paper for the moneys we have received.

☞All the travelling preachers are considered agents for this paper.

RECEIVED PAY FOR FIRST VOL. RECORDER.

William Fish, - - - - -	$2 00
R. Dobbins, for Mrs. McPherson, H. Nelson, S. F. Yeoman, - - - -	6 00
William McDowell, - - - -	3 00
S. C. Haver, - - - - - - -	2 00
J. Barner, for S. Shipp, - - - -	2 00
E. Collins, for G. Hudson, - - - -	2 00
Jas. Swaney, for H. Pope, S. Ramsbottom, B. Sparr, W. Eckles, M. Bright,	10 00
J. Herbert, for A. Wells, T. Winn, and James Melvin, - - - -	6 00
D. Y. Ostrom, for S. Elliott, S. Akin, (2 each) and R. Dunington, 2 50	6 50
A. H. Bassett, for J. B. Lucas, Buck creek, O., J. S. Woodward, Camden, O., J. Young, Charleston, Indiana, Nancy Horthy, " " J. Prather, Utica, "	10 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W. Fish, J. W. O'Haver, Luther, I. Smucker, R. Dobbins, S. R. Jones, "L. E. S." J. Clarke, J. Robison, E. Collins, J. Barner, L. Garrett, "A female member of the M. P. church," J. White, we will discontinue, when you forward us $1 25, at the 26th number, or if you will forward us one dollar immediately, post paid, we will discontinue—see our terms, C. Woodruff, A. H. Bassett, J. Swaney, I. Hunt, J. Herbert, Wm. McPherson, T. Foster, J. C. Crawford, D. Y. Ostrom, R. M. Dalbey, and T. P. Armstrong.

Letter Press.—The W. Recorder, has been regularly forwarded to you. We have forwarded again all the Nos. from 6, which is all we have.

We say to our Bro. McPherson, of Chatfield, Ohio, we regret that he chides us so severely about his paper, which, he says, does not reach him until from one to two weeks after its date. We can furnish him proof, if it be required, that his paper has been put into the office promptly with the rest of the packages, on the date of their issue, with one or two exceptions; what happens after, we cannot help, tho' we would, if it were in our power, have all things done right. We will write on your paper in future, "Via Columbus;" for it must be sent the Mt. Vernon route, and lay among the weekly cross mails, which causes its delay.

Brother Herbert, we have forwarded to you all the back numbers, some time past, and since that, the paper regularly as it was issued. We will send again.

J. C. Crawford, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes to inform us that one of our subscribers is dead, and that his family has left the city, and directs us to stop his paper, leaving us to pay 19 cents postage on his letter. Thus, after sending our paper nearly half a year, for which, we will probably get nothing, we are additionally taxed to get this information. If the gentleman had handed a note to the post master, whose duty it is made by law to give such information, it would have cost us nothing.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"WHERE DID HE GET THAT LAW."—In a beautiful city, in one of the Northern States, lived a lawyer of eminence and talents. I do not know many particulars of his moral character; but he was notoriously profane. He had a negro boy, at whom his neighbors used to hear him swear with awful violence. One day this gentleman met a decided Christian, who was also a lawyer, said to him, "I wish, Sir, to examine into the truth of the Christian religion. What books would you advise me to read on the evidences of Christianity?"

The pious lawyer, surprised at the inquiry, replied: "That is a question, Sir, which you ought to have settled long ago. You ought not to have put off a subject so important to this late period of life."

"It is late," said the inquirer. "I never knew much about it; but I always supposed that Christianity was rejected by the great majority of learned men. I intend, however, now to examine the subject thoroughly myself. I have upon me, as my physician says, a moral disease, under which I may live a year and a half, or two years, but not probably longer.—What books, Sir, would you advise me to read?"

"The Bible," said the other.

"I believe you do not understand me," resumed the unbeliever, surprised in his turn; "I wish to investigate the truth of the Bible."

"I would advise you, Sir," repeated his Christian friend, "to read the Bible.—And," he continued, "I will give you my reasons. Most infidels are very ignorant of the Scriptures. Now, to reason on subjects with correctness, we must understand what it is about which we reason. In the next place, I consider the internal evidence of the truth of the Scriptures stronger than the external."

"And where shall I begin?" inquired the unbeliever. "At the New Testament?"

"No," said the other, "at the beginning—at Genesis."

The infidel bought a commentary, went home and set down to the serious study of the Scriptures. He applied all his strong and well disciplined powers of mind to the Bible, to try rigidly but impartially its truth. As he went on in the perusal, he received occasional calls from his professional friend. The infidel freely remarked upon what he read, and stated his objections. He liked this passage—he thought that touching and beautiful—but he could not credit a third.

One evening the Christian lawyer called, and found the unbeliever at home walking the room with a dejected look, his mind apparently absorbed in thought. He continued, not noticing that any one had come in, busily to trace and retrace his steps. His friend at length spoke:—

"You seem, Sir," said he, "to be in a brown study. Of what are you thinking?"

"I have been reading," replied the infidel, "the moral law."

"Well, what do you think of it?" asked his friend.

"I will tell you what I used to think," answered the infidel. "I supposed that Moses was the leader of a horde of banditti, that having a strong mind, he acquired great influence over a superstitious people; and that on Mount Sinai he played off some sort of fire works, to the amazement of his ignorant followers, who imagined, in their mingled fear and superstition, that the exhibition was supernatural."

"But what do you think now?" interposed his friend.

"I have been looking," said the infidel, "into the nature of that law. I have been trying whether I can add any thing to it, or take any thing from it, so as to make it better. Sir, I cannot. It is perfect."

"The first commandment," continued he, "directs us to make the Creator the object of our supreme love and reverence. That is right. If he be our Creator, Preserver, and Supreme Benefactor, we ought to treat him, and none other, as such.

"The second forbids idolatry. That certainly is right.

"The third forbids profaneness.

"The fourth fixes a time for religious worship.—If there be a God, he ought surely to be worshipped. It is suitable that there should be an outward homage significant of our inward regard. If God be worshipped it is proper that some time should be set apart for that purpose, when all may worship harmoniously and without interruption. One day in seven is certainly not too much; and I do not know that it is too little.

"The fifth defines the peculiar duties arising from the family relations.

"Injuries to our neighbors are then classified by the moral law. They are divided into offences against life, chastity, property and character. And," said he, applying a legal idea with legal acuteness, "I notice that the greatest offence in each class is expressly forbidden.—Thus the greatest injury of life is murder, to chastity, adultery; to property, theft; to character, perjury. Now the greater offence must include the less of the same kind. Murder must include every injury to life: adultery, every injury to purity, and so of the rest. And the moral code is closed and protected only by a command forbidding every improper desire in regard to our neighbor.

"I have been thinking," he proceeded, "where did Moses get that law? I have read history: the Egyptians and the adjacent nations were idolators; so were the Greeks and Romans; and the wisest and best Greeks or Romans never gave a code of morals like this. Where did Moses get this law, which surpasses the wisdom and philosophy of the most enlightened ages? He lived at a period comparatively barbarous, but he has given a law in which the learning and sagacity of all subsequent time can detect no flaw:—Where did he get it? He could not have soared so far above his age as to have devised it himself. I am satisfied where he obtained it. It must have come from Heaven. I am convinced of the truth of the religion of the Bible."

The infidel—infidel no longer—remained to his death a firm believer in the truth of Christianity. He lived several years after this conversation; about three, I believe. He continued to puruse the study of the Bible—his views of the Christian religion expanding and growing correct. Profaneness was abandoned.—An oath was now as offensive to him as it was familiar before. When his former gay companions used one, he habitually reproved them. He remonstrated with them upon its folly and want of meaning, and said he could never imagine before how painful profane language must be to a Christian. But did he become a sincere disciple of Christ?—He always expressed great doubt upon that point. He could hope for nothing from the world, and he was afraid that he might choose other pleasures from that circumstance without a radical change of heart.

I learned these particulars, a few years since, from one of the parties. The lapse of time may have caused some immaterial variation; but I believe no other. I have endeavored to be substantially correct, and have, therefore, left many important ideas unexpanded, as I understood them to occur in the actual conversation.

Let the reader meditate on this history, for it is believed to be rich in practical instruction. The main thought is this, that the moral law is a monument—a sublime monument—of the great moral transaction at Sinai, in the delivery of the ten commandments. But mark also the species of unbelief here exhibited; the improvement made of a lingering disease; the judicious advice and kind attention of the Christian friend; the beautiful arrangement of Providence by which these occurred; the excellence of the moral law as explained and felt; and, under the blessing of the Holy Spirit, the gloriously reforming power of the Bible.

WHISKERS.—The Lady's Book—authority in such matters—thus speaks of the ridiculous dandy custom of wearing long, bushy whiskers:

"Doubtless it is one of the most desirable objects with young ladies and gentlemen to appear amiable in the eyes of each other; but it is quite as evident that they often mistake the proper course for the attainment of that object. Let us take for example, those beaux who labor so assiduously to cultivate huge whiskers, Boz locks, and mustaches. Could the suffrages of the ladies generally be taken, we incline to think that the fancied improvements would be voted quite objectionable. For beside the immense waste of bear's grease which results from a taste, for these ornaments, they so effectually conceal the countenances of the wearers that young ladies are sometimes unable to distinguish the countenances of their own brothers and cousins. Persons who carry their faces behind a mask of this sort cannot be supposed to possess clear consciences; for honesty and fair dealing have no motive for any such concealment. Ladies, it is true, are sometimes fond of lapdogs, cats and kittens, and these have whiskers, and it may be that this circumstance caused the introduction of these appendages among the beaux. But sheep, notwithstanding all that has been said about its simplicity, is a superior animal to any of those just mentioned, and a sheep wears no whiskers. And if a sheep had any choice in the matter, it would probably reject every addition of that kind which might be produced on its visage by such means as are employed among some of our own species, namely, the application of bear's grease, &c. In short, we may venture to offer it as a general remark that there is no really valuable animal whose face is disfigured by such additions, either natural or artificial. And, if our authority is worth anything, such ornaments are by no means attractive to the more judicious portion of the female observers.

There were, and I believe still are, two lawyers in partnership in New York, with the peculiarly happy names of Catchem and Cheetum. People laughed at seeing these two names in juxtaposition over the door; so the lawyers thought it advisable to separate them by the insertion of their christian names. Mr. Catchem's christian name was Isaac, Mr. Cheetum's Uriah. A new board was ordered, but when sent to the painter it was found to be too short to admit the christian names at full length. The painter therefore, put only the initials before the surnames, which made the matter still worse than before, for now appeared, "I. Catchem and U. Cheetum."

BAD THINGS.—An unfaithful servant, a smoky house, a stumbling horse, a scolding wife, an aching tooth, an empty purse, an undutiful child, an incessant talker, hogs that break through enclosures, a dull razor, musquitoes, a fog, and—a subscriber that don't pay for his paper.

The Union of the Whigs for the sake of the Union.

PROPOSALS FOR PUBLISHING A POLITICAL NEWSPAPER IN ZANESVILLE, O., ENTITLED

THE HARRISONIAN.

THE opposing candidates are in the field.—The two great political parties of the country are preparing for the contest. The one unfurls the banner of Harrison, Tyler and Reform: the other has inscribed on their flag Martin Van Buren and the Sub-Treasury. The People are called upon to choose between them. We have made our selection. We go for the able and enlightened Statesman,—the Hero that never lost a battle,—the political Father of the West, Gen. WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON. We believe a majority of the People are with us. We believe that if every opponent of the men in power does his duty, the election of our candidates is certain.

To unite and arouse the opposition to action we will labor. We ask the support of our fellow-citizens—extend to us your helping hands—assist us to raise high the banner of Reform, and to rally around it every man who wishes to see dispelled the cloud of gloom that now hangs over our common country.

The news of the day, and as much variety as possible, will be furnished.

THE HARRISONIAN will contain nearly, if not altogether, as much reading matter as the larger sheets.

CONDITIONS.—It is believed that a small sheet, on moderate terms, will suit better the state of the times, and have a more extended circulation, than one of a larger size—Therefore, THE HARRISONIAN will be published weekly on a super-royal sheet, at $1 50 in advance; $2 00 payable in six months. Ten copies will be sent to one direction for $12 00 in advance.

The publication will be commenced about the 20th instant. GEM'L. ARTHUR,

January 15, 1840. 3w21 Pubr.

Godey's Lady's Book.

EDITION 25,000—MONTHLY.

More than Sixty Figures of Fashions each year.

MRS. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, whose name is so intimately connected with the Literature of our country, and who has justly been termed the Hemans of America, will assist Mrs. Hale in the editorial department. It is with feelings of the greatest pleasure that the publisher of the Book makes this announcement. The editorial corps will now consist of Mrs. SARAH J. HALE, Mrs. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, and LOUIS A. GODEY. Mrs. Sigourney will commence her valuable aid with the January Number. The Lady's Book has always been noted for the purity of its contents; that marked distinction which characterizes it shall still be preserved; indeed, with such conductors it will be impossible to go estray. This work has been emphatically termed the Ladies' National Magazine, as it is a receptacle for the contributions of the most celebrated Female Writers of America, most of whom of any eminence contribute to its pages.

Twenty volumes have already been issued. It is usual to announce that a small edition only will be published. Contrary to this, the proprietor of the Lady's Book announces that he will publish an Immense Edition, with which he hopes to supply all those who will favor him with orders, commencing with the January number. It will be seen by this advertisement that every effort has been made by the proprietor of this work to make it superior to any in America, and as a New Year's Gift, the Lady's Book is probably the most proper that could be desired for ladies, edited by their own sex, and assisted as the editorial department is by the pictorial embellishments, it is positively the Bourdoir companion.

There are other publications that advertise Fashion Plates—The publisher of the Lady's Book wishes it to be distinctly understood that the principal Fashions in this work are colored, and in every number, which is not the case with any other work published in America.

Uncolored Plates of Fashions, also monthly.—This is a novel feature of the work, and as it is no great expense to give plates of Fashions without coloring, the publisher will give from three to six figures each month, in addition to the three colored.—This will make in all generally about nine Figures of Fashions monthly.

Lace Patterns of Embroidery will be published at regular intervals. These beautiful ornaments (particularly the former) have given great satisfaction.

The Musical Department is under the superintendence of J. G. Osborne, than whom no person is more capable of doing it justice.

The Literary Department is placed under the superintendence of Mrs. Sarah J. Hale and Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney. Two ladies so well known to the world that to mention their names in connection with any publication is at once a guarantee of its morality, virtue and utility. Of their capability to conduct the Lady's Book it is presumed no person will doubt, and the proprietor mentions with pleasure that no English or American Magazine can publish in connection with its Literary department two names so celebrated in the world of letters.

Fac Similies.—A great deal of curiosity is often expressed to see the Chirography of celebrated persons. We shall endeavor, as far as lies in our power, to gratify this feeling by giving from time to time correct imitations of the most celebrated Female writers of the day.

General Features.—Literature, Tales, Essays, Legends, Romantic incidents in History, Extracts from the old Poets, Reviews, Poetry, Female Education, Embellishments, Fashions colored and uncolored, Lace Embroidery, Fac Similies, Music, &c. &c. More than sixty Figures of Fashions yearly colored and uncolored, the proprietor being determined to consult all tastes. Any embellishments to be found in any other magazine may be looked for in the Lady's Book.

In 1838 we published 10,500 copies, during the months of January, February and March, 1839, we increased the list to 13,500 and had then to reprint three numbers and increase to 15,000.—With the next volume we advanced to 17,000, and we now print 25,000 copies monthly, probably the greatest monthly list of subscribers in the world.

Our Reading Matter is about the same in quantity as any similar production, probably a little in favor of the Book. It would be foolish and false to say that it contains more, and the proprietor is not willing to condescend to such means for any supposed advancement of his interest.

One advantage the subscribers of this work will have, is its early reception. It will be received at the remotest cities of the Union by the first day of publication.

The January and succeeding numbers will be printed on an entirely new type cast expressly for the work, and will be found on inspection to be a truly beautiful letter, not too small to be read with ease, nor too large to prevent the usual quantity of matter being given in each page. The paper is of the finest quality for periodical use—indeed the typographical execution has long been a subject of congratulation with those best acquainted with these matters.

The price of the publication is $3 00 per annum—two copies for five dollars. The money to be positively received before a number is sent.—No letters will be taken from the Post Office unless the postage on them is paid. Unless positive orders are given at the time of subscribing the work is continued after the first year, and if not paid during the year, the price will be increased to four dollars.

For the convenience of persons wishing to subscribe for any of the following publications, Burton's Magazine, Saturday Courier, Saturday Chronicle, Weekly Messenger, Saturday Evening Post—they will be furnished with the Lady's Book and any one of these publications one year upon the receipt of five dollars free of postage.

Address L. A. GODEY,

Jan. 15, 1840. 2t. 211 Chesnut-st. Phil'a.

Youth's Cabinet.

EDITED BY N. SOUTHARD.

Prospectus of vol. III. Commencing Jan. 2, '40.

THIS paper which was begun without a subscriber, has existed two years, in the midst of a host of competitors, securing many friends, and receiving the warm commendation of about one hundred editors, and many parents and teachers.

"You have no idea of the eagerness with which my little girl gets your paper," said a father a few days ago. "It would be a grand thing to introduce as a reading book into common schools," said a distinguished laborer in the cause of education.

"It is just such a paper as we desire to have placed weekly in the hands of our children," says the Christian Herald. "We have never known a paper in which children take so deep an interest," says the Waldo (Maine) Gazette.

"We have seen no paper expressly devoted to the young, which combines with more felicity amusement and sound principles," says the Bristol (R. I.) Phenix.

Its object is to do the greatest possible good to the hearts and minds of its young readers, in the most pleasing manner. To accomplish this object an increasing list of subscribers will enable the editor to devote an increasing amount of time and attention, while a number of able correspondents among the friends of the young at home, and missionaries abroad, will give it variety and interest.

Its engravings, which average two or three each week, are not intended merely to please the fancy, but illustrate truth, convey instruction, and deepen good impressions.

While it is confidently presented to the favorable notice of all who love the improvement of the young, it has special claims on those who desire the immediate extinction of all forms of oppression, and who believe the best security for our own liberties is a sacred regard for the rights of others.

It is published weekly at No. 9, Spruce street, New York, and No. 25, Cornhill, Boston, at only $1 per year in advance; ten copies for 8 dollars; twenty copies for 14 dollars; thirty copies for 18 dollars.

All editors who wish to promote the great objects of the Cabinet, are requested to favor us by giving this one or two insertions.

Our exchange list having swelled so as greatly to tax our time and means, we shall be constrained to confine it mostly to those who show us this kindness. Jan. 1, 1840. 1t

---

The Casket,

AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

THE unparalleled success which has attended the Casket since it has come into the hands of the new proprietors, induces them to begin a volume with still further attractions on the first of January next. Its literary character, which has called forth so many comments, will undergo no change, as it will continue under the control of the same editors. Several new contributors, however, of high talent, has been engaged beside those who have already been enlisted in its favor. The Magazine will be enlarged, and will contain a greater quantity of reading matter than any periodical published at the same price in this country.

The work will appear in a new and beautiful type, cast expressly for the purpose, and will be printed on the finest paper. It will also be ornamented with the finest steel engravings, provided at a heavy expense, and executed from the choicest designs. To vary the style of these illustrations, the services of distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish at intervals, mezzotints for the ensuing volume. The heads of several distinguished American writers will appear in the course of the year. The publishers, determined to leave nothing undone to merit the patronage of a liberal public, have resolved, after much solicitation from many of their fair readers, to publish quarterly, as an extra, a correct plate of the latest fashion, highly colored, and executed in the first style of the art. This department will be under the control of a French gentleman, of much taste and experience, and will be found to excel any thing ever attempted in this line in America. The extra in the November number, may be considered a fair specimen of what these fashion plates will be. The music department, as heretofore, will be under the charge of Messrs. G. W. Hewitt & Co., and the fine pieces of copyright music which they have hitherto furnished are sufficient guarantee for the future

The flattering terms in which the Casket has been noticed by the journals in every section of the Union, establish beyond a doubt its claims to support generally. It will surpass any other work in the return it gives for the readers' money.

TERMS: Three dollars per annum, invariably in advance, or two copies for five dollars.

All communications to be addressed, post paid, to GEORGE R. GRAHAM & Co.,

December 30, 1839. Philadelphia.

P. S.—Editors publishing this Prospectus will be entitled to a copy of the Casket during the volume. No exchange is solicited, except when noticing the reception of the Magazine.

For Sale.

LARGE MAPS of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations, Land Districts, Townships, &c. engraved from the government surveys and plans in the General Land Office, Washington city, by E. Gilman, Draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. TAYLOR, Book Seller, Washington city, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are published on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State, as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Offices relative to water courses, township lines, Indian Land Reservations, Land Districts, &c., and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in those points. They can be sent to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. Price $2, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for $5. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or any who will buy to sell again. Dec. 10, 1839. 3t16

☞Editors of newspapers any where who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it to the advertiser.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.

Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Bicknell's Detector.

MONEY and business matters have increased to such an extent in this country, that we shall soon find it impossible to give an accurate and detailed account of all the Banking Institutions and Counterfeit Bank Notes within the limits of the thirty-two pages of our monthly pamphlet Detector. We propose therefore to increase the size of that publication sixteen pages in each number. We must either do one of two things, publish an imperfect and incomplete Detector, or enlarge our limits. We have determined upon the latter course, unwilling to do injustice to the public, and anxious as heretofore, to issue the only perfect sheet of the kind in the United States. We cannot do this however, without some increase in price; and hence we shall be compelled to charge $1 50 per annum for the enlarged Detector, instead of $1, the price of our present publication. We promise to make very considerable improvements, to give in addition to the present information, the names of the Cashiers of the various Banks as far as they can be ascertained—to renew the type, to obtain better paper, and, in short, to render our monthly accurate in every particular, and entitled in a still greater degree to the confidence so generously reposed in it by the public. The increase in the price, however, may not give satisfaction to all, although it must be apparent to every individual, that in enlarging and improving, we shall necessarily be compelled to increase our expenses to a very considerable extent. Such, however, as are unwilling to receive the enlarged Detector at $1 50 per annum, will be good enough to notify us to that effect, immediately after receiving the first number of the new volume. We may add, those who subscribe to the Weekly Reporter, in addition to the Monthly Detector, will continue to be furnished with the latter at $1 per annum. We are anxious to do every thing in our power to retain our entire list, as well as to secure new patrons; and would make no increase in price, but we find on calculating the impossibility of publishing the enlarged and improved monthly, at the existing rates. Deeply grateful for liberal patronage enjoyed, we shall still keep on the even tenor of our way, exerting every energy to render both the Reporter and Detector acceptable, as well as useful and instructive. MATHEW T. MILLER,

No. 76 South Third-street, Philadelphia.

November 21, 1839. 14

New York Mirror.

☞THE PRESENT VOLUME.

THE conductors of the New York Mirror are determined that no periodical in the world shall exceed this in the interest and variety of its literary contents, the elegance and finish of its pictorial embellishments, the beauty and popularity of its music, and the neatness and superiority of its typographical appearance.

The number for the 19th of October is adorned with one of the most costly and magnificent steel engravings ever published in this or any other country. It is a representation of the "Landing at Jamestown," painted and designed by Chapman, and engraved by Danforth, two American artists of whom their country may be justly proud.

This is the third exquisite engraving that has already appeared in the present volume of the Mirror, the first number of which was issued on the first of July last, all the numbers of which can be supplied to new subscribers, if immediate application be made.

The New York Mirror is the oldest, and unquestionably, the cheapest periodical, extant.—Every number contains a great variety of useful, interesting and amusing matter, on every subject connected with polite literature and the fine arts; and they form, at the end of the year, an immense volume of four hundred and sixteen imperial quarto pages, with vignette title-page, table of contents, splendid engravings, and fifty pieces of popular music, arranged for the pianoforte, guitar, &c.—a library in itself—and all this is afforded at the very trifling cost of five dollars a year, a sum almost inadequate for the extraordinary equivalent rendered to subscribers.

Six superb engravings (including three now issued) will be given, engraved by Danforth, Parker, etc. from original designs and portraits by Weir, Inman, Chapman, etc.

A number of curious etchings on wood will also be published in the present volume, engraved by Adams, Anderson, Johnson, etc. from original designs.

Nothing shall be left undone to render this work, in its literary character, its engravings, its music, and its typography, equal, if not superior, to any periodical of the day.

CONDITIONS.—The Mirror is published every Saturday, at No. 1, Barclay-street, next door to Broadway. It is elegantly printed in the extra super-royal quarto form, with brevier, minion and nonpariel type. It is embellished once every three months, with a SPLENDID SUPER-ROYAL QUARTO ENGRAVING, and every week with a popular piece of MUSIC, arranged for the piano-forte, harp, guitar, etc. For each volume an exquisitely engraved VIGNETTE TITLE-PAGE, and a copious INDEX, are furnished. The terms are $5 per annum, payable, in all cases, IN ADVANCE.

December 10, 1839. 3t16

Dr. A. W. Knight,

(Formerly of Philadelphia, but for the last six years in Muskingum county, Ohio,)

HAS removed to MT. STERLING, and no respectfully tenders his professional services to the citizens of this place and the surrounding country: he may at all times be found, when not absent on professional business, at his residence. He hopes that undivided attention to the duties of his profession, together with an experience derived from twelve years' practice in the various branches of a profession, and part of that time in the Philadelphia Hospital as one of the house physicians, will enable him to merit and receive a liberal share of public patronage.

Mt. Sterling, Ohio, Oct. 31, 1839. 11tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Brother Jonathan.

THE LARGEST PAPER IN THE WORLD

THE proprietors of this sheet—the "Great Western" among the newspapers, have the pleasure of spreading before the reading public a weekly periodical containing a greater variety and amount of useful and entertaining miscellany, than is to be found in any similar publication in the world.

Each number of the paper contains as large an amount of reading matter as is found in volume of ordinary duodecimo, which cost two dollars—and more than is contained in a volume of Irving's Columbus, or Bancroft's History of America, which cost three dollars a volume—and all for SIX CENTS a number, or Three Dollars a year.

BROTHER JONATHAN being a genuine Yankee and thinking that some things can be done as well as others, is determined to present his readers a MEDLEY hitherto unrivalled by any other paper of Anecdotes, Amusements, Allegories, Accidents, Biography, Bon Mots, Conversation, Crimes, Dramatics, Drolleries, Erratics, Essays, Eloquence, Facetia, Geography, History, Jests, Learning, Morality, Marvels, Music, News, Novelties, Oratory, Poetry, Philosophy, Quiddities, Religion, Romance, Sports, Spectacles, Sorrows, Sufferings, Tales, Trials, Truths, Teachings, Wisdom, Wonders, Wit, &c. &c.

As a family newspaper, BROTHER JONATHAN will be found to present attractions beyond any other.

——"He comes the herald of a noisy world, News from all nations lumbering at his back."

The earliest intelligence, Foreign and Domestic, and the latest novelties of the Literary World, will be promptly served up for the gratification of the reader.

Strictly neutral in politics, it will contain nothing in favor or against any party, and will assiduously avoid any of the controversies which agitate the religious community. Strict morality, temperance, industry and good order, benevolence, and usefulness to our common country and our fellow men, will be advocated and in every page of Brother Jonathan.

TERMS OF BROTHER JONATHAN—Three Dollars a year in advance.

For five dollars two copies will be sent one year or one copy two years.

The EVENING TATTLER is published every day at the same office, and is put to press at meridian in season for the great Northern, Eastern and Southern mails, which all close about two o'clock P. M.

☞All country papers who give this prospectus three insertions, will be entitled to an exchange, on sending a number of their paper to this office containing the advertisement.

☞All communications and letters should be addressed postage paid to

GRISWOLD & COMPANY,

162 Nasau-street New York city.

November 14, 1839. 13

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers' names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1840. Number 22.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

SACRED SONGS.—NO. I.

ISAIAH, CH. XXXV.

The wilderness and solitary place,
For them shall joy, and shed forth every grace;
The desert shall rejoice, its charms disclose,
And blossom like the unassuming rose:

Yea, all its charms abundantly shall spring,
It shall rejoice, and even with joy shall sing,
Of Lebanon the glory shall be given;
To grace the wilderness and make it bloom,
It the proud charms of Carmel shall assume,
And Sharon too, shall to the desert nod;
They all shall see thy glory, Lord of heaven,
And view the excellence of our God.

Strengthen the hands where weakness did belong,
Confirm the feeble knees and make them strong;

Say to the fearful heart, "Be strong nor fear;
Behold your God in triumph draweth near;
He comes with vengeance—vengeance on his foe,
He comes with recompenses to bestow
Upon his friends—he comes with power to save
You from your fears, your sins, death and the grave."

Then to the blind, their vision shall be given,
The deaf shall hear and praise the power of heaven.

Then like the hart, the lame shall leap and spring,
And the loos'd tongue of the dumb man shall sing,—
Then in the wilderness shall waters rise,
Whose stream the parching desert then supplies.

In the parched ground shall then be found a pool
In thirsty lands be springs of water cool,
And in the Dragon's lair, where erst they lay,
Grass, reeds and rushes, shall their charms display.

A way shall in the wilderness be found,
HIGH WAY OF HOLINESS, it shall be crown'd;
The unclean shall not pass it; but the pure
Shall all the pleasures of this way secure,
For it was made for them—and 'tis so plain,
That the rude way-farer, devoid of sense,
Will in it err not—but the goal can gain,
And win the promis'd, valued recompense.

No lion shall be there, nor ravenous beast,
On the poor traveller to regale and feast;
But the redeem'd shall in this highway go,
Free from all fear—exempt from every woe.

The ransom'd of the Lord shall then come in,
Return to Zion, and in its bliss rejoice,
Immortal joys their ransom'd souls shall win,
Immortal songs employ their every voice;
Amazing bliss shall fill each gladsome heart,
And sorrows, sighs and pains shall all depart.

L. E. S.

Blue Rock, O., Jan. 1, 1840.

REVIVAL INTELLIGENCE.

For the Western Recorder.

PLEASANT HILL CIRCUIT, JAN. 1, 1840.

Brother Springer: As the Recorder is universally and joyfully received among us as the bearer of glad tidings from the different parts of our church, I feel it my duty to contribute my mite to keep up the interest of your paper, by making known through your columns the goodness of God toward us on this circuit.

Our first quarterly meeting commenced the 4th of December, and lasted nine days. The power of God was made manifest in the awakening of many precious souls. Bros. Richardson, Norris and Stanart, were in attendance and labored faithfully for their Divine master.—TWENTY-EIGHT were received into the church; and the best of all, many of them I hope were savingly converted to God. This revival was principally among the best kind of material. It may not be amiss to mention some particulars.

Two young men, who professed religion on the occasion, had a father nearly seventy years of age; they desired the prayers of the church in his behalf. The old gentleman utterly refused to come to the meeting unless his younger son would come and see him,—he complied with the request of his father. The parent remarked, I hear you have made a profession of religion,—the son answered affirmatively. Are you willing then to make a public acknowledgment that you once threatened to take my life, with the implement of death drawn in your hand, if I would not comply with your injunctions. The son responded he was;—which was accordingly done in the most affecting manner, and the father and son embraced each other in the arms of affection and forgiveness, and found that the gospel could accomplish what nothing else could achieve. The old gentleman joined the church and appeared at the altar soliciting the prayers of God's people.

Again,—there was a family residing in the neighborhood who were opposed to religion. The parents forbade their children coming to meeting, but two of them notwithstanding attended. On learning this the parents followed,—and the mother entered the meeting house and took one of her daughters away by force, in the midst of the importunities of the friends. Prayer was offered up by the church, on the behalf of these wicked parents. Brother Richardson, in company with some others, called on the family, and exhorted and prayed with them. This visit had a good effect. The father promised to attend meeting next day, and bring his family, which he accordingly did,—and surely God was in our midst. Two of his children joined the church.

Yours in Christ,

THOMAS FOSTER.

MIDDLETOWN, MONONGALIA COUNTY, VA., January 4, 1840.

Respected Friend: Since the last communication to you, we have had two protracted meetings on this circuit; the first was held at Pell's school house, and commenced on Friday the 22d day of November and continued four days. The meeting was quite interesting,—some eight or ten person experienced religion and nine united with us in church fellowship, most of them heads of families and of respectable standing in that neighborhood.

Our second was held at Cheat Neck. It commenced on the 21st of December and continued seven days. The snow commenced falling at the same time, and continued, with the exception of one day, until the close of our meeting, at which time it was nearly three feet deep. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, our congregations were large and attentive.—Here I was disappointed in reference to Ministerial help, as brother A. Pool was prevented from attending the meeting by indisposition, and brother Wm. Munhall by secular business. We had the labors of brother P. T. Laishley during the meeting, and brother Simeon Laishley part of the time; but what was best of all, the Lord of hosts was with us of a truth; the meeting increased in interest as it progressed. The good work of penitence and conversions was general from the youth of twelve years of age up to the aged sinner of sixty. On the last night of our meeting, while all was uproar in the elements above, and the snow fell in torrents without the meeting house, showers of salvation seemed to be falling on the congregation within. A goodly number of seekers found the pearl of great price and gave God the glory of their salvation. On this night ten came forward and gave us their names as probationers for membership in the Methodist Protestant Church; and during the meeting THIRTY-SIX united with us. On Saturday the snow was so deep & the weather so increasingly cold we discontinued our meeting, but not without hope that the Lord will continue His good begun work in Cheat Neck and the adjoining neighborhood.

Respectfully yours, in the best of bonds,

JOHN FORDYCE.

PENNSVILLE, OHIO, JANUARY 8, 1840.

Brother Springer: The Great Head of the church has given us a refreshing shower of Divine grace, since I wrote you last.

Knowing that you are fond of short communications for your paper, I would simply state for the encouragement of the friends of our infant Zion, that we have just closed a protracted meeting at Pennsville, which resulted in much benefit to the church, and in the awakening of sinners.—The meeting continued five days,—good order; and closed with the blessings of God. The backslider re-gained his first love, and the mourner in Zion was comforted.

We held our first quarterly meeting on the 13th of December, at Athens' Bridge, in which the exercises of the church met with Divine approbation, for the God and master of assemblies came down in mighty power, and caused the very foundation of the devil's kingdom to tremble; the backslider and the infidel bowed at the hallowed shrine of the Cross,—the cry was extorted "men and brethren what shall I do to be saved," and blessed be God, the rumbling thunders of Divine truth, pierced the rocky heart. TWENTY-ONE received the forgiveness of their sins, whilst others were left to mourn for an absent Saviour. Ten united with the church, and we are looking still for more. In haste,

D. Y. OSTROM.

ELBERT'S, OHIO, JANUARY 4, 1840.

Brother Springer: After my respects to you personally, I wish to say a word through your columns with regard to the condition of this circuit. In reference to the membership there appears to be an increased interest on the subject of religion, among them generally. They attend the means of grace more habitually and are more devotional in their exercises; this is more particularly the case with several of the classes.

We held a protracted meeting in the neighborhood of my residence, commencing the Saturday before Christmas, which lasted seven or eight days. The congregations were good. Members of the Baptist and Methodist Episcopal churches attended with us, participated in the exercises and all seemed to enjoy themselves well. We had the ministerial aid of Bros. Joshua and John Inskeep, and J. M. Young part of the time.—The Lord was among his people. Seven or eight professed religion and a number more were under awakenings. FIFTEEN were added to the church, all from the world but two.

Yours, ISAAC HUNT,
Sup. Union ct., O. Con.

HARDIN COUNTY, OHIO, JAN. 1, 1840.

Brother Springer: I can say but little on religious matters, not having much of interest on that subject among us. The President, Bro. Flood, has sent Bro. S. W. Thornton to take charge of this circuit. I should have been glad if the old gentleman had called to have seen me when he visited this region.

We have here a rich and fertile soil, and our county promises to be a flourishing section. And if we could only have a steady and able ministry, I have no doubt but our cause would succeed well in this quarter.

I presume the Protestant Methodists have enough ministers to supply, with credit, all the fields of labor in the church, if there were ample provision made for their support. And if there were suitable efforts made, I should suppose the ministers could be supported. I believe the greatest failure is on the part of circuit stewards. Could not some person give us a succession of essays in your paper, which would have a fine influence upon our financial matters. There will be objections no doubt to such, but what if there are, if they would be of salutary tendency.

JAMES SWANEY, unst. Pr.

This brother will accept of our thanks for attending to our matters. EDITOR.

PUGHTOWN, VA., JAN. 7, 1840.

Mr. Editor: We have a protracted meeting now in progress at this place. We have no very extraordinary manifestations, yet there is good attendance and excited feelings; the signs of the times encourage us to hold on, and fills us with hope that good will yet be done.

Our second quarterly meeting for Ohio circuit will be held at Eldersville, Washington county, Pennsylvania, on the 8th and 9th of February proximo. We solicit the attendance of all the ministerial brethren who can make it convenient to be with us.

Yours with esteem, &c.

JOHN HERBERT.

BETHLEHEM, INDIANA, DEC. 31, 1839.

Dear Brother: Permit me to say to you that we still have an existence on Charleston circuit, although we have been very unfortunate for the last five years, in getting ministers who were both willing and able to serve the interests of the church, yet we still exist and expect to exist.

Some years ago when I settled in this place, I was alone, and so remained until lately. We have now a church which numbers twelve members, and the good wishes of the community.

Our preacher, brother Bassett, was late getting to his appointment, and in consequence of his delay the circuit suffered; but in him we find a very faithful and diligent spirit, and we hope by his labors and attention to prosper. We have added a few members since he came, and are beginning to look up. By being neglected the vineyard has become infested with weeds; but they can be subdued by good tillage. The society here is in good condition.

I am pleased with the arrangement of your paper,—a portion being devoted to the interest of the church and religion, another to agriculture, &c., &c. Your religious and agricultural departments particularly claim my attention.—May God grant you abundant success.

Your brother, THOMAS P. ARMSTRONG.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: Permit me to record in your paper the death of John and Margarett Ann, eldest son and daughter of Benjamin Fornshell, Camden, Ohio. John departed this life, October 10th, 1839, in the 25th year of his age. His last sickness was of a lingering nature, and afforded ample time for reflection and preparation for death. He, soon after the first attack, became sensible that the time of his departure was at hand; which caused him to make fervent application to a throne of grace, and he received answers of Divine consolation. The forbodings of death, which had hitherto rested upon his mind with a degree of terror, were dissipated and he now viewed it as only the harbinger of eternal life. As he grew week in body, he grew strong in faith, hope and love. And as the world receded from his view, heaven opened to his enraptured vision. He spent his last moments in praising God, and exhorted all who visited him to flee the wrath to come. After repeating the following beautiful lines:

"Farewell vain world I'm going home,
My Saviour smiles and bids me come;
Sweet angels beckon me away,
To sing God's praise in endless day," he fell asleep in the arms of Christ.

Margaret Ann died, December 19th, 1839, aged seventeen years and three months, after an illness of not quite two weeks. She, as her brother, seemed to be impressed from the first of her affliction, that it would terminate her existence in the present world. She said at one time to her mother, "I shall die," but added, "I do not believe that I shall be lost." And afterwards, by other expression of hope, left satisfactory evidence, that "all was well."

From the nature and violence of her disease, she soon lost her speech. She seemed, however, to retain her reason, and frequently when excited to restlessness, by the extreme pain preying upon her system, the sympathetic voice of her affectionate parents would seem to pacify her. I visted her the day previous to her death; her eyes had ceased to sparkle with their former vivacity; her cheek had declined its glow of health and her mussles had become relaxed. After singing and prayer, I left her, and the following morning, e're the sun had arisen, my ears were saluted with the melancholly account of her death. I was called upon to attend her funeral; and the circumstance of one dying so young, and one too, who had never had a week's sickness previous to that which produced death, afforded ample ground for admonition to all classes to prepare for death.

Yours, with esteem,

R. M. DALBEY.

Jacksonsburgh, Ohio, Jan. 6, 1840.

The following communication is from the Rev. L. GARRETT, to whom we alluded to a short time since. It was designed simply to order a copy of our paper and not for publication. If in giving it publicity we have done wrong the author will pardon us. We wish to keep our readers informed of the attitude power assumes from time to time in the M. E. Church. We have no doubt but our aged and talented brother, who has fallen a victim to the exercise of clerical supremacy, will receive the sympathies of his brethren of the M. P. Church.—ED.

NASHVILLE, TENN., DEC. 26, 1839.

Rev. C. Springer: Dear Brother—Some months ago, I received one number of the "Western Recorder," with which I was well pleased, and would have forwarded my name as a subscriber, but I was taking the Protestant and Visitor, and the Olive Branch, which was as many papers as my circumstances would justify my paying for, and I know by sad experience, that gratuity in publishing papers, is bad business. A few days ago I received some twelve numbers of the Recorder, for which you have my thanks; and I now assure you, that you may continue sending it, and I will either forward the subscription, or forward you some subscribers.

I have been greatly injured by publishing a paper, the Western Methodist, which I ascribe—1st. To my being connected with an improvident and faithless partner. 2d. To faithlessness on the part of an Annual Conference with whom I had entered in a written contract, and who were pledged to sustain the paper, but afterwards deserted me, prefering a church paper, from which they expected to derive profit. 3d. To the faithlessness of non-paying subscribers—a large balance unpaid. I was compelled to sell out, under unfavorable circumstances, heavy responsibilities, refusal to take accounts due—unwillingness even to aid in collecting, placed me in a critical situation, and in almost inextricable difficulties. In this situation, after having served the church for more than forty years, I was, in my absence, located! Thus situated I commenced the publication of the Western Monitor, which was patronized, by even those, who afterwards, joined to injure me. Itinerant influence was put in requisition, to kill the little paper and destroy me! I can only say, "father, forgive them"—but I cannot add "they know not what they do."

I had devoted all my little energies, and endured the hardships of the western wilds, to do good, and to promote Methodism—had never examined the origin and extent of assumed, (and as I now think) unauthorized, anti-apostolic and anti-republican powers, dangerous alike to religious freedom and religious purity.

"To err is human,
To acknowledge error is noble."

I took you "to task." I do not now recollect the nature of that taking to task, but I have no doubt that I was then in error—but perhaps no more in error, than was the excellent Snethen, when he compiled Bishop Asbury's defence, or Rev. Wm. Burke, who, after saying many things about the necessity of reform in the M. E. C. has acquiesced and lent his influence, when reform was still more needed. My publications may have "bordered on rashness," but perhaps not more so than did that of St. Paul when he withstood Peter to the face, and charged him with "dissimulation"—or St. John when he charged Diotrephis with loving "the pre-eminence," "prating malicious words," and "casting out of the church." Human nature is no better now, than it was then. And clerical influence no more to be trusted.

I had given my time and my feeble energies to the promotion of Methodism, which I had understood to be "evangelical holiness," and my great object was to save souls. I have found by critical observation and sad experience, that design entered into the original organization of the M. E. Church, and that self-aggrandizement is now the main object of a portion of the episcopal itinerancy! Give the leading men power and episcopacy, and its dependencies supremacy, and farewell to religious freedom, so far as that power can operate.

I have long known that tremendous and dangerous powers were invested with the itinerant clergy of the M. E. C. I have also been aware, that even despotic power may be harmless in the hands of good men. I have been the determined opponent of high-handed and arbitrary measures, and for this I was charged with "disaffection and schismatism," twenty years ago, by P. Cartwright, and with being "nearly a reformer" ten years past by others. I have learned by sad experience not only, that "the eager grasp of power is ever onward," but that it is difficult to stay its progress; as you say I have "been made to FEEL on this subject." Men are subject to change, and Bro. Cryer's accuser, Mr. M., of whom you speak, was dependent for his bread.—But that he should accuse C. when himself had done worse, is not very consistent, or very christian like!

They charged me with "violation of contract," although there was, properly, no contract violated—but to a special written agreement between myself and the Tennessee Conference, in the case of the Western Methodist, they paid no regard—proved utterly faithless, and yet, they no doubt, claim to be consistent and honest! But profits from a branch of the "Church paper" was a desideratum—doing good, was a secondary consideration—monopoly and proscription are the order of the day, and envy and maliciousness the spirit of the time. Wealth, numbers, influence and popularity has great weight now a days—but this does not seem to me to be the way to "raise a holy people" or "spread scriptural holiness"

I know in whom I have trusted, and that he will keep that which I have committed to his care, against that day.

Very respectfully,

L. GARRETT.

STUFFED SQUIRRELS.—A french gentleman in New York last week purchased four gray squirrels, fine, large, plump fellows to appearance, for which he paid a handsome price, and took them home with him. In about an hour, he came back in a violent rage. The cook, in attempting to strip them, found that they were nothing but skins, stuffed with tow, straw, &c. The individual who sold them was of course among the missing. If caught, he ought to be made to eat the stuffiing of his own squirrels.

FOR THE YOUNG.

FRANCES AND THE RABBIT.—'O mother!' said little Frances, as she came in from school, with her shawl on one arm and her bonnet on the other, 'Dont you think the school-mistress says I must begin to write composition? And I don't want to.'

'Why not?' said her mother.

'Because I don't know how,' said the little girl, pouting.

'Well, my dear, that's the very reason why you should.'

'But, mother, what's the use of my writing composition?' said Frances, in rather a peevish tone.

'There is a great deal of use in it, my dear. Don't you remember when your father was away last winter, we used to write letters to him every week?'

'But that wasn't composition, was it?' said the little girl, opening her eyes.

'Certainly, my dear. To write composition, is to put your thoughts on paper—no matter whether it is for a letter, or a book, or an essay for the school-mistress.'

Frances stood a few minutes, whirling her bag round, and considering what her mother had said; presently the string broke, and away went the bag half across the room.

'Well, mother,' said she, as she ran to pick it up, 'I'll try for I should admire to write a letter to father, when he goes away again.' So she got her slate and sat down on a cricket. 'But what shall I write about, mother?'

'O, you must choose your own subject,' replied her mother.

The little girl sat still for as much as three minutes, thinking with all her might. Her mother could not help smiling, to see her, as she sat biting her pencil and looking into the fire.

'Mother,' she exclaimed, 'I can't think of any thing to write about!'

'Can't you? Suppose you should write a description of a rabbit.'

'O yes, that will do; but I must have one to look at.' So away, she ran to beg her brother to bring one of the rabbits into the house. Edward was very willing to oblige her, for he thought a great deal of his rabbits, and was quite pleased to hear them made the subject of Frances' first composition. He selected the prettiest, a beautiful white one, and pulling up two or three handfuls of fresh clover, as he went along, carried it into the house. Frances got her cricket, slate and pencil again, and commenced operations. Edward put the clover on the floor, and then sat Bunny down before it. Frances began with, 'The rabbit resembles a cat, but has longer ears, and a shorter'—just then, 'Bunny,' who had no idea of sitting for his picture, made a leap towards the door, which they had left wide open. 'Stop! stop!' cried little Frances, dropping the slate and pencil, to give chase; 'Stop! Mr. Bunny, I hav'nt done with you yet!' But Mr. Bunny never minded her, and went jump, jumping away, till he get quite out of reach.

'Now, if that is'nt too bad,' muttered Frances, as she came back, in no very good humor. 'What shall I do, mother?'

'Sit down, my dear, and see if you can't describe it from memory.' The little girl cleared up her brow, and taking her slate and pencil for the third time, went on with her parallel between the rabbit and the cat. She made out a very good description, and closed with this remark, the result of recent experience. 'He jumps faster than a little girl can run.'—She then read it, and was well pleased to find she had really written a composition.

'Now, mother, will you please to look it over?' said she. Her mother read it attentively, and said, 'this will do very well Frances, for the first attempt; and now I hope my little daughter will remember one thing for the future.'

'What is that, mother?'

'Whenever you are told to do any thing which seems difficult, instead of saying with a frown, 'I don't want to!' say, with a smile, 'I'll try!'—Youth's Companion.

VARIETY.

Character, is the amount of good or evil, we are doing to community.

It is no small praise, to be the taunt of reprobate tongues; but to be condemned by righteousness, is the greatest curse.

"It takes me to lick lasses," as the Yankee schoolmaster said when he cow-hided the girl.

The war between Missouri and Iowa has ended in smoke. One was afraid to fight and the other did'nt dare to; so says the Times.

Ponder every subject which demands your consideration with a careful and considerate attention—this is the only way to acquire knowledge.

In Maine they talk about creating a new office, that of Schoolmaster General, to take charge of and fit for their duties, the numerous corps of pedagouges who go about the State teaching the young idea how to shoot.—Boston Times.

"Here's an Essay on the rearing of Calves," said a bookseller's clerk, who had been a good deal pestered with a countryman. "That," said Homespun, "thee had better present to thy mother."

"Patrick, you fool, what makes you stale so softly after that rabbit, when your gun has no lock upon it at all, at all?"—"Hush, my darlint—the crature don't know that!"

Intemperance renders the body a sink of diseases; and the mind a cage for unclean thoughts and desires. Absolute necessaries are but few and easily attainable; the superfluities of a disordered mind know no end.

A fellow who wrote a wretched hand, and made almost as bad a fist at spelling and grammar, gave as an excuse for the deficiencies of his education, that "he never went to school but one afternoon, and then the master was'nt there."

GENTILITY.—A fashionable city lady, while in the country a short time since, inquired, "what those animals were with powder horns growing out of their ears," as though it were not genteel for a woman to know a Cow.

A Mr. Joseph Stimpson, employed in the Tremont Theatre, Boston, was suddenly killed by the fall of the counter weight of the drop scene upon his head, from a height of nearly 30 feet. His head was dreadfully crushed.

NO PLACE LIKE HOME.—A good many members of the House of Representatives are now on a visit to their homes and families. They "pair off" with political adversaries in order to keep the relative strength of parties in the House unimpaired.

TRIBUTE OF MERIT.—The officers of the U. S. steamer Poinsett, lying at Norfolk, have presented an elegant silver cup to Mr. Stanford Jackson, for his skill, coolness and firmness in piloting the P. through the breakers on Hateras shoals on the evening of the 18th ult.

The Little Rock Gazette is just one month old when it reaches us. We have had news from England in twenty-seven days.—Galena Democrat.

The last number of the Gazette which we received, was just six weeks old.—Literary Souvenir.

"YOU'D SCARCE EXPECT ONE OF MY AGE."—It is said that there is a man in New York, thirty years of age, who married his fifth wife, last week.

Why not? There is a man now living in Indiana who has a son 107 years younger than himself. The former being 120 years of age and the latter 13.

HOPE.—A bright and beautiful bird is Hope; it comes to us amid the darkness and the storm, and sings the sweetest song when our spirits are saddest, and when the lone soul is weary, and longs to pass away, it warbles its sunniest notes and lightens again the tender fibres of our hearts that grief has been tearing away.

THREE GREAT PHYSICIANS.—The celebrated physician, Dumoulin, being surrounded at his last moments by several of the most distinguished doctors in Paris, who vied with each other in expressions of regret at his situation—"Gentlemen," said he, suddenly, "do not so much regret me—I leave behind me three great physicians." On their pressing him to to name them, each being sure that his own name would be among the number, he briefly added—"Water, Exercise, and Diet," to the no small discomfiture of his disappointed brethren.

TYPOGRAPHICAL.—The first printing press in what is now the United States, was established at Cambridge in 1639; and a second one was put up there in 1660.

In 1662, licensors of the press were appointed, without whose sanction nothing could be printed, and two years after, a law was passed prohibiting a printing press in any other town but Cambridge.

The first newspapers published in this country were in Boston. The first was "The Boston News Letter," issued April 24, 1704; the second was "The Boston Gazette," on the 21st December, 1719; the third was "The New England Courant," on the 17th August, 1721. This last was the paper printed by Dr. Franklin's brother.

The liberty of the press in Massachusetts, even so late as 1723, may be judged by an order passed by the General Court, prohibiting the publication of the Courant, unless its contents were first submitted to be sanctioned by the Secretary of the Province.

In Virginia the introduction of the printing press was prohibited till about the year 1727.

At the commencement of the Revolution, there were only seven newspapers in Massachusetts, and those weekly, and only thirty-four in the whole country.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 22, 1840.

From the Emancipator.

NEW HAVEN, January 7, 1840.

To the Committee on behalf of the Captured Africans:

On arriving here to day, I found the U. S. District Court in session—Judge Judson. Jingua and about half-a-dozen more of his countrymen were in court, comfortably clad. Messrs. Staples, Baldwin and Sedgwick were present as counsel for the libelled men; Gen. Isham and Mr. Brainard, of New London, counsel for Lieut. Gedney, U. S. Navy; Governor Ellsworth, counsel for Capt. Green, one of the libellants of Sag Harbor; Mr. Cleveland, of New London, counsel for two of the Spanish owners of property on board the schooner Amistad; and the U. S. District Attorney, under direction of the Government of the U. S., counsel for the Spanish minister. The court room was crowded.

Mr. Cleveland presented a claim, on behalf of his clients, praying that the goods might be given up on their giving bonds—the goods to be sold by order of court. The counsel for Lieut. Gedney moved the court to order the entire cargo sold for whom it might concern—disclaiming, however, any desire to have the Africans sold.

The question was then argued whether the Africans might withdraw their plea to the jurisdiction of the court, on the ground that the seizure was not in the territoral jurisdiction of the court. The court decided that they might, and put in any claim they choose. Their counsel then put in a general answer, in which they claim that they are not property, and that this court has no jurisdiction over them as such. The Marshal and Deputy Marshal were then called upon to prove the value of the cargo, exclusive of the Africans. The Amistad was valued at one thousand dollars, and the cargo at four thousand dollars.

Charles Pratt's deposition was then offered by Mr. Baldwin. He is a native African, one of the crew of H. M. Brig Buzzard, which was lately in New York harbor, and a countryman, it is alleged, of the captured Africans. The deposition was rejected, among other reasons, on the ground that the parties were not duly notified.

The deposition of Dr. Madden, British superintendent of liberated Africans at Havana, and who was recently in this country, was read. He states that he saw and conversed with the prisoners at the jail in this city—that he learned before he left Havana that they were Bozal negroes, that is, negroes recently brought into Havana—that they were brought there in violation of Spanish treaties and the laws of Spain, &c. The deposition was similar to that already published in the New York papers a month or two since. Exceptions were taken by the counsel for Lieut. Gedney and the U. S. Attorney to some parts of Dr. Madden's deposition. The judge however was disposed, agreeably to the practice in our admiralty courts, to allow much latitude with regard to the admission of testimony.

Mr. S. Haley, of New London, was sworn to testify respecting the admissions of Ruiz to him, soon after the arrival of the Amistad at that port. It was objected to by the U. S. Attorney, who said Ruiz and Montez had nothing to do now with the question—no one appeared as their counsel—and he appeared on the part of the Spanish minister. He was replied to by Baldwin and Staples. It might be asked by what right does the U. S. Attorney appear here at all? For all essential purposes he appears as counsel for Ruiz and Montez, although the government directs the U. S. Attorney to appear on behalf of the Spanish minister as a matter of executive courtesy, and as an excuse for supporting these Africans in case the question becomes a matter of State. And it may hereafter be discussed, what right the government has to the men for the purpose of giving them up, either as property or criminals. Gedney is in fact before the court. He claims salvage on the Africans, as well as the vessel and cargo for the purpose of valuation, it is said, that is that the amount of salvage may be increased. Ruiz and Montez are also claimants, and their admissions ought to be received in evidence. Gen. Isham inquired whether the declarations of Ruiz were to be received against the claim of Gedney? The U. S. Attorney comes here to preserve the faith of this Government inviolate—to see that the Africans are delivered to the Spanish authorities if they are slaves, and if they are not, to have them sent to Africa, or elsewhere, should it turn out to be a State question. Ruiz and Montez are before the court—no matter whether they have counsel or not—as libellants, and therefore their testimony cannot be disallowed. The court said, the claim of Ruiz and Montez appears to be before the court. They set up the right of property. Suppose they step aside, and the Spanish minister comes in—who for?—For the owners, whoever they may be. For the present this is a mere question of property. We take the declarations of Ruiz and Montez as setting up claims of property. The Spanish minister appears here on behalf of the Spanish owners—aliens. He could not otherwise appear. The question may be put.

Mr. Haley testified that on board the U. S. Brig Washington he heard Ruiz, in answer to questions put to him by Mr. Janes, say that only one of the slaves could speak English, and he only a few words, which he must have learned on the coast of Africa; that, with the exception of Antonio, the Captain's boy, none of them could speak Spanish, as they were just from Africa. Ruiz stated that he supposed the two Spanish sailors who escaped in a boat were killed until he arrived in his country. Ruiz, he said, spoke good English. Gen. Isham, interrupting him, said "did you know that he was educated in Connecticut?" Mr. Baldwin quickly replied, "he ought to have known better if he was educated in Connecticut."

Mr. Dwight P. Janes, of New London, testified that he went on board the Washington, and put several questions to Ruiz. Can any of them speak English? "A few words." Can they speak Spanish? "Oh, no; they are just from Africa."—Ruiz said 48 or 49 of them belonged to him, and 4 to Montez; that the whole number on board were 60, viz. 53 slaves 5 captain and crew, and 2 passengers; that the captain and cook were killed—the cabin boy was saved; that their said rising took place in the night, three or four days out; that some of the negroes were wounded; and he supposed those who died on board the Amistad, lost their lives in drinking salt water. Mr. J. stated the condition of the vessel and cargo on their being brought into New London.

James Covey underwent a long and interesting examination. This young man is a native of Africa, of the Menditribe, was one of the crew of the Buzzard, and being subpœnaed by the U. States, was left here by that vessel. He was sold in Africa by a black man to a Spaniard, captured by an English man of war, taken into Sierra Leone, where he went to school, learned to read and write, and speak the English language with considerable facility. He has acted as interpreter here. All the prisoners, but three, are from his country, Mendi, and speak his language. When he first went into the prison here, they all talked to him, and appeared glad to see him, because he spoke the same language. They have told James that they all came from Africa to Havana. They have Mendi names. Their names have meaning. Kale means bone, &c. They speak of the same rivers, &c. that James knew in Africa.—They all sailed from Lomboko, in Africa, to Havana. Has talked with them, one by one, and they all say the same thing. James underwent a long and severe cross-examination, and acquitted himself very well.

Professor Gibbs was sworn. The counsel for the Spaniard and Spanish minister, and Lieut. Gedney, after inquiring what the counsel for the Africans expected to prove by this witness, and being informed that they expected to prove by Mr. Gibbs, who is an eminent linguist, that James and the Africans speak the same language, the Mendi dialect, &c., objected to his competency as a witness in the case. After a long argument the Judge said he must take time to reflect upon the subject, and the court was adjourned to 9 o'clock to-morrow.

One of the gentlemen connected with the Divinity School here, who has assisted in instructing Jingua and his comrades, informs me that they have made satisfactory progress in their studies; that they show, at least, as much eagerness to learn as white people; that they wished the money given them by visitors should be expended for books, &c.; that most of their savage habits have been relinquished, and habits of civilized life acquired; that they appear to understand the reason of their detention in this country, and to be grateful for the sympathy manifested for them. Jingua, one stormy morning when the teacher did not come as usual to instruct them, assembled his comrades, and said he would pray with them and instruct them. He inquired also, on another occasion, "If America gives them up what will be done with them?" What a providential circumstance that these strangers should have been cast upon the shores of a free State, and brought to this city! Let us earnestly pray that they may not be given to the tender mercies of the cruel, but be liberated and christianized in this land, professing to love and practice the principles of liberty. Truly yours, LEWIS TAPPAN.

IMPORTANT MOVEMENT IN ENGLAND.—It will be seen by the following article from the British Emancipator, of November 13, that the British Cabinet have determined to interfere in regard to the Captives of the Amistad, Lord Palmerston having already referred the question to his law adviser as to "the mode" in which that inference could be "most properly and most effectually exercised." This will be a new difficulty in the way of our National Administration, perhaps quite as troublesome as the Bermuda cases, or even the N. E. Boundary.

"On Saturday last a deputation from the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society waited, by appointment, on Lord Palmerston, to convey to his lordship the sentiments of that body respecting the recognition of Texas, & the treatment of the Africans captured in the Amistad.—The deputation consisted of the Secretary, Mr. Tredgold, with Messrs. Scoble, Stacey, Beaumont and Hinton; and they were most courteously received. His lordship professed his unwillingness to do any thing by which the influence of Great Britain could become accessary to the extension of perpetuation or slavery, and his desire to give to the moral aspect of the recognition of Texas, which it was the special object of this deputation to press on his attention, the fullest consideration. The noble lord further stated, that he had referred the case of the captured Africans to the Queen's Advocate, for his opinion as to the mode in which interference of the British Government might be most properly and most effectually exercised."—ib.

TIPPLING LAWS—PUBLIC OPINION, ETC., IN ALABAMA.—With American politicians it is a legitimate and current maxim, Vox populi, vox Dei, (the voice of the populace is the voice of God.) In accordance with the first principle of democracy, the representatives of the people have only to ascertain the will of a majority of their constituents, and implicitly obey it. It forms no exception to this rule, that the great mass of voters are often but partially instructed in the more obstruse principles of political science—their will, when fairly and unequivocally expressed, is paramount to all other considerations, with a trust-worthy representative. If he does wrong, he does so as an AGENT under the specific instructions of his employers, and THEY are responsible for consequences.

When a politician is fully satisfied that a majority of his constituents are in error, concerning important subjects, it is his privilege to use all proper means to set them right; but having failed in this, his course is a plain one; either to obey instruction, or if, in good conscience he cannot do this, to resign the powers committed to his exercise, that they may be delegated to others.

The facilities for enlightening public opinion, on great State or National questions are certainly numerous and great at the present time. The first of these, we would mention is the newspaper press. This should never take advantage of the mercinary interests, prepossessions or passions of the people. If a different course be indulged—if the press make its appeal mainly to the passions, prejudices or sheer party considerations of the people, it will become a PEST rather than a blessing to any country.

Another method of enlightening the country at large, is the practice, now common among us, of public speaking, by rival candidates for office. How muchsoever this practice may be abused by artful demagogues imposing on the unsuspecting and credulous, it is, upon the whole, a salutary means of disseminating useful knowledge; and, while men of talents and principle are ready to expose duplicity and falsehood, but little ultimate harm need be feared; for, altho' the public mind may be biased for a season, by error, its vibratory exercises will generally settle down on proper principles. At all events, we should be slow to espouse any cause which we would not be willing to submit to the severest scrutiny of public discussion, while reason and common sense are left free to defend it.

It may be difficult, and sometimes impracticable, to ascertain the public will, concerning great questions on which legislators are called to act. Among those we may rank that of enacting laws to prohibit or regulate the sale or use of intoxicating liquors. The evils of intemperance are so common, and the privilege of drinking, when and where men please, is so confidently claimed by tipplers, as their unalienable right, that, in some countries, it appears to be prematurely conceded, that all legislation on the subject is a forlorn hope. It is supposed that if laudable efforts were made to suppress the evil in question, by legislative bodies, public opinion would not sustain the actors; that it would even produce a re-action which would open the doors of tippling houses wider than ever; and that, therefore, the better way is to have little if any such action on the subject; that public opinion should be left free to operate under the influence of the pulpit, the press, temperance societies, public lectures, individual suasion, &c.

We are free to say that there may be danger of hurting the best of causes, by rashly pressing it before the public mind is prepared to sustain it. Especially is there danger of urging this question on religious grounds. This is a most delicate feature of the subject, and we would not willingly be ranked among the imprudent advocates of premature measures. But we must be indulged in pleading the causes of common humanity; a cause in which thousands of heart-stricken wives and impoverished children have a deep and abiding interest. Shall not the cries of these be heard? Will not our legislators heed the wailings of sorrow and bereavement which rise in broken accents from all parts of our land? We invoke the gallantry of the noble and the chivalry of the brave, the patriotism of the true hearted and the humanity of all, to stand forth in defence of such legislative enactments as may be considered most likely to lessen an evil which carries in its train more fearful ravages than those produced by 'war, pestilence and famine,' in their most hideous forms.

The incident which led our minds to indulge in the above remarks and reflections, was the following extract of a letter written a few days ago by the publisher of the "Moulton Banner," to his assistant, from Tuscaloosa, where he was witnessing the proceeding of the Alabama legislature.

"The petition from Lawrence county, praying the Legislature to pass an act suppressing the retail of ardent Spirits, in small quantities, was introduced in the Senate to day by Mr. Rodgers, from our county, and was referred to a select committee.

From what I have been able to learn since my arrival, my impression is that the Legislature is willing to do something to advance the great Reform founded on temperance habits. I think it is likely that the Legislature will increase the license of retailers, which I think is quite enough at this time,—to guard against a reaction of public opinion that might prove disastrous for many years to come.

We have strong hopes for Alabama: some of her leading men are the unflinching friends of every good cause; and they will act promptly and efficiently when ever they can do so prudently. In the mean time, the public mind is coming up finely and will ere long operate most effectively.—S. W. C. Advocate.

LOVE, MURDER AND SUICIDE.—The Louisville Advertiser of December 9th says: "Yesterday about 12 o'clock, a Mrs. Madison, of this city was shot dead by a man named Doyle, who immediately after committed suicide. The circumstances that led to this tragical affair originated in an amour between the parties. In the beginning of September last, Doyle made a proposal of marriage to Mrs. Madison, and was refused. He then took a large dose of laudanum, which nearly put an end to his life, but Dr. Talbot succeeded in effecting his recovery. After this he left the city and did not return till lately. Meantime Mrs. Madison had resigned her heart to another man, and the marriage ceremony was performed a day or two since. Her husband went down the river yesterday. Doyle called on her shortly after and reproached her for her faithlessness, but did not seem very much agitated. He spoke of his friendship, and asked leave to visit her. She replied that she wanted nothing to do with him, and was moving out of the room when he drew a pistol and shot her in the back of her head. He then rushed out and crossed the street, where he killed himself by a shot thro' the breast. Mrs. Madison did not survive the wound more than an hour or two, her head being dreadfully shattered.

Doyle was a tailor by trade. He was a man, aged 28 or 30—small and of a delicate constitution, and formerly maintained an excellent character, but since the disappointment of marriage had given himself up to dissipation.

WINFIELD SCOTT.—The following anecdote was related to a writer in the Jerseyman, in a farm-house in Virginia, during a night spent there some six years ago:

In December, 17—,towards the close of a windy day, a woman with an infant child was discovered half buried in the snow, by a little Virginian, seven years old. The lad was returning from school, and hearing the moans of some one in distress, threw down his satchel of books and repaired to the spot from whence the sound proceeded, with a firmness becoming one of riper years. Raking the snow from the benumbed body of the mother, and using means to awaken her to a sense of her deplorable condition, the noble youth succeeded in getting her upon her feet; the infant nestling on its mother's breast, turned its eyes towards their youthful preserver, and smiled, as it seemed, in gratitude for its preservation. With a countenance filled with hope, the gallant youth cheered the sufferer on, himself bearing within his tiny arms, the infant child, while the mother leaned for support on the shoulder of her little conducter. "My home is hard by," would he exclaim, as oft as her spirits failed; and thus for three miles did he cheer onward to a happy haven the mother and the child, both of whom otherwise must have perished, had it not been for the humane feelings and perseverance of this noble youth.

A warm fire and kind attention soon relieved the sufferer, who, it appeared, was in search of her husband, an emigrant from New Hampshire, a recent purchaser of a farm in the neighborhood of ———, near this place. Diligent inquiry for several days found him, and in five months after the identical house in which we are now sitting, was erected and received the happy family. The child grew up to manhood—entered the army—lost a limb at New Orleans, but returned to end his days in solace to the declining years of his parents. "Where are they now?" I asked the narrator.—"Here," exclaimed the son, "I am the rescued one, there is my mother, and here imprinted on my naked arm, is the name of the noble youth, our preserver!" I looked, and read "WINFIELD SCOTT."

AN EDITORIAL LIFE.—The life of a newspaper editor is set forth in the following paragraph, in a very true light:

"Can any thing, dead or alive, more pitiably unhappy be conceived then a jaded scribbler for the public press—sitting down to his task at the last moment, with an aching head and empty stomach—or visa versa, which is exactly the same thing in effect? Imagine the forlorn drudge's sensation, as he doggedly lifts the quill-stump and moves it instinctively towards that fountain of good and evil, the ink-pot, surcharged with both the gall of bitterness and the honey of adulation. He is destitute of a topic—his overwrought brain has exhausted its stock of images, and he can fancy nothing but the ghost of an idea already hackneyed thro' all the changes of the alphabet—no subject that has not been hackneyed to death by the hungry scissors of borrowers and imitators. Yet must he continue to feed the iron jaws of the press! There is no release from the undertaking. He is in for it, and sterile, feasting or starving, his imagination must be wrung daily, yea hourly, for wherewithal to meet the merciless demands of the demon at his elbow. Other men may eat, drink, and sleep—may live, move and have a being, like decent creatures. The merchant may relax in time of sickness, or retire at seasons of enjoyment; the mechanic may forego a job when he breaks a limb, or choose to go a fishing, the farmer may work or let it alone; and the mariner has frequent intermission amidst the toils and the storms of his career, and the world wags on without confusion, nevertheless, they only comparatively feel the consequences. Not so with the slave of types. For him there is no holiday. No repose, no retreat awaits his retired powers.—When he skulks, the world comes to an end, and chaos riots! Nor is it merely indispensable that he should labor at brief and stated intervals—the most irksome sort of employment from its very constancy and regularity, and unceasing recurrence; he must also put forth his efforts at something new. The reading public has become a spoiled child, with a depraved appetite, perpetually hankering after novelties, monstrosities, and impossibilities. In the fabrication of these crudities for quidnuncs, a renewal of intellect once a year, at least, should be provided for. There is an end even to "the spider's most attenuated thread;" and what maker of longer yarns can be required, in reason, not only to spin out, like a spider, the substances of his body, but that of his brain also? Truly this is a cruel world; and the man that meddles with paragraphs, a miserable piece of carneous machinery."

EFFECTS OF RAILROADS.—A writer in Blackwood's Magazine, in taking a view of the anticipated effects of railroads upon national character, makes the following observation:

"The steam engine, in its effective state, is not half a century old. The railway, in its present power, is not ten years old, yet it is spreading, not merely over Europe, but over the vast savannahs of the new world. What will all this come to in the next fifty years? What must be the effect of this gigantic stride over the ways of the world? What the mighty influence of that mutual communication, which even in its feeblest state has been, in every age, the grand instrument of civilization? Throw down the smallest barrier between two civilized nations, and from that hour both become more civilized. Open the close-shut coast of China or Japan to mankind, and from that hour the condition of the people will be in progress of improvement. The barbarian and despot hate the stranger. Yet the fullest of civilization, freedom and enjoyment, of which earth is capable, the one thing needful is the fullest intercourse of nation with nation, of man with man.—The faculties of the railroad are made for peace; its tendency is to make nations feel the value of peace; and unless some other magnificent invention shall come to supercede its use, and obliterate the memory of its services, we cannot suffer ourselves to doubt that the whole system, which is now, in course of adoption with such ardor throughout Europe, will yet be acknowledged as having given the mightiest propultion to the general improvement of mankind."

THE WIFE.—How sweet to the soul of a man, (says Hierocle,) is the society of a beloved wife, when wearied and broken down by the labors of the day, her endearments soothe, her tender cares restore him. The solicitude and the anxieties, and the heaviest misfortunes of life are hardly to be borne by him who has the weight of business and domestic cares at the same time to contend with. But how much lighter do they seem, when, after his necessary avocations are over, he returns to his home and finds there a partner of all his griefs and troubles, who takes, for his sake, her share of domestic labors upon her, and soothes the anguish of his anticipation. A wife is not, as she is falsely represented and esteemed by some, a burden or a sorrow, to man. No, she shares his burdens and she alleviates his sorrows, for there is no difficulty so heavy or insupportable in life, but it may be surmounted by the mortal labors and the affectionate concord of that holy partnership.

Frame, the murderer in Illinois, was recently executed. The evening previous to his execution, he was asked if he had any request to leave behind.

"Yes," said he, promptly, "tell every young man not to drink liquor;—tell them to fly from it—it is the root of all evil—it has brought me to this dungeon, and caused these heavy irons to be bound on my feet and hands."

FIRE.—A fire broke out on Wednesday in the Bowery, about 3 o'clock, in a sugar, tea and coffee store, at No. 170, kept by George Hand, which destroyed that building, and the confectionary store kept by Mr. Parker, and damaged several other buildings. They were all of wood, and not of much value.—Bro. Jonathan.

The number of students in Princeton Theological Seminary, as shown by the catalogue just published, is 113, viz: Resident Licentiates 3, First Class 32, Second Class 31, Third Class 47.

Paymaster R. A. Forsyth was dismissed from the Army a few days since, by order of the President of the United States, for a defalcation of about $15,000 in his accounts.

COMMUNICATION.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: Having a few leisure moments, and feeling a deep interest in the cause of religious liberty, and the success of our particular enterprize, it occurred to me that I would say to you a few things relating to these matters.

What I particularly wish to say, is, that I highly approbate your course on the exciting subject of abolition. If I understand you right, you are in favor of the emancipation of the colored man, and that you are disposed to throw nothing in the way of its accomplishment, when it can be done on the principles of the gospel, be that time when it may. But on the other hand, you consider the order of Providence has made it your special duty to serve the cause of religious liberty or ecclesiastical "emancipation;" and that for you to pursue any course to disqualify yourself for that particular duty would be to desert the post which God had assigned you. What sensible man could doubt the correctness of this position. As you have remarked "the incidents and accidents" of your life have connected you with the cause of religious freedom. For twenty years or more you have given close attention to this subject; have become acquainted with all the ins and outs of this controversy; you have been placed in a situation that you could both see and feel the dread oppression of priestly domination. These advantages have qualified you for your particular post. But for you to take an active part with either of the parties on the vexed question of abolition would be to destroy your usefulness with the other, and of course to desert the station assigned you by the arrangement of Providence.

Permit me to say to you, my brother, that my heart has ached for my church, when I have witnessed the determination of some of our talented men to agitate this subject among us, regardless of consequences. They do not seem to pay any attention to the fact that we are a young and feeble church, and not able to stand the excitement which is shaking older and stronger ones to their base—yea, even the government itself. They can make no allowance for the opinions of men who have as great an acquaintance with the world, as clear views of this subject, and no doubt as much honesty of purpose,—yea, and when put to the test, would do as much toward ameliorating the condition of the colored man as themselves. Those I now have in view, appear to be entirely reckless in their course; it does seem, to me, they would rather our church should come to naught than to yield one inch of the ground they occupy. Give them all they ask now and they will soon raise new demands, and thus perpetually agitate!—agitate!!

I do not wish to impugn the motives of these brethren. I am willing to accord to them all the honesty of purpose they claim. But the difficulty with them, I should presume, originates from a defective education. Their minds were not properly disciplined in youth. In boyhood they were permitted to be AGITATORS in the domestic circle; to keep in perpetual embroilment the brotherhood after the flesh. And now, that they have came abroad into the world and gained some little consequence in society, this same disposition to excite and disturb manifests itself. At the same time I am willing to yield to such brethren their claims to religion and honesty of purpose, I cannot consider them trustworthy men—men to whom the public interest could safely be confided; for they would sacrifice the best cause in the world to a personal pique or private sentiment.

I am not to be understood here, of intimating that it is wrong for a minister or member of the Methodist Protestant church to be an abolitionist, if he see cause; or to manifest as much zeal as he please, to serve the interests of that enterprize, if his convictions of duty impel him.—But there is a right and a wrong way to do every thing. If you wish to write upon the subject of slavery, there is a score of papers in the land dedicated to that particular purpose, which would gladly receive your productions. If you feel it your duty to deliver lectures on the slave question, resign the charge of your circuit and enter into the service of the Anti-Slavery Society, who will be glad of your labors. But don't attempt to mix up two subjects, which, in the present excited state of the public mind, will no more amalgamate than oil and water. In attempting to serve both at the same time, you serve neither to advantage. Some of the brethren, I see, cannot even write an account of a revival of religion without peppering it a little with abolitionism.

No man, in my opinion, is a greater enemy to slavery than I am. But I feel satisfied that our church in its youthful state can do little upon the subject. Is not the maxim of the poet, particularly applicable to us in this matter?

Vessels large may venture more,
But little boats should keep near shore.

The Western Conferences have all passed resolutions favoring the cause of emancipation. Should not this suffice? What more can they do? Let us all go to work then, and attend to our particular duty, and let the duty of other men alone.

But I well remember the argument at our last Conference; "if slavery is a sin, it is our duty as a church to oppose it," &c., &c. Agreed.—But suppose I have a wicked neighbor that it becomes my duty to oppose, should I, in rendering this opposition, so put myself in his power that he could destroy me at pleasure; certainly not. So there is no disagreement as it respects principles, but as it respects the mode of operation. And if I were not fully satisfied that many of my brethren had a zeal which is not according to knowledge, on this subject, I should have kept silent. Besides, I consider that we as a church, are called on to serve the cause of religious liberty; that this, in the order of Providence, is made our leading duty, and all other duties but subordinate.

I hope my brethren will take no offence at this plain and well intended admonition, and will excuse imperfections, as I am not accustomed to write for the press. T. P. ARMSTRONG.

Bethlehem, Ia., Dec. 31, 1839.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

EDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 22, 1840.

The date on our inner form, in the last num-, was not corrected; it should have been 15th nuary instead of 8th.

The letter of Bro. Fordyce, on the first page, tes the late snow was nearly three feet deep the foot of Laurel Hill, whence he writes.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.—Reuben Wood was re-lcted, on the 11th instant, Judge of the Su-me Court of Ohio, for seven years, from and er the 6th of February, 1840.

We forgot to say, in our last, that Gov. Shan-n was put in nomination for the same office at e next term, by the late Administration Con-ntion held in the city of Columbus, Ohio.

Hon. T. A. Howard was nominated by the ad-nistration convention of Indiana, on the 8th stant, as candidate for Governor of that State, the ensuing election.

There is little or no alteration in the prices of bduce at the east since our last quotations, d it would be useless to insert them again. Money matters are said to be getting easier th in Europe and at home.

The whigs of Ohio are to have a convention Columbus, to commence on the 21st of Febru-y next, for the purpose of nominating a suita-e person as a candidate for Governor at the suing election.

We shall forward the paper to our friend L.E.S. d leave the consideration of his proposition scretional with himself. If he could get us me subscribers in his vicinity, we would be d.

Says the Bucyrus (Ohio) Democrt, "we lost x subscribers in consequence of publishing an ticle, disapproving of the conduct of the Marion oters, and one for publishing an article against temperance!" How pettish men are these ys.

The Circleville (O.) Telescope of the 8th inst. ys, a revival of religion, in the neighborhood of resbach's meeting house, Pickaway county, O., d been in progress about ten days, such as d never been known in that section of untry; that the Methodists, Albrights and Uni-d Brethren were all sharing in the work.

A Mr. Gigot and a servant girl, of Philadel-hia, were recently poisoned to death, and six thers of the family are in a critical condition om the same cause. It came from taking corn eal from a cupboard which had been poisoned r rats, through mistake, and making a pudding, which they all partook.

Some of the papers, from the present aspect of fairs, think there is a prospect of a war be-ween France and Algiers. We think not.—his appears to be a generation of rowdies, acklegs and mobocrats; these won't fight unless n of them can get one man in a corner with his ands tied. When it comes to hard knocks, on qual ground, they're off.

We acknowledge the receipt of the first number Bicknell's enlarged "Counterfeit Detector and ank Note List," a pamphlet of 48 pages closely rinted. This work is published monthly by Matthew T. Miller, successor to R. T. Bicknell, tock and Exchange Broker, No. 76 South Third reet, Philadelphia. Terms—$1 50 per annum; copies for $6—in advance.

This is perhaps the safest and best Director to usiness men, on the subject of the Bank Note urrency that the country affords.

"Bicknell's Reporter, Counterfeit Detector nd General Prices Current," is published week-r on a mammoth sheet, by the same person, at 3 per annum in advance, or $5 will pay for one ubscriber for two years. This is a most valuable neet to business men. While it is attending to he Counterfeiters and Bank Currency, and to he Commerce of the country with much ability, t at the same time gives an ample detail of Do-nestic and Foreign news, as well as articles on olitics, literature, &c. &c. A copy of the amphlet Detector containing full list of ounterfeits is sent to the Reporter subscribers n July and January of each year.

In scanning over the Governor's Message to he Legislature of New York (for in all con-cience it is too long to read regularly through,) ur eye caught the following sensible remarks:

The power and influence of the Executive De-partment of the Federal Government are greatly ncreased, and the history of that government, for the last few years, exhibits a constant strug-gle on the part of the Executive to control the pinions of the representatives of the people.—His appeals from their decisions have been tried by the popular elections for the first, second and hird time. In such trials the representative has o contend singly and unaided against the com-oined influence and patronage of the govern-ment. Not content with the already overshad-owing powers of the National Government, the President has arraigned before Congress the in-stitutions of the States and the States them-selves, and has discussed their domestic concerns with as great freedom as if they were responsible to the Federal Government, and were not sov-ereign in the conduct of their municipal affairs. These innovations furnish a new demonstration of the error of those who, at the adoption of the Constitution supposed the Federal Government too unstable, and the power and influence of the Executive Department too limited. The time seems to have arrived, when the adoption of measures to restrain the increasing power of the Executive and maintain the necessary indepen-dence of the States should no longer be delayed. Among such measures none would be more safe, more effectual or more in harmony with demo-cratic principles than amendments of the Con-stitution of the United States, which should vest in Congress the appointment of the chief financial officers of government, and limit the tenure of the Presidential office to a single term.

We recollect many years since, in reading the Federalist, that in answer to the objection start-ed by some, that the provisions of the constitu-tion would lead to consolidation, Mr. Hamilton in answering these, took much pains to prove that there was more danger of anarchy in the PARTS than tyranny in the HEAD. We are now satisfied that, that, master mind on this particular subject had lost its way. In the numerous con-flicts which we have witnessed going on between the General and State Governments, the former has generally gained the ascendancy, and is still gathering greater strength. The immense pa-tronage of the Chief Executive of the Union, if he choose to wield it for that purpose, will enable him to control every department of the govern-ment. And unless the people will see that their constitution be so amended as to strip the Chief Magistrate of most of his prerogatives, and place them in the hands of Congress, they will some day, though retaining all the forms of repub-licanism, be governed by a sovereign dictator.—Remember, in reference to power, no difference whether in church or state, that its march is ever onward, and its tremendous tendency to accu-mulation.

BRO. FAIRCHILDS, assistant preacher of Zanes-ville circuit, under date, 14th instant, says "the work of God is progressing in this circuit. We have recently had several good meetings. THIRTY members have been added to this circuit since Conference, and prospects good."

The weekly revival intelligence, we publish from the different parts of our church, in this section, is quite cheering to the friends of Zion. The communications in this number are of an encouraging character; they show that some four or five meetings, recently held, have added about ONE HUNDRED to the church If we conduct our-selves with due deference to each others opin-ions, so as to preserve among us "the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace," who shall hin-der our success?

The utility of our paper, we presume, is now felt and appreciated. But, brethren, bear in mind, that if we continue to enjoy these bene-fits the paper MUST BE SUPPORTED. Don't neg-lect to do what is in your power; keep at the subject, and in all cases, if posssble, get pay for new subscribers, in advance, because cash is wanted to keep the concern in operation.

WEST CHESTER, JANUARY 12, 1840.

Brother Springer: This is to request you to notify brother Brown, that there will be an ap-pointment for him in Leesburgh on Thursday, at night, the 7th of February, and in Deersville on Friday, at night, the 8th of February; then he will come on to West Chester to our quarterly meeting, which will commence on Friday, the 8th of February, to meet his appointment on this circuit. R. RICHARDSON.

We would like to correct the above note for our brother, but an attempt of this kind would be mere guess work; we would have to alter both days and dates, and of course, this would throw the responsibility on us, in case of an error. If the President could be at Leesburgh, on Wed-nesday the 5th of February, he would be able, on any supposition of the difficulty, to meet all these appointments. EDITOR.

GEORGETOWN, HARRISON COUNTY, OHIO, January 14, 1840.

Brother Springer: A Petition has recently been forwarded to me, to which I am expected to solicit subscribers, prohibiting merchandize &c., within a less distance than two miles of camp and other protracted meetings. Now, merchan-dize, according to SPENCER, means any thing that may be bought or sold. If then, the mean-ing of this Petition, is to prohibit eatables and make public fasting an essential part of public worship, the people, so far as my solicitations have extended, are opposed to it, as well as your humble servant. I have, therefore, given it as my opinion, that the prohibition of eatables was not contemplated, but the letter decides against me. Yet, believing that the drawers of said Petition did not desire that eatables should be precluded, I respectfully ask you, who are no doubt acquainted with the spirit of the instru-ment, what the true meaning is.

Yours, in Gospel Liberty,
HENRY HEBERLING.

We answer,—the design of the Petition is to prevent the sale of cider, beer, cakes, spirits, apples, mellons or any thing else vended by those hucksters or spungers who follow in the wake of camp meetings.

Who is it that gives annoyance to camp meet-ings? From long experience, we are enabled to speak advisedly and confidently upon the subject; we believe that nine-tenths of all the disturb-ance that happens at those meetings, is occa-sioned by the VICTUALLERS. They establish them-selves, generally, as near as they can get to the ground,—say, within speaking or hearing distance of the stand; fires are erected, which become a place of resort for the drunken, dissipated and profane. These will go off to the towns, taverns or shanties and get their bottles replenished with the good critter,—then return to the fires of the victualling establishments and prowl around all night, cursing, swearing, fighting, howling, &c., in a manner highly offensive and injurious to the peaceable and orderly portion of the community.

Drive off these victualers,—put out their fires, leave no place to accommodate these worthless vagabonds and they are off in a short time to the grog shanties, a mile distant, where they generally remain. And though from the scenes frequently exhibited there, you would suppose you were only half a mile from hell, yet, at and about the ground all is quiet and orderly, and very seldom do they return to give any annoy-ance to the peaceable worshippers.

Besides, we have found, by long experience, that there are not a more faithless and worthless set of villains in the land, than these said vict-uallers. You cannot depend on them, nor believe a word they say. They will promise most faith-fully to keep order and sell nothing but eatables; at the same time, they have spirits behind the curtain or out in the bushes; and if they could make one dollar more by it, they would counte-nance a disorder that would destroy the meeting. To these remarks, there are scarcely any excep-tions. You may think this severe, but if you had the experience which more than twenty years have afforded us on this subject, you would be prepared to acquiesce in the opinion, that when you saw a victualler imposing himself on a camp ground, you saw a man who would at least lie, cheat and steal.

But, to suppress these, it by no means follows, that "public fasting" is to constitute a "part of public worship" on those occasions. All the taverns in the neighborhood have the right to sup-ply whatever food may be called for; each private house in the vicinity, will be at liberty to make any use of its own table it thinks proper; and the society, holding such meeting, can permit as many boarding tents as may be deemed neces-sary, and have them subject to the order of the meeting. Of course, the tent holders can make their own supplies independent of any other ac-commodations. No need at all of fasting should the prayer of the Petitioners be granted. May we not hope then, that our worthy brother will go to work and get as many signatures as possible, and forward them immediately to some member of the Legislature. The wisdom of that body will enable them to guard all these matters.

Pennsylvania, we are told, has a law similar to that contemplated in the Petition, which is said to be effectual in guarding the rights of the public on these occasions.

ITEMS.

In proportion as credit becomes cheap, men become scoundrels and bankrupts.

During the last three months 200 fires have oc-curred in London, with the loss of 16 lives.

"I pick my company," as the loafer said ven he slipped his hand into his neighbor's pocket.

J. W. W.

Real gentlemen and women never sneer at me-chanics and operatives. But self-styled gentle-men and ladies not unfrequently do.

The New York Almshouse contains at present three thousand and eight persons, of which num-ber 1360 are natives, and 1648 foreigners.

A tailor who died lately was found in his last moments cabbaging a piece of the blanket which covered him. The "ruling passion" was too strong for him.

The Portuguese Government appears anxious to recede from its agreement with England for the suppression of the slave trade under the Por-tuguese Flag south of the Equator.

Information has been received that the Shah of Persia has acceded to the demands of Great Britain, and that a Commercial Treaty will forthwith be made with that nation.

On the 1st inst. the amount of Treasury Notes outstanding was $2,758,335 30. Nineteen and a half millions have been issued, of which all but the above sum have been redeemed.

"I never betrayed a friend's confidence," said one man to another, by way of insinuation.—"Very true," was the answer, "for you never were entrusted with it."

In our journey to Sandwich and Falmouth last week, we found no snow, and learned that there was none the whole distance of 120 miles to Provincetown, whilst in one-third of that dis-tance west, we plunged into snow to the depth of at least three or four feet. The earth is bare in Boston, but three or four miles distant, the sleighing is good the whole way to New York, and indeed to Upper Canada, unless interrupted by the great depth of the snow.—Olive Branch.

The members of our Legislature do not seem to do much yet. The party leaders however are reconnoitering, and will be ready to do battle soon. A very tempest of words will be dischar-ged, we believe, that's all. Neither party seem to dare the responsibility of committing them-selves on that most knotty question, the License law. It will throw either party out of power, who shall declare either for or against it. The liberals in one case and the ultra Temperance men in the other, hold the balance of power.—What a predicament for politicians! Our uni-formed Militia must also be soothed, or there will be trouble in the camp.—ib.

PERSEVERANCE REWARDED,—Or the In-fluence a little Girl can exert.—A little girl, about eight years old, took a Tem-perance paper, at a Temperance meeting, to see how many she could get to sign it. The next morning she presented it to her father, who had been in a drunken frolic for a fortnight, and came home drunk while his little daughter was at the Tem-perance meeting the night before. This cruel father raised his hand and struck his child a blow which levelled her on the floor, and said, "I'll learn you to be saucy to your parents" The little girl got up, and picked up the constitution, which had fallen when she received the blow. She took it with her to school that day, and got the teacher and most of the scholars to sign it. When she had lei-sure she would ask her mother if she might go to such and such a neighbor's and see how many could be got to join the Temperance Society.

Her father could not but see what was doing in the neighborhood. For two weeks he remained at home, and did not use a drop of intoxicating liquor, a thing he had not done for years before. At the end of that period he said to his daughter, "Mary how many names have you got on your Temperance Constitution?" "I will bring it and see," she seplied. As her father was counting the names she stood between his knees, and when he had look-ed them over he said, "you have one hun-dred and fifty." She jumped up on his knee, threw her little arms around her father's neck, and impressed a sweet kiss on his cheek, and said, "Do you sign it too father, and then there will be one hun-dred and fifty one."

The old drunkard's heart was melted. His bosom heaved—his bloated haggard cheek was wet with the tears of contri-tion—he pressed his Mary to his heart, and said, "I will sign it;" and at once affixed his name to the constitution and pledge.—Temperance Recorder.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

Extract of a letter from the Washington Corres-pondent of Bicknell's Reporter, dated

WASHINGTON, DEC. 24, 1839.

On Monday, it being petition day, Mr. Speaker, after the Journal had been read, was about to call on the States and Ter-ritories for petitions, when

Mr. Wise, of Virginia, rose and said that in order to obviate all difficulty that might arise, in relation to the presenta-tion of petitions, he had a resolution to offer, which, if adopted, he thought, would relieve the House of a deal of trouble.

He then submitted his resolution, which proposed, that all petitions on the subject of Slavery in the District of Columbia, in the Territories, or in the States, should, on presentation, be deemed rejected with-out debate.

Mr. F. Granger, of New York, object-ed to the resolution, as it was calculated to stifle the right of petition.

Mr. Wise demanded the ayes and noes on the resolution, which was lost by a vote of ayes 77, noes 109.

After a good deal of virulent conversa-tion had been had, on the subject of abol-ition, the standing committees were an-nounced.

The Senate was occupied the whole day in the reception of petitions and reso-lutions, none of which, however, were of a public character.

On Wednesday, the House was occupi-ed the whole of the day again, on the sub-ject of abolition petitions, but nothing was accomplished: and both Houses adjourn-ed over till Friday.

On Wednesday, the 1st of January, the Executive mansion was thrown open to company, and the President shook hands with all who chose to call and see him.—There was a vast multitude in attendance.

Among those who were at the Palace, and who partook of the hospitalities of the President, was Mr. John C. Calhoun; Mr. Clay, also, inadvertently called in, took the President by the hand, and ex-changed the civilities of the day with him.

On Friday the House met, and for two hours was engaged in listening to a vio-lent personal quarrel between Messrs. Jennifer, of Maryland, and Bynum and Stanley, of North Carolina. That part of which was confined to Messrs. Stanley and Bynum, was distinguished by great virulence and gross impropriety of lan-guage. Mr. Bynum called Mr. Stanley a puppy, and Mr. Stanley called Mr. Bynum a begger. All this grew out of a remark made last Tuesday by Mr. Bynum, in de-bate, in which he intimated that Messrs. Jennifer and Stanley were bullies.

Mr. Keim, of Pennsylvania, at last got the floor, and announced the death of the Hon. Wm. Potter, and the House ajourn-ed.

In the Senate, Mr. Calhoun, on leave, introduced a bill to cede the Public Lands to the States in which they lie. Mr. Clay inquired if the bill was reported at the in-siance of the President.

Mr. Calhoun became exceedingly in-censed at the inquiry, and a hot debate immediately ensued, in the midst of which Messrs. Clay and Calhoun belabored each other without mercy, to the great amuse-ment of the galleries, after which the Senate adjourned.

To-day, the House took up and pas-sed a bill appropriating $400,000 to the contingent fund, for the per diem and mileage expense of Congress.

On motion of Mr. Thompson, of South Carolina, to re-consider the vote of last Tuesday, directing the printing of 5000 copies of a map of that section of Florida in which the Seminole war has been wa-ged, was then taken up and carried in the affirmative.

After which, Mr. Jameson, of Missouri, announced the death of his predecessor, Mr. A. G. Hannan, and the House ad-journed. The Senate did not sit.

Some anxiety was manifested to-day, in relation to the affair held yesterday be-tween Messrs. Bynum and Stanley. It was feared that a duel would take place. Affairs of the kind are utterly idle. There will be no fight. Yours, &c.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 11, 1840.

The House of Representatives, on Mon-day, met at the usual hour, when the Hon. William B. Calhoun, of Massachusetts, an-nounced the death of the Hon. George C. Alvord, his late colleague, and the House adjourned.

In the Senate, the morning here was devoted to the reception of petitions, reso-lutions, and reports; after which, Col. Ben-ton, of Missouri, called up a series of resolutions he submitted on the 27th of December, denying the power and the right of the Government of the U. States to assume the payment of the debts of the individual States, and spent the remain-der of the day in discussing them.

In the House of Representatives, on Tuesday, the New Jersey contested elec-tion was incidentally taken up. Mr. Campbell, of South Carolina, moved a resolution to refer all the evidence in the case to the Committee on Elections, and to summons both parties before that Com-mittee to be heard.

Mr. Bell, of Tennessee, moved to amend by adding two resolutions, one refusing to the Democrats from New Jersey, seats, till they produce certificates of election; the other, requiring the Whigs to produce evidence of the absence of fraud in this election, before they take seats.

On these proposed amendments, Mr. Bell spoke at great length, and before any action was had, the House adjour-ned. Yours, &c.

A French writer remarks that "the modest deportment of those who are tru-ly wise, when contrasted with the assum-ing air of the young and ignorant, may be compared to the different appearances of wheat, which, while its ear is void, holds up its head proudly, but as soon as it is filled with grain, bends modestly down, and withdraws from observation."

FOREIGN NEWS.

TEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

The packet ships United States, Fisher, and England, Waite, were towed up to the city through the ice, on Saturday evening. The latter sailed from Liver-pool on the 8th December, and we have our full files of the London and Liverpool papers. The news is of much interest, and below we give ample details.

The difficulties between England and China are daily assuming a more threat-ening aspect—and the opinion prevails that reprisals and a blockade against the Celestial Empire, will be resorted to.

A bloody conflict has commenced be-tween the Arabs and the French in Africa.

The British War in the East has ter-minated.

The chartist disturbances continue in England; and there is an increasing vio-lence in the tone of the English tory pa-pers.

The marriage of the Queen is of course a general topic, and the young Prince Al-bert is lampooned unmercifully in many of the journals. There is a latitude of personality in the English press, which far exceeds the worst libels of the Amer-ican newpapers.

The money market remains firm, with better prospects ahead.

Cotton has declined ¼d., but the reports of a short crop here, (unfounded howev-er,) it was supposed would produce a re-action.

The Great Western had a stormy time out—indeed that noble ship seems always to have bad weather.

MONEY, AND THE MARKETS.—An ar-rangement has been concluded between Messrs. Rothschild and M. Jaudon of the United States Bank, by which the former have contracted to advance £1,000,000 sterling upon the deposit of state-stocks, to the same amount of issues and deben-tures, bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum; the price of these debentures has been fixed at 94, with 2 per cent. commission—and they are re-deemed at par in two years.

CHARTISM.—The trials going on of the Newport rioters have brought to light the plan of the Chartist leaders for a na-tional armament.

FRANCE AND ALGIERS.—The situation of the French colonists and army in Af-rica is most deplorable; and it is thought that they will eventually be able only to hold Algiers and Oran. The plain of Algiers is overrun by 4,000 Arabs, who are daily making excursions. The Emir Abdel-Kader is advancing, in person at the head of 1000 men, while his partizans are carrying fire and sword in every di-rection and exterminating the detached colonists. In the Emir's letter, or decla-ration of war, addressed to the French Governor of Algiers he says: "I have already written to you that all the Arabs of Beni-Heiznass as far as the Kaf were agreed, and that they have no other words to utter than the holy war."

The Paris papers are filled with spec-ulations on the subject of the war in Af-rica, and with reproaches against the gov-ernment for having suffered Abdel-Kader to retain so much power of mischief in his hands; and private letters, that they quote from Algiers, assert that the Arab attack is chiefly owing to the unnecessa-ry bravado made the other day by the Duke of Orleans. In the meantime the government is doing all in its power to meet the exigency, and already 25,000 men are under orders for Algiers.

A commissioner has likewise been sent to the Emperor of Morocco, giving him notice that if he assists, directly or indi-rectly, the Arab chieftain, France will consider it as a declaration of war, and instantly take active measures against him. The plain of Algiers is overrun by 4000 Arabs, who had the audacity to car-ry off a courier and his escort of 30 men, almost in sight of the city. The friend-ly tribes are all put to the sword, and the "holy war" is proclaimed on every side.

The port of Toulon is in a state of great activity in consequence of the African news. Strong reinforcements are daily going off, and the telegraph hourly urges the greatest despatch.

Marshal Soult offered, the Paris papers say, to resign his post as minister, and take the command of the African army, but the King would not listen to the prop-osition, and the marshal remains to open the campaign in the chambers. Some people assert that Louis Phillippe, who has no love for the marshal or his party, wishes to expose them to all the unpopu-larity caused by the affair at Algiers, and to the storm which awaits them in the deputies, with the hope that they may be compelled to resign, and leave him at lib-erty to recall Count Mole to his service.

Three persons, Vilocq, Bechet, and Al-lard, who before figured in republican plots have been put upon trial at Paris, charged with being concerned in the pro-duction of a journal, called the Moniteur Republican.

SPAIN.—On the 24th of November the Queen's troops continued to occupy the same positions. The Carlists were at Monrovo, endeavoring to fortify the cita-dels of that town and of Ares del Maestre and the neighboring heights. Cabrera had superseded O'Callaghan in the com-mand of Morella by a subaltern officer who enjoyed his entire confidence. He had likewise dismissed the commanders of the forts of Culla and Villarnalefa, and appointed in their place two sergeants who can neither read nor write.

TWO DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival of the packet Iowa, Capt. Pell, from Havre, we have Paris dates to December 7th, and Havre to Dec. 8th inclusive, passage in 29 days. The intelligence is two days later from the Continent of Europe; but, of course, no later from England.

Two more plots against the life of the king, and one more infernal machine, had been discovered in Paris.

Cotton has fallen 3 to 4 centimes.

The king of Hanover has been nearly dead with an attack of apoplexy.

Active preparations are made in France for sending troops to Algiers. The Nep-tune and Alger men of war have left Toulon for Algiers, each with 1000 sol-diers. The Etna, Styx, Tartare and Cerbere steam vessels, have also left the same place with troops for the same des-tination. The Amazone frigate and the Crocodile have followed, and five other steam vessels are also ready to leave Toulon for the same purpose.

Abdel-Kader and his troops among the neighboring tribes of Arabs, have wreaked their sanguinary vengeance upon the French. Three of his bands have swept the neighboring mountains inhabited by Arabs, fired their cabins, and impressed nearly the whole of about 25,000 head of cattle.

The Moniteur promulgates a royal or-donnance, calling out 25,000 of the 48,000 second class men of 1838; also another ordonnance, granting to the Minister of War, for the service of 1840, an extra-ordinary credit of 19,987,000 francs, to meet the urgent expenses which could not have been foreseen at the time of granting the budget for the said service.

'It is announced,' says the Constitution-nel, 'that Lieutenant General Cubieres is to take the command of the active forces in the campaign against Abdel-Kader.—Major Generals Parchappe, Lasbordes and Lahitte, are also to go to Africa.'

The National, in commenting upon the rumored intention of the government to prevent the Emperor of Morocco from granting aid to the Arabs against the French in Algiers, says—'Take care statesmen of the 12th May; there would be something more to do in such a contest than to chastise the ferocious perfidy of a few tribes of Arabs. If at the head of more than 50,000 men, you have not been able to defend the territory which was left to you by the sublime treaty of Tafna, what an army, what a fleet must you not have to blockade and conquer the empire of Morocco, which has 6,000,000 of inhabitants, and is nearly 47,000 square leagues in extent. The enter-prise should try your skill and courage.'—Brother Jonathan.

STILL LATER.

By the packet ship Hibernia, Capt. Cobb, we have received English news to the 11th of December. The news is not of much importance. Parliament was expected to assemble on the 7th of Janu-ary.—Bicknell.

From the Morning Post of Dec 10.

The arrangement announced as having just taken place between Messrs. Roths-child and Sons, and Mr. Jaudon, has caused a decided improvement in the val-ue of U. S. Bank shares. Sales of them were made in the course of the morning at £19 to 10s per share. It is understood there are plenty of capitalists ready to go into the new loan, as the interest yield-ed upon the price given is somewhere about 10 per cent. per annum. The on-ly objection made to it appears to be with respect to the guarantee offered for the reimbursements of the money, the under-taking of the U. S. Bank being deemed scarcely sufficient in the present situa-tion of its affairs. The measure has naturally engaged a good deal of the at-tention of those who are in the habit of taking a leading part in such matters.

The Times of Monday evening states that the Messrs. Rothschild have been na-med as contractors for it—and the total amount is stated at £900,000, for which they are to issue 5 per cent. debentures, at 92, and to hold as collateral security a large deposit of Ohio, Indiana, Pennsyl-vania and other American State stocks. But whether Messrs. Rothschild advance this money as a new transaction, is left unexplained.

The meeting of Parliament is fixed for the 16th of January.

A vast conspiracy for the overthrow of the English power in India is said to have been discovered at Karnaul, an indepen-dent Mohammedan principality, the fort of which is 270 miles from Madras. A strong force was despatched thither by the Governor General, and the fort was invested and taken without resistance, as well as that of Joudpore.

There is no later intelligence from Chi-na, but from Calcutta we learn that two men of war had sailed for Canton, and that four others were ordered to Bombay to hold themselves in readiness to sail for Canton, if necessary on receipt of despatches from Capt. Elliott.

On the 30th of November, at Algiers, firing was heard at a distance. It ap-pears that all the French troops were fighting with the forces of Abdel-Kader, which maintain their ground in the coun-try. There is not a soldier in Algiers; the guard of the town and its police are entrusted to the Arabs.

Paris papers of Sunday, Dec. 8, had been received in London. A third per-son implicated in the affair of the infer-nal machine had been arrested. At his apartments were found quantities of arms and ammunition.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PERSECUTION IN PRUSSIA.—We have lately met with articles relating to Prussia, which, to those not acquainted with the facts, may seem contradictory; such, for instance, as those relating to emigrations to this country and to Australia for conscience sake, on the one hand, and those on the other, relating to the franking privilege given to Missionary Societies, and the interest taken by the king in the sanctification of the Sabbath, and the promotion of temperance.

The fact is, simply, that the Prussians do not govern themselves, but are governed: and it happens, just now, that the supreme power is under the control of a desire to make the people intelligent, moral, and religious. Hence the thorough school system. Hence, too, all that is done in favor of religion and good morals. But hence, also, from the spirit of the system, and in order to make it bear with all its force on the character of the whole population—hence, have arisen other measures not consonant with the views of American Christians, and which are the occasion of the extensive emigration among the most pious people in the whole kingdom. The following statements made at the late Whitefield centenary meeting in London, give a pretty clear view of the case. Sir Culling Eardley Smith said.

"It is a remarkable coincidence to which I have been requested to allude, that, as I am informed, at the present time, efforts are being made in a continental country, not dissimilar in their erratic character to those of Whitefield, but which are meeting with a less happy result. It is generally believed in England, that in the dominions of the king of Prussia, great liberty of conscience is preserved, and that opportunities are afforded to all, to worship God as they please. Such was the impression on my mind, till within the last fortnight; but I grieve to learn that the king of Prussia requires that those who worship God in his country, should adapt themselves to a system he has devised for them. Till recently, the Protestants in Prussia were divided into the Lutheran and Calvinistic bodies. The king of Prussia has undertaken the task of combining them into one body, and has compiled a Liturgy for both or rather for that one body. He has taken upon himself the appointment of ministers in each locality, and he claims from all to be recognized as head of the church in his own dominions. I need not tell you, that among faithful Protestants will ever be found many to protest against such a procedure. Many have been found in Silesia. Those who were by this means expelled from the national edifices, had recourse to private houses; they have there been followed, by persecution, and a large number of them are emigrating to South Australia. At the moment I am addressing you, I am told that there are two or three hundred Christians, constituting one congregation, who are waiting at Hamburg, till funds can be raised to charter a vessel to convey them to South Australia. I am told, too, there are 10,000 persons who are affected by this innovation, and the measures which have followed it. It will not, I trust, be considered inappropriate, while we are thanking God for what he has done in our own country, to ask you to extend your sympathy to Prussia. I hope that an opportunity will be offered for a future time to British Protestants, to testify their sympathy with those fellow Christians in Germany who are expatriated for conscience sake."

Dr. Bennett subsequently referred to the same facts in the following terms:

"You, Sir Culling, have mentioned, a circumstance concerning Prussia, which I can confirm; and I tell my brother ministers, that they ought to value it, by using it. Two German doctors having been placed under my instruction by the Missionary Society, I naturally asked them, in the course of our studies, how they employed their Sabbaths. They replied, 'We are assisting Mr. Cavil, a Prussian minister.' That led me to inquire about this gentleman. He was one of those who had consented to the king of Prussia's compound church, made up of Lutherans and Calvinists; but his own flock would not confirm, and they were persecuted and imprisoned. What was the consequence? He, like a noble minded man, said, 'what though I can comply? can I suffer my poor flock, for professing those principles which I have taught them, and adhering to them perhaps more firmly than I have done, to be imprisoned, and I take no share with them? no, never; I must cast in my lot with them, now that they are persecuted.' And so he did; he quitted his living in the king's church, cast in his lot with the persecuted few, and then he was persecuted like them, and was obliged to quit the country. He was then in London, laboring among the German sugar bakers in the eastern part of the metropolis, and my two missionaries elect were assisting him. He was waiting for his flock, a ship load of them, that were coming here, in order to go to South Australia: thus depriving the king of Prussia of his industrious subjects, bearing them away to our colonies, and thus enriching them, increasing the value of every acre of land, wherever these men settle. They will bear with them, too, that love of religious liberty which men learn to cherish when the powers of the earth attempt to wrest it from them.—Vermont Chronicle.

THE CORPORAL.—During the American Revolution, an officer, not habited in military costume, was passing by where a small company of soldiers were at work making some repairs upon a small redoubt. The commander of a little squad was giving orders to those who were under him, relative to a stick of timber which they were endeavoring to raise to the top of the works. The timber went up hard, and on this account the voice of the little great man was often heard in his regular vociferations of "heave away! there she goes! heave ho!" &c. The officer before spoken of stopped his horse when arrived at the place, and seeing the timber sometimes scarcely move, asked the commander why he did not take hold and render a little aid. The latter appeared to be somewhat astonished, and turning to the officer with the pomp of an Emperor, said "Sir, I am a Corporal."—"You are not though, are you!" said the officer, "I was not aware of it." And taking off his hat and bowing, "I ask your pardon, Mr. Corporal." Upon this he dismounted his elegant steed, flung his bridle over a post, and lifted till the sweat stood in drops on his forehead. When the timber was elevated to its proper station, turning to the man clothed in brief authority; "Mr. Corporal Commander," said he, "when you have another such job and have not men enough, send to your Commander in Chief, and I will come and help you a second time.' The Corporal was thunderstruck. It was Washington.

Perhaps there is no phrase in common use more trite and unmeaning than that of "How do you do, sir?" as applied by persons meeting in the streets, or by those who are introduced to each other. If this mode of salutation were altered to, "Health and happiness to you, sir," it would not be without meaning, and would generally express the sincere wish of the heart; for no man desires the unhappiness of a fellow creature, unless he be his inveterate enemy.

A writer from the east says, "I was told that the Turks had a prophecy among themselves, which led them to expect that this year their Sultan would die and next year their empire would be overthrown; and it is singular that all the tribes in these countries, Turks, Greeks, and Jews, look forward to the year 1840, as a year full of potentious changes. The Jews say, that if the Messiah does not come then, they shall expect him no longer.—The Greeks expect troubles that will lead to the re-establishment of their empire, and the triumph of their orthodox church, preparatory to the fulfilment of our Lord's word, that there shall be one fold under one Shepherd.

WHAT'S IN THE WIND!—The Western Statesman, published at Marshall, Calhoun county, Michigan, says: "The Indians in Western Michigan disappeared some six or eight weeks since; and, upon inquiry, we learn that they are and always have been dissatisfied with some of the treaties made by the general government respecting their reservations—that they will yet have them—that all warriors have taken their rifles and gone to Canada. Can our editorial brethren on the frontier give us any light upon the subject?"

COMMUNICATION.

REPORT OF LITERARY AGENT OF THE OHIO CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: If you will have the goodness to publish the following list of subscriptions obtained during last year for the benefit of the Literary Institution, you will confer a favor, and enable me to redeem a pledge made to many individuals. It is but justice to the liberal to state that those whose names are marked with the asterisk, (*) had made a donation previously to the present subscription. A. H. BASSETT.

Names.	Residence.	Sub.	Amt Pd.
A M'Guire,	Waynesville, Ohio,	$25 00+	$25 00
Luke Fish,	Sidney, O.	1 00	1 00
Geo Conclin,*	Cincinnati	44 00	44 00
Wm Clawson,*	"	40 00	40 00
S L'Hommedieu,	"	18 50	pd in pr'g
Cash, (D V M)	"	1 00	1 00
Hiram Sloop,	"	16 00	16 00
Elizabeth Hall,*	"	56 50	66 50
Wm Disney,*	"	10 00	10 00
John Haughton,*	"	500 00	500 00
D H Horne,*	"	500 00	500 00
Henry Handy,*	"	100 00	150 00
J A Simpson,	"	20 00	20 00
S Martin,*	"	180 00	180 00
J H Carrey,*	"	1 00	1 00
S Easton,*	"	5 75	5 75
J Lamb,	"	5 25	5 25
S Martin,*	"	25 00	25 00
Cash, (Mr E)	"	15 00	15 00
J Hughes,	"	75 00	75 00
W B & J G Evans,	"	75 00	75 00
J E Williams,*	"	25 00	25 00
I Garrison,	Cincinnati,	25 00	25 00
Jos T. Hodgson,*	"	10 00	10 00
E D Norris,*	"	50 00	50 00
A Metcalf,*	"	50 00	50 00
John Wood,*	"	10 00	10 00
H W Stephenson,	"	25 00	5 00
T A Conway,	"	15 00
Eli Nichols,	"	5 00	5 00
Dr Gano,	"	10 00
Mary Williams,	"	5 00
J F Dair,	"	8 37½
Wm Cones,*	"	25 00
A Higbee,*	"	8 37½
J Foster,*	"	1 12½
G W Phillips,	"	21 00
Th Snyder,*	"	12 50
Jas Hicks,	"
J Hughes,	"
J Mahard, jr.	"
J Ogden,*	"	10 00

†This includes $15 which should have been credited to Bro. M'Guire in report of former agent, Bro. Clarke, published in the Meth. Protesant, but by mistake omitted.

W Q Hodgson,*	Cincinnati,	30	00
I C Young,	"	5	00
A friend, (N M)	"	20	00
J Esheby,*	"	10	00
Wm B Beall,*	"	25	00
C Donaldson & co*	"	2	37½
S C Parkhurst,	"		50
J Layman,*	"	5	00
Jeremiah Crane,	"	3	00
Wm G Dorman,	"	5	00
Cash, (T J M)	"	5	00
Geo Fry,	"	5	00
A Armstrong,	"	5	00
C Duffield,	"	5	00
Alex Gibson,	"	3	00
Cash, (pr H Handy)	"	1	00
J W Garrison,	"	1	00
Cash, (pd J Haugh'n	"	5	00
T Scowden,	"	2	00
L Patterson,	"	2	00
T D Williams,	"	2	00
J. Bachelor,	Cincinnati,	30	—	30	00
R Boggs,*	"	20	—	20	00
J S Niles,	"
Wm Shally,	"
B King,*	"	25	—	25	00
M King,*	"	2	37½	2	37½
Ch Lewis,	"		50		50
John Beall,*	"	5	00	5	00
A H Bassett,*	"	3	00	3	00
Isaac Conoling,	"	5	00	5	00
R Hunt,	"	5	00	5	00
Mrs C W Langdon,	"	5	00	5	00
J D Langdon,*	"	5	00	5	00
J H Thomas,*	"	3	00	3	00
Jeremiah Gest,*	"	1	00	1	00
H Harman,	"	1	00	1	00
B B Towler,	"	1	00	1	00
J H M'Pherson,*	"	5	00	5	00
J S Horne,*	"	2	00	2	00
J R Horne,*	"	2	00	2	00
B Goldsbury,	"
C Laborne,	Cincinnati,	1	00	1	—
Joel Laborne,	"	3	—	3	—
A B Newlove,	"	2	—	2	—
S Humes,	"	1	—	1	—
Wm Steel,	"		25		25
R Douthart,	"		50		50
N Bland,	"		50		50
R Wagoner,	"		50		50
James Hicklin,	"		50		50
Th Bland,	"	2	—	2	—
J Bland,	"		50		50
P Bland,	"		25		25
D A Todd,	"		50		50
I W Brazleton,	"	1	—	1	—
Geo Wheatley,	"		50		50
John Hansell,	"		50		50
J S Perdue,	"	1	—	1	—
Henry Perdue,	"		25		25
S Hinds,	"		50		50
J Sharpe,	"		25		25
H Hartley,	"		50		50
F Wymond,	Springfield, O.	1	—	1	—
J Thompson,	"	3	—	3	—
B Carter,	"	2	—	2	—
G Thompson,	"	1	—	1	—
J Carter,	"		25		25
L Deitz,	"		50		50
J A Perdue,	"		50		50
H J Needham,	"		50		50
A G Griffith,	"		50		50
James Harrison,	"	2	—	2	—
H C Dorsey,*	"		50		50
John Fletcher,	"	1	—	1	—
J Winstanley,	"		50		50
Benj Lunt,	"		50		50
James Fuel,	"	1	00	1	00
Mary Fuel,	"		25		25
E F Allen,	"		50		50
Th Wellman,	"		25		25
Wm Ingram,	"		50		50
C Laborne,	Springfield, O.	1	—	1	—
Joel Laborne,	"	3	—	3	—
A B Newlove,	"	2	—	2	—
S Humes,	"	1	—	1	—
Wm Steel,	"		25		25
R Douthart,	"		50		50
N Bland,	"		50		50
R Wagoner,	"		50		50
James Hicklin,	"		50		50
Th Bland,	"	2	—	2	—
J Bland,	"		50		50
P Bland,	"		25		25
D A Todd,	"		50		50
I W Brazleton,	"	1	—	1	—
Geo Wheatley,	"		50		50
John Hansell,	"		50		50
J S Perdue,	"	1	—	1	—
Henry Perdue,	"		25		25
S Hinds,	"		50		50
J Sharpe,	"		25		25
H Hartley,	"		50		50
Wm Hunt,	Springfield, O.	5	00	5	00
Wm Conoling,	"	5	00	5	00
J Budd,*	"	2	—	2	—
J Hess,	"	1	—	1	—
S Hess,	"	1	—	1	—
N Mills,	"	5	—	5	—
M Mills,	"	2	—	2	—
S Mills,	"	1	00	1	00
H Mills,	"	25	—	25	—
Th Mills,	"	5	—	5	—
J Kelly,	"	5	—	5	—
J Hicklinhager,	"	1	—	1	—
Th Hendricks,	"	10	—	10	—
J Stickney,	"	10	—	10	—
Abel Laborne,	"
Amos Laborne,	"
Jos Laborne,	"	1	00	1	—
A Laborne,	"	5	—	5	—
Abbey Laborne,	"	5	—	5	—
B Laborne,	"	1	—	1	—
P Laborne,	"
C Laborne,	Springfield, O.	1	—	1	—
Joel Laborne,	"	3	—	3	—
A B Newlove,	"	2	—	2	—
S Humes,	"	1	—	1	—
Wm Steel,	"		25		25
R Douthart,	"		50		50
N Bland,	"		50		50
R Wagoner,	"		50		50
James Hicklin,	"		50		50
Th Bland,	"	2	—	2	—
J Bland,	"		50		50
P Bland,	"		25		25
D A Todd,	"		50		50
I W Brazleton,	"	1	—	1	—
Geo Wheatley,	"		50		50
John Hansell,	"		50		50
J S Perdue,	"	1	—	1	—
Henry Perdue,	"		25		25
S Hinds,	"		50		50
J Sharpe,	"		25		25
H Hartley,	"		50		50
Wm Hunt,	Charlestown, Ia.	10	—	10	—
Wm Conoling,	"	5	—	5	—
J Hess,	"
S Hess,	"
N Mills,	"
M Mills,	"
S Mills,	"
H Mills,	"
Th Mills,	"
J Kelly,	"
J Hicklinhager,	"
Th Hendricks,	"
J Stickney,	"
Abel Laborne,	"
Amos Laborne,	"
Jos Laborne,	"
A Laborne,	"
Abbey Laborne,	"
B Laborne,	"
P Laborne,	"
J C Hackleberry,*	Charlestown, Ia.	5	00	5	00
Benj Allen,*	"	5	00	5	00
L B Houston,	"	2	00	2	00
M C Ewbank,*	"	1	00	1	00
John Clarke,	"	1	—	1	—
S F Elder,	"	1	—	1	—
P Wymond,*	"	1	—	1	—
J Murray,	"	3	—	3	—
Wm Sawdon,	"	10	—	10	—
H Sawdon,	"
W West,	"	1	—	1	—
John Burton,	"	5	—	5	—
H W Burton,	"	10	—	10	—
F Barrows,	"	5	—	5	—
D H Stephens,	"	1	—	1	—
S Buck,	"	5	—	5	—
B Otterbeck,	"
J Milligan,	"
Wm Seaman,	"	1	—	1	—
E M Plaskitt,	"	10	—	10	—
W Stranahan,	"	5	—	5	—
Dillsborough, Ia.	Guernsey, Ia.	5	—	5	—
"	"	5	—	5	—
"	"	2	—	2	—
"	"	3	—	3	—
"	"	5	—	5	—
Jeffersonville, Ia.	Louisville, Ky.	2	—	2	—
"	"	2	—	2	—
"	"	10	—	10	—
"	"	5	—	5	50
"	"	2	—	2	50
"	"	2	—	2	00
"	"	5	—	5	—
Shelbyville, Ky.	"	12	50	5	—
"	"	5	—	5	—
"	"	2	00
"	"	5	00
"	"	1	00
"	"	2	00
Le Grange, Ky.	"
Westport, Ky.	"
Crawfordsville, Ia.	Cincinnati,	1	—	1	—
Leesville, Ia.	"	5	—	5	—
Bethlehem, Ia.	"	1	—	1	—
Delphi, Ia.	"	1	—	1	—
		3085	314	2599	68½

INDIANA CONFERENCE.

At the quarterly conference of Charlestown circuit, held at Guernsey's meeting house, Dec. 14th, 1839, Geo. Wheatly in the chair, it was Resolved, That this quarterly conference approve of the proposed measure, to establish an Indiana Annual Conference within this State.

The superintendent of Charlestown circuit, being a member of the committee appointed for the getting up of an Indiana Conference, does not judge it his duty to give an expression at this time in the case, A. H. BASSETT, Sec,

A QUAKER'S LETTER.—Friend John, I desire thee to be so kind as to go to one of those sinful men in the flesh, called attorneys, and let him take out an instrument with a seal thereunto, by means whereof he may seize the outward tabernacle of Geo. Green and bring him before the lamb-skin men at Westminster, and teach him to do as he would be done by. Thy friend, R. G.

PREMIUM ESSAY.—We see it stated, that Thos. H. Palmer, Esq., of Pittsford, Vt., has obtained the premium of $500, offered by an American Institute of Instruction, for the best essay on a system of education best suited to the common schools of this country.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

For Sale.

LARGE MAPS of Mississippi and Alabama, showing the Public and Indian Lands, Indian Reservations, Land Districts, Townships, &c. engraved from the government surveys and plans in the General Land Office, Washington city, by E. Gilman, Draughtsman in the General Land Office.

F. TAYLOR, Book Seller, Washington city, has just published (and secured the copy right according to law) the above Maps, which will be found infinitely more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. They are published on separate sheets, each containing nearly six square feet, and will be found especially useful and valuable to those interested in the lands of either State, as they show every item of information which is in possession of the Land Offices relative to water courses, township lines, Indian Land Reservations, Land Districts, &c., and will be found perfectly accurate and precise in these points. They can be sent to any part of the United States, subject to single letter postage. Price $2, or three copies of either will be sent by mail for $5. A liberal discount will be made to travelling agents or any who will buy to sell again. Dec. 10, 1839. 3t16

☞Editors of newspapers any where who will give the above advertisement (including this notice) one or two insertions, shall receive by return mail a copy of each map, if they will send a copy of the paper containing it to the advertiser.

Youth's Cabinet.

EDITED BY N. SOUTHARD.

Prospectus of vol. III. Commencing Jan. 2, '40.

THIS paper which was begun without a subscriber, has existed two years, in the midst of a host of competitors, securing many friends, and receiving the warm commendation of about one hundred editors, and many parents and teachers.

"You have no idea of the eagerness with which my little girl gets your paper," said a father a few days ago. "It would be a grand thing to introduce as a reading book into common schools," said a distinguished laborer in the cause of education.

"It is just such a paper as we desire to have placed weekly in the hands of our children," says the Christian Herald. "We have never known a paper in which children take so deep an interest," says the Waldo (Maine) Gazette.

"We have seen no paper expressly devoted to the young, which combines with more felicity amusement and sound principles," says the Bristol (R. I.) Phenix.

Its object is to do the greatest possible good to the hearts and minds of its young readers, in the most pleasing manner. To accomplish this object an increasing list of subscribers will enable the editor to devote an increasing amount of time and attention, while a number of able correspondents among the friends of the young at home, and missionaries abroad, will give it variety and interest.

Its engravings, which average two or three each week, are not intended merely to please the fancy, but illustrate truth, convey instruction, and deepen good impressions.

While it is confidently presented to the favorable notice of all who love the improvement of the young, it has special claims on those who desire the immediate extinction of all forms of oppression, and who believe the best security for our own liberties is a sacred regard for the rights of others.

It is published weekly at No. 9, Spruce street, New York, and No. 25, Cornhill, Boston, at only $1 per year in advance; ten copies for 8 dollars; twenty copies for 14 dollars; thirty copies for 18 dollars.

All editors who wish to promote the great objects of the Cabinet, are requested to favor us by giving this one or two insertions.

Our exchange list having swelled so as greatly to tax our time and means, we shall be constrained to confine it mostly to those who show us this kindness. Jan. 1, 1840. 19

The Casket,

AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

THE unparalleled success which has attended the Casket since it has come into the hands of the new proprietors, induces them to begin a volume with still further attractions on the first of January next. Its literary character, which has called forth so many comments, will undergo no change, as it will continue under the control of the same editors. Several new contributors, however, of high talent, has been engaged beside those who have already been enlisted in its favor. The Magazine will be enlarged, and will contain a greater quantity of reading matter than any periodical published at the same price in this country.

The work will appear in a new and beautiful type, cast expressly for the purpose, and will be printed on the finest paper. It will also be ornamented with the finest steel engravings, provided at a heavy expense, and executed from the choicest designs. To vary the style of these illustrations, the services of distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish at intervals, mezzotints for the ensuing volume. The heads of several distinguished American writers will appear in the course of the year. The publishers, determined to leave nothing undone to merit the patronage of a liberal public, have resolved, after much solicitation from many of their fair readers, to publish quarterly, as an extra, a correct plate of the latest fashion, highly colored, and executed in the first style of the art. This department will be under the control of a French gentleman, of much taste and experience, and will be found to excel any thing ever attempted in this line in America. The extra in the November number, may be considered a fair specimen of what these fashion plates will be. The music department, as heretofore, will be under the charge of Messrs. G. W. Hewitt & Co., and the fine pieces of copyright music which they have hitherto furnished are sufficient guarantee for the future

The flattering terms in which the Casket has been noticed by the journals in every section of the Union, establish beyond a doubt its claims to support generally. It will surpass any other work in the return it gives for the readers' money.

TERMS: Three dollars per annum, invariably in advance, or two copies for five dollars.

All communications to be addressed, post paid, to GEORGE R. GRAHAM & Co.,
December 30, 1839. Philadelphia.

P. S.—Editors publishing this Prospectus will be entitled to a copy of the Casket during the volume. No exchange is solicited, except when noticing the reception of the Magazine.

The Union of the Whigs for the sake of the Union.

PROPOSALS FOR PUBLISHING A POLITICAL NEWSPAPER IN ZANESVILLE, O., ENTITLED

THE HARRISONIAN.

THE opposing candidates are in the field.—The two great political parties of the country are preparing for the contest. The one unfurls the banner of Harrison, Tyler and Reform: the other has inscribed on their flag Martin Van Buren and the Sub-Treasury. The People are called upon to choose between them. We have made our selection. We go for the able and enlightened Statesman,—the Hero that never lost a battle,—the political Father of the West, Gen. WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON. We believe a majority of the People are with us. We believe that if every opponent of the men in power does his duty, the election of our candidates is certain.

To unite and arouse the opposition to action we will labor. We ask the support of our fellow-citizens—extend to us your helping hands—assist us to raise high the banner of Reform, and to rally around it every man who wishes to see dispelled the cloud of gloom that now hangs over our common country.

The news of the day, and as much variety as possible, will be furnished.

THE HARRISONIAN will contain nearly, if not altogether, as much reading matter as the larger sheets.

CONDITIONS.—It is believed that a small sheet, on moderate terms, will suit better the state of the times, and have a more extended circulation, than one of a larger size—Therefore, THE HARRISONIAN will be published weekly on a super-royal sheet, at $1 50 in advance; $2 00 payable in six months. Ten copies will be sent to one direction for $12 00 in advance.

The publication will be commenced about the 20th instant. GEM'L. ARTHUR,
January 15, 1840. 3w21 Pub'r.

Godey's Lady's Book.

EDITION 25,000—MONTHLY.

More than Sixty Figures of Fashions each year.

MRS. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, whose name is so intimately connected with the Literature of our country, and who has justly been termed the Hemans of America, will assist Mrs. Hale in the editorial department. It is with feelings of the greatest pleasure that the publisher of the Book makes this announcement. The editorial corps will now consist of Mrs. SARAH J. HALE, Mrs. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, and LOUIS A. GODEY. Mrs. Sigourney will commence her valuable aid with the January Number. The Lady's Book has always been noted for the purity of its contents; that marked distinction which characterizes it shall still be preserved; indeed, with such conductors it will be impossible to go estray. This work has been emphatically termed the Ladies' National Magazine, as it is a receptacle for the contributions of the most celebrated Female Writers of America, most of whom of any eminence contribute to its pages.

Twenty volumes have already been issued. It is usual to announce that a small edition only will be published. Contrary to this, the proprietor of the Lady's Book announces that he will publish an Immense Edition, with which he hopes to supply all those who will favor him with orders, commencing with the January number. It will be seen by this advertisement that every effort has been made by the proprietor of this work to make it superior to any in America, and as a New Year's Gift, the Lady's Book is probably the most proper that could be desired for ladies, edited by their own sex, and assisted as the editorial department is by the pictorial embellishments, it is positively the Bourdoir companion.

There are other publications that advertise Fashion Plates—The publisher of the Lady's Book wishes it to be distinctly understood that the principal Fashions in this work are colored, and in every number, which is not the case with any other work published in America.

Uncolored Plates of Fashions, also monthly.—This is a novel feature of the work, and as it is no great expense to give plates of Fashions without coloring, the publisher will give from three to six figures each month, in addition to the three colored—This will make in all generally about nine Figures of Fashions monthly.

Lace Patterns of Embroidery will be published at regular intervals. These beautiful ornaments (particularly the former) have given great satisfaction.

The Musical Department is under the superintendence of J. G. Osborne, than whom no person is more capable of doing it justice.

The Literary Department is placed under the superintendence of Mrs. Sarah J. Hale and Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney. Two ladies so well known to the world that to mention their names in connection with any publication is at once a guarantee of its morality, virtue and utility. Of their capability to conduct the Lady's Book it is presumed no person will doubt, and the proprietor mentions with pleasure that no English or American Magazine can publish in connection with its Literary department two names so celebrated in the world of letters.

Fac Similies.—A great deal of curiosity is often expressed to see the Chirography of celebrated persons. We shall endeavor, as far as lies in our power, to gratify this feeling by giving from time to time correct imitations of the most celebrated Female writers of the day.

General Features.—Literature, Tales, Essays, Legends, Romantic incidents in History, Extracts from the old Poets, Reviews, Poetry, Female Education, Embellishments, Fashions colored and uncolored, Lace Embroidery, Fac Similies, Music, &c. &c. More than sixty Figures of Fashions yearly colored and uncolored, the proprietor being determined to consult all tastes. Any embellishments to be found in any other magazine may be looked for in the Lady's Book.

In 1838 we published 10,500 copies, during the months of January, February and March, 1839, we increased the list to 13,500 and had then to reprint three numbers and increase to 15,000.—With the next volume we advanced to 17,000, and we now print 25,000 copies monthly, probably the greatest monthly list of subscribers in the world.

Our Reading Matter is about the same in quantity as any similar production, probably a little in favor of the Book. It would be foolish and false to say that it contains more, and the proprietor is not willing to condescend to such means for any supposed advancement of his interest.

One advantage the subscribers of this work will have, is its early reception. It will be received at the remotest cities of the Union by the first day of publication.

The January and succeeding numbers will be printed on an entirely new type cast expressly for the work, and will be found on inspection to be a truly beautiful letter, not too small to be read with ease, nor too large to prevent the usual quantity of matter being given in each page. The paper is of the finest quality for periodical use—indeed the typographical execution has long been a subject of congratulation with those best acquainted with these matters.

The price of the publication is $3 00 per annum—two copies for five dollars. The money to be positively received before a number is sent.—No letters will be taken from the Post Office unless the postage on them is paid. Unless positive orders are given at the time of subscribing the work is continued after the first year, and if not paid during the year, the price will be increased to four dollars.

For the convenience of persons wishing to subscribe for any of the following publications, Burton's Magazine, Saturday Courier, Saturday Chronicle, Weekly Messenger, Saturday Evening Post—they will be furnished with the Lady's Book and any one of these publications one year upon the receipt of five dollars free of postage.

Address L. A. GODEY,
Jan. 15, 1840. 21, 211 Chesnut-st. Phil'a.

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by t subscribers, and will in future be conducted them. WINDOW GLASS, double and sing all sizes, and of superior quality, will be ke constantly on hand for sale on reasonable tern at the works. The experience of one of the fir in the manufacture of the article, will ensure made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.
Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on har 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of diffe ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varieti in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good asso ment of Bridles and Martingales: riding a priving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage ar heavy draft Collars, which will compare and we with any others made here or elsewhere. Als fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and commo fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just recei ed. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and doub covered wagon whips, varying in quality and pri to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for h work, is the testimony and long experience of h old customers and friends. He is still anxiou to please and accommodate those who may ca on him, and hopes to share so much of the publ patronage as his attention to his business sha merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a ne and improved mode of ascending and de scending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. Thi improvement supercedes the necessity of horse stationary power, by giving to the locomotive en gine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles the motive, which connects with an extra railin laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. A the engine approaches the plain, the pilot whee on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with th extra railing and propels her onward. The con struction and connection of the pilot wheel an extra railing is of such a character that it not onl necessarily advances, but advances perfectl smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congeal ing of ice, the connection of the wheel and rail ing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wantin further information, will please address the sub scriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, o William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has ob tained the right of the State of Maryland by pur chase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who ha the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina on commission.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1840. Number 23.

COMMUNICATIONS.

JAMESTOWN, O., JAN. 16, 1840.

Bro. Springer: According to previous arrangement I visited Findley circuit the first Sabbath in November. As there was no preacher or delegate from that circuit at Conference, and the preacher appointed failed in going to his field of labor, the brethren were left without ministerial assistance, except what they derived from the voluntary labors of Bro. Swaney, who is a man of sterling worth. There being no regular appointment, I visited five preaching places on that circuit, and preached where a congregation could be collected. The people were attentive and seemed to listen with deep interest.

Thence I passed through Lima circuit, to the quarterly meeting on Miami circuit, where we had a comfortable time in waiting on the Lord; there was no unusual excitement, but the spirits [illegible] sors of different denominations were much refreshed.

Thence I returned back to Lima in company with brother J. Guest, the superintendent of the circuit, who is a thorough-going itinerant, and seems to have adopted the motto of D. Crocket, "Go ahead." For some days we travelled near thirty miles per day, through the mud and over beach roots; preached twice,—the country being new, the congregations were not large but very attentive. The quarterly meeting at that circuit was very interesting Thence I came to Union circuit and attended a quarterly meeting; we had a profitable time among professors. Next I attended Bro. Stephens' quarterly meeting in Springfield station; it was pleasant to see some of our old side friends drink deep into the enjoyments of brotherly love and christian union. That is the way things ought to be. Good impressions were made on many hearts.

I next assisted at a two days' meeting held by Bro. Hunt, the superintendent on Union circuit. It was well attended, congregations large,—professors were much stirred up. From this I visited a protracted meeting on Xenia circuit, Bro. Dobbins, superintendent,—the meeting was truly a very interesting one. I think there were upwards of twenty added to the church in the course of the meeting, and several professed to be converted to God; and the week following several more were added. This meeting was favored with the ministerial labors of our brethren Dobbins, McGuire, Paul and Clemons. Next I attended a two days' meeting on Washington circuit, under the superintendence of brother W. W. Paul; the Lord favored the meeting with His refreshing presence.

It is quite common for some who would wish it to be so, to say the Protestant Methodist Church is going down. I have no objection if it be down in the Valley of Humility! I am glad to find that many of both ministry and members amongst us, who have been climbing too high on the different hobbies of the day, are beginning to hold a little more condescending tone. These seems like the budding of better days. As far as I have knowledge, peace and brotherly love exist in our societies. Many of the friends seem disposed to live anew for God, and like the prophet, pray that He might revive His work. The different circuits seem well pleased with their preachers.

Sickness in my family has prevented me, for a time, attending to the duties of the District.—But no preventing providence I shall attend the following appointments:

Xenia quarterly meeting,	Sunday, Jan.	26, '40.
Washington circuit,	" Feb.	2.
Highland "	"	9.
Eagle "	"	16.
Ruddles' Mills,	" Mar.	1.
Broadridge,	"	8.
" circuit,	"	15.
Rehoboth,	"	29.

I remain yours in the bonds of christian love,

JONATHAN FLOOD.

Selected for the Western Recorder by a Friend.

TIME.

BY SAMPSON REED.

What is time? There is perhaps no question that would suggest such a variety of answers. It is represented to us from our infancy as producing such important changes, both in destroying some and healing the wounds it has inflicted on others, that people generally imagine, if not an actual person, it is at least a real existence.—We begin with time in the Primer, and end with reasoning about the foreknowledge of God.—What is time? The difficulty of answering the question, (and there are few questions more difficult,) arises principally from our having ascribed important effects to that which has no existence. It is true that all things in the natural world are subject to change. But however these changes may be connected in our minds with time, it requires but a moment's reflection to see that time has no agency in them. They are effects of chemical, or more properly, perhaps, of natural decompositions and re-organizations. Time, or rather our idea of it, so far from having produced any thing, is itself the effect of changes.

There are certain operations in nature, which, depending on fixed laws, are in themselves perfectly regular; if all things were equally so, the question, how long? might never be asked. We should never speak of a late season, or of premature old age; but every thing passing on in an invariable order, all the idea of time that would remain with respect to any object, would be a sort of instinctive sense of its condition, its progress or decay. But most of the phenomena in the natural world are exceedingly irregular; for tho' the same combination of causes would invariably produce the same effect, the same combination very rarely occurs. Hence, in almost every change, and we are conversant with nothing but changes, we are assisted in ascertaining its nature and extent, by referring it to something in itself perfectly regular. We find this regularity in the apparent motions of the sun and moon. It is difficult to tell how much our idea of time is the effect of artificial means of keeping it, and what would be our feelings on the subject, if left to the simple operations of nature—but they would probably be little else than a reference of all natural phenomena to that on which they principally depend, the relative situation of the sun and earth; and the idea of an actual succession of moments would be, in a measure, resolved into that of cause and effect.

Eternity is to the mind what time is to nature. We attain a perception of , by regarding all the operations in the world within us, as they exist in relation to their first cause; for in doing this, they are seen to partake somewhat of the nature of that Being on whom they depend. We make no approaches to a conception of it, by heaping day upon day or year upon year. This is merely an accumulation of time; and we might as well attempt to convey an idea of mental greatness by that of actual space, as to communicate a conception of eternity by years or thousands of years. Mind and matter are not more distinct from each other than their properties; and by attempting to embrace all time, we are actually farther from an approach to eternity than when we confine ourselves to a single instant; because we merely collect the largest possible amount of natural changes, whereas that which is eternal approaches that which is immutable. This resembles the attempt to ascend to heaven by means of the Tower of Babel, in which they were removed by their pride from that which they would have approached, precisely in proportion to their apparent progress. It is impossible to conceive of either time or space without matter. The reason is, they are the effect of matter; and as it is by creating matter that they are produced, so it is by thinking that they are conceived of. It need not be said how exceedingly improper it is to apply the usual ideas of time and space to the Divine Being; making him subject to that which he creates. Still our conceptions of time, of hours, days or years, are among the most vivid we possess, and we neither wish nor find it easy to call them in question. We are satisfied with the fact, that time is indicated on the face of the watch, without seeking for it among the wheels and machinery. But what is the idea of a year? Every natural change that comes under our observation leaves a corresponding impression on the mind; and the sum of the changes which come under a single revolution of the earth round the sun, conveys the impression of a year. Accordingly, we find that our idea of a year is continually changing, as the mind becomes conversant with different objects, and is susceptible of different impressions; and the days of the old man, as they draw near their close, seem to gather rapidity from their approach to the other world. We have all experienced the effect of pleasure and pain in accelerating and retarding the passing moments; and since our feelings are constantly changing, we have no reason to doubt that they constantly produce a similar effect, though it may not be often noticed. The divisions of time, then, however real they may seem to be, and however well they may serve the common purposes of conversation, cannot be supposed to convey the same impression to any two minds, nor to any one mind in different periods of its existence. Indeed, unless this were the fact, all artificial modes of keeping it would be unnecessary.

Time, then, is nothing real so far as it exists in our own minds. Nor do we find a nearer approach to reality by any analysis of nature. Every thing, as was said, is subject to change, and one change prepares the way for another; by which there is growth and decay. There are also motions of bodies, both in nature and art, which in their operation observe fixed laws; and here we end. The more we enter into an analysis of things, the farther we are from finding any thing that answers to the distinctness and reality which are usually attached to a conception of time, and there is reason to believe that when this distinctness and reality are most deeply rooted (whatever may be the theory) they are uniformly attended with a practical belief of the actual motion of the sun, and are indeed the effect of it. Let us then continue to talk of time as we talk of the rising and setting of the sun; but let us think rather of those changes in their origin and effect, from which a sense of time is produced. This will carry us one degree nearer the actual state of things; it will admit us one step further into the temple of creation—no longer a temple created six thousand years ago, and deserted by him who formed it; but a temple with the hand of the builder resting upon it, perpetually renewing, perpetually creating—and as we bow ourselves to worship the "I AM," "Him who liveth forever and ever, who created heaven and the things that are therein, and the earth and the things that are therein, and the sea and the things that are therein," we may hear in accents of divine love the voice that proclaims "that there shall be time no longer."

It is not the living productions of nature by which the strongest impression of time is produced. The oak, over which may have passed a hundred years, seems to drive from our minds the impression of time, by the same power by which it supports its own life, and resists every tendency to decay. It is that which is decayed, though it may have been the offspring of an hour; it is the ruined castle mouldering into dust, still more, if the contrast be strengthened by its being covered with the living productions of nature; it is the half consumed remains of some animal once strong and vigorous, the discoveries of the undertaker, or the filthy relic of the catamomb, by which the strongest impression of time is conveyed. So it is with the possessions of the mind. It is that which is not used, which seems farthest in the memory, and which is held by the most doubtful tenure; that which is suffered to waste and decay because it wants the life of our own affections; that which we are about to lose, because it does not properly belong to us: whereas that truth, which is applied to the use and service of mankind, requires a higher polish the more it is thus employed, like the angels of heaven, who forever approximate to a state of perfect youth, beauty and innocence. * * * * * * *

It is to leave the mind in the healthy, vigorous and active possession of all its attainments, and exercise of all its powers; it is to remove from it that only which contains the seeds of decay and putrefaction; to separate the living from the dead; to take from it the veil by which it would avoid the direct presence of Jehovah, and preserves its own possessions without using them.—* * * * * * *

It is not a useless task, then, to remove from our minds the usual ideas of time, and cultivate a memory of things. * * * *

For the Western Recorder.

SHORT SERMON, ON ACTS 14: 1.

"And it came to pass in Iconium that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews, and also of the Greeks believed."

This text, doubtless, embodies much important matter, and is of great moment to us. The magnitude of matter in it, apposite to the church and of great interest to the world, demands, I confess, full developement, and by able hands. And if I can but elicit the labor and provoke the love of some friend, competent to the task, my brief effort will not be in vain.

That there is much speaking upon the subject of religion, and much that is ineffectual, in our day, few, if any, will deny. The great cause of so much failure, how desirable to know! Perhaps we should not expect success equal to the Apostles; but surely, all is not accomplished which might and ought. Where then, is the defection? How often has the following question been discussed? "Why are there so few revivals among us?" Some have alleged that the whole blame belongs to the church,—others, to the ministry. In our opinion, they are often co-vituperable. St. Paul, Heb. 4: 2, attributes the failure among his countrymen, to the unbelief of the hearers. "The word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." The harbinger of the Messiah, Matt. 3: 3, seems to consider the church the principal ground of success or abortion: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." Impliedly asserting that the Lord will not come until the church prepare the way!

But in our text, success is attributed to another source,—the peculiar manner of preaching by the first ministers of Christ; they so spake, &c. Now, is it not clear, that one cause, at least, of the failures among us, is to be found in the unhappy or inappropriate matter or manner of preaching? A few thoughts, then, upon the grounds of success among the Apostles, and of the failure with us. Our remarks will be confined principally to the second thought—the manner of preaching.

1. The first messengers of mercy spake originally. They did not repeat the sermons of other men. They received their burden of matter from the Lord; and then improved the different talents committed to their trust. And if they soared aloft occasionally, it was not by the aid of "wings of wax," to melt before the original sun. It is not my province to sit in the censor's chair, to administer the deserved reprehension to our ecclesiastical aviary of paraquet plagiarists; but their course being a common cause of failure, is of prime importance to society, the truth thereof self-evident, and ought to come to light, that such deeds of darkness may be reproved. An indistinct recollection of an article published in the "Correspondent," some six years since, occurs to mind, in which the author very properly animadverted upon the mimicry of modern ministers. But it was confined chiefly to the mimicry of manner; such, for instance, as the putting of the hands into the pocket, and the fingers in their hair. But how much more objectionable is the mockery of matter. Surely, that excellent writer did not intend to leave the subject inferable that a minister of the Gospel might steal the sermon, if he only keeps his hands out of his pocket, and lets his hair alone! Some preachers have grown so hardened in this offence, that they openly "declare their sin as Sodom," and form a maxim or a salvo for their consciences, viz: that preachers have a right to beg, borrow or STEAL!! What, will the Lord accept of robbery for an offering? Is this the way to "bring beaten oil into the sanctuary?"

2. They spake attractively; not, however, with "enticing words of man's wisdon, but with the words which the Holy Ghost teacheth." The captivating loveliness and ineffable amiability of the Eternal Author, inspired the early christian missionaries with a temper and disposition to win the heart. The glorious privileges of the Gospel dispensation are calculated to mellow the soul, and the joys of Paradise are admirably adapted to allure the affection. But, above all, the melting scenes of Gethsemane and Calvery, with the amazing and unutterable love of God and of Christ, are classes of truths, if properly presented, which can scarcely fail to tell upon the heart and soul of man. The happy apostolic manner of presenting those truths, won the benighted and superstitious Gentiles from their idolatry,—yea, the refined Greeks, from the flummeries of their devotions. But many modern ministers speak in such a repulsive tone, that it is no marvel but few "receive the word with all readiness of mind." For how can the carnal mind be conquered and converted by "sour godliness?"

3. They spake argumentatively; Acts 24: 25. And as Paul "reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time, when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Not in cold metaphysical abstractions, nor tedious and unimportant concatenative ratiocination, but in solid biblical logic; they reasoned on the grand facts of the Scriptures, accompanied with faithful and pointed appeals to the heart and conscience, which could not fail to effect and often to convert. An admirable specimen of pointed appeal, we have in Acts 26: 27. "King Agrippa, believest thou the Prophets? I know that thou believest." Which "almost persuaded" his majesty to embrace christianity. And surely, if we had more of this sort of preaching, more souls would be saved.

4. They spake candidly. And that was another admirable trait and well adapted to ensure success. And it was the more needful, as strong prejudices were excited against them and the cause they advocated. Genuine candor, like simple truth, is forcible. The Apostles, conscious of having the truth, and the truth of God, on their side, and being moved by the Holy Ghost, were not at all disposed either to equivocate or dissimulate. They saw through the flimsey veil of their opponents, and could easily expose their errors; and they had clear conceptions of the important truths they uttered, and could readily sustain them. So that a candid hearing of a candid Gospel sermon, was generally more or less successful. Thus, in the text, many of the Jews as well as Greeks believed.—How powerful evangelical truth, clothed in "right words," it even converted many of the sons and daughters of Abraham, overcoming all their deep rooted bigotry and proverbial partiality! In our day, ministers are generally educated where certain dogmas of denominational faith are both endorsed and cherished; and rarely do we find sufficient independence of mind, even among the candidates for "holy orders," to base their faith upon the Bible alone! Hence, in their subsequent ministrations an obvious tincture of partyism, greatly obstructs the way of success.

5. Honesty. They did not, like the unbelievers spoken of by Peter, "wrest the Scriptures" to sustain their doctrines, or to "their own condemnation." Sterling integrity in the exposition and application of the word of Life, is surely, of vital importance in the salvation of souls. And such was the general principle and the constant and undeviating practice of the Apostles. Hence, when their probity, in this respect, was impeached by certain false teachers, the Apostle of the Gentiles, vindicated the reputation of the true ministers of Christ in the following declaration, 2 Cor. 4: 2. We "have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." But, is it not painfully true, that few ministers, in our day, are wholly clear of the charge of "wresting the Scriptures," to support some favorite sectarian thesis? Is it any marvel then, that great spiritual success does not attend their labors?

6. Faithfully. The early heralds of salvation saw the imminent peril of precious souls, and felt a yearning of deep concern for their deliverance. And, in prospective view of their own awful responsibility to God, and solemn accountability at the judgment seat of Christ, they "shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God." Let the subject be never so unwelcome, some important truths truly obnoxious to their carnal taste, let virulent persecution rage against them, yea, let even martyrdom stare them in the face, still these moral ministerial "bravoes" would not shun to declare the truth, and the whole truth of God. With what holy and elevated spiritual intrepidity did Paul declare, "And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus." Shortly after, on his way, at Cesarea, under dreadful apprehensions of his death, if he persevered in his journey to Jerusalem, the disconsolate disciples attempted to dissuade him from his purpose, when he gave them that blessed rebuke, "What, mean ye to weep, and to break my heart? for I am ready, not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus."—But oh, how different the diction, and timid the course of ministers now! What dastardly cowering to wicked displeasure, and menial succumbing to carnal applause, characterise the preachers of this generation, and of this free country too! How few can cite even these words of Paul, "I have kept back nothing that was profitable unto you." The sacrilegious maxim of many ministers now is, Is the truth popular? How much will the people bare? and not be offended. While the motto of the faithful servant is, "Whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear;" "Cry aloud, spare not," &c.

7. They spake plainly. In their discourses, we behold no pompous array of words; they aimed at conviction, and wished, therefore, to be understood. Hear St. Paul, "In the church, I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue." I think it indisputable, that extensive failure, in the ministration of the word of the Lord, among almost all denominations, may rightfully be attributed to the want of simplicity, and plainness of style and language. Let any person, who doubts the truth here asserted, make actual experiment, by inquiring among the congregations generally, both in town and country.

8. And they spake powerfully. Yes, the Apostles were "filled with the Holy Ghost." Not only on the pentecostal occasion, when they spake with tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance; but also, when Peter was preaching to the Gentilean congregation, on the shore of the Mediterranean sea, the Holy Spirit fell on them, as on the Jews at the beginning. And in the epistolary writings, in apostolic parlance, they spake in the "demonstration of the Spirit, and with power." What an irresistible heavenly unction! Who that was not given up to hardness of heart, could withstand it? Indeed, it is no marvel that "multitudes, both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed." But how little of such holy fervor is breathed by us now? And not a few ecclesiastics, whose fond theme is that they are called of God to this sacred work of "winning souls" to Christ, decry this very kind of preaching! And some openly assert, that the minister of God should "teach the people to think, rather than to feel." So that to move the heart, is to raise an excitement, which is so objectionable in their eyes. As long as there is a strong fear of raising an excitement, there is not much hope of hearing poor penitent sinners cry, "what must we do to be saved?"

9. Finally, the first missionaries of the Cross loved the Gospel they proclaimed to others. This was and is all important, that sinners may have no ground to "retort upon the cymbal," Physician, heal thyself! Holiness, appears to have been the precious motto of the first proclaimers of New Testament glory. Hence, they taught the church the heighth of their holy calling, and breathed the fervent prayer that the disciples might attain the full Gospel statue, and be "sanctified, (wholly,) body, soul and spirit."—And amid all the peculiar trials and oppositions of their day, how unblamably they behaved before all men. A short account of the deportment of the Apostles, we annex: "Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed: but in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, ... By pureness, by knowledge, by long-suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost," 2 Cor. 6. But, alas! "how is the fine gold became dim" among us. "Ichabod" would be an appropriate inscription upon many of our churches and altars. Lord, revive us.

ECCLESIASTICUS INNOMINATUS.

For the Western Recorder.

HARD TIMES.

Mr. Editor: A belief in the doctrine of a Divine Providence, is a source of great comfort to the good man, amid the straits and ills incident to human life, and that every good man has abundant ground for such a belief, is manifest on every page, both of the volume of nature and of inspiration. It is a subject on which day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night sheweth knowledge. Socrates, a heathen philosopher, who never saw the volume of inspiration, very emphatically declares, "He that believeth not in a Providence hath a devil;" but it is "the book by inspiration given," which alone reveals and attests the fact, that Providence takes cognizance of the sale of five sparrows for three farthings, and lests not one of them fall to the ground without His permission—that the decoration of the lillies—the feeding of the ravens—the numbering of the hairs upon our heads occupy the attention of the Almighty Creator and Ruler of the Universe. Who then, that entertains right views on this subject, can regard the present pressure in the moneyed relations of our country, as springing up out of the ground, or coming forth of the dust. Politicians may labor to assign causes and provide remedies for the "hard times," but serious reflection may lead the christian to the discovery that our sins are the only true cause, and repentance before God the only true remedy. The invisible agency of God has been and is remarkably concerned in this chastisement; and let not those who are free from embarrassment consider it but a light chastisement. Pressing want, distressing embarrassment or feverish anxiety has actually came upon the largest portion of our citizens. What then are the causes? What the duties it imposes, and what the remedies to be applied?

1. We have brought it upon us by the enslavement and oppression of 3,000,000 of our fellow beings, most of them native Americans According to the estimate of Senator Clay, the citizens of this land of professed liberty, have capital to the amount of twelve hundred millions of dollars, in the souls and bodies of their fellow men, and make of them articles of trade, buy and sell, and feed and drive, and work them as the brutes that perish, nay, with much greater severity and cruelty, and by legal enactments exclude from them the facilities of obtaining a better condition in the world to come. Laws exist, that would send Phillip to the penitentiary for teaching an Etheopian to read and understand the sacred Scriptures. Nor is such enactments confined to the States where slavery exist; but Ohio and Indiana want neither laws nor officers that would fine and imprison the Saviour of the world, if he were to come among them, as he once did among the Jews, guised in a servant's form, or any of his servants, for feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, taking in and ministering to the necessities of the poor stranger, escaping from cruel bondage. In the Capitol of our nation, we allow our fellow beings to be torn from their families and sold like oxen; we permit the internal slave trade to commit its daring outrages and unparalled oppression; yea, the laws of the land uphold and sanction it. These are the crimes of the nation, and see how an avenging Providence has responded. Northern merchants first suffer from southern failures, then manufacturers and mechanics came in for their share. Southern credit is prostrated by her slave system, and the north groans under the tide of distress that is rolled back upon it. The out-breaking of lawless violence at the north, in defence of slavery at the south,—the burning of houses, yea, of temples, dedicated to freedom—the blood of ministers of Christ shed unavenged, is now receiving, to some extent, their reply. Who that contemplates the connection of events, can doubt but the system of slavery in various ways, is a principle procuring cause of the present distress.

2. We have brought it on by our avarice, injustice and fraud with the poor Indians; violating our solemn treaties, as a nation, with them, and driving them from their lands and their homes. The Florida war, with all its enormous expense of national treasure and human life, was the natural consequence of our fraud. Had slavery any thing to do with this? Much, in many ways. That its wretched victims might be deprived of a retreat from their cruel oppressors; that its merciless and Heaven daring demands might be granted; the poor Indians' lands must be wrested from them, and they driven away from their homes and the graves of their fathers. The wife of an Osceola must be torn from a husband's embrace, and put under its cruel tortures. We need but remember that God is just and that He governs the world, and holds nations as well as individuals accountable for their crimes, to see reasons why, like the king, the nobles and the people of Ninevah, the people of this nation should humble themselves in sackcloth and ashes, and with fasting and prayer, turn to God, if haply He may turn away His fierce wrath, that we perish not.

3. Operating with the above in producing the present state of things, has been our fondness for extravagance and display. Especially in the large cities, where the distress is now most felt, a reckless style of living has became fearfully prevalent, both among professing christians and the people of the world.—The intemperance of the nation alone, is a sufficient cause for a large portion of the distress. From the commercial list, published in New York, November 9th, 1839, it appears that there has been bro't into that port alone during the nine months last preceding its date 1,221 pipes, 11,185 half pipes, 2,807 quarter casks of brandy; 4,826 pipes of gin; 3,410 hhds. of rum; 12,729 pipes, 2,093 half pipes, 55,047 quarter casks, 8,822 Indian barrels, and a0,992 boxes of wine. This will make at least, four millions five hundred and ninety thousand one hundred and eighty five gallons of liquor, which at the lowest wholesale prices quoted in the same paper will amount to $3,200,709. The consumer has to pay at least 50 per cent. profit to the importer and dealer, which is equal on the whole to $1,590,854.—Making the amount paid for foreign liquors, brought to the port of New York alone, four million seven hundred and seventy two thousand five hundred and sixty three dollars. Were we prepared with the statistics, to add the amount imported to all the other seaport towns, in the country, what a sum would we have? Add to this, our thousands of distilleries at home a single one of which, in the vicinity of Lawrenceburgh Ia., if memory serves, is employed in the production of 300 gallons per day. In view of these fountains of liquid fire sending forth their streams of desolation and destruction, is it any wonder that "hard times" has came upon the nation? Is it not a greater wonder that the whole land is not consumed? Suppose this amount of capital were employed in the home production of such articles of subsistence, as we have had to import from abroad, thereby turning the balance of trade against us, and draining the country of its specie, we can readily perceive to what a great extent the distress of the nation would be prevented. But the loss of dollars to the country in this matter, is the smaller part of the evil. The loss of time, of health, of character and comfort in the present life, and the loss of souls in the world to come, is infinitely beyond the power of numbers to calculate! The sum thus expended would be sufficient to support 100,000 missionaries, in diffusing the word of salvation throughout our perishing world. It would provide flour and fuel for every poor family in the nation during the present winter. If properly applied upon the object, in the diffusion of correct information, and bringing truth to bear on the consciences of the people, and, providing for the education and moral culture of the colored population of our country, it would exert an influence sufficient to overturn the blighting system of slavery, and dry up the fountains of crime, misery and wretchedness, which it has opened all over the land. These Mr. Editor, I hold to be some of the principal causes of our hard times, and though the haughty spirit of slavery and the besotted soul of intemperance may sneer at the idea, I am persuaded that the christian who candidly reflects, will discover the relation of cause and effect subsisting between these evils and the distressing effects, so conspicuous in the land at the present time.

What then are the remedies? Simply break off from all these sins by righteousness for righteousness exalteth a nation. Cease to oppress the stranger in the land —:o turn away the laborer from his wages—give to the slave his rights—abolish the unjust and wicked laws which make of God's image a merchantable commodity—do justice towards the poor Indians—settle the difficulty with them peaceably, and soon as possible—cease from intemperance and riotous living, and engage heartily in every benevolent enterprise—cease to do evil—to frame mischief by a law--obey God's commandments —so shall it be well with us,and with our children after us. JOHN CLARKE.

Allegheny, Pa. Jan. 17, 1840.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 29, 1840.

THE AMISTAD AFRICANS.—A very interesting trial is now in progress at N. Haven, before the U. States District Court. The Spanish Minister libels for the vessel, cargo and crew, as Spanish property and Spanish subjects,and the United States District Attorney appears for him under direction of the Federal government.—Lieut. Gedney, by his counsel, General Isham and Mr. Brainard, of New London, libels for salvage; Gov. Ellsworth appears for Captain Green, one of the libellants of Sag Harbor; Mr. Cleaveland, of New London, for Ruiz and Montez, who claim property on board; and Messrs. Staples, Baldwin and Sedgwick are counsel for the Africans.

For the Africans, their counsel filed a general answer, claiming their freedom, and insisting that they are not property. Testimony was offered to prove that they were recently from Africa. Among the rest was offered the deposition of Doctor Madden, British superintendent of liberated Africans at Havana, and who was recently in this country. He states that he conversed with the prisoners at the jail in New Haven, that he learned, before he left Havana, that they were Bozal negroes, or negroes recently brought into Havana, or in violation of Spanish treaties and the laws of Spain, &c.

Mr. G. Haley stated the admissions of Ruiz, on board of the United States Brig Washington, that none of the negroes could speak Spanish, as they were just from Africa.

Mr. Dwight P. Jones, of New London, proved the same admissions.

James Covey was next examined. This young man is a native of Africa, of the Mendi tribe, was one of the crew of the Buzzard, and being subpœnaed by the United States, was left there by that vessel. He was sold in Africa by a black man to a Spaniard, captured by an English man of war, taken into Sierra Leone, where he went to school, learned to read and write, and speak English with considerable facility. He has acted as interpreter here. All the prisoners but three are from his country, Mendi, and speak his language. They told James that they all came from Africa to Havana. They have Mendi names. Their names have meaning. Kale means bone, &c. They speak of the same rivers, &c. that James knew in Africa. They all sailed from Lomboko, in Africa, to Havana. Has talked with them, one by one, and they all say the same thing. James underwent a long and severe cross-examination, and acquitted himself very well.

Professor Gibbs, an eminent linguist, was introduced, to prove, through the admissions of Ruiz, that the negroes were recently from Africa. Ruiz said they were Bozal negroes. This term means "muzzled," and applies to Africans newly imported, who cannot speak Spanish.—The Judge, to save time, stopped the witnesses, saying he was convinced that the negroes were recently from Africa, and that it was idle to deny it.

Jingua was then called, with James Covey as interpreter, and examined at great length, Gov. Ellsworth taking the lead. He testified in an unembarrassed manner, in a clear voice, and with natural gesticulation, while the most breathless attention prevailed in the large audience. He was on shore when captured by Lieut. Gedney, and gave the names of ten others who were on shore. He had told Capt. Green he might have the vessel if he would send them to Sierra Leone. He conversed with Green by the help of Burnah, who could speak a little English.

Cross-examined by Gen. Isham; he said that he came from Mendi; taken in the road where he was at work; not taken in battle; did not sell himself; never sold any one as a slave; was taken to Lomboko—there sold and put on board the vessel in which he came to Havana; has left three children in Africa and one wife; never said he had two wives. He described the manner in which Pepe (Ruiz) came and felt of their limbs, when he bought them in Cuba. On the passage from Africa, they were chained hands and feet. He described the manner in which they were packed on board the slaver.—They were chained on board the Amistad; were kept short of provisions, "half eat and half drink," one plantain and two potatoes; were beaten by one of the sailors by command of Pepe (Ruiz) and in his presence.

Grabbaung and Fuliwa, two others of the Africans, confirmed most of Jingua's testi nony.

Mr. Cleaveland, counsel for the two Spanish owners of property on board the Amistad, moved that the cargo be appraised and delivered up to them on security that they might remove it, so as to save the duties. Gedney's counsel objected to having a part appraised; wanted the property sold entire. The Court said that question could be argued at the judge's chamber in the evening; and the Court adjourned.—Brother Jonathan.

AMISTAD TRIAL—TERMINATION.—On Monday the judge read an elaborate opinion, in which he decided.

1. That the District Court for Connecticut has jurisdiction, the schooner having been taken possession of, in a legal sense, on the "high seas."

2. That the libel of Thomas R. Gedney and others is properly filed in the District Court of Connecticut.

3. That the seizors are entitled to salvage, and an apraisement will be ordered, and one-third of that amount and cost will be decreed just and reasonable.

4. That Green and Fordham, Sag Harbor, who claims to have taken original possession of vessel and cargo, cannot sustain their claim, and therefore that their libels be dismissed.

5. That Ruiz and Montez, through the Spanish minister, have established no title to the Africans, as they were undoubtedly Bozal negroes, or negroes recently imported from Africa, in violation of the laws of Spain.

6. That the demand of restitution, to have the question tried in Cuba, made by the Spanish minister, cannot be complied with, as by their own laws, it is certain they cannot enslave these Africans, and therefore cannot properly demand them for trial.

7. That Antoine, being a creole, and legally a slave, and expressing a strong wish to be returned to Havana, restoration will be decreed under the Treaty of 1795.

8. That these Africans be delivered to the President of the United States, under the 2d Section of the act of March 3d, 1819, and the 1st Section of the law of 1818, still in force to be transported to Africa, there to be delivered to the agents appointed to receive and conduct them home.

The court stands adjourned to meet at Hartford on the 23d inst., and meantime, the decree will not be entered, to give opportunity to the parties to appeal if they see fit.

Mr. D. Fancis Bacon, said, at New Haven, we are informed that if the Africans should be sent to Liberia, and thence into the interior, they would be re-enslaved in less than sixty days. He remarked further, that if they should be sent to Sierra Leone they might reach their homes, but there was no chance for them otherwise. We hope that as the Government at Sierra Leone possesses special advantages for the protection of these Africans, they will, if sent to Africa at all, be sent to that district.

Mr. Griswold of the Theoligical School at New Haven, and one of the indefatigable young gentlemen who have daily attended to the instruction of the Africans, has long had a desire to be a foreign missionary. The Africans have expressed a strong desire that he should accompany them to their homes, and he is deliberating upon the subject. What an opening he would have in Mendi, to preach the gospel, introduced by Jingua and his comrades!

The Judge is certainly entitled to much credit for the impartiality with which he presided, and for his opinion and forthcoming decree, in many respects. It must be acknowledged, however, that his application of the law of 1818 to these Africans—the law never having contemplated such a case—will not give satisfaction to strict constructionists. The Africans were either slaves or freemen, and it would seem that consistency required of the Judge to decree that they were freemen, and, as such, entitled to their immediate freedom. He doubtless acted—if not as a true interpreter of the law—as he thought would be for the welfare of the Africans. He went into the jail twice to see them, and they expressed to him, and to others, a desire to return to their native land.

In view of the whole matter, we have abundant cause to acknowledge the good hand of God in protecting and delivering these poor strangers, in answer to prayer.

Respectfully yours,
LEWIS TAPPAN.

A letter from the Rev. H. G. Ludlow to one of the editors of the Journal of Commerce, dated January 13, gives the following particulars, which will be read with much interest:

"If ever men were inspired to present with sunbeam clearness the claims of righteousness, to the mind of a Court, the Counsel of the poor Africans were thus assisted. Messrs. Staples and Sedgwick, of your city, and R. S. Baldwin of New Haven, "with thoughts that breathed and words that burned," stood up as their champions—and I speak not my own opinion only, but that of our community, who hung upon their lips spell-bound —when I say that for argumentation, and for eloquence too, their appeals to the Court were irresistible. At times the feelings of the audience were inexpressible, and they showed their sympathy by external demonstrations of pleasure. The cause on the other side was conducted as well perhaps as its badness permitted.

The Judge decided the case this morning, and in a masterly manner—showing an enlightened head and a warm heart. I do hope his decision will be given to the public at full length.

It was my happy lot to communicate this decision to Chinquez and his companions, and the scene is indescribable. No sooner was it communicated, than with hearts overflowing with gratitude, they rose and fell down at my feet.—Words cannot express the joy they felt. They long to go back to their fatherland. All of them but one belong to the Mendi tribe or nation. He sat still, not knowing what was meant; but through one of the others who can converse with him, our interpreter communicated the decision to him. He instantly prostrated himself at my feet at full length, clapping his hands for gladness of heart.

I then prayed with them, after directing their thoughts to the Lord Jesus Christ as their Deliverer. They knelt, and followed the interpreter audibly, and with apparent devoutness.

With a heart full of gratitude to God for this rich mercy, I am your friend.

H. G. LUDLOW.

Our own satisfaction would be greatly enhanced, in view of this result, could we see any security or even any probability that these "redeemed captives" could be in part restored to "their own country. Many persons seem to think that if they are sent to Africa, they will be in their own land, whereas there is little doubt, if they should attempt to pass from Liberia, up the St. Paul's or up the Gallinas, or by any other route, to their homes, they would be seized by the kidnappers, and in less than a month might be again on their way to hated Havana—and to the gibbet. On this ground, we doubt the humanity or right of sending them to Africa—taking occasion from their ignorance, to send them into dangers which we see, and they do not.—Em.

APPALLING CALAMITY.

STEAMBOAT LEXINGTON DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Office of the Republican Standard,
Bridgeport, Tuesday evening, January 14.

The Lexington left New York for Stonington, on Monday at 3 o'clock, P.M. having, it is believed, about one hundred and fifty passengers. A large quantity of Cotton was placed upon her decks. At 7 o'clock, when about two miles from Eaton's Neck, the cotton took fire near the smoke pipe.

The boat was headed for the shore as soon as the efforts to extinguish the fire proved unsuccessful. She was provided with three boats, yet such was the panic which took possession of all minds, that they were hoisted out while the boat was still under headway and immediately swamped.

The engine a few minutes after gave way, leaving her utterly unmanageable. The scene which then ensued, is described as most appalling.

Capt. Chester Hilliard, of Norwich, a passenger on board, from whom we have gathered these few particulars, states that soon after the engine stopped, the passengers began to leave the boat on boxes, bales, &c.

In company with one of the firemen he was so fortunate as to secure a cotton bale, to which he lashed himself. He remained upon this bale, the wind blowing off Long Island, until 11 o'clock this morning when he was taken up by the sloop Merchant, of Southport.

His companion in the meantime had been released by death from his sufferings. Two others were taken up by the sloop, a fireman and the pilot of the boat. Both were nearly insensible. It is surprising that they should have survived the exposure.

There is too much reason to fear that the three are the only survivors. It is however possible that others may have been saved.

Russel Jarvis, Esq., who has lately become associated with the Whig in this city, has lost his wife and two children.—He first read, we are told, the dreadful story in the Bridgeport slip, which he opened himself in the Whig office.

Harden's Package Car on board the Lexington, contained $18,000 in specie and about $70,000 in bills.

The Lexington had been lately thoroughly overhauled and repaired, and in excellent order, and provided with three boats, including a life boat, a fire engine with the necessary apparatus and suction hose. Was furnished with iron rods and chain tiller ropes. The owners of the boat suppose she had about seventy passengers. and that there were about one hundred souls on board.

From the Journal of Commerce.

How many more names will yet have to be added to this melancholy list, time will determine. The Agent of the steamboat line here, is of opinion that the whole number of passengers did not exceed 75 or 80, and the pilot says he asked the clerk on Monday afternoon how many passengers, and that he replied 70 or 75.

It was about eight hours after the fire commenced, before the boat went down. The pilot says that as late as midnight half the passengers might have been saved, had assistance arrived. So we are informed by Capt. Jennings, of the sloop Ganges, who assisted in taking care of the pilot and fireman on board the sloop Merchant on Tuesday evening.

Her value is estimated to have been $50,000--partially insured. She had on board about 150 bales of cotton.

From the Sun.

When the alarm was first given, as many as twenty of the passengers leaped into one of the small boats, the bow haliard of which was let go without the stem haliard being eased at all, and before the latter was sufficiently loosed to allow the stern to touch the water, the boat was so full of the water that she instantly swamped,and left the unfortunate passengers helpless in the water

We regret to have to add, that among the passengers were the wife and two interesting childern of Russel Jarvis, Esq,, formerly of Boston, more latterly editor of the Philadelphia World, and at present editor of the Evening Tattler in this city. Capt. Hilliard, whose attention had been to this interesting and unfortunate family at the table, saw Mrs. Jarvis floating with one of her children in her arms, on a bale of cotton. The other child had leaped overboard, as had also a great many other passengers—some twenty of whom had life preservers on. When observed by Captain H. Mrs. Jarvis was frantically calling upon the persons in the water to preserve her child and bring it to her on the bale.—Mother, children, passengers and all, however, sunk to a common grave.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

JANUARY 14, 1840.

ABOLITION.—After some time spent in the consideration of certain amendments to the journal, Mr. Thompson, of C. S. arose and said, he wished to offer a resolution in relation to petitions and memorials connected with the abolition of slavery, exactly the same as that proposed by Mr. Wise, (who was absent from indisposition,) and which embodies the decision made by a majority of the House yesterday.

He then moved a suspension of the rules for the purpose of offering a resolution to the effect that on the presentation of any memorial or petition, or paper of any description, relating to slavery or the slave trade, the question of reception shall be considered as raised—and that question shall be laid on the table immediately, without any debate or any action thereon.

Mr. Adams moved to postpone indefinitely the motion for suspending the rules —which he was proceading to support in a very animated manner—when

The Speaker said that the motion of Mr. A. was not in order.

Mr. Black, of Georgia, wished to substitute for Mr. Thompson's another resolution expressing his own views and defining his position.

The Speaker said this was also out of order.

The question was then taken by yeas and nays, on suspending the rules—ayes 128, nays 77— not two-thirds. So the House refused to suspend the rules.

The House amended its rules to-day in two important particulars: the first amendment prohibits members from speaking more then once—instead of twice as the rule stood—on the same question, without leave of the House. The second consists in this: that whereas hitherto the previous question, when decided in the affirmative, has cut off pending motions for amendment as well as all debate it is hereafter to cut off debate only, and to bring the House to a direct question on each pending amendment, in their Parliamentary order.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

January 15.

Abolition Petitions and Memorials.—Mr. Coles, of Virginia, then moved to amend the report by adopting, as a standing rule of the House, an order that on the presentation of any petition, memorial, or other paper relating to the abolition of slavery or the slave trade, they shall be laid on the table without any debate or action of any kind thereon.

Mr. Coles made a speech in support of this resolution; and as soon as he finished, moved the previous question.

Mr. Granger, rose to reply to the remarks of Mr. Coles.

The Speaker said no debate could be permitted.

Mr. Granger, amidst great confusion, and many cries to order, insisted that he had a right to make a request, to the mover of the proposition. He asked him to withdraw the previous question, in order that he (Mr. Granger) might answer some remarks of Mr. Coles, which he believed were directly contrary to the sentiments of a majority of the American people.

Mr. Coles refused to withdraw his demand for the Previous Question.

The Speaker announced the question to be on sustaining that call.

Mr. Slade, of Vermont, then rose and made a point of order, that Mr. Coles had no right to make such a motion, immediately after his proposing an amendment. On this a loose and desultory conversation arose.

Mr. Botts, of Va. appealed to the House to give him permission to reply to Mr. Coles. Mr. Stanley moved that Mr. Botts have leave to speak, which was refused by the House.

Mr. Munroe, of New York, again rose and asked to be excused from voting on any proposition connected with the abolition of slavery, until he had an opportunity to give his views on the subject.—A discussion arose on the motion to excuse him, after which the motion was negatived. Mr. Munroe then absented himself from the Hall.

Mr. Adams moved to lay the resolution of Mr. Coles on the table—which was carried, ayes 102, nays 98.

At this stage of the proceeding Mr. Thompson offered his proposition for laying abolition petitions on the table immediately on presentation, on which he called the previous question. Much excitement followed. Mr. Thompson at length withdrew his call for the previous question, when Mr. Munroe, of New York, got the floor and entered on a long explanation of his views, and ended by moving to strike out all after the word 'Resolved,' in Mr. Thompson's proposition, and insert a proposal to refer all petitions, memorials, &c. on the subject of slavery, to a Select Committee, with instructions to consider and report thereon.

Mr. Granger, then took the floor and addressed the House in reply to Messrs. Coles, Thompson and others—when he concluded,

Mr. Cooper, of Georgia, obtained the floor, and on his motion, the House adjourned.

NORTH-EASTERN BOUNDARY.

The Message of Governor Fairfield to the Legislature of Maine, delivered on the 3d inst. has not yet been received.—We find however some extracts from this document in the New York papers, relative to the boundary question, by which it appears that one or more companies of British troops are stationed at Temiscouta Lake, within the disputed territory. The published correspondence between Gov. Fairfield and Sir John Harvey, consisting of an inquiry on the part of the former concerning the fact of such occupation, and of the reply of Gov. Harvey in return, shows that the movement of troops to the above named point was directed by the British authorities in Canada. This is regarded by the Executive of Maine as a clear violation of the agreement entered into last Spring through the meditation of Gen. Scott. The following letter has been addressed by Gov. Fairfield to the President of the United States:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Augusta, Dec. 23, 1839.

His Excellency, M. VAN BUREN,
President of the United States:

Sir.—It having been reported to me that a large number of British troops had been stationed at Temiscouta Lake in the disputed territory, and seeing extracts from the provincial papers confirmatory of these reports, I deemed it proper to apply directly to the Lieut. Gov. of the Province of N. Brunswick, which I did by letter of the 12th instant, to ascertain whether these reports were well founded or not. His answer, under date of Dec, 19th, I received yesterday, while on my way to this place. My letter and the reply are both herewith enclosed. It will be perceived that two companies of British troops have actually been marched into the disputed territory, and stationed at Temiscouta Lake, where it is well known extensive barracks have been previously erected. This is clearly a violation of the spirit of the arrangement entered into between the Lieut. Governor of New Brunswick and myself, in March last, though the orders have been issued by the Government of Lower Canada.

I submit also, whether the contingency contemplated by the Act of Congress of March 3, 1839, has not occurred—whether the facts do not clearly show an invasion of the State of Maine, which the Executive Government of the United States, under the directions of the Act aforesaid, as well as under the obligations of the Constitution, is bound to repel.

I may add, that, I am well informed that the British Government is also erecting barracks upon both sides of the St. Johns, near the mouth of the Madawaska river, and that troops are concentrating at Grand Falls. Under all these circumstances, I deem it to be my duty to call upon the government of the United States for the protection of this State from invasion guarantied to her in the Constitution.

With the highest respect, I am Sir,
Your most ob't servant,
JOHN FAIRFIELD.
Governor of Maine.

DEATH OF MRS. DECATUR.—Mrs. Susan Decatur, widow of the late Commodore Decatur, died at her residence in Georgetown on Wednesday night last. We perceive by the Philadelphia papers that Mrs. Decatur was left by her husband in possession of an unincumbered estate worth about one hundred thousand dollars—and for many years lived in great splendor—being one of the most elegant women of the age. During some of the latter years of her life however, she lived in Washington in a state of great indigence—and subsisted on the limited means she was enabled to acquire by executing small jobs of writing for the Departments. In the years 1837-8, a bill for her relief was passed allowing her half pay of a Captain in the Navy for five years, and back pay from the year 1830. The avails of this bill might have made Mrs. Decatur very comfortable: but she realized them late in life, and not until her disposition had become soured by disappointed, chagrin, and hope deferred. She was originally a Miss Wheeler, of Norfolk, Virginia. She has left no issue to inherit either her disappointments or her virtues, and has gone down to the tomb oppressed by premature old age.—Mer. Journal.

In digging for marl a few days ago, near Raccoon creek, Gloucester county, (N. J.) the skeletons of three Indians were discovered, some of the bones in a state of preservation. With them were found two pieces of gold coin, dated 1666, six rings and three strings of beads.

We learn that indictments have been found for participation in the late fraudulent election of Directors of the Schuylkill Bank, against four persons, who recognized in the following sums for their appearance at the Court of Criminal Sessions; Peter Wager, $4000; Daniel Saint, $4,000; J. Crosby, $4,000; and Ishi Craven, one of the tellers of the Bank, $1,000.

FOREIGN NEWS.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE

From the Brother Jonathan.

By the packet ship Burgundy, from Havre, sailed 17th December, and the packet ship the Garrick, Capt. Lindes, from Liverpool, we have files of French and English papers up to the time of their sailing.

The papers contain nothing of extraordinary interest further than the improvement of American securities, which is attributable to the good management of Mr. Jaudon, and the revolutionary designs of Prince Louis Napoleon.

LONDON, DEC. 15th.—We understand that Messrs. N. M. Rothschild and Sons will receive subscriptions, for a few days, for a portion of the loan of 90,000*l.*, for which they recently contracted with Mr. Jaudon, on behalf of the Bank of the United States. The bonds are made payable at Messrs. Rothschild's, in Paris and London, secured by a deposit with them of Penusylvania, Mississippi, Michigan, and other State Stock, to the amount of 5,000,000 of dollars, and are payable one-half in October, 1842, with semi-annual coupons for the interest, at 6 per cent. nett, payable 22 per cent subscribing, 35 per cent. on the 15th January, and 35 per cent. on the 15th February. Letters from Paris state that this loan finds much favor there, and that the portion reserved for the French capitalists is likewise to be eagerly taken.—This is important as bearing on the Exchanges, which may in consequence be expected to improve. Considerable sales of the United States Bank Shares were made to-day at £18 10s. per share, and there has been a decided improvement within a week in American stocks generally. The easy position in which the affairs of the agency of the U. S. Bank here are now understood to be placed has, no doubt, contributed to this result.

The opponents of the Corn Laws were making active preparations against the meeting of Parliament, the operatives being disposed to unite with the middle classes. A magnificent banquet or anti-Corn Law dinner was to come off in Manchester on the 9th Jan. where forty tables were to be laid, each calculated to accommodate seventy-five persons.

The Simaphore of Marseilles, publishes extracts of letters dated Valparaiso, 15th July, complaining bitterly of the oppression and monopoly practised by American Methodist Missionaries, against French Merchants in Oceania, and recommending Consular agents at the Sandwich Islands. One of the ministers, Mr. Blumfels, is charged with violating the domicile of the British Consul and burning the British flag.

The French papers are principally occupied with intelligence respecting the infernal machine and the arrests that were taking place in Paris. M. Charles Durand, chief editor of the Capitole has been a second time arrested.

In most of the principal towns provision has been made for the suffering poor.

Marshal Vallee, says Le National, has lost ground at Court, and his recal from Algiers has been decided in the Cabinet. Messrs. Cubier and Trazel are candidates to succeed him.

PRINCE LOUIS NAPOLEON.—There can be little doubt that the revolutionary designs of the Bonaparte family are real and not imaginary as supposed. The Paris correspondent of the London Times furnishes ample proof that the Bonapartists have been making energetic efforts to restore their dynasty and extracts from the Prince's letters are adduced, which are conclusive thereof.

FROM CANTON.—The ship Splendid, from Canton, which arrived on Sunday, sailed on the 20th of August, and brings five days later. As the printing office has been removed to Wampoo, which is below Canton, she brings no papers.

All was in suspense. The British were waiting for orders from England. The smuggling of opium was carried on to a great extent on the coast; the inducement is too great, and the coast too extensive for the government to protect.

On the 7th July, an affray took place at a small village near Hong King Bay, with some English sailors and some Chinese, in which a Chinese was killed and several wounded. The English Superintendent paid a large sum to the friends of the deceased, but the Mandarins, were making a great disturbance about it.

About the same time, a Chinese steward of one of the English ships was taken by the Chinese. Several English boats were manned and armed to recapture him, but not succeeding, they landed in the village and drove out of it all the Chinese.

Two days before the Splendid sailed, Capt. Johnson, of the Cynthia, was detained and examined by the Mandarins, supposing him to be an English Captain. The Splendid's boat was detained in town for some days, with the first officer and crew, in consequence of two small boxes of bird skins being taken to town in her from an English vessel. They are determined to enforce the laws; and said that it was an act of special favor that she was released.

A few days before sailing, an action was fought between an English smuggling brig and some Chinese Mandarian boats, in which several Chinese were killed, and the brig made her escape, after bursting one of her guns, which wounded several of her men. At this last act the Chinese are very much exasperated; both parties were making preparations for defence, and it was the opinion of intelligent Chinese, that if the English actually go to war with them, the trade between the two countries will be forever stopped.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... JANUARY 29, 1840.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.—Not much of general importance has yet been transacted in this body. Numerous petitions have been forwarded; but most on the subject of "extending further protection to religious societies;" "to extend the right of trial to all human beings;" "to prevent the licensing of taverns to retail spiritual liquors;" and "to repeal the fugitive law of the last session."

In view of the first object, it appears from the following extracts from the Journals of the House on the 21st instant, a Bill is reported:

"The bill to amend the act for the prevention of certain immoral practices (granting further protection to religious meetings) was taken up.

"Mr. Jenkins moved its indefinite postponement. Upon this considerable discussion ensued, but the motion was finally withdrawn.

"Mr. Buchanan offered an amendment making the articles offered for sale within two mile of a meeting forfeited to the use of schools, which was adopted.

"Mr. Jenkins moved to limit the distance to [redacted] of the meeting, which was disagreed to.

"Mr. J. renewed his motion to postpone indefinitely. It was again withdrawn, and the bill laid on the table, that "The Speaker might read the resignation, just received, of A. G. Dimock, Clerk of the House. The resignation was accepted."

After taking recess, the House met again, and "Proceeded to the election of a Clerk for the present session; and upon counting the ballots, it appeared that

"John P. Arbuckle received . . . . 48 votes.
"Blanks, ... 6 "

"The bill in relation to the protection of religious societies, was taken up.

"Mr. Jenkins again renewed his motion to postpone the bill indefinitely; which, after some debate, was negatived—yeas 5, nays 54. After considerable time spent in adjusting the details of the bill, it was ordered to be engrossed—yeas 51, nays 8."

From this movement we think there is little doubt but the bill will pass in the House.—It is certainly due to a large and respectable portion of the State of Ohio, that they should receive protection by law from a worthless set of vagabonds who have been permitted too long to impose upon them.

Bills are introduced into the House to repeal the charter of the "Ohio Life Insurance and Trust Company," and the "Bank of Chillicothe," and also to repeal the "Internal Improvement Law,"—another to repeal the Act incorporating the "Oberlin Collegiate Institute," and read the first time on the 22d inst.

In our last, we were led into an error by the correspondent of Bicknell's Reporter, in relation to Mr. Wise's resolution, on the subject of Abolition Petitions. The vote is represented as being taken directly on this resolution; whereas Mr. Wise only stated his resolution, and then moved a suspension of the rule of order relating to petitions, without which the resolution could not pass. The vote on suspending the rule was yeas 109, nays 77; but as it required two-thirds of the House to suspend the rule, the motion was lost,—so the resolution of Mr. W. could not be introduced, though there were a majority in favor of it. Several similar resolutions were offerred at the same time, but the House refused to suspend the rule to consider them.

The old Lion Theatre, Boston, was opened by the Baptist brethren, and dedicated to the worship of God, the first Sabbath in this month.

The list of books from the Protestant, shall appear next week.

In the last "Protestant," the editor in giving an account of a protracted meeting at the "Pitt Street Church," says, "it is conducted by the Rev. Dr. Davies," &c. Now, we wish the editor, if he please, to inform us what we are to understand by a "Rev. Doctor?" Again; there are two paragraphs, in this paper, referring to preachers about Baltimore, in which they are all styled "Reverend," whereas, there are two other paragraphs directly under these, alluding to ministers in Ohio, Alabama, &c., in which they are all styled "brother." Why this difference? If there be any credit or honor in the appellation of Reverend, it seems to us that our aged and venerable brother Browning, of Steubenville, is as much entitled thereto as the boys about the Pitt Street Church."

METHODIST PROTESTANT BANNER is the name of a half medium sheet, to be published monthly, by a committee of the South Carolina Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, at one dollar per year, in advance. The first number is before us, and contains as much interesting matter as its limits will admit of. In our next, we will give its prospectus and an article or two from its pages.

We have no doubt but the existance of a paper in the South, would much promote the interests of the church in that quarter. A general paper has its use, but there are sectional interests it cannot serve. We of the West have had practical lessons on this subject. We both know the advantage of a periodical dedicated especially to our interests, and the disadvantage of being without one for years.

We learn from the BANNER, that there is organized a South Carolina Conference, and that it held its first session at Mechanicsville, on the 5th of December; that among its members were the Rev. A. McCain and the Rev. John A. Russell. This latter, is said to be the "oldest Methodist minister now living in South Carolina;" he "was admitted into the itinerant connexion of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the Conference held in Charleston, in 1789, being the second Conference ever held in South Carolina, and only five years subsequent to the organization of that church." He took an active part in the business of the late Conference. This Annual Conference consists of 18 members, and the numbers in society 951.

We are informed by our friend C. F. Walden, that Jos. A. Shackleford, of Morgantown, Va., is no more. He departed this life on the 2d instant. He gives no particulars with respect to his death.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We have received another anonymous communication from the Coshocton circuit, in which, the writer complains strongly about depriving "sinners" of the privileges of Love-Feasts. We are ready to conclude from the face of the letter, and from what we know on this subject by long observation, that disciplinary matters are managed about right in that quarter.

We received a sermon, some time since, signed "J. C," which we would have immediately put into the hands of the compositor if it had been prepared for the press. We laid it by for a leisure time to look it over, and have just finished examining it. Although it contains some fine thoughts, yet it would not answer for publication without re-writing; for this, we have not time.

Our friends will recollect, that in both editing and publishing, we do what commonly occupies two hands in issuing such a paper as this. We are incessantly employed at our editing and publishing duties. We have committed our domestic matters to other hands, and scarcely go once a week to the barn to see how things are done there. But still we lack time to do many things we could wish to do.

We inform "S. S." that we decline employing an agent for the south, at present. When he returns, we would be glad if he would give us a call.

S. F. Baker has furnished the receipt of the Post Master of Coshocton, to the fact that he paid the postage on the letter of a "Female member of the M. P. Church," which he says was committed to his care from a lady in the country, and to which we alluded in our 21st number. We are satisfied it occurred through mistake.

The communications of P. Smith and S. F. Baker, in our next.

We received a queer kind of letter from T. Oliver, Pittsburgh, with spleen enough in it to serve half a dozen old fish women. He accuses us of neglecting his communication, insinuates we are deficient in dignity, and charges us with a number of misdemeanors and deficiencies.—And after scolding to his heart's content, leaves us to pay the postage on his letter, as a part of our thrashing, excusing himself that the office was closed, (it is true he says, "it shall be attended to,") as though we needed our chastisement so promptly that he would not wait a few hours to discharge the duty of an honest man.

Now, we have published all the communications we have received from the brother. If he has sent us any thing that has not appeared in our paper, it has not reached us, unless it were he who forwarded, some time since, a lot of extracts folded in a paper, which we laid by for examination when their turn comes. Perhaps this may be what he alludes to. We should not have noticed this thing, but we know the brother is a man who takes it on himself to say much about other men's business, and we should suppose from the spirit of his letter that he might say things, unfounded, to our disadvantage, and we have no other way to correct him, and do ourself justice.

The brother, after charging us with a one-sided course, in reference to the friends of "Human Rights," says if "you intend to treat your correspondents with impartial courtesy, it is possible I will trouble you occasionally, on what subjects, time will determine." Now, we say to the brother, that any letter he may forward to us on the business of the church, we will promptly attend to, and do the best we can for him. But when he attempts to discuss the principles of theology, politics or causistry, we will have to decline publishing for him, not because we are opposed to discussing the principles of "Human Rights," but simply, because he is not competent to write on these subjects. His communications would have to be re-written before they would be fit for the press, and for this we have not time; besides, they would not be worth the "trouble." If any of our agents promised you, that, on condition of your subscribing for our paper we would publish all you might write, tho' we never authorized them to make such a stipulation, yet as we abide their acts, convince us of that fact and we will refund you your money.

Several communications, relating to the interests of the church, were received, just as we were closing our paper, all of which will appear in our next.

We acknowledge the receipt of FOUR dollars from Bro. Baldwin, through the P. M. of B. two of which are counterfeit, these we shall return to him through the same medium, and the other two are so badly torn we do not know that we can get them off. We will try, and if not, we shall return them, so that they may go to their owners.

COMMUNICATION.

NEW LISBON, O., JAN. 22, 1840.

Mr. Editor: My last communication was from Pittsburgh, where I understand our people are still much encouraged, and that among the Presbyterians, there is a very interesting revival of religion now in progress. In the Allegheny station, notwithstanding the great fall of snow, which much obstructed the people in getting to meeting, we had an unusually good meeting.—I remained with my old friends in that place, from the day after Christmas, until the day after New Year. The work at the altar was truly gratifying—many sought and found the "pearl of great price," and about 18 or 20 were received into the fellowship of the church. The meeting was continued, and may still be going on. A letter from Bro. Beatty to me in this place, dated 14th inst., says, "our meeting still goes on, the fire is spreading more and more. When it will terminate, and what the result will be, the day of eternity alone can fully answer. You know the state of feeling we had when you left. A rapid increase of the same happy spirit & feeling ensued. Except on Saturday evenings we have had regular meetings ever since you left, and we have meetings published for every evening until Saturday next, and, it is my opinion, that we will hold on through the entire of next week. On last Thursday night we held a general class meeting, a description of which is beyond my ability; twenty eight spoke in rapid succession, scarcely giving time to sing a single verse. Some that I never before supposed to have a spark of shout in them, seemed to be borne away and overwhelmed with the mighty influence of love. Our old members have said, that such a meeting they have never witnessed. Every night we have from six to twelve or fourteen mourners at the altar of prayer, and some nights we witness the conversion of six or seven precious souls to God. The congregations are large and attentive.—The leaders do their duty, every thing moves on well. On Sunday evening the house was literally cramed, I think five were converted. Last night we had leaders meeting. To-night we start again.—About twenty-nine or thirty have been received since the commencement, making in all forty-six since Conference. Bro. Clarke is the only help I have had, since you left; he is faithful,—I owe him much for his indefatigable exertions." Brother John Guisinger, our missionary among the Germans, is stated by Bro Beatty, to be holding a protracted meeting in Pittsburgh—he had "received about twenty or more since he commenced." Previously he had gained over to the M. P. Church, an entire society of Germans, preacher and all, forty-three in number, and had organized one or two other small classes. The Lord prosper our brother Guisinger—even so, amen.

The meeting in Steubenville commenced on New Year's Eve, I think, and was advancing with great promise of success when I left, on last Saturday week. About twenty had been received into the church. On last Saturday, a letter from Bro. Burns to Bro. Ragan states that fifty had joined the church. Bro. James E. Wilson states to me in a letter, of the 17th inst. that "literally scores daily abandon the infernal host for the army of the Most High," and last night a letter from brother Jos. Wells to brother Henry Springer, informs us, that ONE HUNDRED have been received in Steubenville station, since the commencement of this meeting.—Bro. Springer, this is good news—come, help your old friend to rejoice in the Lord of Host, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Spirit of Promise, for such wondrous displays of His heavenly grace.

In Wellsville we had a profitable meeting. The church was much revived.—Some ten or twelve, who had previously joined the church as seekers, obtained salvation, and before I left the influence of our meeting began to reach the hearts of sinners, and was getting abroad to some extent in the community. Only four were added to the church during my stay, but others were expected, and the meeting was continued.

In this place our meeting is doing good. Congregations are large and very serious—five members of good promise, have already joined, and at our love feast to-night, others are expected. An enemy in days gone by, did this little church immense injury, but under the present judicious management of Bro. Ragan, I hope with God's blessing, this injury will soon be surmounted. Love feast is over—it was a blessed season—seven more joined the church. Twelve had been received previous to this meeting, making twenty-four in all since Conference. The meeting is still in progress. My health is a little worsted, but my trust is in God. O how great is His goodness.

Yours, truly, GEO. BROWN.

P. S.—In this place I learned form Bro. Beatty the condition Newark circuit—I have written Bro. Wilson to take the charge of that circuit until Conference.—The letter is directed to your care in Zanesville.—Please send it to him, and do all you can in my name to get him to go.—Should he fail, I know of no other, unless Bro. McCullough would do.

G. B.

A big gun was cast at Alger's foundry, Boston, and recently tried for the first time. It throws a ball weighing 150 pounds, each load requiring sixteen pounds of powder. The expense of every charge is $15.

THE LATE RIOTS AND THE TRAGEDY.—We have purposely abstained heretofore, from any comment on the late deplorable occurrences which our caption indicates, because we would express no opinion, while the matter was under legal investigation, and because we hold it wrong to found reflections, and draw deductions in such a case, when the facts are imperfectly developed and partially understood. The result of that investigation is public, and the excitement has had time to cool. But such transactions must not be forgotten. The time has come when something must be done—when, if the authorities of the city refuse or neglect to protect peaceful citizens in their homes, they must protect themselves; and, rely upon it, they will. To make that protection effectual, good citizens must assemble, combine, organize.

Bands of ruffians and rowdies perambulate the city, knock down quiet citizens in the street, rush into public houses, overpower the inmates, destroy property, and plunder, rob, beat, and murder, without the least hesitation or apparent consciousness of the existence of Law or its officers. But there seems of late to be a new feature of enormity. Women have been abused and ravished by numbers, almost in public—and private dwellings broken into. What ever may happen abroad, whether tempest sweep our vessels from the sea, whether violence, or misfortune, or wrong, agitate the community, and disturb our happiness and prosperity, there is a balm for every wound, a solace for every sorrow, within the magic circle of sacred home. There the good man garners up the priceless treasures of his heart. There is his wife—his smiling little ones, his blooming daughters; and he cannot be unhappy while they are secure! Imagine a state of things, when the husband and father, detained by business from home, finds on his return, his house broken into, and his daughters—but we cannot pursue the subject. There is horror in the very thought. And the very feeling that our homes are insecure, is misery. We demand from our government, the safety of our homes—that our hearthstone shall be protected; and any Government that will not give us protection, and secure our altars and household Gods from violation, is a curse.

We may be told that this kind of licentiousness has always existed. We deny it. Formerly, young men broke tumblers, chairs, &c. when excited, but made good the injury. Such was the fashion twenty-five or thirty-years ago. But the rowdyism of this day, is a base, cowardly, cruel rowdyism. It seeks its gratification from insulting the peaceable, trampling on the weak, violating women, destroying property, committing murder, and inflicting misery in every way. This rowdyism is organized, has its captains of tens and twenties, its places of rendevous, its haunts by day, its holes of retreat by night. It carries the incendiary's torch, is seen at all fires, at all elections, and mingles in every riot. It fills the Police office, the jails and the State prisons; and yet its power is increasing in this city. It is strong in proportion as the administration of the law is weak, and is patronized by that inefficiency which hypocritically prates about "the largest liberty," makes no preparation to prevent wrong, and only opens its bewildered eyes when the mischief is done, and is irreparable.

The Germans who were assailed and outraged New Year's night, are proverbially peaceable and quiet. They bring with them, and retain, the social customs of the Fatherland. At the places where they resort for dancing and social enjoyment, you will see at the bar glasses filled with claret punch, ready made, and seldom any thing stronger. There they congregate—separate from others—meddling with none; and seldom is a German engaged in a riot. But their somewhat exclusive habits, and their paucity of numbers, pointed them out as a proper object of attack; and the death of the unfortunate and misguided young man was the consequence. May it be an admonition to all inclined to such practices—and to our civic authorities, to provide the means of anticipating and preventing them hereafter.—Brother Jonathan.

BANK FRAUDS.—The presentment by the Grand Jury of Philadelphia shows that the management of the Schuylkill Bank had been, for a long time, almost exclusively in the hands of the cashier, the supervising power of the directors being almost nominal; that the cashier had issued forged and fraudulent certificates for more than 13,000 shares of the Bank of Kentucky, the agency of which bank was invested in the Schuylkill Bank; that the directors professed ignorance of the cashier's proceedings under this agency, some being ignorant of any agency, and others not knowing whether the agency was in the Schuylkill Bank or its cashier; that the cashier issued these certificates in this official capacity, and caused them to be entered on the transfer books, and that the clerks were not, and could not be ignorant of the great extent of the over issue; that the deposition, by the cashier, of the money thus fraudulently obtained, has not been discovered; that the cashier issued fraudulent certificates of the stock of the Schuylkill Bank, to an extent not yet discovered, though undoubtedly beyond the amount authorized by the charter; that E. Vansycle, R. Fleming, and James Le Fevre, appointed in November last, to investigate the affairs of the bank, and who reported that it was "solvent, and entitled to the confidence of the stockholders," knew nothing of their fraudulent issues, and of the overdrafts which existed to a large amount, being prohibited, by the rules of banking, from examining private accounts; that $25,000 in gold exhibited to them as assets of the bank, had been brought into it by the cashier, just before their examination, and returned immediately afterwards; that a common practice with the cashier was to record the presence of one or two directors, and to transact important business, as if a full board were present; that an important resolution, affecting the rights of the stockholders, was adopted when only two directors were present; that these frauds were facilitated by the reprehensible practice of voting upon proxies, persons voting with full knowledge that these proxies had been granted to them for the purpose of controlling an election; that the public interest requires some legislation, to compel directors to attend to their duties.—Brother Jonathan.

THE QUEEN'S HUSBAND.—The marriage of Prince Albert with the Queen of England, will confer upon him no official power whatever. "He will have," says the London Spectator, "rank without duties, riches without labor," yet he will be "a gilded puppet who can perform no action becoming an elevated birth and exalted station; who can follow no pursuit worthy of a warrior and statesman; whose entire importance is reflected, and who can avow no opinion (except, perhaps, on an article of dress, a piece of furniture, or a horse.) even though the fate and character of his wife be at stake, without violating the Constitution of the country that has adopted him."

The blood royal—that sublimated quintescence of power incorporate—cannot be communicated except by the transmission of inheritance. When William the Third ascended the throne it was not as husband of Mary, the daughter of the abdicted monarch, but by a violation of the Constitution deliberately committed by Parliament—in other words, by a revolution. When he was, at first invited to assume the Government as regent in behalf of his wife, the high spirited Hollander refused—he would be every inch a king or nothing. Prince Albert, it appears has no such scruples—he is willing to be even less than a regent. Yet his influence as the Queen's husband may be very great ex-officially.

"The representations and advice of Ministers," says the Spectators, "will avail little against the wishes arguments of a benevolent spouse; and the deliberations of the nuptial couch—if, as is ardently hoped, harmony tenderness and love attend it—will be found infinitely more efficacious than the counsel board. Happily the destines of England do not depend upon the will of any human beings; but if Prince Albert be endowed with great intellectuals attainments sagacity and firmness united with Ambition, he may, nevertheless, have immense influence in this country, and may become the instrument of great good, or almost irredeemable evil."

The marriage of Queen's regent in England are said to have been generally of short duration, an historical fact, however, which need not be regarded as ominous. Queen Mary's union with Philip lasted only four years, and William the Third became a widower in less than six years after his accession. Victoria's husband, by virtue of his marriage will be created a Duke and a Privy Councellor, a Field Marshal, &c. he will be authorized to quarter the arms of England, but he will not take precedence of Dukes of the blood royal. The Spectator estimates his probable allowance from Parliament at £30,000 a year, which is considered very moderate but which the Prince no doubt, will find some what more ample than the income of his German principality.

ROWDIES.—The proper officers will find something to do by visiting the corner of Grand and Willeg streets on Sunday afternoon. A gang of rowdies assemble there for the purpose of insulting all persons, especially females, when going to or coming from the Methodist Episcopal Church in Willett near Grand, spitting on all the ladies' dresses as they pass. They also muster at night in squads of 20 or 30, and march in double file through the Church, by going in at one door and coming out at the other, doing all they can to disturb the congregation.—Brother Jonathan.

FIRE.—The fine mansion of Col. Davies, Mayor of Cincinnati, on the hill, was burnt on the 3d instant. Most of the furniture was saved.

Business Department.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS OF THIS PAPER.

1. In remitting money, give the person's name, to whom credit is to be given, the State in which he lives, and the Post-office where he receives his paper.

2. In forwarding subscribers, be careful to give the Post-office, county and State, where the papers are to be sent, writing the name, office and county in a fair hand.

3. When a paper is to be transferred, give the place whence it is to be taken, as well as the place where it is to be directed.

4. In all cases where moneys are paid for papers, receipts should be taken; without these we shall consider our subscribers responsible. Experience in conducting a paper, has shown us that attention to this rule is essentially necessary to secure justice to a publisher.

5. Our paper is $2 per annum on the reception of the first No. On the first opportunity, therefore, be so good as to hand this amount to an agent, or remit, post paid, (except $10 be sent) by mail, at our risk. If any of our agents have made different stipulations with subscribers as it respects the time of payment, we cheerfully abide their arrangement. But in all other cases, and in future, we shall expect our "Terms" to be complied with. This will be absolutely necessary to enable us to continue our paper.

Credits will be given in our paper for the moneys we have received.

☞All the travelling preachers are considered agents for this paper.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

1. In every instance where a communication is forwarded to us for publication, the proper name must accompany it, or no attention will be paid thereto.

2. Any one who may wish to animadvert upon any of the functionaries of the church, the provisions of the discipline, or any of the exciting topics of the day, must permit us, at our own discretion, to connect his proper name with any communication he may write on any of these subjects.

3. We will cheerfully publish any selected extracts, our friends may desire, not inconsistent with the character of our paper; provided, they will send, addressed to the "Western Recorder" the paper or pamphlet containing them. But, if sent in writing, we cannot attend to them.

4. We are willing to pay postage on the following letters: 1. All that we have especially invited to write for our paper. 2. The communications of the Presidents of the Districts, giving an account of the spiritual condition of their charges. 3. All letters containing at least five new subscribers. 4. All which contain ten dollars cash;—5. or all which contain at least two new subscribers and five dollars cash. If any person wishes an agent to write to us when these terms cannot be complied with, he must advance to such agent the postage of the letter. If these rules are violated, we will notice it on the reception of the letter, so as to bring them to the recollection of our friends.

RECEIVED PAY FOR FIRST VOL. RECORDER.

From J. Fordyce, - - - - - $5 00
For Mrs. S. O'Kelly, T. Barnes, and J. Miller, one dollar,
From G. W. Hubbard, - - - - 6 00
For C. Brainard and J. Stoneman, 2 each, and J. Maynard and D. C. Goodsell, one each,
From J. Rose, - - - - - - 4 00
For J. Aid and W. Neal, Esquire,
From I. Thrap, - - - - - 4 00
For Jos. Brown and Jacob Taylor,
From J. Herbert, - - - - - 5 00
For Jos. Hall & Abm. Gallentine, two each and G. Kell, one,
From W. Y. Roberts, - - - - 4 00
For T. Church and J. Troth,
From G. W. Lorentz, - - - - 8 00
For G. R. Jackson, R. H. Clarke, Jacob Lorentz, and John Smith,
From J. Thurston, (20 cents postage) 1 80
From J. Rose, for E. Stern, - - 2 00
From J. Simpson, for Wm. Wymond, - 2 50
From J. Swaney, - - - - - 10 00
For F. Keller, D. Helm, P. Sailor, (M. Sailor, we have it,) and himself 2 each, and for A. Warner and W. Roller, 1 each from No. 23,
From C. F. Walden for R. Wilkins, fm no. 23, 2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. Fordyce, G. W. Hubbard, W. Reeves, J. Rose, J. Clayton, I. Thrap, Jas. Herbert, R. Richardson, J. Clarke, T. Fairchild, G. Knuff, W. Y. Roberts, G. W. Lorentz, J. Flood, J. Thurston, M. Scott, T. Oliver, J. Rose, J. Simpson, James Swaney, J. Robison, C. F. Welden, S. Strawbridge, S. F. Baker and J. G. Pigman.

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

THERE will be application made to the Trustees of Springfield township, at their annual session, on the first Monday of March, at the usual place of holding elections in the town of Putnam for an alteration in School District No. 4, so as to make a new District out of the land of the following persons adjoining in said District, commencing at 160 acres owned by Bernard Wortman, also the farm of Cornelius Springer, Jos. Swaney, Scameron Rodman, Andrew Bumbaugh, Benjamin Maple, Joseph Wortman, Sarah Johnson, James Russell, Robert George, John George, William Kidd, Mary Perien, the Grayham farm, together with two farms owned by Abner James, and eighty acres of land owned by David Jones and occupied by Wm. Perry and Henry D. Morgan. MANY HOUSEHOLDERS.

January 29, 1840. 23

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south-west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.

January 25, 1840. 23

FOR THE LADIES.

SPHERE OF WOMAN.—The following remarks on the sphere of woman, and especially on her duties in relation to the promulgation of the gospel, is from an address of the Hon. John Cotton Smith, before a Female Bible Society in Dutchess county, New York, at its late anniversary.—New York Observer.

The opinion has been strenuously maintained by some, that it comports neither with the physical nor the mental qualities of woman, to participate in the management either of civil or ecclesiastical concerns; that, in a word, delicacy forbids her to overstep the domestic circle for any public purpose whatever. The cases, it is true, are not very numerous in which the government of a nation has been confided to female hands. All history, however, will fully attest, that in the comparatively few instances of the kind which have occurred, from the earliest ages, to the present day, the sceptre has been wielded by woman with at least as much wisdom and efficacy as have distinguished the sway of emperors and kings. It is not compatible, I allow, with the genius of our institutions to admit the sex into our public councils; nor do they, probably, discern any thing so very alluring in our political transactions as to desire it. But in my judgment it perfectly accords with the genius of the gospel, that woman should take an open and decided part in its promulgation.—What a succession of female worthies and public benefactresses do we find recorded in the Holy Scriptures, from Deborah, the wisest and best of the judges of Israel, the pious and patriotic Esther, who, under God, and at the risk of her own life, saved the whole Jewish nation from destruction, and other illustrious characters under the old dispensation, down to those holy women whose meritorious deeds are so conspicuous on the pages of the New Testament! With that pure devotion and indescribable tenderness did woman manifest her attachment to the Saviour during his painful sojourn in the flesh, with what unshaken constancy did she adhere to him in the extremity of his sufferings, when disciples of a hardier sex forsook him and fled! In what moving accents did the expiring sufferer address the "daughters of Jerusalem" from the cross! and to whom did the risen Redeemer make his first appearance, but to a woman! Nor did we find the sex withholding their sympathies and their co-operation from the Apostles.—"Help those women," says St. Paul, "who labored with me in the gospel, whose names are in the book of life." Not that they literally preached the gospel, for that was expressly discountenanced by the same people;* nor was it the only appropriate method by which they might successfully impart religious instruction. The truth is, the excellent women of that day knew and felt, as their virtuous successors of the present age know and feel, how much the sex are indebted to the Bible, not only for its glorious hopes, but for raising them from a state of depression to the just elevation in social life for which they were evidently intended by their beneficent Creator. Hence, in whatever way the knowledge of salvation might be diffused through their instrumentality, they have been ever ready, both then and now, with heart and hand, to perform it. Witness the bright names which adorn the missionary annals. See delicate females renounce the endearments of home and kindred, to sojourn in the inhospitable regions of the East, or to explore the trackless wilderness and Rocky Mountains of the West, for the sublime purpose of bringing the benign influences of the gospel to bear upon the benighted, the degraded, the wretched of our race. These are indeed meritorious labors. But your labors, my respected friends, though less arduous, are of at least equal if not superior importance. For what can the missionary accomplish in the absence of the Bible? What victory will the soldier of the cross hope to achieve without "the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God?" And from whom may that blessed book be received with more propriety, or with a better grace, than from the mothers and daughters of our country? The word Lady, etymologists inform us, signifies one who feeds the poor, literally a bread giver. How emphatically we may apply this honorable distinction to her who gives the "Bread of Life," and receives in return "the blessing of him that was ready to perish!" Would that the number of such ladies were vastly increased, that our female auxiliaries were multiplied an hundred fold, persuaded as I am that greatly increased activity would be thus imparted to this noble enterprise.

*We think this is a mistake.—Ed. S. W. C. Adv.

THE HOLY LAND.—Our lot is cast in very wonderful times. We have reached as it were, Mount Pisgah in our march; and we may discern from its summit the dim though certain outlines of coming events. The tide of action seems to be rolling back from the west to the east; a spirit akin to that of Moses, when he beheld the land of promise in faith and joy, is rising up among the nations; whatever concerns the Holy Land is heard and read with lively interest; its scenery, its antiquity, its past history and future glories engage alike the traveller and the divine; hundreds of strangers now tread the sacred soil for one that visited it in former days; Jerusalem is once more a centre of attraction; the curious and the devout flock annually thither from all parts of America and Europe, accomplishing in their laudable pursuit the promise of God to the beloved city: "Whereas thou hast been forsaken and hated so that no man went through thee, I will make thee an eternal excellency, the joy of many generations."

It would indeed be surprising if the wide diffusion of knowledge among all classes of the civilized world did not create a wider diffusion of interest for the history and localities of Palestine. All that can delight the eye and feed the imagination is lavished over its surface; the lovers of scenery can find there every form and variety of landscape; the snowy heights of Lebanon with its cedars, the valley of Jordan, the mountains of Carmel, Tabor and Hermon, and the waters of Galilee, are as beautiful as in the days when David sung their praise, and far more interesting by the accumulation of reminiscences. The land, unbroken by the toils of the husbandman, yet "enjoys her Sabbath's;" but Eshcol, Bashan, Sharon, and Gilead are still there, and wait but the appointed hour (so we may gather from every narrative) to sustain their millions; to flow, as of old, with milk and honey; to become once more, "a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills; a land of wheat and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates, olive oil and honey;" and to resume their ancient and rightful titles, "the garden of the Lord." and "the glory of all lands." What numberless recollections are crowded upon every footstep of the sacred soil! Since the battle of the five kings against four, recorded in the 14th chapter of Genesis, nearly two thousand years before the time of our Saviour, until the wars of Napoleon, eighteen hundred years after it, this narrow but wonderful region has never ceased to be the stage of remarkable events. If for the sake of brevity, we omit the enumeration of spots signalized by the exploits of the children of Israel, to which, however, the traveller may be guided by Holy Writ with all the minuteness and accuracy of a road-book, we shall yet be engaged by the scenes of many brilliant and romantic achievements of the ancient and modern world. Take the plain of Esdraelon alone, the ancient valley of Jezreel, a scanty spot of twenty-five miles long, and varying from six to fourteen in its breadth; yet more recollections are called up here than suffice for the annuals of many nations. Here, by the banks of "that ancient river the river of Kishon," "the stars in their courses fought against Sisera." the object of the immortal song of Deborah and Barak; and here, too, in Megiddo, signalized by the death of the "good Josiah."—Each year, in a long succession of time, brought fresh events, the armies of Antiochus, and of Rome, Egyptians, Persians, Turks, and Arabs, the fury of the Saracens, and the mistaken piety of the crusaders, have found, in their turn, the land "as the garden of Eden, before them, and have left it a desolate wilderness." Nor did it escape the ferocious gripe of the revolutionary war: the arch destroyer of mankind sent his armies thither under the command of General Kleber, and in 1799 gave the last memorial of blood to those devoted plains.

But how small and transitory are all such reminiscences to those which must rivet the attention and feelings of the pious believer! If Johnson could regard that man as little to be envied, who could stand unmoved on Iona, or Marathon, or any spot dignified by wisdom, bravery, and virtue, what must we say of one who cared not to tread Mount Zion or Calvary, or could behold with unmoistened eye

"those holy fields,
Over whose acres walked those blessed feet
Which eighteen hundred years ago were nailed
For our advantage on the bitter cross?"

We have heard, indeed, that few persons can contemplate the holy city for the first time without emotion. Not long ago it was brought to our knowledge that two young men, (and they not especially serious,) on arriving within sight of its wall and mountains, struck by the religio loci, "How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this the gate of heaven," slipped involuntarily from their camels, and fell into an attitude of adoration.—London Quarterly.

A BROTHER'S LOVE.—There is something transcendently virtuous in the affections of a high hearted brother towards his gentle and amiable sister. He can feel unbounded admiration for her beauty—he can appreciate and applaud the kindness which she bestows upon himself—he can press her bright lips and her fair forehead, and still she is unpolluted—he can watch the blush steal over her features when he tells her of her innocent follies, and he can clasp her to his bosom in consolation when the tears gush from her overloaded heart. With woman there is a feeling of pride mingled with the regard which she has for her brother.—She looks upon him as one fitted to brave the tempest of the world; as one to whose arm of protection she can fly for shelter when she is stricken by sorrow, wronged or oppressed; as one whose honor is connected with her own, and who durst not see her insulted with impunity. He is to her as the oak is to the vine, and though she may fear all others of mankind, she is secure and confident in the love and countenance of her brother. Nothing affords man such satisfaction, and nothing entwines a sister so affectionately among his sympathies and interests as profound reliance on her virtue, and strong convictions of her diffidence and delicacy.—As these two latter are far the most delicious qualities of a beautiful female, so are they the strongest spells for enticing away the affections of the other sex. A female without delicacy is a woman without principle; and as innate and shrinking perception of virtue is a true characteristic of a pure hearted creature, so it is the most infallible union between hearts that truly beat in response to each other. There is more tenderness in the disposition of woman than man; but the affection of a brother is full of the purest and most generous impulses; it cannot be quenched by aught but indelicacy and unworthiness, and it will outlive a thousand selfish and sordid attachments. A deep rooted regard for a gentle creature born of the same parents with ourselves, is certainly one of the noblest feelings of our nature, and were every other feeling of human nature dead save this, there would still a bright hope remain that the fountain of virtue and principle was not yet sealed.

Literary Repository.

ON the 1st of January, 1840, the subscriber proposes the publication of a new literary journal, of the above title, should sufficient encouragement be given previous to that time.

The REPOSITORY will be published semi-monthly in quarto form, each number containing eight pages of three columns each, at the low price of ONE DOLLAR a year. Its mechanical execution will be in a superior style—printed on beautiful fine paper, with new type. Appropriate engravings will occasionally be given, by way of embellishments. Its columns, excluding every thing of a party or sectarian nature, will be particularly devoted to the literature of the day, containing: Moral and Sentimental Tales, Pleasing and Dangerous Adventures, Biography, Sketches of Travels, Extracts from new Publications, Historical Anecdotes, Poetry, &c. &c.

The subscriber has the pleasure of stating that several Ladies, as well as four or five Gentlemen of decided literary talent, have volunteered their services to enrich the columns of the Repository with their productions. With their aid the publisher hopes to render the Repository equal, in point of merit, to any publication of the kind, extant.

A specimen number has just been published, and should two or three hundred subscribers be obtained previous to the first of January, 1840, (of which we have scarcely a doubt,) its publication will, with confidence be continued—at least for one year. Five hundred subscribers it is thought will fully meet the expenses; and our candid opinion is that twice this number may be obtained with but little effort.

It is earnestly hoped that those who wish to become subscribers, will send in their names as soon as practicable. The subscription money will be required immediately after the reception of the second number, as the terms of subscription will be strictly in advance, and no subscriptions received for less than one year.

All orders and communications must be POST PAID, to secure attention, and addressed to

A. B. F. HILDRETH,
No. 20, Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.
January 29, 1840. 23

The Southern Compendium

OF LITERATURE, AGRICULTURE, ARTS AND SCIENCES.

UNDER the above title it is proposed to publish in this place in January, a monthly periodical, to be devoted to Amusement and Instruction, embracing Literature, the Arts and Sciences, Agriculture, Horticulture, Domestic and Rural Economy, Sporting Intelligence, &c.

The Literary department will embrace interesting and instructive Tales, Naratives, Adventures, Sketches of travels, places and persons, Anecdotes, Poetry, Extracts from, and Notices of New Works, &c. &c.

All new discoveries in the Sciences and Arts, as well as interesting papers relating to either, will be immediately noticed, and when of sufficient interest will be transferred to our columns, or such extracts given as will furnish full information to our readers.

In the Agricultural department, special attention will be paid to the great interests of the South. From our Planters, we will endeavor to obtain much practical and useful information which now lies buried and known but to themselves. In order that we may the more fully and effectually carry out this part of our plan, we propose to make frequent excursions into the different sections of not only this, but also of the adjoining States, for the purpose of personally inspecting and reporting on all the various operations which may be carried on, on the plantations we may visit. By pursuing this plan steadily, (as we hope to do,) much highly useful information will be obtained, which cannot fail to be of immense service to the Agricultural community, inasmuch as our Planters will thus become acquainted with the practices of other sections of country, and may from time to time adopt such as may promise a greater recompense, than those, they at the time may follow. Nor shall we confine ourselves to practical information only, but from the rich stores of knowledge which are to be found among our Planters, we hope to draw much which will prove useful and interesting.

Horticulture will also claim our attention, and we will endeavor to raise it from the low estate in which it now exists among us, to one more worthy of it. We will accordingly give not only practical directions for the culture of Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, but entering into the scientific department, we will publish whatever we may find interesting. Descriptions of new Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, as well as their culture, will be given from time to time. The forcing department, which is but little attended to in the South, embracing the formation, building and management of hot beds, conservatories, and hot houses will also be attended to.

Domestic and Rural Economy will not be neglected, but whatever we can find likely to promote either will be given in our columns.

Sporting Intelligence, Anecdotes, On Dits, and various miscellaneous matters, which cannot well be classed, will swell our pages, and add interest to our periodical.

In furtherance of our object, we will do all in our power to render this periodical highly interesting and instructive, and one which shall be welcomed by every member of such families as may patronize it. To effect this, while we hope to contribute our full share to the Original Literature of the day, as well as add considerably to the stock of Agricultural information, yet we will freely draw from the sources open to us, in the numerous daily, weekly, monthly and quarterly periodicals, which embracing every subject, abound not only in America, but also in Europe, and from these we will select only such articles as may prove highly interesting or instructive.—The sources which are open to us in each department are ample, and we trust we shall so avail ourselves of them, as to render THE SOUTHERN COMPENDIUM a highly acceptable visiter wherever known.

Political and Religious discussions will be excluded, and while we have no preference in both, yet we will not admit any thing which may be likely to wound or offend the feelings of our readers.

We have thus sketched the plan of our Periodical, and respectfully solicit for it support, both by subscriptions and contributions.

TERMS—The Southern Compendium will be published on the 15th of each month, in octavo form of 64 pages, at $5 per annum, payable in advance.

JOHN D. LEGARE.
Charleston, S. C., Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

JUDGE BRECKENBRIDGE, in reprimanding a criminal, among other hard names, called him a scoundrel.

The prisoner replied, "Sir, I am not so great a scoundrel as your honor——takes me to be."

"Put your words closer together," replied the judge.

Colored American.

WE wish to inform the friends and subscribers to the "Colored American," that the suspension of that paper for a few weeks past, must, of necessity, be continued for some weeks yet to come, after which its publication will be resumed by one or both of the former proprietors, who will endeavor to associate with them in conducting it, all the talent and wisdom they can reasonably call to their aid, and we pledge to make the paper equal, and we hope superior, to what it has been.

The causes which lead to so long a suspension of the paper are, first, the unprecedented hard times, of which every body is aware; and, secondly, the deranged state of things with our subscribers in the cities of Philadelphia and New York, which require time, and labor, and patience, to set right; and finally, the payment of a debt, already accumulated, in whole, or at least in part, before we even think of involving the concern any further in debt.

We did hope, when we suspended, to have resumed again with the commencement of the new year, but we find, by the trial that we have made, that that has not afforded us half the time necessary, to accomplish the object of our suspension. We shall, therefore, on resuming, commence a new series of the paper, the current year of which to commence with the issue of that number, which will be as soon, certainly, as the first of March. We shall credit subscribers whose year has not expired, for the time in which the paper shall be suspended.

Since the issue of our last, we have received a number of letters from friends in different parts of the country, deprecating exceedingly our necessity to suspend, and speaking in highest terms o the necessity of the paper, urging us strongly to go on, and in every instance, pledging something to our support, or transmitting a donation, and we believe that the suspension will test the real friends of the paper, and bring to our aid the necessary means to ensure its continuance.—Will, now, the real friends of the paper bestir themselves in our behalf, and see how much can be done by the first of March? C. B. RAY.

New York, Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

The Casket,

AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

THE unparalleled success which has attended the Casket since it has come into the hands of the new proprietors, induces them to begin a volume with still further attractions on the first of January next. Its literary character, which has called forth so many comments, will undergo no change, as it will continue under the control of the same editors. Several new contributors, however, of high talent, has been engaged beside those who have already been enlisted in its favor. The Magazine will be enlarged, and will contain a greater quantity of reading matter than any periodical published at the same price in this country.

The work will appear in a new and beautiful type, cast expressly for the purpose, and will be printed on the finest paper. It will also be ornamented with the finest steel engravings, provided at a heavy expense, and executed from the choicest designs. To vary the style of these illustrations, the services of distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish at intervals, mezzotints for the ensuing volume. The heads of several distinguished American writers will appear in the course of the year. The publishers, determined to leave nothing undone to merit the patronage of a liberal public, have resolved, after much solicitation from many of their fair readers, to publish quarterly, as an extra, a correct plate of the latest fashion, highly colored, and executed in the first style of the art. This department will be under the control of a French gentleman, of much taste and experience, and will be found to excel any thing ever attempted in this line in America. The extra in the November number, may be considered a fair specimen of what these fashion plates will be. The music department, as heretofore, will be under the charge of Messrs. G. W. Hewitt & Co., and the fine pieces of copyright music which they have hitherto furnished are sufficient guarantee for the future

The flattering terms in which the Casket has been noticed by the journals in every section of the Union, establish beyond a doubt its claims to support generally. It will surpass any other work in the return it gives for the readers' money.

TERMS: Three dollars per annum, invariably in advance, or two copies for five dollars.

All communications to be addressed, post paid, to GEORGE R. GRAHAM & Co.,
December 30, 1839. Philadelphia.

P. S.—Editors publishing this Prospectus will be entitled to a copy of the Casket during the volume. No exchange is solicited, except when noticing the reception of the Magazine.

Youth's Cabinet.

EDITED BY N. SOUTHARD.

Prospectus of vol. III. Commencing Jan. 2, '40.

THIS paper which was begun without a subscriber, has existed two years, in the midst of a host of competitors, securing many friends, and receiving the warm commendation of about one hundred editors, and many parents and teachers.

"You have no idea of the eagerness with which my little girl gets your paper," said a father a few days ago. "It would be a grand thing to introduce as a reading book into common schools," said a distinguished laborer in the cause of education.

"It is just such a paper as we desire to have placed weekly in the hands of our children," says the Christian Herald. "We have never known a paper in wh ch children take so deep an interest," says the Waldo (Maine) Gazette.

"We have seen no paper expressly devoted to the young, wh ch combines with more felicity amusement and sound principles," says the Bristol (R. I.) Phenix.

Its object is to do the greatest possible good to the hearts and minds of its young readers, in the most pleasing manner. To accomplish this object an increasing list of subscribers will enable the editor to devote an increasing amount of time and attention, while a number of able correspondents among the friends of the young at home, and missionaries abroad, will give it variety and interest.

Its engravings, which average two or three each week, are not intended merely to please the fancy, but illustrate truth, convey instruction, and deepen good impressions.

While it is confidently presented to the favorable notice of all who love the improvement of the young, it has special claims on those who desire the immediate extinction of all forms of oppression, and who believe the best security for our own liberties is a sacred regard for the rights of others.

It is published weekly at No. 9, Spruce street, New York, and No. 25, Cornhill, Boston, at only $1 per year in advance; ten copies for 8 dollars; twenty copies for 14 dollars; thirty copies for 18 dollars.

All editors who wish to promote the great objects of the Cabinet, are requested to favor us by giving this one or two insertions.

Our exchange list having swelled so as greatly to tax our time and means, we shall be constrained to confine it mostly to those who show us this kindness. Jan. 1, 1840. 19

The Union of the Whigs for the sake of the Union.

PROPOSALS FOR PUBLISHING A POLITICAL NEWSPAPER IN ZANESVILLE, O., ENTITLED

THE HARRISONIAN.

WHILE opposing candidates are in the field.—The two great political parties of the country are preparing for the contest. The one unfurls the banner of Harrison, Tyler and Reform: the other has inscribed on their flag Martin Van Buren and the Sub-Treasury. The People are called upon to choose between them. We have made our selection. We go for the able and enlightened Statesman,—the Hero that never lost a battle,—the political Father of the West, Gen. WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON. We believe a majority of the People are with us. We believe that if every opponent of the men in power does his duty, the election of our candidates is certain.

To unite and arouse the opposition to action we will labor. We ask the support of our fellow-citizens—extend to us your helping hands—assist us to raise high the banner of Reform, and to rally around it every man who wishes to see dispelled the cloud of gloom that now hangs over our common country.

The news of the day, and as much variety as possible, will be furnished.

THE HARRISONIAN will contain nearly, if not altogether, as much reading matter as the larger sheets.

CONDITIONS.—It is believed that a small sheet, on moderate terms, will suit better the state of the times, and have a more extended circulation, than one of a larger size—Therefore, THE HARRISONIAN will be published weekly on a super-royal sheet, at $1 50 in advance; $2 00 payable in six months. Ten copies will be sent to one direction for $12 00 in advance.

The publication will be commenced about the 20th instant. GEM'L. ARTHUR,
January 15, 1840. 3w21 Pub'r.

Godey's Lady's Book.

EDITION 25,000—MONTHLY.

More than Sixty Figures of Fashions each year.

MRS. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, whose name is so intimately connected with the Literature of our country, and who has justly been termed the Hemans of America, will assist Mrs. Hale in the editorial department. It is with feelings of the greatest pleasure that the publisher of the Book makes this announcement. The editorial corps will now consist of Mrs. SARAH J. HALE, Mrs. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, and LOUIS A. GODEY. Mrs. Sigourney will commence her valuable aid with the January Number. The Lady's Book has always been noted for the purity of its contents; that marked distinction which characterizes it shall still be preserved; indeed, with such conductors it will be impossible to go estray. This work has been emphatically termed the Ladies' National Magazine, as it is a receptacle for the contributions of the most celebrated Female Writers of America, most of whom of any eminence contribute to its pages.

Twenty volumes have already been issued. It is usual to announce that a small edition only will be published. Contrary to this, the proprietor of the Lady's Book announces that he will publish an Immense Edition, with which he hopes to supply all those who will favor him with orders, commencing with the January number. It will be seen by this advertisement that every effort has been made by the proprietor of this work to make it superior to any in America, and as a New Year's Gift, the Lady's Book is probably the most proper that could be desired for ladies, edited by their own sex, and assisted as the editorial department is by the pictorial embellishments, it is positively the Bourdoir companion.

There are other publications that advertise Fashion Plates—The publisher of the Lady's Book wishes it to be distinctly understood that the principal Fashions in this work are colored, and in every number, which is not the case with any other work published in America.

Uncolored Plates of Fashions, also monthly.—This is a novel feature of the work, and as it is no great expense to give plates of Fashions without coloring, the publisher will give from three to six figures each month, in addition to the three colored—This will make in all generally about nine Figures of Fashions monthly.

Lace Patterns of Embroidery will be published at regular intervals. These beautiful ornaments (particularly the former) have given great satisfaction.

The Musical Department is under the superintendence of J. G. Osborne, than whom no person is more capable of doing it justice.

The Literary Department is placed under the superintendence of Mrs. Sarah J. Hale and Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney. Two ladies so well known to the world that to mention their names in connection with any publication is at once a guarantee of its morality, virtue and utility. Of their capability to conduct the Lady's Book it is presumed no person will doubt, and the proprietor mentions with pleasure that no English or American Magazine can publish in connection with its Literary department two names so celebrated in the world of letters.

Fac Similies.—A great deal of curiosity is often expressed to see the Chirography of celebrated persons. We shall endeavor, as far as lies in our power, to gratify this feeling by giving from time to time correct imitations of the most celebrated Female writers of the day.

General Features.—Literature, Tales, Essays, Legends, Romantic incidents in History, Extracts from the old Poets, Reviews, Poetry, Female Education, Embellishments, Fashions colored and uncolored, Lace Embroidery, Fac Similies, Music, &c. &c. More than sixty Figures of Fashions yearly colored and uncolored, the proprietor being determined to consult all tastes. Any embellishments to be found in any other magazine may be looked for in the Lady's Book.

In 1838 we published 10,500 copies, during the months of January, February and March, 1839, we increased the list to 13,500 and had then to reprint three numbers and increase to 15,000.—With the next volume we advanced to 17,000, and we now print 25,000 copies monthly, probably the greatest monthly list of subscribers in the world.

Our Reading Matter is about the same in quantity as any similar production, probably a little in favor of the Book. It would be foolish and false to say that it contains more, and the proprietor is not willing to condescend to such means for any supposed advancement of his interest.

One advantage the subscribers of this work will have, is its early reception. It will be received at the remotest cities of the Union by the first day of publication.

The January and succeeding numbers will be printed on an entirely new type cast expressly for the work, and will be found on inspection to be a truly beautiful letter, not too small to be read with ease, nor too large to prevent the usual quantity of matter being given in each page. The paper is of the finest quality for periodical use—indeed the typographical execution has long been a subject of congratulation with those best acquainted with these matters.

The price of the publication is $3 00 per annum—two copies for five dollars. The money to be positively received before a number is sent.—No letters will be taken from the Post Office unless the postage on them is paid. Unless positive orders are given at the time of subscribing the work is continued after the first year, and if not paid during the year, the price will be increased to four dollars.

For the convenience of persons wishing to subscribe for any of the following publications, Burton's Magazine, Saturday Courier, Saturday Chronicle, Weekly Messenger, Saturday Evening Post—they will be furnished with the Lady's Book and any one of these publications one year upon the receipt of five dollars free of postage.

Address L. A. GODEY,
Jan. 15, 1840. 21. 211 Chesnut-st. Phil'a.

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried o by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by th subscribers, and will in future be conducted b them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kep constantly on hand for sale on reasonable term at the works. The experience of one of the firm in the manufacture of the article, will ensure a made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.
Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on han 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of differ ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding an driving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage an heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wea with any others made here or elsewhere. Also fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and commo fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just receiv ed. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and doubl covered wagon whips, varying in quality and pric to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for hi work, is the testimony and long experience of hi old customers and friends. He is still anxiou to please and accommodate those who may cal on him, and hopes to share so much of the publi patronage as his attention to his business shal merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse o stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles o the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, o William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for us they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1840. Number 24.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

SACRED SONGS—NO. II.

O could I wield a poet's pen,
Or strike harmonious lays,
Or could I raise a seraph's strain,
I'd sing Jehovah's praise.

I'd sing of everlasting truth,
Of Jesus' boundless love,
I'd sing of ever blooming youth,
In realms of joy above.

I'd sing how Christ to purchase this,
Expir'd on the tree,
I'd sing—but I am lost in bliss,
My Lord, to mention thee.

O what amazing boundless love,
Great God, are in thy ways,
I'll mount on angel's wings above,
And ever sing thy praise. L. E. S.

lue Rock, O., Jan. 1, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

LIFE.

he world's infections few bring back at eve nmaculate the manners of the morn.

* * * * *

he world's a stately bark on dangerous seas, nd bounded at our peril.

Young's Night Thoughts.

This world's a treacherous deep,
To mortals that slumber or sleep,
And they that have skill and are wise,
By diligence scarce earn the prize;
This life is an e'er rolling sea,
At least it has prov'd so to me,
Its waves which did roll to the shore,
Seem ceas'd to roll there any more.
Youth's plans which spoke pleasures all rife,
Matur'd, have bro't trouble and strife,
The joys which embellish'd life's spring,
Have refused the same pleasures to bring.
Some friends that I knew in my youth,
And confidence placed in for truth,
Since they have grown up to be men,
Are not the firm friends they were then;
Black falsehood has drove some to shame,
Long strove my poor self to defame,
And some have gone out to the world,
And round and round are often whirl'd;
Some likely my name hath forgot,
Some wished indeed I was not,
And few, very few, are the same
They were when first I knew their name.
Some strove to procure a great name,
And got to the step stones of fame,
With joy they look'd up to the fane,
Then languish'd and shrunk back in pain.
I have seen some of honor and worth,
That were good as their fellows by birth,
Neglected and scorned in their youth,
Because they held up for the truth.
Aye, life is an e'er changing play,
That alters and turns ev'ry day,
It can change the best friend to a foe,
For this I have known to be so;
Yes, time can make men out of boys,
And make us forget our poor toys,
Youthful hairs it can change into gray,
And moulder the gray into clay. V.

gust, 1839.

THE DIRGE OF THE YEAR.

ie voice of a monarch is heard on the air,
om his vast throne erected in majesty there!
s withering scepter is lifted on high,
nd his mandates are thunder'd in gloom thro' the sky!

s chaplet he strips from the old woodland kings, nd round him their trappings of royalty flings;
s footstool is built on the loftiest hills,
nd his signet and seal are affixed to the rills.

ie banner he waves is fair Summer's rapt shroud, hich he hangs in the sunshine, or hides in the cloud;
s breath is the whirlwind—the wing of the storm,
hich darkens the mirror of earth with his form.

triumph he stands! See, uplifted afar,
s coursers bear onward his snow-circled car!
ow mounting, his fingers are twined in the reins, nd near him have gathered his satellite trains.

ark! hark! how the chorus comes pealing along,
hich echo hath caught from the loud herald song;
ow wildly discordant it falls on the ear!
is the pean of Winter—the Dirge of the Year!

COMMUNICATIONS.

CONNELSVILLE, PA., JAN. 24, 1840.

Mr. Editor: Men are so much alike that we nclude whatever is pleasing to us will be so to ners, who have the same interests and hold the ne sentiments that we do. Hence, the Psalm- cries out, "come and hear all ye that fear d, and I will declare what He hath done for soul." Nothing is more cheering to the ristian than the spread of "pure and undefiled ligion" in the earth. Revival intelligence is, erefore, always welcome to the friends of the deemer. We therefore, think it the duty of r ministers, to communicate, through the me- m of your valuable paper, their success in nning souls to the Saviour.

In order to discharge what I conceive to be my ty, I would say to your numerous readers that e work of the Lord is still progressing among on Union circuit. We commenced a pro- cted meeting in Connelsville, on the 5th tant, which lasted nearly two weeks, and was ly, a season of great grace to the church.— mbers approached the anxious seat—sought d obtained pardoning love. TWENTY-ONE ned the church—most of whom found peace th God.

Bro. Geo. Hughes was in attendance at the commencement of the meeting, but on account of his business had to leave at an early stage of it. We had appointed a protracted meeting at a place referred to in my last, Breakneck Furnace, to commence on Monday the 13th. And in consequence of the work in Connelsville, we had to divide our forces, and thus carry on both meetings at the same time. Altho' our strength was nearly exhausted when we commenced the labors of the latter, yet, the work commenced at the beginning of the meeting and continued to spread until Friday evening when the meeting closed. TWENTY were added to their number, these nearly all professing to have obtained religion.

Thus in two weeks, we have received FORTY-ONE members; and blessed be God, the prospect of a more general and powerful revival is every day growing brighter. Our cry to the God of our salvation is, "Save now, we beseech thee, O Lord!" O Lord, we beseech thee, send now prosperity!" And "verily God hath heard us, He hath attended to the voice of our prayer. Blessed be God who hath not turned away our prayer, nor His mercy from us."

JAMES ROBISON, Supt.
Union circuit.

LAWRENCEBURGH CT, IA. JAN. 23, 1840.

Brother Springer: Having to write to you on business, I would add, our second quarterly meeting closed on the 5th instant. We were favored with the assistance of brother Robinson, from Cincinnati; the meeting was refreshing—There were about one hundred communicants at the sacramental board, among whom, were Presbyterians, Episcopal and Protestant Methodists, but what was still better, the Master of assemblies favored us with His presence. Our congregations on the circuit are increasing.

After quarterly meeting, I visited my family in Kentucky. On the 15th instant a very appalling occurrence happened in the neighborhood. A young man went to the store of a backsliding Methodist and got drunk, after which he started home with a bottle of the good critter in his pocket, and after arriving within three-fourths of a mile of his house, he frozed to death, and when found, his drunken brother-in-law, took the bottle of whiskey from the dead man's pocket and drank heartily from it. How dreadful is the soul hardening effects of intemperance!

Pray for us. JOS. SIMPSON.

HARRISON COUNTY, KY., JAN. 15, 1840.

Dear Brother Springer: We have cheering intelligence of the work of the Lord, from a distance, through the medium of your valuable paper, which is quite encouraging to the friends of Zion. I feel disposed to say a word about our condition and prospects on Broad Ridge circuit.

Our first quarterly meeting for this year, commenced at Richland, the 12th of October. Bro. Williams, who was appointed to labor with us this year, reached his charge in time to attend to this meeting. It was one of great interest,—four professed to find peace through the forgiveness of sin, while all who attended were much benefitted. We have had a considerable revival in this neighborhood, of which you have had an account from brother Simpson. The class was organized last March of twenty members; it now numbers more than forty. Our old side brethren have had considerable share in the work also.

Our second quarterly meeting commenced on the 11th of January, at brother Jones', in Grant county. Our circuit preacher, brother Williams, was attacked on his third round with the billious fever, and has returned to Indiana, but will recommence his labors on this circuit, in a few weeks, if his health recovers. In addition to the ministers of the circuit, we were favored at this quarterly meeting, with the labors of our beloved brother Simpson, from Indiana, and on Saturday evening with the services of brother Harrison, a Presbyterian minister, which were very acceptable. This Quarterly Conference licensed a promising young man to exhort.

The church at Grassy creek is in a prosperous condition. It has recently been favored with several conversions.

From the spiritual condition of the circuit we are looking for still better times. We have struggled hard and have had many discouragements to endure on this circuit. But since last year, we have been encouraged to expect ultimate success. Brethren, pray for us.

I remain yours, &c.,
PATTERSON SMITH.

COSHOCTON, O., JAN. 21, 1840.

Our preachers on this circuit are both men of steady habits, and preach by precept and example. I am informed that there is considerable excitement at Evansburgh. It is reported that some thirty or forty have been awakened to a sense of religion. Yours, &c.

S. F. BAKER.

SOMETHING SMART.—A young lady having given a gentleman, who was not very remarkable for his taste in dress, a playful slap on the face, he called out, "you have made my eye smart." "In deed!" said she—"well, I am happy to have been the cause of making something smart about you."

INSULT.—A well-regulated mind does not regard the abusive language of a low fellow in the light of an insult, but deems it beneath revenge. All the abomination to which the latter may give utterance will not raise him one jot above his proper level, or depress the former, in the slightest degree, below his sphere.

"A moral, sensible, and well-bred man,
Will not insult me—and no other can."

MISCELLANEOUS.

A HEART TOUCHING STORY.—A genteel and intelligent young man about thirty years of age, named George Mortimer Wardwell, was recently taken up at St. Louis on a charge of being drunk in the streets and disturbing the peace. He plead guilty to the charge, and evidently labored under great emotion. When requested to give some account of himself (we copy from the St. Louis Bulletin) he replied:

Sir: I have now arrived at the extremety of degradation which, long ago, I became satisfied would one day or other become my portion. Sir, I do not believe I was born to this. In my youth, when I first started in the world, my prospects and hopes were as bright as the sky which bent over me. I married a beautiful wife, when I was twenty-eight years of age, and had acquired a considerable competence. Sir, I need not tell you how I loved her. I perceive by your countenance that you know something of human nature, and are already satisfied that I am not a common loafer—and that I have been driven to the present extremity by some extraordinary circumstances. But I will proceed with my story. Two years subsequent to my marriage with my wife—who was a young English lady of handsome expectations—and had a beautiful boy to bless me with his innocent endearments, we received letters from England, announcing the death of my wife's father, and soliciting me to come to England immediately, for the purpose of settling up the affairs of the deceased, and receiving my wife's portion of the estate. I immediately made preparations for my departure, and leaving my wife under the protection of an intimate friend, whose name was Henry Anson Willoughby, I set sail for England.

"My business detained me longer than I had anticipated, and I began to feel the most intense anxiety respecting my family. The letters I received from my wife grew brief and unfrequent, sometimes startling me with their abruptness. Just before the final steps in regard to my wife's proportion were about to be completed, I received a letter from America, warning me to hasten home, if I would preserve my future happiness and the honor of my wife! Imagine my dismay! I hurried home, leaving my business still unsettled, and arrived in time to find my hearth desolate, my wife eloped with my friend Willoughby, and my boy—my darling boy—in the Orphan Asylum, an object of public charity!

"Willoughby had represented himself as a rich planter from Alabama, and that he was sojourning at the north for the purpose of regaining his health. Placing my child under proper protection, I flew in pursuit of the destroyer of my peace, with my heart bursting with revenge. At Montgomery, (Ala.) I learned that Willoughby had been there, in company with a lady, who he called his wife—that he had been for years a notorious blackleg and swindler, and had gone to Mobile, leaving his wife (my wife!) behind, in circumstances of destitution. After waiting for some time, and hearing nothing from her base paramour, she borrowed money of some of the citizens and followed him.

"Mad with rage and disappointment, I pursued. At Mobile I lost all traces of the villain and his wretched victim. I proceeded to New Orleans; and, on making inquiries of the different boats, I was told by the Captain of one of them engaged in running to St. Louis, that a woman answering the description I gave, had gone up the river on his boat some time since. I immediately embarked for this place, sir; and my money being nearly exhausted, I was compelled to take a passage on deck.

"I arrived here in a complete state of destitution; and being unable to learn any thing of my wife or the villain Willoughby, I became discouraged and disheartened. The bottle was my resort. I mingled with the vilest of the vile: and, last night was persuaded by several others, to visit a house of ill-fame. I entered—and the first object that met my gaze was my wife, sitting upon the lap of a disgusting ruffian, and resigning her tender cheek, which I had not suffered 'even the winds of Heaven to visit too roughly,' to his disgusting caresses. Sir, sir! I became mad! I can tell no more, but that I rushed from the house invoking the most impious maledictions upon him who had been the cause of such misery and anguish; and found myself this morning in the situation you behold me. Sir, nothing which you can inflict will be a punishment to me; and you can bestow no greater favor than to take my life, I have lived too long—I am ready to die."

He was discharged.

THE FADED FLOWER.—"Oh," said Emma, with tears in her eyes, "my beautiful flower, which I had nursed with so much care, and which bloomed more beautifully each succeeding day, is now withered and faded." As she stood pensively contemplating the once beautiful but now useless plant, her father observed her sorrowful attitude, and inquired into the case of her solicitude. She pointed at the withered stem and was silent. "Emma," said her father, "when you received this flowering shrub, you were told that it was of foreign origin, and that the most sedulous care was required to make it bloom in this uncongenial climate; and while you carefully followed the directions you had received, did it not reward your labor with its healthful freshness and beauty? Had you any reason to complain while you daily watered its roots, shaded it from the rays of the mid-day sun, and shielded it from the cold at night? and why is it that now its beauty has fled?" Emma cast her eyes to the ground, and acknowledged that during the week her cousins had been visiting her, she had been so absorbed in her amusements that her favorite flower had been neglected, and now it had hopelessly perished.

An affecting truth is couched under the similitude of Emma's flower. Religion is an exotic; it is of heavenly origin, and when transplanted into the human heart, it may flourish, but it is only through constant care, and by guarding it against the unfriendly influences by which it is surrounded. Violence is not so much to be apprehended as inattention and neglect. If the dews of heaven do not daily refresh it; if it be not sheltered against the winds which too roughly blows; if every precaution be not taken to preserve it in its beauty and freshness, it will soon cease to flourish. When this heavenly plant is watered by the tears of a daily penitence; when the genial breath of prayer sweeps daily over it; when all unfavorable circumstances are vigilantly guarded against, then it will grow up in strength, and bear both its flower and fruit.

Many commence a religious course under the most flattering auspices; for a season they run well, their faith is strong, their love enlarged, and their zeal ardent; they seem as if they would never grow weary, but go on from victory to victory. A change, however, becomes visible; the graces of the spirit are exercised with diminished force; the duties of religion are not performed with the same relish; they are surprised that they cannot feel the same interest they once experienced; religion is divested of most of its charms, and its forms alone are left to be attended to with heartlessness, or entirely laid aside. The flower is withered, not one blossom greets the eyes! Why is this? It is not that religion in itself is short lived; it is a perennial, and is destined to bloom in immortal vigor. It has suffered through inattention. A faithful scrutiny will detect the fatal causes of religious declension. Mingling with gay, worldly company; indulgence in frivolous reading; neglect of secret converse with God on slight pretexts; defective vigilance in guarding against temptation; committing small sins, so esteemed, and exercising ingenuity in excusing them; these, and similar causes must necessarily, in the course of time, subdue the ardor of piety, and transform the Christian, who once enjoyed his religion, into a heartless formalist.—Presbyterian.

MARRIAGE.—Marriage is to woman at once the happiest and saddest event of her life; it is the promise of future bliss, raised on the death of all present enjoyment. She quits her home, her parents, her companions, her occupations, her amusements, every thing on which she has hitherto depended for comfort, for affection, for kindness, for pleasure.—The parents by whose counsel she has been guided, the sister to whom she has dared to impart every embryo thought & feeling, the brother who has played with her—alternately the counsellor and the counselled—all are to be resigned at one fell stroke; and yet she flies with joy into the untrodden path before her. Buoyed up by the confidence of requited love, she bids a fond and grateful adieu to the life that is past, and returns with excited hopes and joyous anticipation of the happiness to come. Then woe to the man who can blight such a fair prospect, who can treacherously lure a heart like that from its peaceful enjoyment, and the watchful protection at home—who can, cowardly, break the illusions that have won her, and destroy the confidence which love had inspired. Woe to the man!

A QUAKER'S LETTER TO HIS WATCHMAKER.—I herewith send thee my pocket clock which greatly standeth in need of thy friendly correction. The last time he was at thy friendly school, he was no ways reformed, nor in the least benefitted thereby; for I perceive by the index of his mind, that he is a liar, and the truth is not in him; that his motions are wavering and irregular; that his pulse is sometimes slow which betokeneth not an even temper; at other times it waxeth sluggish notwithstanding I frequently urge him; when he should be on his duty, as thou knowest his usual name denoteth, I find him slumbering and sleeping—or, as the vanity of human reason phrases it, I catch him napping. Hence I am induced to believe he is not right in the inward man. Examine him, therefore, and prove him, I beseech thee, thoroughly, that thou mayest, by being well acquainted with his inward frame and disposition, draw him from the error of his ways, and show him the path wherein he should go. It grieves me to think, and when I ponder thereon, I am verily of opinion that his body is foul, and the whole mass is corrupted. Cleanse him, therefore, with thy charming physic, from all pollution, that he may vibrate and circulate according to the truth. I will place him a few days under thy care, and pay for his board as thou requirest it. I entreat thee, friend John, to demean thyself on this occasion with a right judgment according to the gift which is in thee, and prove thyself a workman. And when thou layest thy correcting hand upon him, let it be without passion lest thou drive him to destruction. Do thou regulate his motion for the time to come, by the motion of the light that ruleth the day, and when thou findest him converted from the error of his ways, and more conformable to the above mentioned rules, then do thou send him home with a just bill of charges, drawn out by the spirit of moderation, and it shall be sent to thee in the root of all evil.

FOR THE YOUNG.

From the Youth's Cabinet.

HENRY HAYDEN; THE BOY WHO HAD HIS OWN WAY.—"Children, obey your parents, says the apostle in his epistle to the Colossians. This is one of the most obvious dictates of nature: even the irrational creatures are obedient by instinct, and follow the signs of the parent, beast, bird or reptile. Perhaps there is no duty more generally acknowledged than this. Your obedience should begin early; the younger you are the more you need a guide and a ruler." JAMES.

Henry Hayden gave his parents and teachers much trouble by his perverse, ungovernable temper. He might truly be termed a spoiled child. His parents sought to gratify his wishes in every respect, and by so doing injured him, and eventually brought sorrow upon themselves. Once, when his teacher corrected him, he said to one of his school-mates: "I don't mind getting punished if I can have my own way. I am determined to do so again the first chance I get."

One day, when he returned from school, he told his mother he was going to ride on Mr. D——'s horse. Mrs. Hayden knew the animal was very unmanageable, and requested him not to go.—Finding her arguments ineffectual in convincing Henry that it would be dangerous for him to attempt to manage the horse, she told him he must not go to the stable. But he paid no attention to her commands. The ostler helped him to mount the horse, and he rode round the stable delighted with his achievement. He then passed the house in which he lived, and in order to display his skill in horsemanship to his mother, he struck the horse. This enraged the fiery animal. He reared and threw his unskilful rider upon a pile of stones that lay in the road, and was out of sight in an instant. There laid Henry Hayden, senseless. The blood was flowing profusely from a deep wound in his forehead. He presented a ghastly spectacle. Several weeks passed before he had an interval of reason. His parents watched by his bedside with their hearts wrung with the keenest anguish. In his delirium, his thoughts dwelt upon the scenes, and events which had developed his unamiable traits of character.—"I had my way," was more than once unconsciously uttered by him who was to suffer the penalty for doing wrong during his life.

Four months passed, and Henry Hayden entered school. He did not appear as he had formerly done, prompt in his lessons and superior to his schoolmates. No. He knew not a letter in the alphabet. His brain was injured. After trying several months, to teach him to say his letters, the instructor gave up in despair. It was then evident that he was an idiot for life.

Two years after this afflicting event, his wretched parents left the home of their childhood, and removed to the far west. I have not heard from them since.

Before this sad accident, Henry was a very interesting child. Those who saw him were delighted with his intelligent countenance, and bright penetrating eye. But, Oh! how sad the change! It was painful to see the large scar, which deformed his forehead, and it would make your heart ache to observe the idiot gaze with which he started at his old friends and playmates.

This is a true history of one who was bent upon "having his own way." O, my young friends, take warning from the sad fate of Henry Hayden. We know not the dreadful sufferings he has felt. Perhaps these parents, worn out with grief which gnawed upon their hearts, have left their idiot son to the cruel persecution of an unfeeling world. Perhaps he is now wandering from village to village, sleeping in barns and sheds, pelted by rude boys, and often asking in vain for a shelter from the piercing wind or driving storm. But if his parents live, who can estimate the bitterness of grief which fills their hearts?

O that all parents might avoid a share in their grief, by early forming in their children a habit of prompt obedience.

A FRIEND TO THE YOUNG.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... FEBRUARY 5, 1840.

PATRONISING NEWSPAPERS.—The following from the Pittsburgh Conference Journal, is true, to the life. Read it:—

"The way some people patronise papers is a sin. They receive it for two, three or four years, without paying for it.—Then the editor, through the postmaster, receives the heart-cheering intelligence that 'Mr. A. B. refuses to take his paper any longer, and that it lies dead in the office.' Well, he has the consolation of knowing that one bad subscriber is gone. Another, 'Mr. C. D. who receives his paper at this office, has removed from these parts. You had better stop his paper.'—Pity he forgot to send us five dollars before he started. Yet another—'Your paper sent to E. F. is not taken out of this office. Reason, deceased.' Hope he has gone to heaven,—forgive him the debt.—Thus goes the business of patronising papers to death. Thus, we have no doubt, died at premature age, the Conference and Family Recorder, with its four thousand patrons and upwards. What wonder if its ghost should haunt the bed chambers of some of those friends who have killed it with their kindness.

The moral in all this is, 'let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.' The Pittsburgh Conference Journal yet stands, we think, but unless it gets something more to stand on, ere long, it will go the way of all the earth."

RUFFIANISM IN CONGRESS.—Nobody can deny that the Federal House of Representatives is a very disorderly body. It is less so than the British House of Commons, and generally less so than the French Chamber of Deputies. But it is too much so for public good, and infinitely more so than is becoming in a legislative body, representing a people professing to be among the most enlightened in the world. The House now daily behave as they would not dare to behave in a drawing room, at a public dinner, or in a social circle. They seem to consider the House as ground upon which they are absolved from all restraints, and where it is not disgraceful to exhibit the ruffian. The very men who, like Stanley and Bynum, will revile each other in a legislative debate, till the vocabulary of abuse be exhausted, or who, like Tierney and Bell, will deal blows like drunkards in a low tavern, will, in an evening social party, be as mild and subdued as young ladies, or as courteous and respectful as Lord Chesterfield or the Chevalier Bayard.—Who ever heard Mr. Wise rant and rave and call names, at one of the President's levees or dinners? Who ever heard him or Mr. Peyton threaten any body with assassination, in presence of ladies in a drawing room, as they did Mr. Whitney in presence of members of Congress in a committee room? Who ever saw these men approach the Speaker of the House in a parlor of the Secretary of State, for the purpose of committing an assault, as they are said to have approached Mr. Speaker Polk in the lobby of the Representatives' Chamber! Such men know that any exhibition of ill-breeding, of brutal feeling, of ruffian violence, in any such places, would entail upon them lasting disgrace, and forever exclude them from society. They know that society, which never fails to vindicate its laws, would accept no apology or excuse for such misconduct. This fear of punishment is a sufficient restraint, and their cautious observance of social laws and usages under this fear, proves that they can restrain their tempestuous passions, and pay due respect to themselves and to others.

Now if they can control a ruffian spirit in one place, they can in another. If they can behave like courteous gentlemen at balls and evening parties and diplomatic dinners, they can do so upon the floor of a legislative body. But why do they not! Simply because they find, for misbehavior in the latter, not only that impunity, but that direct encouragement, of which they have no hope in the former. They find that impunity, because the body to which they belong does not punish their misconduct; and they find encouragement, because the members of the body who agree with the offender in partizan politics, sustain or applaud him, and because every press of the same party sends praises for his misconduct to every part of the country. Like causes produce like effects; and therefore if punishment will restrain intemperate passions in one place, so will it in another; and if impunity and applause will render a member of Congress a bully on the legislative floor, they would render him one in the social circle. Hence for the brutality, the ruffianism, the scandalous scenes by which members of Congress disgrace themselves and their country on the legislative floor, the press, and Congress as a body, are responsible. To show the extent of this impunity, let us refer to the case of Bell and Tierney. In reply to some rude and insolent expression of Mr. Bell, Mr. Tierney committed the outrage of giving him the lie; and to this Mr. Bell rejoined by the outrage of a blow! For a few minutes, the House exhibited a scene of noise and violence that might be expected from a gang of our choice spirits, quarrelling over their whiskey in some low tavern at the Five Points. Order being restored, some member, we believe it was Mr. Mercer, begged the gentlemen (!!!) to be reconciled, and not to proceed to any painful extremity!! In other words, he requested that after having insulted the country, by dealing in vulgar epithets and ruffian blows, in its halls of public business, they would not outrage morals, religion and the laws, by attempting to cut each other's throats in a duel! We could almost say, in the words of a satyrical song upon two London bullies,

"If either or if both be shot,
Pray, who the  cares?"

And while a member of the House was thus interceding between two ruffians, the partizan presses, throughout the country, were giving partial accounts of it according to their several political predilections; each applauding the ruffian of his own side, and condemning the other, not for his outrage upon decency, the proprieties of the place and the dignity of the nation, but for his political views of the subject in debate.

In this case, the duty of Mr. Mercer, (for, he, if we recollect rightly, interposed as mediator,) was obvious. He, or any other member, should have presented, upon the spot, four resolutions; one to censure Mr. Bell for his insolent remark to Mr. Tierney; another, to expel Mr. Tierney for giving the lie to Mr. Bell; a third, to expel Mr. Bell for striking Mr. Tierney; a fourth to appoint a committee to attend the Sergeant-at-Arms in conducting the offenders out of the hall. And these resolutions should have been adopted at once, without any debate. But besides this, the press, of all parties, should have united in condemning both, insisting, as a fundamental principle, that nothing should excuse an exhibition of ruffian violence, either in speech or action. in a legislative body.

We shall resume the subject.—Brother Jonathan.

A late voyager gives the following description of the North Cape, the most northern land in Europe, where the sun never sets.

"The North Cape is an enormous rock which projecting far into the ocean, and, being exposed to all the fury of the waves and the outrage of tempests, crumbles every year more and more into ruins. Here every thing is solitary, every thing is sterile, very sad and despondent. The shadowy forest no longer adorns the brow of the mountain; the singing of the birds, which enliven even the woods of Lapland is no longer heard in this scene of desolation; the ruggedness of the dark grey rock is not covered by a single shrub; the only music is the hoarse murmuring of the waves, ever and anon renewing their assaults on the huge masses that oppose them. The northern sun creeping at midnight at the distance of five diameters along the horizan, and the immeasurable ocean in apparent contact with the skies, form the grand outlines in the sublime picture presented to the astonished spectator. The incessant cares and pursuits of anxious mortals are recollected as a dream; the various forms and energies of animated nature are forgotten; the earth is contemplated only in its elements and as constituting a part of the solar system."

Sudden Death.—Don Antonio Pomer, Spanish Consul for the port of Norfolk, fell dead on the floor of his lodgings, in a fit of apoplexy. The moment before, he was in apparent good health.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

SENATE.

January 15.

The Sub-Treasury.—The Sub-Treasury bill being again under consideration,

Mr. Benton moved to strike out those parts of the bill which authorised the reception by Government, as money, of such notes as would be allowed by law to be received, and spoke at great length in favor of the amendment, and of the exclusive metallic currency.

Mr. Wright said he thought it his duty to notice this motion to amend the bill, that the Senate might understand its effect. For himself, he did not consider it of the least possible importance to retain the words which were proposed to be stricken out. They were intended as a rule, requiring the Treasury to receive such paper as was issued by and under the responsibility of this Government. The bill, as it was now, would come into operation on the first of July next; on the thirtieth of June next the last Treasury note, issued on the authority of Congress for the last two sessions, would become redeemable, so that Mr. W. was not aware that, when the bill would come into operation, one dollar of Government paper would be afloat. But, supposing Congress at any future time should pass laws making paper receivable, it must be then receivable, by such laws, or this clause would not make it so. There was no objection, therefore to the striking out the words, and yet there could be no great practical mischief in retaining them. It was of little consequence either way.

Mr. Clay, of Kentucky. I would ask the gentleman from New York what is his understanding of the operation of the bill in a case of this kind: The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States issues a warrant in the course of his disbursements on the receiver-general at New York, and the holder of the warrant is perhaps in Philadelphia, or Boston, or Charleston, or N. Orleans, would he not be authorised with the bill or warrant to make payment of his dues on importations at the custom house where he happens to be, or must he go to New York to the receiver-general to dispose of his warrant?

Mr. Wright. I do not suppose the amendment or the bill, as it is now, would effect that matter at all. They now take such warrants at the Treasury, or in any part of the country.

Mr. Clay. Then I understand the construction of the bill by the chairman to be, that, the Collector at Charleston or elsewhere to whom a warrant is tendered drawn on New York, while he is not compelled to receive it, yet is not prohibited from receiving it by this bill in either form.

Mr. Wright. Precisely so.

Mr. Benton. I believe I shall have a unanimous vote on striking out, Opposition and all: and, that such an event may appear on the record, I call for the yeas and nays on the question; which were accordingly ordered.

Mr. Norvell. In voting in favor of this motion, I wish it to be understood that under no circumstances will I allow that this Government can issue Treasury notes or other paper money to meet any exigency whatever.

Mr. Calhoun. There can be no question on that point; Treasury paper, of some kind, will be sometimes indispensable.

Mr. Walker. I vote for the motion not only with a view to consummate the divorce of Government from the paper of the States, but from the whole paper system. At a canvass in my own State, this part of the bill now proposed to be stricken out was appealed to by the opposers of the Independent Treasury Bill, as containing the seeds of a Government Bank; and it was alleged that these very lines were placed there with a view to the establishment of such a system. Sir, I wish the Bill wholly cut off from any such objection, and let it show that we are not only against the paper of the States, but of the General Government.

Mr. Clay, of Ky. I would give my vote on the yeas and nays to accommodate almost any body. But if the object now is to prevent the issue of all paper by Federal authority, and the establishment of a Government bank, there must be a great many more things done than this striking out; two things more at least; that is, sundry other amendments must be made, and the bill must declare that no future Congress shall authorise the issue or the receipt of paper money in the country. If the object is, as the Senator last up has stated it, there should be a prohibitory clause to that effect.

But the case I will now put is this. A man comes to Washington and gets a $500 Treasury warrant, which he wishes to transfer to A, B, or C. and he does so transfer it, say to the hands of a merchant at Charleston. And there what is its value? It is there worth just as much more in specie as the difference in exchange; and if that is one per cent., the warrant is worth one per cent. more than the specie. Can there be a doubt that the collector would receive it? Or, take the opposite side of the Union, and suppose a Treasury warrant drawn on New York is transferred to Boston.—There it is at par. At one place a Treasury warrant on New York commands a premium, at another it is at par, and it is now here below par. Now if you want to prevent the issue and use of such paper, you must, at least, do the two things which I stated: first prohibit such issue and use, and then you must insert a clause declaring that no future Congress shall vary from the requisition of the bill in this respect.

Mr. Calhoun was understood to say that he was in favor of striking out, simply with a view to prevent the re-establishing of bank paper in our system.—But as to an entire prohibition of Government credit, it would be sure to cause a return to the use of bank paper in our system: and if any gentleman was in favor of such prohibition, let him make a direct proposition to that effect, and Mr. C. would venture to say that he would not get five votes in the Senate in its favor.

Mr. Henderson said he should vote against striking out, and proceeded to assign his reasons, but was not distinctly heard by the reporter.

Mr. Allen. This bill itself will be an act of Congress when it is signed, and no more force than any future act of Congress. I have, therefore, risen solely to say that this Congress has not the power of binding any future Congress whatever.

Mr. Clay. The Senator from Ohio has not heretofore remarked me as saying this Congress has the power of binding a future Congress. Sir, I believe there is a Government bank lurking in this bill. Gentleman say no: we do not mean to have a Government bank; we will have nothing but specie. So the Senator from Missouri moves to strike out but a certain clause inserted by his friend from South Carolina, Mr. Calhoun, which admitted the receipt of paper of certain kinds. And I say, the gentlemen will not accomplish their purpose by this alone, if they would have nothing but specie. The paper will be out. Supposing payment is to be made for land; it is your purpose to prevent the drawing out of specie by means of Government paper? Sir, I stated an impossible case (binding a future Congress) to show that either that which is impossible must be done, or this may lead to a Government bank. Gentlemen may make their own bed as they please, but they will find thorns and thistles enough in it when they come to lie down. I understand the Senator from South Carolina, though he had yielded to the striking out, now objects both to the striking out, and to the insertion of a clause prohibitory on any future Congress. [So the Reporter understood Mr. C——, but heard him indistinctly.] Sir, if this bill is simply a hard money bill, and there is to be no Government bank—but (striking the bill with emphasis) there's the bank!

Mr. Calhoun. I prefer to raise funds by Treasury notes for the purpose of a loan; and I shall hereafter be against any other kind of loan, because a loan in bank paper is among the greatest of frauds, and I shall ever oppose it. If we must use credit, let that credit be our own. But what I wished to assert, and I now repeat it, is, that paper, for large transactions, has a superiority over gold and silver, and the man who would abolish the use of it would, in the most direct possible mode, bring us again to the use of bank paper. Sir, extremes often meet, and they do here; and I, as an honest and sincere friend of the divorce, would not tie up this body against the use of Government credit. Sir, I have seen this Government borrow bank paper, and I have seen it dishonored by those very banks refusing Government paper. I hope it will be now understood why I vote for this striking out, and if gentlemen mean that we are never to use government credit, I wish they would submit that proposition in terms, and see what will come of it.

Mr. Clay, of Kentucky. I will not embark on the subject of the tariff except so far as I must that I may not be misunderstood. But I would call the attention of the Senate to the different positions of the friends of the bill. Some of them are against all paper; they would as soon have the hydrophobia. Another (the Senator from South Carolina) would have paper, but, then, it must be his paper, that is, a Government paper. Still, he would use a certain measure of paper.—That is the situation of the friends of this bill; and, sir, I will tell you what will come. Before the Congress terminates, these gentlemen will have the opportunity of showing their attachment or their aversion to the Federal paper system; for I have no doubt that the Secretary of the Treasury, long before this session is over will have in a proposition for Treasury paper. He has already hinted it in a manner sufficiently intelligible, especially taking into view the manner used in expressing himself, by the head of the Treasury, whose perspicuity is known so well every where in the public and political world.

Friday January 17, 1840.

The sub-Treasury bill was then ordered to be engrossed by yeas and nays as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Allen, Benton, Buchanan, Brown, Calhoun, Clay, of Ala. Cuthbert, Fulton, Grundy, Hubbard, King, Linn, Lumpkin, Mouton, Norvell, Pierce, Roane, Sevier, Smith, of Conn. Strange, Tappan, Walker, Williams, Wright—24.

Nays—Messrs. Betts, Clay, of Ky. Clayton, Crittenden, Davis, Dixon, Henderson, Knight, Merrick, Nicholas, Phelps, Prentiss, Preston, Robinson, Ruggles, Smith of Ind. White, Young—18.

The Senate then adjourned till Monday.

From the Washington Correspondence of Bicknell's Reporter.

Washington City, Jan. 11, 1840.

Every thing goes on by very tardy degrees in this political city. Every thing is attempted, and nothing effected. It cannot be alleged with any degree of propriety, that there is any want of industry in those who compose the National Council. On the contrary, they are the most industrious beings in existence; but it is undoubtedly a fact, that the very industry they exercise, leads to the retardation of business.

There are but few members of Congress, who would not get up at midnight, and go to the Capitol, and make a speech, if he were allowed to do so, and there could be found a single soul who would listen to him. It is this fondness for talking rather than speaking, that leads to the principal embarrassments of the day, and prevents the free operation of business.

On Wednesday last, Mr. Campbell, of South Carolina, Chairman of the Committee on Elections, simply moved, that the evidence in the New Jersey case should be referred to his committee. This was absolutely necessary, for the case is in the hands of that committee; but Mr. Campbell had scarcely mentioned his resolution, before a debate sprung up—no it was not a debate, it was a speech-making mania—which is yet on hand, and if it be not stopped to-day, it may be kept up for a fortnight to come.

During the mania of speechification, the New Jersey case, which ought not to have been approached at all, before the Committee on Elections had reported, has been revived again and again. and trundled on and trundled on, till every one, except the Speaker, has been utterly outraged and insulted, fatigued, worn out, with the most common-place Parliamentary twaddle.

In the meantime, the Senate, as if this speech-making mania were contagious, has had up a bill for the armed occupation of Florida, on its third and last reading.

The bill passed its second reading, and was ordered to be engrossed, before any man thought of seriously attacking it; but Col. Preston, of South Carolina, at last made up his mind that he had better make a speech, on some subject, and as the Armed Occupation Bill was the only thing on which he could hook his design, he seized upon it, and made a most eloquent and effective harangue.

The door thus opened, a speech thus made, was the signal for a general attack. The floodgate of speechification was raised, and since Wednesday, the Armed Occupation Bill, has been the professed theme of discussion for the Senate. The bill will assuredly pass the Senate, and by a very decisive vote, if indeed it be not unanimously adopted. It proposes to give to any man who will settle in Florida, 320 acres of land, free of taxation, forever, who will arm himself and enroll himself, subject to the orders of the Secretary of War, and locate himself in that part of Florida which has so long been the scene of the Seminolean war.

Of the merits or demerits of this bill, I shall say but little; but it does appear to me, that there is something peculiarly horrible in the idea of settling a body of armed butchers in Florida, for the express determination of exterminating a race of Indians, who in the war they wage, fight for nothing but their altars and their gods.

What right have we to the domain of the Indian?—what right have we to attempt to drive him from his home and all that he holds sacred, or to visit him with our eternal vengeance, if he refuses to move?

The Senate has not been in session today. In the House, the New Jersey contested election was the order of the day; or rather it was the standing bore of the day.

Messrs. Clifford, of Maine, and M. Cooper, of Pennsylvania, made speeches at it, and before Mr. Cooper had closed, or got within a mile of a close, the House adjourned.

There is nothing very new in the city; nothing of the least consequence, that I hear of. Yours, &c.

Washington, Jan. 15, 1840.

The business of Congress progresses slowly; indeed I do not know that it can be said to move at all. Monday was frittered away in an idle debate about abolition petitions, and yet, after all, nothing has been effected, So we go on, from bad to worse, from worse to "worser;" and when and how this state of things will end, it is impossible to conjecture.

On Monday, however, the House did get rid of Mr. Campbell's resolution, to refer the decision of the New Jersey contested election to the Committee on Elections; and thus was that most wretched bore put to rest, at least for a season.—The whole subject, being now before the Committee on Elections, it is to be hoped it will rest there, till that committee shall make its report. It will probably report, that it cannot arrive at any definite conclusion, and recommend that the whole subject be referred to the people of New Jersey, to be decided by a new election.

In the Senate, on Monday, the Hon. H. L. White, from Tennessee, presented the resolutions of the Legislature of his State instructing him to vote for the Sub-Treasury Bill. This the Judge refused to do, and forthwith resigned his seat.

In the House, yesterday, part of the day was taken up in discussing a motion to amend the Journal by inserting that Mr. Lincoln did not raise the district question of reception, on the presentation of an abolition petition!! after which, the report of the Select Committee on the Rules of the House, was taken up and adopted.

The Previous Question, that great terror to a long-winded speaker, was amended so as to make it apply to the amendments proposed to propositions, as well as to the proposition itself. Parliamentarians will understand me; others will not, and could not be made to, if I took a week by way of explanation.

FOREIGN NEWS.

By the packet ship Quebec, Captain Hebard, arrived yesterday morning from London, via Portsmouth, we have received the Portsmouth Gazette, of Dec. 17th, and the London Morning Herald of the 16th. Captain Hebard sailed from Portsmouth on the 17th.

The papers speak as though apprehensions were entertained of a powerful and desperate attempt to rescue the Chartist prisoners on trial at Monmouth. The Standard suggests the propriety of removing the indictments into the Court of Queen's Bench, and holding the trial at Westminister Hall. The Herald says that Vincent's Chartist paper, the Vindicator, has openly advised the assassination of witnesses, in order to prevent a conviction of the prisoners.

The British government is said to have determined on granting a pension of £2000 to Lord Seaton—Sir John Colborne.

The latest gossip about the Queen's marriage is that it will take place early in February. Her Majesty is said to keep herself very close during the absence of her intended, confining her exercise to promenading on the terrace of Windsor Castle.

The papers now say positively that Lord Palmerston and a dowager Countess Cowper are to make a match of it, but the day was kept secret.

The Thames Tunnel is advancing toward completion at the rate of 8 feet per week.

The indictment against the Newport Chartists fills two columns and a half of the London Herald—close type and wide columns.

The Paris papers again say that Marshal Valee has been dismissed from the chief command in Africa, and that it has been given to General Fiezel. The French advices, however, are not so late as we have had direct.

The dispute between the King of Hanover and his subjects seems drawing to a crisis. A report being in circulation that the King would dissolve the Assembly of of the Estates, several towns have resolved not to elect deputies to a new Assembly, and among the towns so resolving is Hanover itself, the capitol.

COMMUNICATION.

Selected for the Western Recorder, by a Friend.

THE YOUNG PREACHER.

It was late in the summer of 18—, that I made a tour on horseback for purposes of health and curiosity, through one of the most beautiful portions of New England. It was a delightful trip that over the forest-clad hills and life-thriving vallies of the puritans, and endowed with pleasurable incidents which time cannot easily efface from the page of memory. I have torn the following leaf from my record book, for the purpose of obliging a friend (the worthy editor of the Methodist Protestant,) as well as furnishing matter for that class of readers, who peruse that valuable paper under his charge. Henceforth it is no longer my own—I have let it go from me to create in other men's minds pleasure or disgust, praise or censure.

The sun was just sinking in the west at the close of a most charming day in August, as my horse cantered slowly on through the beautiful suburbs of ——— city. It was Saturday, and as I had long before made it a principle to rest on the Sabbath, unless torn away by the stern hand of compulsion, I ordered my horse stabled at the city hotel, and retired to the chamber appropriated to my use by the landlord, there to prepare myself by reflection and prayer, for the reception of the coming Lord's day. The morning broke—and surely a more lovely day was never dreamed of in the visions of poesy. Every thing was calmly beautifully accordant with the spirit of the day. Breakfast over, I sauntered forth into the woods in the vicinity, to pass away the season until church time, in holy meditation on the works of God.

At length the hour of preaching arrived and I retraced my steps to the city; upon entering the principle street, I found it thronged by a vast multitude whose steps were all tending hurriedly in one direction. The conversation of the crowd soon informed me that the Rev. Mr. ——— would preach in the Methodist Episcopal Church at the hour of morning service. Although personally identified with no denomination of christians, I had been bred a Methodist and felt no small degree of pride, when I beheld the enlightened citizens of ——— moving forward in hundreds to hear the precepts of Divine wisdom from the lips of one of the most favored of that sect, to which those near and dear to me were attached in the bonds of membership, and at whose font I had been dedicated to my Maker. I joined myself to the throng and arrived at the house of worship; there a spectacle was presented by no means uncommon in the churches of our people; every window, and staircase, and isle, and lobby were crowded to excess. All hearts were beating in anxious expectation for the minister. Five minutes elapsed and he came not. The choir sang an anthem and the whole assembly relapsed into a state of breathless anticipation. At length a motion of many feet was heard in the front aisle, and every eye beaming with pleasure, followed the young minister as he passed onward. As he ascended the pulpit, humility set upon his full broad brow and scarcely had he reached the sacred platform, ere the person of the preacher was bowed in holy fervent prayer.

Reader, were you ever assembled with a vast crowd of different sexes and ages and conditions on a still summer Sabbath morning, waiting to hear the word of God dispensed by one of the gifted spirits of the earth, without feeling an emotion of mingled pride, pleasure and awe, which could never be imposed by regal pomp or splendor. In such moments how exalted appears our holy religion!—how solemn and impressive its institutes!—how sublime its duties!

The preacher arose,—dressed not in a robe of ample dark folds, nor in a richly embroidered toge. In the garb of a plain man, with unaffected modesty, the young ambassador of God stood forth. The hymn was read with that feeling which prompts propriety of manner and emphasis, and soon the deep solemn swell of "Old Hundred" rolled from a thousand tongues to heaven. By and bye, the last words of the song died away, and the appropriate and impassioned prayer succeeded. Time rolled on. The anthem was sung, and the young servant approached the desk. The whole assembly grew still as the grave. Every ear was attentively open for the reception of the text. At that moment the falling of a pin or the fanning of a zephyr might have been noticed. The text was slowly and emphatically pronounced: "It is appointed unto men once to die, but and after this, the judgment."

It would be idle to attempt here any thing like a description of what followed. I had dreamed, and heard, and read of eloquence, but never until that moment understood its practical force. His thoughts came forth at times like the gentle undisturbed flow of the meadow stream, and again as the leaping, rattling, roaring mountain torrent. The language was lofty and well adapted to the sublimity of the theme. I knew not, until then, the force of that which Demosthenes styles action. Every expression of the person—the turn of the eye—the raising of the finger had an effect which until felt could never have been conceived. He painted in vivid colors and with masterly power before his audience, the various varieties of death which were of God's appointment, and corroborated by the voice of history, and the observation of living, and then touched most eloquently upon the yet unrevealed, but not less certain day of judgment, which must finally appear. The whole house was carried away resistlessly. Such a description of the judgment! The scene was before us in all its terrific sublimity. Never can I forget the effect which was every where visible over the house. The face of the christian beamed with exultation, while the sinner trembling and hung his guilty head in fear and stupefaction.

The description of the last day had been completed, and the orator next adverted to that preparation which was essential to meet these great and serious events. Many a heart-searching appeal was made to the transgressor on that occasion which will be remembered on a death-bed. The brow of the minister became flushed as he proceeded. The weight of his responsibility rested heavily. "My God!" he exclaimed in an agony of emotion, "I have called upon this people in thy name to repent and believe that they might live. Have they repented? Do they believe? Shall I meet them at the last day ready to pass with me into thy kingdom of glory to go no more out forever!" Me thought I heard the response of a thousand hearts, as a part of the congregation came forward uninvited and hung over the altar. Above the sobs and groans and shrieks of the prostrate, the voice of the minister was heard encouraging the convicted and calling upon parents and friends to lift their hearts in prayer to the Almighty, for a gracious out pouring of his spirit. "Mothers," he cried with energetic ardor, "pray for your offspring—for the church. The prayer of the righteous availeth much. The Bible has declared it, and blessed be God, I can bear testimony to it this day.

The preacher for a moment, wiped a few tears from his eyes and proceeded. Thirty years have swept down the tide of time since solitude held the place of this vast and populous city. It was the stirless hush of the midnight hour. From the lattice window of a neat little cottage, which held the very site of the church in which I speak leaned the pale interesting face of a girl in her teens. The rich moon spreading its mantle of sheen over the tops of the highest mountains, and in the laps of the lowest vallies, was holding with nature deep and silent communion. The invisible spirits of the departed wandered over deeply cherished scenes, or stood by the couch of some dear friend or relative. The fair form of the living moved not, save when her eyes gleamed with fitful anxiety towards an opening in the dense forest which skirted the meadow land. At length a deep shadow fell athwart the path. A step is heard, and suddenly the staggering form of a man breaks full upon the view. The whole scene appears to be startled at the intrusion.—The moon seems to shine less sweetly, and the stars to glisten less brightly in the distant horizon. He is slowly approaching the door. List, what mutterings break the deep silence around? "Aha! aha! 20,000! 20,000! one pocket emp—Aha! lost last night! Now I—" What means that flash from the dim woods edge? A pistol sings upon the air—whiz—whiz,—in an instant the words of the man are stopped in his throat, and he falls like lead upon the earth which he has polluted! A loud shriek bursts wildly from the cottage. All is still again—but it is that which reposes in the arms of horror! * * * * The middle watch of the night has again rolled on—the moon rides high, and the stars are twinkling through the bright serene. Silence is again upon her throne. The light of a lamp glows faintly through the lattice. The stillness of the night is unbroken save by the sleepy ticking of an old family clock in one corner of the apartment, and the heavy breathing of an invalid stretched out upon a pallet in another. By the bedside sits an old man with his hand on the pendant wrist of the pale sleeper, buried in deep thought. By the foot, watches the form of a sister. An hour goes by—the glazing eyes are once more unsealed and wonder restlessly about the apartment. The time has come; she is sinking fast. List! her lips move,—suddenly the sister glides out of the room and returns with a babe in her arms. With one hand the dying mother presses the unconscious child to her breast, while the other rests gently upon its little head. Her eyes are lifted in prayer,—she speaks! "O Father of Heaven! thou hast seen fit in thy goodness to leave this thy gift in its infancy alone and parentless—yet not alone, for thou hast—Oh God of Heaven! my breath fails me! I have but one prayer, grant! oh grant! that he may live to preach Christ and Him crucified to wicked men—may his voice be gifted ——" Why so still? The silver cord is loosed—the golden bowl is broken—the pitcher broken at the fountain—the wheel broken at the cistern.—Another day. The hour of the funeral has arrived. They are coming over the meadow and through the wood, to perform the last act of kindness to deceased humanity. The procession winds its way over the fields to the quiet village burial ground. To open graves are committed the bodies of the dead. "Dust to dust," says the preacher, "and ashes to ashes."

But where now is the infant boy? Through the changes of many years his life has been spared. The prayer of the mother has been answered and he is now to be found a watchman on the high walls of Zion, calling upon men to repent and live. You, my friends, who have unwittingly wandered often in your daily walk over the grave of his mother, have heard from your pulpits the son of a gambler. He has warned you to shun the sin which is in the world, and flee for your own—for mercy's sake, the wrath which must burst upon the finally impenitent at the last day. Lo! he is before you now! Mothers, will you not trust the promises—will you not bear your children to Heaven, in strong, faithful, wrestling prayer.

As the truth burst upon the assembled multitude, every eye was wet with weeping, and many sobbed and wept aloud. "Let us pray," said the preacher, and the congregation fell upon their knees. While the prayer was assending, one and other gave evidence, from the throng at the altar, of the power of God in the salvation of sinners. A revival broke out on that morning, spreading through every denomination in the city, which cannot soon be forgotten. The minister lingered with them for a few days and then departed. But the good work still progressed long after he had gone from their midst, and long, very long, will the inhabitants of ———, have cause to remember in the purest affection the Young Preacher, whose sphere of usefulness is now widening and brightening in the land of Juggernaut and the Ganges.—Met. Protestant, October 21, 1837.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

EDNESDAY, ... FEBRUARY 5, 1840.

A quarterly meeting will be held, for the New- circuit, on the 22d and 23d instant, at the thlehem Chapel, eight miles west of Zanes- e, in the neighborhood of Joseph Thrap. Min- erial and other help is solicited.

Most Ohio paper is quoted in Philadelphia at r per cent. discount; in New York from 12½ 15.

A fire occurred on the 17th ult. in Wilming- , N. C., which consumed about 150 buildings, d destroyed property, it is thought, to the a- unt of $500,000.

The Whig Indiana State Convention was held the 16th ultimo. The Bloomington Post, of e 24th says, the number present was estimated twenty-two hundred; 1200 of whom were del- ates. The Hon. Samuel Bigger was nomina- for Governor, and Samuel Hall for Lieuten- t Governor.

HARRISONIAN.—We have seen the two first mbers of this paper, which is published in this ace, by Gemmill Arthur, under the supervision the Whig Central Committee, "on a medium eet weekly, at one dollar, until after the pres- ential election." Of course it is designed to tain the claims of Gen. Harrison, for the sidency.

The Post Master General has decided that Post Master may enclose the subscription of a ird person, and FRANK the letter, if it be writ- n by himself. If he see the letter and knows relates to nothing else, is the same thing.

As the present post office law is such an un- hteous taxation upon literature and the press, e have requested our friends to avail themselves this privilege, on our behalf, and a number of em have done so. And we thank both them d those Post Masters who have had the kind- ess to lend us their aid.

We will commence with the next No. crediting ose names, who forward to us new subscribers. Who will send us the most? He who will for- ard us the most cash for new subscribers, we ill present him with complete files of three vol- mes of the Methodist Correspondent, 3d, 4th nd 6th.

We can no longer furnish complete files of ack numbers of the Western Recorder, but we ave some ten or twelve, including all the min- ates of the Western Conferences. Any person who will pay for one year in advance, from our 17th number, shall receive all the back numbers e have on hand gratis, if he will inform us he wants them.

ZANESVILLE.—Wheat 50 cents; Flour $3 00; Pork, by our neighbors, is quoted at 3 a 3 50, but we know it to be a fact, that good pork has been selling for a number of weeks past at 5 a 5 50, for domestic use.

NEW YORK.—Flour 6 37 a 6 50, but small quantity on hand. Small sales for shipment to the West Indies. Beef on foot, on an average, 7 27.—Bro: Jonathan, 25th ultimo.

PHILADELPHIA—During the week there has been a good demand for Flour, at an advance of 12½ cents per bbl on last week's prices: Sales of 5 a 6000 bbls for export at 5 75 per bbl: The demand for home use has been fair at the same price; for common to fair brands extra 5 87½: The market closes firm: Beef on foot 6 a 8 00 per 100 lbs as per quality—Bicknell, 21st ult.

BALTIMORE—Flour 5 50 a 5 75, price receding: Beef on foot, in lots, at 5 a 7 75, according to quality: Live Hogs at 6 75 a 7 00; slaughtered 6 00 per 100 lbs—demand limited—Luford, 25th ultimo.

PITTSBURGH—Flour from wagons, 3 a 3 12; stores 3 25 a 3 50: Clover seed from wagons, 5 a 5 50—Harris, 25th ult.

Our Banks, in this town, have recently refused to take, on deposit, notes on the State Bank of Illinois, owing, they say, to the fact that there is a bill got up before the Legislature of that State to repeal its charter. The notes pass in the ordinary business of the place.

Our printing office is five and a half miles west of Zanesville. It is situated beside the Thornville road, on the bank of a pleasant stream. On the south it is bordered by a large grove of timber, which being elevated on a considerable bank, wards off the scorching beams of the midsummer sun, so as to make it a very comfortable place in the hot and sultry weather of July and August. In the front, to the north, passing from west to east, is as beautiful and as productive a valley of meadow and arible land as our country affords, under a good state of cultivation.

In May of 1806 was about the first time we set our foot on this soil, which has since been our residence. It was in company with Asa, a son of the late Jonathan Zane, of Wheeling, Va. The country was then nearly all forest. Our object was to procure some venison by watching the deer-licks. We took our own station at one about eighty rods from our present residence, and had not long been seated before some six or eight fine looking deer made their appearance, walking cautiously and leisurely down to the lick to regale their thirst. But our old worthless fire lock, though we made some ten or fifteen attempts, would not discharge at them,—so they walked off unhurt.

From that time until lately there has always been a portion of deer in the surrounding woods, notwithstanding it is so thickly settled in this neighborhood, that there would probably average from three to four families to every square half mile. Every winter until this we have frequently seen them gamboling through our woods and fields,—often three or four at a time; and more or less have been killed in this vicinity.—But for several months past we have neither seen nor heard of one—not even the track of a straggler. The reader may be ready to inquire, what is the cause of this? Have they taken the alarm because the press has so unceremoniously introduced itself into the forest? The true reason is, a lot of vacant land, laying beside us, thickly grown up with under brush, since the burning of the woods has ceased, has become occupied and partly cleared, so they have no asylum here and have gone elsewhere to seek one.

Another of the Lexington's crew, Mr. David Crawley, second mate, has been saved. He floated to shore on a bale of cottor., after an exposure of forty-eight hours to the severity of the weather. He had to make his way over the shore ice, swimming once before he reached the beach, and then walked three-fourths of a mile to a house.—His hands, feet and legs were considerably frozen. Some eight or ten bodies have been picked up. It is said $15,000 were found on the body of Mr. Wm. A. Green.

An inquest, at our last dates, was making into the affair of the Lexington, from which we would infer there was no deficiency on the part of the boat or her management.

To give the reader some idea of the distressing scene we will give the testimony of Capt. Chester Hilliard before the court of inquest, who was one picked off a bale of cotton the next day.

Captain Chester Hilliard sworn. He was born in Norwich, Conn., follows the sea, is 24 years old. Have been in Fort Ann, two years, in a woollen manufactory; then went to sea with Captain McLellan, in the employ of Rowland & Aspinwall, who now belongs to New Orleans, and went also into the employment of Captain Collins. Went before the mast. Have been five voyages and three years in that capacity. I went third mate of the Sheridan, Captain Russell, one voyage—afterwards second mate of the ship Mississippi, Captain Davis, and then first mate in one voyage to Havre, another to New Orleans, from which place I brought her home on the death of the captain and made another voyage.

I took passage in the Lexington on Monday, Jan. 13, for Stonington, to go to Norwich. Have no family—have two brothers and three sisters. My father was a seaman. Went on board at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Did not ascertain the number of passengers—thought at the table there were 150; but now think that estimate too large. Paid no particular attention to the stowage of the cargo. The bulk of the cargo was cotton. It was stowed under the promenade deck. Between the wheelhouse and covering of the engine, cotton was stowed I think against the wheelhouse. Three or four baggage cars on the forecastle. The life boat was forward of wheelhouse on the starboard side—on promenade deck—it was covered with canvass. I saw the two quarter boats hanging on the davits, and cleared away. We took supper about 6 o'clock. There were two tables set, each about half the length of the cabin, and were full. Some had to wait.—The boat went at the rate of 12 or 14 miles. The tables had been cleared an hour when the alarm was given that the boat was on fire. I did not know Captain Childs. I was then about turning in, had my coat and boots off—my berth not far from the companion-way on the starboard side—three berths distant.—Apprehended nothing serious, but put on my boots, coat and hat—took my overcoat on my arm. When I got on deck, I discovered the casing of smokepipe on fire, and think it had reached the promenade deck. The flames led aft, the casing was pretty well on fire. Thought it might have been extinguised. Cannot say whether the fire was below the main deck. Supposed the crew were at work with the fire engine. I should think that the buckets had not been used. I saw buckets, but can't say how many. The passengers had made a rush to the quarter boats, and filled them. They seemed determined to destroy themselves and their only means of safety. I repaired to the starboard boat, which they were lowering, until it touched water, and some one must have cut the tackle. It could not have been unhooked. She was filled and swamped. She was full—about twenty in her.

The other boat went down disengaged, in pretty much the same way; she was also full. By that time the fire had made such headway, that I thought it a case—thought the best thing was to run the boat ashore, and run up to find the captain; found him at the wheel house, and gave him that advice. The boat was already heading for the land. The fire had begun to ascend from the promenade deck, and had filled the wheel house.—There were two or three persons on the promenade deck, near the wheel house. My attention was turned to the life boat, and I observed she would soon be burnt. She was lowered and I assisted in pulling off the tarpaulin covering that was then spread over the life boat; determined I would not go in her, being satisfied she would share the fate of the other boats. They were lowering her when I left the promenade deck, and I did not see what became of her; went down the main deck aft; they were apparently unscrewing the hose of the engine; could scarcely see for the smoke—and should think the communication between fore and aft was then cut off. This was about 20 minutes from the time of the alarm.—The engine stopped about 15 minutes after that time. I then recommended the people around me to throw the cotton overboard. They threw 10 or 12 bales over; I told them they had got to do something for themselves pretty soon, and advised them to take the cotton bales.—Nearly all the cotton not on fire was thrown over. I then cut off a piece of line lying near, 6 fathoms long, and spanned a bale of cotton, which was square shaped, about four feet long, and two and a half wide. One of the hands assisted; we passed the rope thus attached to the bale, round a capstan, and getting on to the bale, we lowered the bale and ourselves into the water, by means of the rope. The boat was broadside to the wind, and they under the lee. We sat upon the cotton facing each other. The bale was about a third out of water, with both of us on it; the tide was strong.—The rope was coiled and laid away on the top of the bale. My companion did not like to get away from the boat. I determined to get from the boat before I was burnt to death—accordingly shoved the bale away from the stern, and the boat drifted about a knot and a half from us. This was about 8 o'clock; we brought away a piece of board. We had to keep the end of the bale to windward, when the fire was raging.

Saw a lady on the boat, one of her children was overboard; we passed the child so near I could have put my hand on it—it laid on its back—the mother cried out to us to save it. In ten minutes after we had left the boat saw no body on board but those on the forecastle. The child was dead—I judged it was a female child. Can't recollect the dress of the lady. It was as much as I could do to keep on the bale. The water washing up, would wet my waist. We were in sight of the boat till she went down, which was at 3 o'clock. We were a mile distant at the time. When we left the boat it was cloudy. The moon went down at 4 o'clock. I looked at my watch every half hour. It was so cold I had to make efforts to keep myself warm, by whipping my arms, &c. About four o'clock the bale capsized with us, in consequence of a heavy sea—it went over endways, and the other side came up top. We both managed to get on again. We lost the piece of board, and had no command of the bale after that. My companion complained much of the cold at our first setting out; din'nt seem to have the spirit he ought to have—fretting himself about his situation, wife, friends, &c. His name was Cox, and lived at 71 Cherry street. He seemed to give up all hope—shortly after we left the boat, I gave him my waistcoat, he having only a flannel shirt, boots, cap, and pantaloons.

He was a fireman. After getting on to the bale again, he remained on it about 2½ hours. The last half hour he seemed stupid, and had lost the use of his hands. I rubbed and pounded him to get his blood in circulation. It was very rough, and I was obliged to hold on to the rope round the bale. It got broadside to the sea—gave a lurch—Cox fell off and sank without a struggle. I then got on to the middle of the bale, and continued there about an hour, when it became smoother, and I was able to sit upon it. Cox fell off about half-past 6 A. M. When I saw the vessel I waved my hat. The sloop was the Merchant, Capt. Meeker, of South Port, who went out for the purpose of rendering assistance, and did more good than any body else. I was not frozen, but very much chilled. The cargo of the Merchant was unloaded in the night to enable her to get over the bar. She got out about morning. I was picked up at 11 o'clock. They paid me every attention. They picked up two persons alive and two dead. Those alive were Capt. Manchester, who was picked up on a piece of the wheelhouse, and a Mr. Smith on a bale of cotton.

Capt. M. was first picked up. Both picked up within half an hour after I was. Capt. Manchester was pretty near gone. Smith was in about the same situation as myself—he was one of the firemen.—They were put in bed, and the boat, after cruising three hours longer and finding two dead bodies, returned to South Port. One of the bodies was on a piece of the wheel-house, and the other on a piece of wreck. I was taken on board the Nimrod, which was bound for Bridgeport.—Went ashore there to Capt. Davis', an old acquaintance, staid there that night, and took the boat for New York next morning at 8 o'clock.

Capt. Childs appeared confused when I saw him at the wheel-house, and made no other remark than merely to answer my question; and from not being seen afterwards, was probably suffocated there.

When I went down from the wheelhouse I saw men taking down buckets and passing them to the promenade deck. My impression was at that time, that the tiller ropes were burnt. I think there was a communication between fore and aft of the boat after life-boat was lowered off. The life boat was cleared off immediately after I left the wheel-house. It is my opinion now, and I may have expressed it to Captain Vanderbilt, that if the boat had been immediately stopt when I saw the fire, a few buckets of water would have extinguished it! The quarter boats could carry each 15 persons with safety.

The following is extracted from the testimony of Capt. Joseph J. Comstock, who was sent by the company owning the Lexington, in command of the steam boat Statesman, to the scene of distress, for the purpose of rendering every assistance possible.

I wrote to the agent, but the letters did not arrive till 24 hours after they should have done. We started at 3 o'clock, Friday, from Bridgeport, in the morning—landed at day break at Old Field Point, the thermometer from 3 to 4 degrees below zero, and ice making very fast. We had taken six more gentlemen on board to assist us, who had friends on board the Lexington. Henry Ide, James McKenna, J. A. Beecher, T. Donnelly, C. A. Homer and Samuel Yeaton, all of New York, I left these gentlemen and another on shore at Old Field Point, to collect the baggage, which was scattered for several miles, and directed them to leave it at the Light House. The child had drifted ashore during the night, and was found by my man Wm. Kennedy. I left Friday morning for the East. We exmanined the shore, and where the bays would not permit the steamer to land, we sent the boats, and traced the shore. Being seven miles east of the Light House, I learned that three bodies had been found in the quarter boat; employed a person to convey the bodies to the Light House at Old Field Point. I learned that a man was ashore alive 18 miles east, and 25 miles from the Lexington. I went there, searching the whole shore, finding large portions of the wreck, that portion containing the name of the vessel. The place where the man was found, was Fresh Pond Landing. There were quantities of drift ice, and shoal water. Much time was consumed in making our investigations, and we arrived at Fresh Pond at 4 o'clock, and we could not get on shore. We made signals, attracted some half-dozen people, forced the steamer through the ice near enough to learn that David Crawley, second mate, had got on shore Wednesday night, at 9 o'clock.

He stated to these people he had been forty-eight hours on a bale of cotton—worked through the ice, and walked three quarters of a mile to a house. His feet and legs were badly frozen, hands not much—bareheaded and in his shirt sleeves, and supposed himself the only man saved. I directed them to give him all the aid he might require. They said he was in the best of hands—I gave them directions to render the same assistance to any one else—to take up bodies and baggage and give information to New York papers. I then returned to old Field Point, took on board the bodies and baggage. At all these places I gave notice that rewards would be given for bodies and the detection of depredators. I was authorized to take such measures by the company. The ice prevented our landing and made it impossible to do any thing more. Found that desperadoes had committed depredation already, and measures were necessary to be taken to detect and prevent it. The baggage collected was taken on board and I gave receipt for it. There were thirty packages.—With all this and the bodies on board, I started for New York on Friday at 6 o'clock P. M. We were fifteen hours getting to New York and arrived at 9 o'clock, A. M., Saturday. One of the bodies was Mr. Waterbury. Two others appeared to be deck hands. Mr. Upson and the child.

I was well acquainted with the Lexington. She was a good boat, well adapted to the navigation of the Sound. Captain Childs was well qualified, had held the command of the boat for four years.

ITEMS.

An extensive bed of anthracite coal has been discovered in Yazoo Valley, Miss.

The present public debt of the city of Boston is estimated at one million six hundred thousand dollars.

We learn that the receipts of the late fair held at the Assembly Rooms for the benefit of the orphans of Richmond, are three thousand dollars.

NEWSPAPERS.—Out of thirteen thousand papers in the civilized world, upwards of 11,000 are issued in the United States.

HORSE'S MOTTO.—Down hill, spare me! up hill, indulge me! on the level, push me! in the stable, don't forget me.

Secrets are best kept at home. Women will reveal them the first opportunity, and men the first time it will subserve their interest.

The Boston Fire Department was called out 113 times in 1839. Destruction of property 140,000 dollars; insurance thereupon 89,000 dollars.

Riches are gotten with pain; kept with care and lost with grief. The cares of riches lie heavier upon a good man, than the inconvenience of an honest poverty.

The whole population of South Carolina, according to the census just completed, is two hundred and fifty-seven thousand one hundred and seventeen.

HORRIBLE.—Parents often mutilate their children in China, by gouging out their eyes in infancy, and clipping ears and noses—so that when old enough to beg, they may play the mendicant more successfully.

The Washington Metropolis states, that from the foundation of our Government up to 1837, the total coinage in this country was sixty-nine millions five hundred and eighty-one thousand five hundred and forty-eight dollars.

The capture of Matamoras is confirmed. It was taken by a combined force of so-styled Federalists and volunteers of Texas. The place was besieged during three days, and there was great slaughter on both sides, sixty of the Texans alone having been killed.

TALL SNOW DRIFTS.—The Northampton (Massachusetts) Courier, says the embankments of snow, piled in that region by the late storm, extended to the second story windows, and that the thought of intercourse with some of their neighbors is not indulged in until "thawing time."

IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Court in Bank, at Columbus, Ohio, have decided that every description of bank issues, payable at an after date, and assuming the form of circulation, is illegal, and a violation of the charter.

UNION OF THE TWO CANADAS.—The Legislative Council and the House of Assembly of Upper Canada, have passed resolutions in favor of the union of the two Provinces. Equal representation in both Provinces, permanent civil list, and a joint assumption of the public debt, are agreed on.

At a public meeting of the citizens of the counties of Delaware and Franklin, Ohio, it has been resolved—in consequence of the students of the Washington Reformed Medical College being in the habit of disinterring bodies—that it is their wish that the medical class be dissolved; that as the professors have violated their pledges, no confidence should be placed in them; that the college be hereafter used as an academy; and that the students from other places leave the town in two weeks. Great excitement prevailed, and the destruction or the college itself had been anticipated.

THE MACKEREL FISHERIES.—There has been a wonderful decline in the mackerel fisheries during the last few years, as will be seen by the following table of inspections in Massachusetts:

Total for the year ending				1840	73,023
"	"	"	"	1839	108,538
"	"	"	"	1838	138,157
"	"	"	"	1837	176,931
"	"	"	"	1836	194,450
"	"	"	"	1835	252,854

BAPTISM IN WINTER.—A protracted meeting was lately held by the Baptist Church at Trenton, New Jersey, during which many persons were admitted to membership. Sixty persons were paptized in one day last week, the ice being cut away to admit of their immersion. The boys were skating on the ice at the time, and the weather was so cold that persons were obliged to be employed in stirring the water to keep it from freezing.

The New York Herald says, "As some index to the great depreciation in funded property during the past year, we have compiled the following table of stock sales at the New York board of brokers, during the past year:

Prices of the Leading Stocks in the New York Market throughout the past year.

	January 1839	March	May	July	September	November	January 1840
U. States Bank,	123	118	116	114	103	68	83
N. Am. T. & B.	96	98	85	77	64	33	63
Dry Dock, - - - -	103	108	106	91	87	52	69
Phœnix Bank, -	104	104	105	99	97	86	89
Del. and Hud.	77	79	80	67	67	54	71
Mech. Bk. Ass.	96	91	87	89	79	57	64
Mohawk, - - - - -	69	64	64	58	57	44	63
Bost. and Prov.	107	104	107	107	100	93	104
N. J. R. R. - -	106	103	102	96	89	74	80
Patterson, - - - -	62	63	68	57	53	35	46
Harlem, - - - - -	52	53	60	47	48	35	47
Canton Co. - - -	53	42	46	36	35	24	30
Stonington, - - -	26	29	34	26	24	12	16
Am. L. and F.	120	103	99	78	00	00	09
Vicksburgh, - - -	77	79	62	37	36	22	5
Ohio 6's, - - - - -	105	103	105	102	97	90	85

MONEY MATTERS IN NEW YORK.—On Saturday, Exchange on England 7 a 7½ premium. U. S. Bank stock sold at 85. Bills in Philadelphia 94 a 94½. The Express in its weekly review says:—"There is a very visible improvement in the Money Market. The commercial community have been so long opposed by the banks, that they have had no spirit to contract debts, or to make new engagements; and for the last six months fewer debts have been made than have ever been entered into for a great length of time. The consequence has been that business paper has become scarce, and the Banks now find no surplus of this description. The demand for money has fallen off very much; particularly as the payments of this season are quite moderate. In the street money can be had on good securities, at 1 to 1½ per cent., and short paper is readily taken at Bank at 7 per cent. The condition of Foreign Exchanges is becoming decidedly better—Exchange on England is down to 7 or 8 per cent., and very dull. This is a very favorable symptom. Southern rates are improving, and becoming decidedly better. There is every appearance that as soon as Spring opens, and produce can reach this city, that the change will be still more favorable. Advices from England are decidedly encouraging as to money; confidence in American securities has decidedly improved, and it was easier to negociate.—Bicknell.

Methodist Prot. Banner.

THE Methodist Protestant Church in the South, and particularly in South Carolina, being as yet in her infancy, her history is but little known, while the views and principles of her Members have been studiously misrepresented. To enlighten the public mind in relation to those principles, and to correct misrepresentation, is the object contemplated by the publication of this periodical. And there is every reason to believe that wheresoever those principles are known and properly appreciated—based as they are upon the union of spiritual and ecclesiastical liberty—it will be conceded that the church stands upon the high ground of scriptural truth. The Methodist Protestant Church has already attained a respectable and firm standing among her sister churches, in various parts of the United States, and we trust the day is not distant, when she will rank second to none, for piety, numbers and usefulness in the sunny South.

While the principal design of the paper will be to make known the history, present condition, and future prospects of the Methodist Protestant Church; to vindicate her principles, and defend her from the attacks of others; due courtesy will be extended to other churches, and notice taken of their condition and prospects—Literature, Science and the Arts, will not be forgotten.

Terms:—THE METHODIST PROTESTANT BANNER will be published monthly, on a quarto sheet, under the direction of a Committee of the South Carolina Annual Conference, at One Dollar per annum, payable in advance. Its enlargement in size and more frequent appearance, will depend upon the support it may receive.

Any person remitting Five Dollars will be entitled to a copy gratis.

Communications may be addressed to the Publishing Committee of the Methodist Protestant Banner, Charleston, South Carolina. 24

Books! Books!! Books!!!

CATALOGUE OF BOOKS (in part,) to be had at the Methodist Protestant Book Concern, Baltimore, Maryland, with the retail prices. A liberal discount will be made to wholesale purchasers.

Fox's Book of Martyrs, 2 vols. 8vo.	$2 25
Dr Macknight on the Epistles, sup.roy. 8vo.	3 25
Dr Scott's Commentary on the Bible, 3vs 8vo	7 50
Dr Dick's Theology, 2 vols. 8vo.	6 00
Dr Paley's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 25
Dr L. Prideaux's Connection of Sacred and Profane History, 2 vols. 8vo.	4 00
Crabbe's Sy volumes, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 50
Dr Adam Clarke's Discources on highly important subjects, 2 vols.	3 00
Reese on the Sabbath,	37½
John Bunyan's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 00
Brown's Philosophy of the human Mind, 2 vols.	3 00
Scriptural Anthology,	75
Horn's Introduction to the study of the Scriptures, 2 vols.	7 50
Rev. John Fletcher's Checks against Antinomianism, 3 vols.	3 00
Young Preacher's Manuel, 8vo.	1 50
Griesbach's Greek Testament,	1 20
Rev. Dr Geo. Burder's Village Sermons,	1 50
Sturm's Reflections for every day in the year,	1 75
Dr Lowth on Isaiah,	1 67
Locke on the Epistles of the New Testament,	2 00
Ship and Shore, by an officer of the U.S.N.	87
Sunday School Lectures,	50
A Walk about Zion, by the Rev. J. A. Clark,	75
Abbott's Teacher,	50
Bunyan's Holy War, fine,	75
do do common,	50
The Great Teacher, by Harris,	87
Dr Dick's Philosophy of Religion,	56
do do of a Future State,	56
do Christian Philosopher,	56
do Mental Illumination,	62
do Improvement of Society,	62
do Evil of Covetousness,	62
Beveridge's Private Thoughts,	60
Buck's Theological Dictionary,	80
Christian Retirement,	1 00
Dr Adam Clarke's Commentarys on the Old and New Testaments, 4 vols. super royal, 8vo. bound,	13 00
do do do, calf, gilt, extra,	20 00
Williams' Bible Exercises,	25
Dr Cruden's Concordance, pocket,	50
Dr Chalmer's Works, 3 vols.	3 00
Christian Student,	75
Conversation on the Bible,	56
Drew on the Soul,	75
Drelincourt on Death,	1 25
Evidences of Chistianity, by Alexander Watson, Jennings, Leslie & Paley,	87
Rev. Dr Hunter's Sacred Biography, sheep, gilt, plates,	3 00
Rev. Dr Mosheim's Church History, 4th edition,	5 00
do do do, calf, gilt, plates,	8 00
do do do, Turkey, gilt edges, extra,	9 00
Rev. Dr Sprague's Letters to a daughter,	75
do do, to Young People,	75
do do, on Revivals,	87
Rev. Dr Doddridge's Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, 12mo. fine ed	1 00
Physical Theory of Another Life,	87
Young Infidel Reclaimed,	37
Sherwood's Scripture Prints,	75
Musical Manual,	50
Mothers' Friend,	50
Methodist Protestant Cathecism,
Family Bibles, various prices and sizes,
Paragraph Bibles, do do
Polyglot Bibles, do do
Teacher's Visit,
Pollock's Course of Time,
Young Man's Book of Christian Evidence,
do Ladies' do do d.	44
Phillip's Devotional Guides, 2 vols 12mo	1 25
Poor but Happy,	31
Janney's Poems,
Adam the Gardener,	44
Praise and Blame,	37
Gospel Seeds,	44
Bible Companion,	62
Phillip's Manly Piety,	50
Harrod's Collection,	25
M P Church Discipline, late edition,	37
Life of Col Gardener,	37
Academical Reader,	50
Clarke's Advice to Preachers,	12
Williams' on the Lord's Supper,	19
Fletcher's Advice,	12
Howe's Works,	4 75
The Laurel,	50
Edson's Letters,	37
Father's Fireside,	25
Fletcher's Address,	12
Way for a Child to be Saved,	37
Bible Illustration,	56
Seneca's Morals,	50
Story of Paridise Lost,	31
Caroline E Smelt,	31
Real Dialogues,	50
Pastor's Daughter,	50
Basket of Flowers,	31
Piece Book,	25
Hints to Students,	25
Tree and its Fruits,	37
Evening Readings in History,	37
Child's Book on the Sabbath,	22
Girl's Best Ornaments,	25
Hero of Macedon,	25
Memoirs of Sailings,	25
Indian Narratives,	25
The French Soldiers,	25
Malcolm's Bible Dictionary,	40
Bishop Wilson's Analagy,	24
Pious Songs,	37
Keystone,	55
Phillip's Variety of Female Piety,	50
do Beauty of Female Holyness,	50
do Female Character,	50
do Love of the Spirits,	50
do On Redemption,	50
do Guides,	50
Burman Slave Girl,	25
Tales of Egypt,	25
Life of Mrs. Leslie,	25
Golden Clue,	25
Memoirs of John Chamberlain,	25
Julia Graham,	55
Gems,	25
History of Joseph,	31
Loom Boy,	25
Good Grandmother,	62
Life of Bishop Heber,	50
Biography of Pious Persons,
McGavin's Protestants,	4 25
Harris's Sermons,	1 15
Gallaudet's Every Day Christian,	13
Conforms of Piety,	12
Daily Piety,	13
Token of Youth,	12
Hannah Sinclair,	25
Innes Advice,	37
My Adventures,	37
Six Months in a Convent,	50
Supplement do	50
Martineau's Devotional Exercises,	37
Hannah Moore's Private Devotion,	25
Brown's Concordance,	37
Young Ladies' Sunday,	50
European Children,	25
Chloe Spear,	25
Early Life,	25
Memoirs of S. Leece,	25
Counsel and Caution to Youth,	25
&c. &c. &c. &c.

Propositions have been introduced in both Houses of the Pennsylvania Legislature, to repeal the United States Bank charter.

Gen. Harrison and Gov. Tyler have both accepted the nomination made at Harrisburgh.

AGRICULTURAL.

ENGLISH AGRICULTURE.—The good land of England is much more productive than that of America, and this superiority is probably derived, not so much from great strength of soil as from more skilful agriculture, depending mainly on two great facts, faithful tillage and faithful manuring.

The English farmer does not believe there is any thing necessarily adherent in the nature of good soil, which makes it so productive, independently of nutritious matter and foreign aliment returned to it by the cultivator, as a compensation for the crops it has yielded. Hence his first, his principal care, is to collect and form manure from every possible source.

Nothing is more common when one is travelling in England, than to see in the yards adjacent to the field, heaps of compost consisting of turf, tops of vegetables, as of turnips and carrots, and stubble, from the wheat fields, which is cut by a second reaping after the crops have been removed; dead animals, and offals of the barn yards and stables, and in a short time every thing which would otherwise be lost, and is capable of being converted by the putrefaction into vegetable mould.

It is, therefore, because this business of manuring is so perfectly understood, and so diligently practised in England, more than from any other cause, that their lands are so much richer than ours, Indeed, is it any thing more than an imitation of the economy of nature?—Prof. Silman's Travels.

PRESERVING APPLES.—Among the many experiments that have been published, for preserving apples during the summer season (and we know of many to have been tried) the subjoined from the Wheeling Gazette, is one of the oft repeated prescriptions for this delicious fruit—

"A farmer, in the Newark Daily Advertiser, gives his experience in preserving winter apples, which may be of advantage to some of our readers. In the fall he spread a barrel of selected Newtown pippins on the garret floor, where the sun shines in nearly all the day, and left them for three days. They were then put up in a hogshead of sand perfectly clear of moisture or clay in such a way as not to touch each other. On the 4th of July he opened the hogshead for the first time, and found the fruit as fine and as juicy as the day it was packed.

'We have seen in our agricultural papers numerous accounts of the entire success which has attended this plan of drying apples in the sun for two days when first gathered, and the packing them in sand. In this section of country we have an abundance of the most excellent apples, but from their scarcity in the spring we are inclined to believe our farmers take but little pains in preserving them over winter. If any of our friends will try this plan, and send us a specimen of their apples in the spring (being careful not to send us too small a quantity) we will be able to say positively how far it succeeds."

We would advise our Gazette friends to make their own experiments, as we have on several occasions, and then they can speak confidently of the result.—Literary Visiter.

VARIETY.

Happiness consists in a virtuous and honest life; in being content with a competency of outward things, and in using them temperately.

Dean Swift says: "It is with little souled people as it is narrow-necked bottles: the less they have in them, the more noise they make in pouring out."

A young lady at the examination in grammar, was asked why the noun bachelor, was singular? She replied, immediately, and with much naivette, "Because it is very singular that they don't get married."

PASSION.—A man in a passion is like Vesuvius in an eruption—vomiting forth flames and red hot stones, which descend immediately into its own bosom, till chance directs it over the edge of the crater, to deal destruction to others.—Jean Paul.

An Irishman standing on the pier at Newburgh, N. Y., was asked by a person present, where he was from last?

"Och," said he, "I am from every place but this—and when the steamboat comes along, I shall be from this too."

The Cincinnati Republican states that the woollen goods seized last summer in that city, on suspicion of having been imported without paying duty, have been examined and found to have been correctly and honorably entered at the custom house.

A professor lecturing upon heat, observed that one of its most conspicuous properties was the power of expanding all bodies. A humorous student rose from his seat, and asked, "Is that the reason why the days in warm weather are longer than those in cold."

There are 3064 languages spoken in the world, more than five hundred of which are used in Europe.

SAD ACCIDENT.—The devil belonging to the office of the Louisville Bulletin, had his shirt burnt off while setting up the word lightning.

He should follow the example of editors of political papers, and have his shirts made of asbestos. They write such fiery articles, that they would be in flames fifty times in a day, if their shirts were not fire proof.

THE ABSENT PHILOSOPHER AT HOME.—The following anecdote is related of Lessing, the German author, who, in his old age, was subject to extraordinary fits of abstraction. On his return home one evening, after he had knocked at the door, a servant looked out of the window, to see who was there. Not recognizing his master, and mistaking him for a stranger, he called out, "The professor is not at home."

"O, very well," replied Lessing; "I will call another time;" and so saying, he very composedly walked away.

TOO LATE FOR CHURCH.—An old negro in Connecticut who had always been very constant at church and prided himself furthermore on being among the first there, happened one morning to be detained far beyond the usual hour.

"John," said Cuffee, as he stood carding his wool for the occasion, "hab de kindness to tell me what a clock him be?"

"Can't tell you Cæsar, the clock has stopped. I should think it pretty considerable late, though."

"Ise wouldn't be exposed if 'twar half an hour top o' dat," returned Cæsar, and mogged across lots to church, as fast as his bandy legs could carry him. He entered towards the end of the sermon, just as the parson was reiterating his text for the last time—"The last shall be first and the first last." Cuffee turned upon his heel and went out exclaiming,

"Dat mean me—I come in last, but Ise out fusser, any now; de next time dis nigger goes to meetin', he no go at all."

THE ICE BOAT OPERATIONS.—The Ice boat Relief continues to do wonders in the hands of her indefatigable commander, Capt. SANNER. Yesterday morning she brought up into the harbor through the ice, no less than twenty-eight vessels—two barques, twelve brigs and fourteen schooners—a list of which will be found under the marine head. The Relief had to lay by for a few hours yesterday, in order to replenish her stock of wood, &c. and although Captain S. had then been uninterruptedly engaged for forty-eight hours in towing vessels, he intended to go down the river as soon as his supplies were laid in. He reports having had in tow, at different times, ninety-three sail of inward bound vessels, all of which were between the city and North Point. The track made by the Iceboat in the lower part of the river closes, it is said, soon after she passes, which increases the difficulty of towing a number of vessels at a time.—American of Thursday.

TEMPERANCE LAW OF TENNESSEE.—The Tennessee House of Representatives have had a hard battle on the subject of the License Laws. Some of the members not being satisfied with the prohibitory law passed a year or two ago, introduced a bill having for its object to render the old law more "liberal." There appeared to be a decided majority in favor of the measure and the only difficulty was, how to shape the new law. On this point there were of course different opinions. Some wanted this provision embodied in it; others that. At length after a great deal of labor, the new bill was concocted into a shape which the striped pig gentry, or most of them, deemed satisfactory. On taking the question on the new bill, it was found to be such a piece of patchwork, that a majority were not in favor of it. The votes stood,—yeas 33, nays 39. So the bill was rejected. This was on December 17th. On the following morning however, a reconsideration was moved and carried—36 to 35. In the afternoon the bill was laid on the table.—Whether any thing further would be done on the subject, problematical. In the mean time the old law continued in force.—Journal of Commerce.

WHALE VESSEL—LAW CASE.—Circuit Court of the United States.—Important Decision.—Judge Story, in the U. S. Court, in the case of the ship Isabella, of Fairhaven, has made a decision reversing the judgment of the District Court of Massachusetts in the forfeiture of a bond. The Judge decided that the practice which has been so long pursued by the Collectors of the Customs, of exacting a bond for the return of seamen in vessels engaged in the Whale Fisheries, is not authorized by law; and that the penalties of these bonds, which have been paid to the Government in numerous instances, cannot be recovered.

In concluding, Judge Story says:—"Upon the whole, my judgment is told that a whaling voyage is not in the common commercial sense of the words deemed a 'foreign voyage,' say more than a voyage in the cod, of common fisheries; that the words 'foreign voyage' are in the common commercial sense applied to voyages to foreign countries, where the main terminus is a foreign port, for the purpose of importation in the course of trade, that a voyage which is to be essentially performed upon the ocean from its nature and objects, is not deemed foreign to the country."

An inhabitant of Corfu, who recently returned from Spitzbergen, after an absence of twenty-eight years, found his wife in good health, but the widow of three husbands.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

Literary Repository.

ON the 1st of January, 1840, the subscriber proposes the publication of a new literary journal, of the above title, should sufficient encouragement be given previous to that time.

The REPOSITORY will be published semi-monthly in quarto form, each number containing eight pages of three columns each, at the low price of ONE DOLLAR a year. Its mechanical execution will be in a superior style—printed on beautiful fine paper, with new type. Appropriate engravings will occasionally be given, by way of embellishments. Its columns, excluding every thing of a party or sectarian nature, will be particularly devoted to the literature of the day, containing: Moral and Sentimental Tales, Pleasing and Dangerous Adventures, Biography, Sketches of Travels, Extracts from new Publications, Historical Anecdotes, Poetry, &c. &c.

The subscriber has the pleasure of stating that several Ladies, as well as four or five Gentlemen of decided literary talent, have volunteered their services to enrich the columns of the Repository with their productions. With their aid the publisher hopes to render the Repository equal, in point of merit, to any publication of the kind, extant.

A specimen number has just been published, and should two or three hundred subscribers be obtained previous to the first of January, 1840, (of which we have scarcely a doubt,) its publication will, with confidence be continued—at least for one year. Five hundred subscribers it is thought will fully meet the expenses; and our candid opinion is that twice this number may be obtained with but little effort.

It is earnestly hoped that those who wish to become subscribers, will send in their names as soon as practicable. The subscription money will be required immediately after the reception of the second number, as the terms of subscription will be strictly in advance, and no subscriptions received for less than one year.

All orders and communications must be POST PAID, to secure attention, and addressed to

A. B. F. HILDRETH,
No. 20, Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.
January 29, 1840. 23

The Casket,

AND PHILADELPHIA MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

THE unparalleled success which has attended the Casket since it has come into the hands of the new proprietors, induces them to begin a volume with still further attractions on the first of January next. Its literary character, which has called forth so many comments, will undergo no change, as it will continue under the control of the same editors. Several new contributors, however, of high talent, has been engaged beside those who have already been enlisted in its favor. The Magazine will be enlarged, and will contain a greater quantity of reading matter than any periodical published at the same price in this country.

The work will appear in a new and beautiful type, cast expressly for the purpose, and will be printed on the finest paper. It will also be ornamented with the finest steel engravings, provided at a heavy expense, and executed from the choicest designs. To vary the style of these illustrations, the services of distinguished artists have been engaged to furnish at intervals, mezzotints for the ensuing volume. The heads of several distinguished American writers will appear in the course of the year. The publishers, determined to leave nothing undone to merit the patronage of a liberal public, have resolved, after much solicitation from many of their fair readers, to publish quarterly, as an extra, a correct plate of the latest fashion, highly colored, and executed in the first style of the art. This department will be under the control of a French gentleman, of much taste and experience, and will be found to excel any thing ever attempted in this line in America. The extra in the November number, may be considered a fair specimen of what these fashion plates will be. The music department, as heretofore, will be under the charge of Messrs. G. W. Hewitt & Co., and the fine pieces of copyright music which they have hitherto furnished are sufficient guarantee for the future

The flattering terms in which the Casket has been noticed by the journals in every section of the Union, establish beyond a doubt its claims to support generally. It will surpass any other work in the return it gives for the readers' money.

TERMS: Three dollars per annum, invariably in advance, or two copies for five dollars.

All communications to be addressed, post paid, to GEORGE R. GRAHAM & Co.,
December 30, 1839. Philadelphia.

P. S.—Editors publishing this Prospectus will be entitled to a copy of the Casket during the volume. No exchange is solicited, except when noticing the reception of the Magazine.

Youth's Cabinet.

EDITED BY N. SOUTHARD.

Prospectus of vol. III. Commencing Jan. 2, '40.

THIS paper which was begun without a subscriber, has existed two years, in the midst of a host of competitors, securing many friends, and receiving the warm commendation of about one hundred editors, and many parents and teachers.

"You have no idea of the eagerness with which my little girl gets your paper," said a father a few days ago. "It would be a grand thing to introduce as a reading book into common schools," said a distinguished laborer in the cause of education.

"It is just such a paper as we desire to have placed weekly in the hands of our children," says the Christian Herald. "We have never known a paper in which children take so deep an interest," says the Waldo (Maine) Gazette.

"We have seen no paper expressly devoted to the young, which combines with more felicity amusement and sound principles," says the Bristol (R. I.) Phenix.

Its object is to do the greatest possible good to the hearts and minds of its young readers, in the most pleasing manner. To accomplish this object an increasing list of subscribers will enable the editor to devote an increasing amount of time and attention, while a number of able correspondents among the friends of the young at home, and missionaries abroad, will give it variety and interest.

Its engravings, which average two or three each week, are not intended merely to please the fancy, but illustrate truth, convey instruction, and deepen good impressions.

While it is confidently presented to the favorable notice of all who love the improvement of the young, it has special claims on those who desire the immediate extinction of all forms of oppression, and who believe the best security for our own liberties is a sacred regard for the rights of others.

It is published weekly at No. 9, Spruce street, New York, and No. 25, Cornhill, Boston, at only $1 per year in advance; ten copies for 8 dollars; twenty copies for 14 dollars; thirty copies for 18 dollars.

All editors who wish to promote the great objects of the Cabinet, are requested to favor us by giving this one or two insertions.

Our exchange list having swelled so as greatly to tax our time and means, we shall be constrained to confine it mostly to those who show us this kindness. Jan. 1, 1840. 19

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.
January 25, 1840. 23

Colored American.

WE wish to inform the friends and subscribers to the "Colored American," that the suspension of that paper for a few weeks past, must, of necessity, be continued for some weeks yet to come, after which its publication will be resumed by one or both of the former proprietors, who will endeavor to associate with them in conducting it, all the talent and wisdom they can reasonably call to their aid, and we pledge to make the paper equal, and we hope superior, to what it has been.

The causes which lead to so long a suspension of the paper are, first, the unprecedented hard times, of which every body is aware; and, secondly, the deranged state of things with our subscribers in the cities of Philadelphia and New York, which require time, and labor, and patience, to set right; and finally, the payment of a debt, already accumulated, in whole, or at least in part, before we even think of involving the concern any further in debt.

We did hope, when we suspended, to have resumed again with the commencement of the new year, but we find, by the trial that we have made, that that has not afforded us half the time necessary, to accomplish the object of our suspension. We shall, therefore, on resuming, commence a new series of the paper, the current year of which to commence with the issue of that number, which will be as soon, certainly, as the first of March. We shall credit subscribers whose year has not expired, for the time in which the paper shall be suspended.

Since the issue of our last, we have received a number of letters from friends in different parts of the country, deprecating exceedingly our necessity to suspend, and speaking in highest terms of the necessity of the paper, urging us strongly to go on, and in every instance, pledging something to our support, or transmitting a donation, and we believe that the suspension will test the real friends of the paper, and bring to our aid the necessary means to ensure its continuance.—Will, now, the real friends of the paper bestir themselves in our behalf, and see how much can be done by the first of March? C. B. RAY.
New York, Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

The Southern Compendium

OF LITERATURE, AGRICULTURE, ARTS AND SCIENCES.

UNDER the above title it is proposed to publish in this place in January, a monthly periodical, to be devoted to Amusement and Instruction, embracing Literature, the Arts and Sciences, Agriculture, Horticulture, Domestic and Rural Economy, Sporting Intelligence, &c.

The Literary department will embrace interesting and instructive Tales, Naratives, Adventures, Sketches of travels, places and persons, Anecdotes, Poetry, Extracts from, and Notices of New Works, &c. &c.

All new discoveries in the Sciences and Arts, as well as interesting papers relating to either, will be immediately noticed, and when of sufficient interest will be transferred to our columns, or such extracts given as will furnish full information to our readers.

In the Agricultural department, special attention will be paid to the great interests of the South. From our Planters, we will endeavor to obtain much practical and useful information which now lies buried and known but to themselves. In order that we may the more fully and effectually carry out this part of our plan, we propose to make frequent excursions into the different sections of not only this, but also of the adjoining States, for the purpose of personally inspecting and reporting on all the various operations which may be carried on, on the plantations we may visit. By pursuing this plan steadily, (as we hope to do,) much highly useful information will be obtained, which cannot fail to be of immense service to the Agricultural community, inasmuch as our Planters will thus become acquainted with the practices of other sections of country, and may from time to time adopt such as may promise a greater recompense, than those, they at the time may follow. Nor shall we confine ourselves to practical information only, but from the rich stores of knowledge which are to be found among our Planters, we hope to draw much which will prove useful and interesting.

Horticulture will also claim our attention, and we will endeavor to raise it from the low estate in which it now exists among us, to one more worthy of it. We will accordingly give not only practical directions for the culture of Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, but entering into the scientific department, we will publish whatever we may find interesting. Descriptions of new Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, as well as their culture, will be given from time to time. The forcing department, which is but little attended to in the South, embracing the formation, building and management of hot beds, conservatories, and hot houses will also be attended to.

Domestic and Rural Economy will not be neglected, but whatever we can find likely to promote either will be given in our columns.

Sporting Intelligence, Anecdotes, On Dits, and various miscellaneous matters, which cannot well be classed, will swell our pages, and add interest to our periodical.

In furtherance of our object, we will do all in our power to render this periodical highly interesting and instructive, and one which shall be welcomed by every member of such families as may patronize it. To effect this, while we hope to contribute our full share to the Original Literature of the day, as well as add considerably to the stock of Agricultural information, yet we will freely draw from the sources open to us, in the numerous daily, weekly, monthly and quarterly periodicals, which embracing every subject, abound not only in America, but also in Europe, and from these we will select only such articles as may prove highly interesting or instructive.—The sources which are open to us in each department are ample, and we trust we shall so avail ourselves of them, as to render THE SOUTHERN COMPENDIUM a highly acceptable visiter wherever known.

Political and Religious discussions will be excluded, and while we have no preference in both, yet we will not admit any thing which may be likely to wound or offend the feelings of our readers.

We have thus sketched the plan of our Periodical, and respectfully solicit for it support, both by subscriptions and contributions.

TERMS—The Southern Compendium will be published on the 15th of each month, in octavo form of 64 pages, at $5 per annum, payable in advance. JOHN D. LEGARE.
Charleston, S. C., Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840 (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

THERE will be application made to the Trustees of Springfield township, at their annual session, on the first Monday of March, at the usual place of holding elections in the town of Putnam for an alteration in School District No. 4, so as to make a new District out of the land of the following persons adjoining in said District, commencing at 160 acres owned by Bernard Wortman, also the farm of Cornelius Springer, Jos. Swaney, Scameron Rodman, Andrew Bumbaugh, Benjamin Maple, Joseph Wortman, Sarah Johnson, James Russell, Robert George, John George, William Kidd, Mary Perien, the Grayham farm, together with two farms owned by Abner James, and eighty acres of land owned by David Jones and occupied by Wm. Perry and Henry D. Morgan. MANY HOUSEHOLDERS.
January 29, 1840. 23

Godey's Lady's Book.

EDITION 25,000—MONTHLY.

More than Sixty Figures of Fashions each year.

MRS. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, whose name is so intimately connected with the Literature of our country, and who has justly been termed the Hemans of America, will assist Mrs. Hale in the editorial department. It is with feelings of the greatest pleasure that the publisher of the Book makes this announcement. The editorial corps will now consist of Mrs. SARAH J. HALE, Mrs. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, and LOUIS A. GODEY. Mrs. Sigourney will commence her valuable aid with the January Number. The Lady's Book has always been noted for the purity of its contents; that marked distinction which characterizes it shall still be preserved; indeed, with such conductors it will be impossible to go estray. This work has been emphatically termed the Ladies' National Magazine, as it is a receptacle for the contributions of the most celebrated Female Writers of America, most of whom of any eminence contribute to its pages.

Twenty volumes have already been issued. It is usual to announce that a small edition only will be published. Contrary to this, the proprietor of the Lady's Book announces that he will publish an Immense Edition, with which he hopes to supply all those who will favor him with orders, commencing with the January number. It will be seen by this advertisement that every effort has been made by the proprietor of this work to make it superior to any in America, and as a New Year's Gift, the Lady's Book is probably the most proper that could be desired for ladies, edited by their own sex, and assisted as the editorial department is by the pictorial embellishments, it is positively the Bourdoir companion.

There are other publications that advertise Fashion Plates—The publisher of the Lady's Book wishes it to be distinctly understood that the principal Fashions in this work are colored, and in every number, which is not the case with any other work published in America.

Uncolored Plates of Fashions, also monthly.—This is a novel feature of the work, and as it is no great expense to give plates of Fashions without coloring, the publisher will give from three to six figures each month, in addition to the three colored—This will make in all generally about nine Figures of Fashions monthly.

Lace Patterns of Embroidery will be published at regular intervals. These beautiful ornaments (particularly the former) have given great satisfaction.

The Musical Department is under the superintendence of J. G. Osborne, than whom no person is more capable of doing it justice.

The Literary Department is placed under the superintendence of Mrs. Sarah J. Hale and Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney. Two ladies so well known to the world that to mention their names in connection with any publication is at once a guarantee of its morality, virtue and utility. Of their capability to conduct the Lady's Book it is presumed no person will doubt, and the proprietor mentions with pleasure that no English or American Magazine can publish in connection with its Literary department two names so celebrated in the world of letters.

Fac Similies.—A great deal of curiosity is often expressed to see the Chirography of celebrated persons. We shall endeavor, as far as lies in our power, to gratify this feeling by giving from time to time correct imitations of the most celebrated Female writers of the day.

General Features.—Literature, Tales, Essays, Legends, Romantic incidents in History, Extracts from the old Poets, Reviews, Poetry, Female Education, Embellishments, Fashions colored and uncolored, Lace Embroidery, Fac Similies, Music, &c. &c. More than sixty Figures of Fashions yearly colored and uncolored, the proprietor being determined to consult all tastes. Any embellishments to be found in any other magazine may be looked for in the Lady's Book.

In 1838 we published 10,500 copies, during the months of January, February and March, 1839, we increased the list to 13,500 and had then to reprint three numbers and increase to 15,000.—With the next volume we advanced to 17,000, and we now print 25,000 copies monthly, probably the greatest monthly list of subscribers in the world.

Our Reading Matter is about the same in quantity as any similar production, probably a little in favor of the Book. It would be foolish and false to say that it contains more, and the proprietor is not willing to condescend to such means for any supposed advancement of his interest.

One advantage the subscribers of this work will have, is its early reception. It will be received at the remotest cities of the Union by the first day of publication.

The January and succeeding numbers will be printed on an entirely new type cast expressly for the work, and will be found on inspection to be a truly beautiful letter, not too small to be read with ease, nor too large to prevent the usual quantity of matter being given in each page. The paper is of the finest quality for periodical use—indeed the typographical execution has long been a subject of congratulation with those best acquainted with these matters.

The price of the publication is $3 00 per annum—two copies for five dollars. The money to be positively received before a number is sent.—No letters will be taken from the Post Office unless the postage on them is paid. Unless positive orders are given at the time of subscribing the work is continued after the first year, and if not paid during the year, the price will be increased to four dollars.

For the convenience of persons wishing to subscribe for any of the following publications, Burton's Magazine, Saturday Courier, Saturday Chronicle, Weekly Messenger, Saturday Evening Post—they will be furnished with the Lady's Book and any one of these publications one year upon the receipt of five dollars free of postage.

Address L. A. GODEY,
Jan. 15, 1840. 21. 211 Chesnut-st. Phil'a.

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.
Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and priving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Cloverseed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

THE
WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

olume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1840. Number 25.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

AN ADVENTURE.

It was a beautiful afternoon about the iddle of November, after mixing all day the business of life, I returned home to joy the evening in the bosom of my mily, and try to find a solace for my oubled soul. To the sensitive mind, ere is something inexpressibly sweet, the enjoyment of a smiling fire-side, er a weary day's toil. What a con- ast to the drunken squabble, of a tip- ng-house, where many a husband and her spends his long winter evenings drinking and revelling, while his al- ost destitute family are shivering over few dying embers and scarcely a mor- l to satisfy the cravings of hunger, and e poor desolate heart broken wife fan- ring she hears his footstep in every und; hoping, and at the same time eading, to see him come, for he is ac- stomed to come home reeling under the rsed influence of intoxication. How autifully does the poet portray the ace and comfort of a contented home:

At length his lonely cot appears in view, eneath the shelter of an aged tree he expectant wee things todlin' stacher through o meet their dad wi' flitch'tring noise and glee, is wee bit ingle blinkin' bonilly.
is clean hearth-stane, his thriftie wife's smile,
is lisping infant prattling on his knee,
oes a' his weary, carking cares beguile, nd makes him quite forget his labor and his toil."

On the evening in question I had come ome peculiarly cast down—I had en- ountered and struggled hard to overcome any difficulties which were calculated to ffle the temper and distract the mind, d had retired to my hearth, hoping that I ight be able to drown my cares and sor- ows in the smiles of a happy fire-side. sat down on a chair beside the fire and fter talking a while and watching the ranks of my little ones as usual, being ery weary, I laid my head upon the ack of the chair upon which I was sit- ng, and before long, was in a troubled leep. * * * * *

I arose, took my hat, and walked out to aze upon the operations of Nature. It was a beautiful evening for the season, nd had been preceded by a cold, frosty ight. The sun had unveiled his face uring the day, and was now within a- out an hour of sitting, tinging with a olden hue, the skirts of the azure hea- ens. I wandered on to the out-skirts of he city. On every side, my ears were aluted with the hum of busy life. The treets were thronged with the eager crowd, each pursuing his own way. Now my pathway would be crossed by the prawney laborer, who had probably work- d hard all day, to gain an hour in the evening, that he might spend it with his, perhaps, happy family, and whose "vera wee things," might just then be waiting anxiously, to meet their "dad wi' flitch'- tring noises and glee," returning from his daily toil. Here I was passed by one, with a hasty step, and bustling air, full of life, indicating him to be the "man of business," probably then, on the scent of some speculation, in which he expected to realize "something handsome." Again I meet the man of cares, whose counte- nance was the index of the feelings of his bosom, and like an April sky, now lit up with the smiles of sunshine, and now darkened with clouds of care and sorrow, and "vexation of spirit." And then it would appear, that, in order to make up a variety, it was necessary to encounter the toper, reeling and staggering I was going to say, "straddling quite over the whole breadth of the way," "Kings may be blest, but he was glorious,

"O'er a' the ills o' life victorious."

I pushed my way through the crowd, and at length found myself at the base of a steep and rugged hill, up which I clam- bered, though with much difficulty, owing to the hard frost of the previous night, and the sun's heat during the day, which had thawed the ground until it had be- come very sloppy, and though it was at- tended with considerable danger, I per- severed until I found myself at the sum- mit, which was far elevated above the houses of the city beneath me. I wan- dered on, until I came to the brink of a tremendous precipice, which must have been 300 feet perpendicular height. Oh horror! my blood curdles in my veins, when I call to remembrance that awful hour! Still the hum of the city followed my ear. I seated myself upon the ground, within a few yards of the edge of the precipice. It commanded a beautiful view of the city and environs—there stretched far out to the right a chain of mountains in minia- ture, along whose base meandered a beau- tiful river, sparkling in the last rays of the sitting sun, which was now gently sinking behind the western hills. Be- neath me, as it were, was the city, swarm- ing with life, and the noise of a hundred factories, sounded upon my ear like the low mutterings of a distant thunder- storm. I sat a few moments, contempla- ting the beauties with which I was sur- rounded, and was wrapt in meditation, gazing with admiration on the scene, when all of a sudden, the ground appear- ed to move beneath me, and before I could gather my wandering senses, the sod up- on which I sat, became detached from the earth, and slid with amazing velocity to the very edge of the rock! my legs, as far as the knees, were entirely over it! A root elevating itself on the edge was the only thing that prevented me from slipping off. Good heavens! what were my feelings at that moment—the thought of my helpless family, rushed upon me like a whirlwind! I sank my left hand into the soft slushy ground, and cautious- ly turning around, I grasped convulsive- ly with my right a fragment of a rock which stuck in the ground a foot or two from me, and there I lay, pressing my- self to the earth, with all the strength I could command, and holding with a death grasp, the rock in my right hand! Oh heavens, what an awful situation! Oh my wife, my helpless children, I cried in the deep anguish of my soul—God pro- tect you! Language is entirely inade- quate to portray to the reader, the agony of soul I then endured. The cold drop, of sweat started from my forehead—my heart sank within me—my strength was failing fast! Already had the rock be- gun to loosen from its bed. One moment more, and all would be over! and oh what a death! I would have given a world, to have been that moment seated by my fire-side! my brain was reeling— a dimness came over me, like the shadow of death! * * * * *

I felt a touch upon my head, and heard a voice, which seemed to me like the whis- perings, of a ministering angel, gently saying, William, come down to tea!— What ails you? You tremble so! I sprang to my feet in a moment; but found myself very much exhausted and weak from excitement. Oh what a gust of joy came in upon my soul! Ah who can tell, how fervently I thanked heaven, that it was all a dream! I had been sleeping on my chair! W.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28th, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

VINDICATION.

Mr. Editor:—I feel it my duty to vindi- cate the Ohio Conference, against the imputations of your correspondent, "J. J. Amos," in his article in the 11th No. of your paper. It is not pleasant to me to occupy my own time, nor the time of your readers, nor the space in your columns with such a matter, much less is it pleasant to me to join issue with a brother, with whom I have in days of other years "taken sweet counsel and walked to the house of God in company." I could wish that he had written upon some other subject, or in a less censorious spirit. His censures I consider unfair and uncalled for, yet they occupy a prominent place in your paper. I cannot, therefore, consent that they shall pass unanswered and unrebuked.

Your correspondent observes: "in look- ing over the number in which the ap- pointments of the preachers are given for the Ohio Conference, I find this region of country, (Blue River circuit,) and Rud- dle's Mills are left unsupplied. This has caused some reflections to pass through my mind, and elicited this from my pen. I am afraid all is not right that has been adopted and introduced into our economy." He then quotes from Matt. 11, 5. "The poor have the gospel preached unto them," and adds: "What a difference there ap- pears to be between Christ's testimony and the testimony our brethren have given in adopting and carrying into practice their famous and anti-scriptural Report, 'that they will not feel bound to send a preacher to any circuit or station, unless so and so be done.' He continues, "I should be glad to know whence they get the authority for coming to such conclusions, and reducing them to prac- tice. Are they not guilty of neglecting the poor, thereby having respect to per- sons? If so, St. James says, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors." &c.

Our brother seems to fall out with the Report of the Financial Committee of the Ohio Conference, adopted, Cincinnati, 1838. I wish he had quoted fairly from that Report, or let it alone. I must beg the reader to refer to the published docu- ment, termed by our brother "a famous and anti-scriptural Report." The Com- mittee after speaking of the slackness of a portion of our community in the sup- port of the ministry, as "matter of deep and lasting regret," express the opinion that this will eventuate in our downfall, unless there be an improvement in this respect. They then, for the purpose of inducing such improvement, offer for adoption, these resolutions:

"Resolved, 1. That this Conference recommend that the delegates to the next Annual Conference come prepared to assure the Conference that the minister they may send shall receive the disci- plinary allowance, or some certain part thereof, as the circuit or station may be able." As the circuit or station may be able—how guarded the expression, so as not to be oppressive upon the weak, or "the poor," as our brother has it. And yet, this is a recommendation. I am glad, however, that some dozen or more circuits and stations attended to it, and think it is quite to their credit.

"Resolved, 2. That where any circuit is organized, so as to have permanent places of preaching and regular appoint- ments, unless the preceding resolution is complied with, the Conference cannot feel bound to send them a preacher." Here it is not said that the Conference "will not feel bound to send a preacher to any circuit or station, unless so and so be done;" but "where any circuit is organ- ized—permanent" &c., (of course not likely to be so weak or poor,) "unless the preceding Resolution be complied with," unless the circuit shall evince a disposition to make up "some certain part of the disciplinary allowance," not stating how much, but "as they may be able," the Conference cannot feel bound to send them a preacher. The brethren, perhaps, receive the doctrine of the tenth elemen- tary principle, "that it is obligatory on the members to render their ministers a righteous compensation for their labors." But this affair is dubbed as an "anti- scriptural Report." I did not know that it was anti-scriptural for a Conference or any other body to recommend to a chris- tian people to "render unto all their dues." Nor did I know that it was anti-scriptu- ral for St. Paul to recommend to a certain minister to withdraw himself from such as lived up to the maxim, that "gain is godliness," or that he should recommend in another place "not to keep company with such" (though nominally brethren,) as were covetous, extortioners, &c. Now I venture to say, that by this Resolution, the Conference meant to withhold a preacher from no people but such as are too covetous to spare enough of their "carnal things" to sustain those who minister to them in spiritual things,— such extortioners, as would muzzle the ox in treading out the corn. I pray that we may have few such in our community.

But your correspondent twice speaks of this Report and the Resolutions as redu- ced to practice. Here he is under a mis- take. Though I am sorry to intimate that we have dead statutes in our code, yet I must say that while some ten or more circuits, last year, neglected the course recommended, the Conference with- held a preacher from no such circuit on this account, but supplied all, so far as laid in its power. But our brother finds from the minutes that Blue River circuit and Ruddle's mills are left unsupplied. In justice, he should have said, to be sup- plied. And he seems to conclude that these two places get no preacher, because after a year's notice, they have neglected to attend to the course recommended, to send word to the Conference that should they get a preacher, they will help him some little, more or less, as they may be able, in temporal things.— (For the resolution does not even require that they make up as much as seven dol- lars a year.) Here, our brother's conclu- sion is altogether wrong, as has been shown.—and he does not mend the mat- ter by proceeding to intimate that our brethren are guilty of "neglecting the poor," "having respect to persons," "com- mitting sin," "showing no mercy," &c.

Now, the truth of the matter is, that at our last Conference, no delegate attended from Blue River circuit, or from Ruddle's Mills, and no communication was received from either place. (A letter from the latter place, I am informed, reached the post office, after the adjournment of Con- ference.) In view of this fact, how did the Conference know that a preacher was wanted by those people? They had a little information from Blue River circuit. Two individuals who had been through there a few weeks previous, stated that a delegate had been appointed, but that he had declined attending Conference, and that they heard J. J. Amos say, that he expected to attend as alternate; and fur- ther, this same brother informed them that in connection with other official brethren, he was seeking an arrange- ment to have the principal appointments supplied by certain unstationed ministers, in view of their having no preacher from Conference, understanding him distinctly to indicate that they purposed asking for none. Yet, this is the brother who finds fault with the Conference for leaving the circuit unsupplied. He was expected at the Conference. O! that he had attended; then might he have avoided thus sitting in judgment and condemning the doings of our Conference unheard. But to the facts. Our stationing committee, I was informed, had a minister's name placed to Ruddle's Mills, but it was found necessary afterwards to change this, for the want of preachers to supply all the places, and those having delegates present were sup- posed to have paramount claims. So this charge was left to be supplied. But a minister was appointed to Blue River circuit, and it was so announced in the list of appointments. But the brother, before the adjournment, found it necessary to decline taking the appointment, on ac- count of some intervening business. So, Blue River circuit, was also of necessity left to be supplied. I am happy to say, however, that this same brother, has since, arranged his temporalities, and started on for Blue River circuit. May he meet a kind reception. I consider him a worthy brother.

Our friend falls into another error.— He proceeds upon the supposition that the ministry have originated the anti-scriptu- ral report in question. For after showing so clearly the guilt of its authors in neg- lecting the poor, &c., and employing St. James to aid in denouncing this bad thing, he immediately thus proceeds: "It will not do for those brethren to plead they cannot preach without support made cer- tain by subscription." Now, I should have thought our intelligent brother had attended Conference often enough to know that, that body is not composed of ministers alone. I deem it peculiarly unfair to father this report upon the preachers, as it has been the usage of our Conference, from time immemorial to appoint their Financial Committee ex- clusively of laymen. I know of but one exception, (Springfield, 1837,) and then the Chairman was a layman. Our Con- ference Steward likewise, has always been chosen from without the itinerant ranks. It has always been judged a matter of del- icacy with the ministry to have any thing to do with the business of ways and means. And to the best of my knowledge, they have in our Conference, always manifes- ted a wish to leave this business with the lay brethren.

But, says your correspondent, "If such a practice had been adopted in the Apos- tles' days, it would have put an end to their prosperity at once, or at least im- peded their progress, just as it is now doing with the Ohio Conference." If the operation of the same financial resolu- tions be here meant, I have to deny both of the brother's positions. As for the Apostle's days, I do not doubt that minis- ters preached and labored to establish the doctrine of the Cross, without receiving regular salaries; i. e. before there were regular churches and charges established; and that they looked for a reward only at the resurrection of the just. But at the same time, I do not doubt that after the establishment of the christian institu- tions in any part, ministers who served regular charges received a competent support from their people, whether their allowance was fixed by statute or not, and whether raised by subscription or other- wise. This I think very evident from the writings of the Apostles. And, un- likely as it may seem to brother A., I think it not impossible, that in case any people had neglected to do their duty by those who labored amongst them, that such a people might even in the Apostles' days, have been left without a preacher.

But the working of this thing the broth- er declares is now impeding our prog- ress in the Ohio Conference. I cannot believe a word of it. For, as I have sta- ted, that the rule has not been reduced to practice. And should it be, I do not be- lieve it would prevent one worthy person from joining us, nor cause one to leave us. I see not, how it can have a bearing upon any, (even the poor,) save the cov- etous. "The law is not made for a right- eous man." But is it this thing that impedes our progress in the Ohio Con- ference? I verily thought that it was in great measure another thing, particularly in some parts of our work. I once heard an intelligent lay brother, E. Hoskin, ex- press an opinion, which I have since heard reiterated a thousand times by other lay brethren who give the best evidence of their love to the church. His remark was: "The bottom will fall out of our ecclesiastical tub, if our people do not sustain their ministers better."

Mr. Editor, I thought I should be the last man to turn lecturer upon the sup- port of the ministry. But since I have been constrained to make these remarks let me venture one more. I agree with Brother A. that something impedes our progress in some parts of the work. I presume that different causes may oper- ate in different cases, and sometimes a combination of causes. But amongst the rest, I fear that one has been overlooked by Brother A. And that I may not be "anti-scriptural," let me quote: 'Ye are cursed with a curse." Wherefore? "For ye have robbed me," saith the Lord.— Wherein? "In tithes and offerings."— What then? "Bring ye all the tithes in- to the storehouse, and prove me now here- with, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing," This is scripture— I leave it, without comment, to speak for itself. The scriptures of the Old and New Testaments contain many cautions to the people of God against covetousness and laying up treasures upon earth.— And is there no tendency in these latter times to this evil? Were not those scrip- tures "written for our admonition?" Is it not a matter of extreme delicacy for a minister, at present, to hint such a sub- ject? In the Apostles' days, we find that the people were constantly stirred up to good works and to liberality. St. Paul did not hesitate to give charge that "El- ders who labor in word and doctrine should be counted worthy of double hon- or," because, says he, the scripture saith, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that tread- eth out the corn," and "the laborer is worthy of his reward." Farther, he bids Timothy, who was a young minister, "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they do good—be rich in good works —ready to distribute—willing to commu- nicate, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation," &c. It is evident that the Apostles and other ministers, as often and as freely exhorted their people to this branch of their duty, as to any other. But how seldom is the like hinted by ministers among us now-a-days. It would never do. This is a subject, I see, which ministers must not touch. But is it not a hard case, Mr. Editor, that even a committee of intelligent, respectable laymen, are not permitted to speak out upon this evil (COVETOUSNESS,) and say: we pray you, brethren, put away from a- mong you this sin.

Bro. A. says in conclusion, "our system admits of amendments," &c., and this we all know. He proposes an investigation to show wherein it may be corrected and improved. Of course I do not object to this investigation, but am as anxious as any one to have things right. But I con- sider that he has begun wrong, and that should he continue wrong, so far from improving our system, he will but make it the worse for mending. With this impres- sion, and from a sense of duty in vindi- cation of the Conference, I have, Mr. Ed- itor, troubled you and your readers with these animadversions.

With the utmost good will to all,
I am yours,
A. H. BASSETT.

Utica, Ia., Jan. 10, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor:—I am a regular reader of your paper, and have paid particular attention to its contents. If I understand the object of your press it is mainly to sustain the interests of the church with which you are associated. Without this consideration, you would not have vested a capital of a thousand or fifteen hundred dollars. I think your paper well calcu- lated to promote the object of its establish- ment. And I regret to see a disposition manifested on the part of some of your correspondents to introduce into your columns a subject which can do no possi- ple good under the heavens; nor have any other effect but to injure the paper and the interests of your church. I mean the subject of ABOLITION DISCUSSIONS.

I have not the slightest disposition to censure you, sir, for permitting essays upon that subject into your columns.— From the character of your paper, and situated as you are, you could not con- sistently do otherwise. But it is the imprudence of your friends, who impose upon you communications foreign from your main design, that I deprecate.

My attention, sometime since, was di- rected to a communication from Mr. Dalbey, of Pittsburgh, which I think was as perfectly an uncalled for thing as I have lately noticed. If the gentleman wishes to be an Abolitionist, it is undoubt- edly his privilege to be one; if he desired to make a public avowal of his principles, why did he not unite with an Abolition Society and deliver a speech upon the subject. This, I should supposed, would have satisfied any man's conscience. But to proclaim himself through your columns in the manner he did, went to make the impression throughout the community, that he had become heated on the subject of Abolition, and of course, would be cal- culated to provoke against him that pre- judice which exists in the public mind against Abolitionists, and so far, to close the door to his usefulness. He will, doubtless, some day, regret such impru- dence. Be ye wise as serpents, but harm- less as doves, saith the Redeemer,

The most exceptionable article, how- ever, I have seen on the subject, in your paper, is the communication of the Rev. John Clarke, in your 23d number. Not only are the remarks above applicable to this production, but the style of it is in my opinion very exceptionable. Such heated expressions would do very well for an Abolition paper, which is read by none but Abolitionists, and whose appe- tites are so keen that they could relish and digest any thing on that subject. But to write such an article for a sheet, dedi- cated to another enterprise, a considera- ble portion of whose readers wish to hear nothing in relation to the matter in it, I think, is in exceeding bad taste.

Again; in alluding to the monetary affairs and commercial embarrassment of the country, he says that "Slavery" "is a principal procuring cause of the present distress." Such a declaration is no great compliment to the gentleman's discern- ment. Whatever chastisement slavery may merit, the present commercial distress can have little to do with it, either imme- diately or remotely. What man of obser- vation does not know that the present mo- netary difficulties have grown out of a wretched & wreckless tinkering with the currency of the country? As this is the leading sentiment which figures through all the declamation of his article, it looks very meager when striped of it. This fur- nishes practical illustration of the charge against Abolitionists, that they are men of but "one idea;" they can see nothing but slavery in any subject, and it never once enters into their minds that there are other offences that also need correc- tion.

That slavery is a moral offence, I have no hesitancy in admitting; but whether it is a minister's duty, who thus believes, to co-operate with the present Abolition en- terprise, I think questionable. When this association first commenced its oppo- sition to slavery, it placed the question entirely on moral grounds. They asked only for permission to go to the south with moral suasion, and proposed to risk the whole on the issue. Nothing at all was then said about political action.—Thus far, I could find no objection to their movements. But ultimately, a resolution was passed by the Society, proposing to interrogate all candidates for office upon their Abolition faith, and to vote for those who were in favor of emancipation, irrespective of parties. This resolution has led to a thousand perplexing and teasing questions to candidates at elections, and frequently caused the philanthropic Abolitionist to become the tool of the vilest demagogue, who would not hesitate a moment to use him to accomplish his purpose. And now a strong movement is made, and I have little doubt, but it will succeed, to get up a distinct political party. Mr. James G. Birney, a leading Abolitionist, has already been put in nomination for the Presidency, by a portion of the Society; and his very manner of declining the nomination shows that he would have accepted it, if he had thought there were any prospects for success.

Now, I do not say that it is wrong to make the abolition of slavery a political question; but I do say, that whenever it abandons the high ground of moral suasion, and assumes the attitude of a political campaign, that ministers of the gospel should have nothing to do with leading the van. What would be thought of a minister of religion, charged with the spiritual interests of the church, who would assume to take a leading part with one of the political divisions of the day. Public opinion, sir, would execrate him; and although even the party with whom he associated might use him as a tool, yet respect him they could not. The very same is applicable to POLITICAL Abolitionism. I have no doubt but the men of "one idea" will dissent from this position. But the calm and dispassionate portion of the community will see its correctness.

Therefore, when the Rev. Mr. Clarke informs us that he has charge of a circuit, and at the same time is participating in the formation of Abolition Societies, I should adjudge him to be exceedingly indiscreet. Saying nothing about its identifying him with POLITICAL abolitionism, it must render him, as a minister, comparatively useless to that portion of the community who have strong prejudices against Abolitionists, and certainly these are worth saving too.

I am not, sir, a member of your church, but I highly approve of your principles of ecclesiastical polity; and think, so far as those principles prevail, that they will tend to ameliorate slavery of every description. I am of opinion that your church could not better serve the cause of humanity than to attend to the promotion of your own particular enterprize, and I think much harm may come of your ministers meddling too much with exciting topics foreign to your own duty.

I hope, Mr. Editor, you will not think these remarks impertinent, because they do not come from a member of your church. They are well intended, and I hope they will be received as such.

Yours, very respectfully, &c.,
J. SMITH.

Sugar Grove, Ohio, February, 1840.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

Bro. Springer:—We have closed a protracted meeting at Evensburgh, Ohio, which commenced the 9th instant, and continued 'till the 26th, including eighteen days; during which time, we had special manifestations of the Divine presence, in the awakening and conversion of sinners.

The usual exercises were prayer meetings at half past nine, in the morning, which were well attended by members of different churches; preaching at eleven, at which time, we generally had a respectable congregation of attentive hearers. We had the assistance of brothers Inskeep and McConnell, of the Methodist Protestant Church, and brother Johnston, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and some of our local brethren, who labored zealously and to profit in the promotion of the revival. Anxious meetings at four in the evening, to which were invited all who truly desired to flee from the wrath to come, and seek salvation. Three or four of the brethren were instructed to exhort and pray with the seekers. These meetings were scenes of both mourning and rejoicing; they were sometimes attended by as many as twelve or fourteen persons of various ages and sex. On one occasion, eleven young men presented themselves as seekers at the anxious room. These meetings were particularly profitable. Preaching at early candlelight, at which time we had generally large congregations. The subjects discussed were of a practical and experimental nature, leading to faith and repentance. Every second or third morning, in place of prayer meeting, we had a general class meeting or love-feast, in which our Episcopal brethren united with us, as on all other occasions, during the meeting, in the bonds of christian zeal and affection. The Lord bless this state of union wherever it exists, and send it where it does not. As the fruits of this meeting, TWENTY-NINE members were added to our church, five to the M. E. Church and some to the United Brethren.

The evening of the 20th was a time of rejoicing with christians, which continued through the night, or nearly so. On the morning of the 21st, CATHARINE WISE, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, became, to all appearance, entirely insensible to every surrounding object, and lay in this situation until dark, when she revived and spake a few words, then relapsed into her former state of insensibility, and so remained until the morning of the 22d, being twenty four hours, when she finally revived.

She related the following at general class meeting, consisting of near one hundred persons, as well as to the subscribers, who noted it down, as the scenes presented to her mind while in this situation;—

"I approached a gate consisting of iron bars, and while standing before this gate I smelled a strong scent as of sulphur.—An angel now appeared to me passing from the inside;—at his approach the place was beautifully illuminated. He led me to an other gate, where I heard singing as by innumerable voices, but saw nothing until we approached a third, which was standing wide open. Near this and on the right hand stood the Saviour of sinners, upon a large square white throne, with gold encircling the edges, with his hands extended, the left pointing downward and the right upward, and in the latter a golden pencil.

"As I approached him I inquired, is this my father's throne? To which he replied in the affirmative. And while I approached and shook hands and conversed with Him, I felt as easy and as familiar, as though conversing with an earthly friend.

"I asked if my mother were there—she is, was the reply. I then asked if my other relations were there, without mentioning names. Some of them are. I then inquired if a particular relation were there whose name I mentioned, and was informed he was, but that it was not now given to me to know any of them until I returned and came again. I lastly asked for an other individual, but the answer was I know him not.

"As I passed up the streets of the city, whose pavements were gold, which was brightly shining, I shook hands with the angels as I went, but they said nothing to me. As I was progressing forward I heard a voice, seemingly behind me, call me to return to the Saviour, which when I did he presented me with a golden harp which he directed me to use. And while all around me were tuning their harps in praise I employed mine for the same purpose. As I passed round I observed that some appeared more happy than others—their countenances shown with greater brilliancy. Some were kneeling, with their hand raised and facing the throne; others were marching towards those who were prostrated with flowing white robes. Among the numerous voices which I heard I thought I could distinguish that of my mother but did not look to see her, as I was told I could not know her now.

"I then returned to the Saviour who looked down upon me with a smile, and received the harp, and said to me, go to earth again—prove faithful—do all the good you can, and you shall return here and know all your friends. Immediately the angel conducted me back to the place where he first appeared."

MOSES N. WARREN, Sup. Cosh. Ct, and six other names.

Ohio, Jan. 31st 1840.

UTICA, IA., JAN. 24, 1840.

Bro. Springer: It is time that I report something concerning Charlestown ct.—I would be glad to have accounts more cheering to furnish, but "such as I have give I unto thee." The circuit has been in rather low condition. This, however, is not to reflect upon my predecessor, Br. Wheatley. He is a sacrificing, faithful brother, and loves our cause. Last year he had an extensive four week circuit, including what is now called Driftwood Mission. By severe affliction at one time, and a serious accident at two other times during the year, he lost several entire rounds upon the circuit. These disappointments exercised a discouraging influence in different parts. To this is to be added my own misfortune. At the last Conference I was not released by the Trustees of the Institution from the Agency in which I had served the preceding year.—I had to occupy about two months in business pertaining thereto, and did not reach my circuit until about the 10th of November last. Meanwhile, some of our friends had become discouraged by the lack of regular preaching, &c. Diligent efforts were made by the worthy preacher in charge of the circuit in the old church, to gather up our few sheep in the wilderness. I wish to acknowledge his kindness to our people in their destitute situation. When he judged it doubtful that they would ever again be supplied with a preacher, and the regular means of grace, he kindly offered to receive and restore them to all the immunities of "the Mother Church."—May the episcopacy reward him for his laudable endeavors, and advance him to the Presiding Eldership the next vacancy that occurs. Strange to tell, however, very few, some two or three females only, to my knowledge, availed themselves of these friendly overtures.

We have in this circuit some substantial Reformers, and amongst the number the same firm brother of whom you published an anecdote in 1832. It would be new to many of your readers, let us name it again. The circuit preacher of the M. E. Connexion, in those days used to read the Discipline to his people and lecture thereon. He professed to be "a Methodist of the old stamp, inside and outside," and exhibited the great impropriety of "turning the coat." In his round, he attended to this at a certain village, and proceeded to meet the class. Our radical brother was present, by the solicitation of a member, but the preacher knew it not. When spoken to, this brother stated his exercises in such a lively manner that the preacher manifested evident satisfaction, and warmly bade him, "Go on, brother." Then turning to the rest, he said, "I warrant you, that brother will never turn his coat." To this he responded, "Amen," and unto this day he adheres firmly to his purpose.

After all the discouragements, our circuit is not in as low a state as has been reported abroad. A portion of our membership have kept alive in religion, others are arousing to increased attention to the means of grace. But we all have need of being more abundantly revived. And thanks be to God, we believe He will yet visit us with the outpouring of His spirit We have experienced some comfortable tokens that He hath not forsaken His people. A number have united with us sufficient to make up for those who have withdrawn and removed within the last six months. I wish to state that Brother Wheatley and Bro. Douthart from Madison circuit, assisted us at a three days' meeting at Bethlehem in November last. Likewise, Bro. Collins, superintendent of Madison circuit, and Bro. Wheatley attended our first quarterly meeting at Guernsey in December ult. Their labors were not only approved, but they tended greatly, I trust, to edification. May they have their reward. Our second quarterly meeting, I wish those brethren to know, is to be held at Charlestown, including the second Lord's day (8th) of March. We greatly need help from abroad, at our more popular meetings in this circuit, and earnestly solicit the aid of such brethren as can be forthcoming.

A. H. BASSETT, Sup't.
Charlestown Ct.

NOTE.—If our brother C. Woodruff would furnish an article explanatory of "the devil's humbugs," alluded to in a recent communication of his, I presume it would be of general edification, and would gratify. A. H. B.

ELIZABETHTOWN, MARSHALL, VA. JAN. 27, 1840.

Bro. C. Springer:—Having been employed by the President to itinerate for the present year, I have commenced my labors as missionary. My field of operations is from Wheeling, Va., down to Tyler, including Marshall Co. I have visited Wheeling and find the little church there in rather a desponding condition. I have attended to several other places and held meetings and find some kind friends. I feel encouraged to try to preach the gospel, and to serve the interests of our liberal principles. I have not attempted yet to organize any societies, but shall try on my next round.

Yours, &c. JOSEPH ALLEN.

CLARKSBURG, VA., JAN. 27, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—Having to write to you on business, I wish to say that I reached this place the Saturday after Conference and commenced my labors the next day. Since then I have held one two day and one quarterly meeting. At the latter we were assisted by the President, Brother Brown, whose labors were blessed, and the meeting was very refreshing.—We have received into the church since conference sixteen members. Since the deep snow we have not done much, owing to the bad road and the want of suitable houses of worship. The coming spring we hope to do better.

Yours respectfully, R. SIMONTON.

WARREN CO., O., JAN. 28, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—I attended a protracted meeting at Cincinnati the fore part of this month, some ten days, during which upward of thirty joined the church, most of whom professed religion. The meeting was still progressing and increasing in interest when I left. I expect you will hear from Brothers Snethen and Barnes in relation to this meeting.—I shall be able in a few days to start on a Missionary tour. Yours, &c. A. M'GUIRE.

MOUNT MORRIS, GREEN CO., PA., JAN. 25, 1840.

Much respected friend:—Since my last communication to you, we have had an addition of about thirty persons to the Methodist P. Church, principally in the neighborhood of Cheet neck, and the good begun work seems to be extending on the circuit. Since the commencement of the Conference year there has been an accession of more than an hundred members on Middletown Circuit.

Yours, in the best of bonds,
JOHN FORDYCE.

OBITUARY.

CAMBRIDGE, O., FEB. 1, 1840

Dear Bro. Springer: We have been called to mourn the loss of Sister SARCHITT, wife of David Sarchitt, who departed this life on the thirtieth of November last, in the twenty-eight year of her age, at their residence four miles north-east of Cambrige. In her life she was an example of piety,—in her sickness she evidenced great fortitude and resignation to the will of God, and as death approached he gradually lost his sting, and the grave its terror; she rejoiced in final victory, bade death a cordial welcome, expressed an ardent desire to depart, and shouted Glory! Glory!! to God, in the arms of death with her last expiring breath.

She followed two of her infants, who had died a short time previous, and the only remaining one she had, followed in a few days. She has left an affectionate husband and numerous friends to mourn her early death. Yours,
W. MARSHALL.

Departed this life, on the 2d day of January, 1840, the Rev. JOSEPH A. SHACKELFORD, one of the oldest and most respectable citizens of this place. The deceased was a man, perhaps as well known in this county as a local Preacher, as any other man. His history is closely connected with the rise and progress of religion in the neighborhood, where he has resided for many years. As a father, none excelled him in affection and parental care. A considerable portion of his life has been spent in striving for the conversion of his friends and neighbors, to christianity, and to add to the comfort and happiness of all around him. The graves of many have been bedewed with his tears; and the dying pillows of scores have been softened by his voice, exhorting them to put their trust in the Saviour of the world. He died in the triumphs of that religion which he professed for a number of years, with the full assurance of meeting his beloved Saviour in the mansions of eternal rest, where moth and rust doth not corrupt, and where all his troubles will be over. T.

Morgantown, Va., Jan. 29, 1840.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.—It is a curious fact that thunder and lightning are very rare in Egypt, and never known in Lima; nor is there reason to believe in any place where there is no rain. Neither does it appear that there is any thunder in islands and seas beyond seventy-five degrees of latitude; and in the open ocean, very far from land, thunder is rarely heard. Storms of thunder and lightning are always more dangerous in cold than in hot months, because in these months the clouds are lower. M. Arago has added to the Annuaire of the present year the most eleborate article on this subject that we have yet met with. He states that at the parish of Casena, in Italy, five or six miles in circumference, they have for three years past had raised, at every fifty feet, heaps of straw and light wood, which are set fire to on the approach of a storm; and that during these three years that parish has neither been damaged by lightning, nor has it had hail, though it had suffered every year before, by storms of thunder and lightning. Hence Arago concludes why our mining districts experience less from these storms than our agricultural districts, that is on account of the large fires kept up in the former.—Railway Mag.

THE ESPY THEORY.—Alluding to the theory of Professor Espy, the New York Dispatch argues that the facts he adduces, and the instances he quotes goes clearly to show the truth of the main point, viz: that the rarification of the air, at some point, causes a rushing in of the wind from all others around it. Thus, when calm at any place, we may infer that the wind is blowing towards it as a centre from all other points with more or less violence. Any person who has seated himself before a fire in a room with crannies or cracks in it, must have noticed that let the air holes be where they will, the wind tends to the fire place.—The rarification of the air, at any one point on the surface of the globe, produced the same effect. This theory explains, also why storms as the phrase is, "travel to windward." The air rushes in near the calm place first, of course, and the circle widens, as the duration of the wind lasts.

THE BLOOD HOUNDS.—We have before us, says the New York Commercial, a letter from a friend at Havana, dated November 28, from which we make the following extracts—"There has been much said upon the subject of the Government having sent agents here to procure blood hounds to be used in Florida to exterminate the Indians; one of those agents informed me that such was his object, and he has within a day or two returned with the conditions upon which they and their keepers can be procured, for the Government to decide. I have not the least doubt it is their intention to use this barbarous mode of eradicating that much injured race."

TRADE WITH CHINA.—Among the public documents recently printed, we find the memorial of Russell Sturgis, R. B. Forbes and others, American merchants residing at Canton, in China, briefly setting forth the recent proceeding at that port, connected with the suppression of the opium trade and soliciting a co-operation by the government of the United States with that of Great Britain, in establishing commercial relations with China on a safe and honorable footing, and especially in obtaining the concessions following.

Permission for foreign envoys to reside near the court at Pekin, on the terms and with all the privileges accorded at other courts, through whom appeals may be made to the Imperial Government in cases of difficulty with the local authorities.

2d. The promulgation of a fixed tariff of duties on articles, both of import and export, from which no deviation shall be allowed under any pretext whatever.

3d. A system of bonding warehouses, or some regulations permitting the transhipment of such goods as it may be desirable to re-export for want of a market in China.

4th. The liberty of trading at other port or ports in China than that of Canton.

5th. Compensation for the losses caused by the stoppage of the whole legal trade of the port and the consequent detention of vessels and property; with a guarantee against the recurrence of similar arbitrary acts, and security for the free egress from Canton and other ports, of all persons not guilty of crimes or civil offences, at any and at all times.

6th. That until the Chinese laws are distinctly made known and recognized, the punishment for wrongs committed by foreigners upon the Chinese or others shall not be greater than is applicable to the like offence by the laws of the United States or England; nor shall any punishment be inflicted by the Chinese authorities, upon any foreigner, until the guilt of the party shall have been fairly and clearly proved.

Should the government of the United States determine not to interpose in the affairs of American citizens in China, then the memorial asks for the appointment of an agent or commissioner, to reside at Canton, with a sufficient naval force to protect American commerce and the persons of American citizens from being held responsible for the acts of lawless traders, and for the hostile operations of a foreign fleet, or at least to prevent any paper blockade from interfering with their commerce; and also to secure a participation in such privileges as may be granted by the Chinese government to other powers.

The memorialists avow their opinion that the course pursued by the commissioner was unjust, and no better then robbery—that if satisfaction is not yielded to the demand of the British government, a blockade of the chief ports and rivers will be resorted to—and that the appearance of a naval force from England, France and the United States, on the coast of China, would, without bloodshed, obtain from the Chinese government such acknowledgements and treaties as would place the foreign commerce on a safe and advantageous footing.

The London Courier of the 14th contains the following paragraph:

"His Excellency Mr. Stevenson, the American minister, attended yesterday at the Treasury Department and the Bank of England, and closed the negotiation which has been pending so long between the Government and that of the United States, relative to the number of slaves claimed by American citizens as their property, and which having been sh wrecked some eight or nine years ago the Bahamas, was liberated by the a thorities of Nassau. The amount of co pensation which we understand her m jesty's Government finally agreed to pa and was yesterday received by the Am ican minister, amounted to between twe ty and thirty thousand pounds sterling

FOREIGN NEWS.

NINE DAYS LATER.

By the Patrick Henry, Capt. Delan at New York, we have London papers the evening of Dec. 25th—and Liverpo of the 26th The British Queen arriv at Gravesend on the morning of the 25t after a tedious and stormy passage. N ther the Cambridge nor the Independen had arrived out. The Cotton market ha sustained itself better, perhaps, than wa expected, having declined only about 4d. Sales were moderate. The mone market in England continued in an u settled state—U. S. Bank shares wer quoted £18 5 a 10. Parliament was meet on the 26th January The Queen marriage, it was stated in the Time would take place on the 4th February Strenuous efforts were making all thr the kingdom to repeal the Corn Law From Huddersfield, Leeds, Rochdale an Bradford, the accounts of the state of trad were discouraging in the extreme. I Bradford, one of the larges failures know in the trade, Messrs. Hinds & Co., spir ners, had occurred, and had cast a gen eral gloom over the town. We give th few interesting extracts we find in th English papers. From China there wa nothing new. In France the King ha opened the Chamber of Deputies with speech, which will be found below. Th news from Algiers was calculated t cause further uneasiness to the French M. Guizot had been offered the embass to London. From Spain there is nothin of interest: the kingdom was in rather a more tranquil state. Cabrera had liber ated 2000 Christino prisoners, in orde to get rid of supporting them.

THE LONDON MONEY MARKET.—The momey maket is in a very disturbed state Large failures have taken place in the woolen districts. Cotton is down ⅛ a ¼ Money is so plenty on the Continent that it commands but 3 per cent in Hamburg Silver is more plentiful in Prussia. U. S. Bank stock sales were made at 19⅞.—Rothschild's American loan commanded 2 per cent. premium.

THE BARINGS AND OUR STATE STOCKS.—The following circular, which is without date, was issued by Messrs. Baring & Co., relative to the affairs of the United States Bank will be read with interest:

"The late loan made by the United States Bank for about two years, and for £800,000 on deposit of Pennsylvania and other States' stock, at a price which gives 10 per cent. annual interest to the subscribers, shows what rate of interest must be paid to obtain any amount of money on the best American securities, and serves, therefore, as a guide to the capitalists here for their purchase of State stocks. We quote the last prices of the principal securities at which business has been done, but add that, even at these rates, only small and occasional sales are practicable.

"The continued fall in their value destroys speculation, whilst many years will be required for real investments to absorb all that is at present in our market. We do not doubt but that such gradual purchases will continue of the stocks of well-known States which do not over-issue, and which faithfully meet their engagements to their creditors, as the confidence in the resourses and national honor of the United States remains undiminished in the country, as well as the conviction that by such investments England employs her annual surplus of capital both safely and profitably, encourages her best customer, and binds more closely the ties of mutual interest between the two countries.

"But if the old scheme of interual improvements in the Union is to be carried into effect on the vast scale and with the rapidity lately projected, and by means of foreign capital, a more comprehensive guarantee than that of individual States will be required to raise so large amount in a short time.

"A national pledge would undoubtedly collect capital together from all parts of Europe, but the forced sales of loans made separately by all the individual States, in reckless competion, through a number of channels, render the terms more and more onereus for all, lower the repuation of American credit, and (as reliance is almost exclusively placed upon market,) produce temporary mischief here, by absorbing the floating capital, diverging money from regular business, deranging banking operations, and producing an unnatual balance of trade against this country.

"It would seem, therefore, as if most of the States either pause in the execution of their works of improvement, or some general system of combination must be adopted.

"All Corporation Stocks are neglected, nor do we hear of any transaction in Bank Shares, excepting those of the U. S. Bank.

"We have the honor to be your obedient servants, (Signed,)

"BARING, BROTHERS & Co."

ALGIERS.—The Paris Moniteur of the 23d of December contains the following telegraphic despatch from Marshal Vallee to the Minister of War. Algiers 16th, and Toulon 19th December.

"Two combats have taken place around Belidah.

"The regular infantry of the Emir, were put to the sword and dispersed.—The enemy has not approached either from Coleah or from Sahel.

"The Algiers and Neptune are in sight. They will arrive to-day at Algiers."

AFFAIRS OF THE EAST.—Letters from Constantinople represent all hopes of a settlement of the Eastern question to be at an end.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Lord Palmerston and the dowager Countess Cowper were married on the 16th of December. The lady is sister to Lord Melbourne, and in her 53d year. Lord Palmerston is in his 56th.

The United Service Gazette says that the Queen's marriage will be signalized, among other things, by a revival of a female order of knighthood—or rather of that branch of the order of the garter which was established by Richard II., and included the ladies of the knights.

It is reported that Mr. O'Connell intends to resign his seat in Parliament.—That he is about commencing a new career, is evident from the following notice, published in the Dublin papers:

"MERRION SQUARE, Dec. 23.

"I request a meeting of my constituents at the Adelphi Theatre, Great Brunswick street, to-morrow, (Tuesday,) the 24th inst. at half past three o'clock, in order that I may communicate to them my views of the necessity of taking immediate measures to defend our lives, properties, rights and liberties, against the envenomed and increasing hostility of the bigoted Tories of Great Britain.

"Your faithful servant,

"DANIEL O'CONNELL."

The Glasgow Herald of the 21st of December has the following paragraph:

"We are sorry to learn of another heavy failure here yesterday. Within the last few weeks we have had in Glasgow alone failures to the extent of between £200,000 and £390,000."

WRECK OF THE BRILLIANT STEAM PACKET, AND LOSS OF CAPT. WADE.—This melancholy intelligence reached here yesterday morning. The Brilliant steam packet left Leith on Wednesday afternoon for Aberdeen, and encountered a strong gale from S. E. with a heavy sea during the night. The vessel being, however, a good sea boat, and remarkable for her steadiness in the water, reached the Cove, a point about four miles south of Aberdeen, by 5 o'clock in the morning, when, unfortunately, a heavy sea struck her, which washed Capt. Wade overboard. The darkness of the night, and the terrible sea running at the time, totally precluded all hope of rendering him any aid. After the catastrophe the vessel made for Aberdeen Harbor, which she reached in about an hour and a half afterwards, but a tremendously violent surge breaking on the bar formed by the river Dee, the vessel became unmanageable, and was driven upon the south side of the North Pier, nearly opposite the light staff, where she struck upon the flat part of the shoeing. Happily those on land were enabled to render aid, by bringing the vessel to and getting planks placed between it and the shore, by which means all the passengers and crew were got safely ashore. The efforts were then directed to the cargo, the greater part of which was recovered, but in a damaged state.

At half-past eight o'clock, however, the vessel was discovered to be on fire, originating, as is supposed, from the engine fires, and notwithstanding every exertion to extinguish it, she was nearly burned through by noon, and may be said to be a complete wreck.—Caledonian Mercury.

THE SPEECH OF THE KING OF FRANCE.—By the French mail of Monday we have received the speech of the King of the French on opening the Chambers. Every thing went off quietly.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... FEBRUARY 12, 1840.

The Sub-Treasury Bill has passed the Senate by a vote of 24 to 18.

A Bill has passed both Houses of the Legislature of Ohio, allowing juries before Justices of the Peace, and is now a law of the State.

Mr. George Swan, son of the Hon. G. Swan, of Columbus, Ohio, in the 19th year of his age, was among those who perished with the Lexington steamboat.

On the 25th ult., at Wilmington, Delaware, St. Andrews, a Protestant Episcopal Church, a most beautiful edifice, was consumed by fire.—It caught from the furnace in the basement, by which the house was warmed.

A fire occurred in the city of New York, on Monday evening, the 27th ultimo, which destroyed property to the amount of between one and two millions of dollars. It is said that about 10,000 chests of tea were consumed This has so reduced the stock of tea, that it is thought it will tend to enhance the price.

Bro. A. Shinn, under date of the 4th instant, says, "I am happy to state that there has been, for a considerable time, in Pittsburgh and Allegheny town, uncommon religious excitement among the several religious denominations, and especially among the Presbyterians and Protestant Methodists."

We learn that the Rev. Jesse Stoneman, of Thornville, Ohio, a local ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, departed this life a few weeks since. He was among the early settlers of this country, and probably among the very first itinerant ministers of that order, who preached the gospel within the bounds of this State.

We have read all the official documents which have passed between the public functionaries of the two Governments, in relation to the Boundary Question. They simply show that the borderers, on both sides of the question, have been excited, and that both, perhaps, have violated the stipulations between the parties. But we can scarcely think it amounts to "a speck of war." Either of the nations have too much coolness and good sense to be excited with the squabbles of these borderers about a few pine trees. We think the language held by the Governor of Maine to be very exceptionable. He intimates the State has been waiting for the British Government to surrender up their claims peaceably, and that if this is not done, they mean to have them any way; plainly indicating the State does not intend to abide the issue, should the decision go against them.

We have carefully read through the report of the Minority of the Committee, of the Ohio Legislature, in the case of W. B. LLOYD, and making every allowance for party predilections, that may be called for, in relation to the statements of the report, it has satisfied us that the attack upon this gentleman is the most infamous. And we feel it to be our duty to bear our testimony against such merciless assaults upon reputation. What! have the politicians of the day turned into vultures? and are they determined to devour each other, reputation and all? It does seem as though they had abandoned all sense of decency and were determined to sacrifice every thing at the shrine of their respective political idols. We do not excuse one party more than the other. We are satisfied that there are better men in the community than the leading men of both the political parties, and think it high time the people would begin to hunt them up.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We have not had time yet to examine "Anti-Popery," but will attend to him ere long.

The obituary of Wm. L. Dunlap, in our next.

Bro. T. Oliver, of Pittsburgh, asks us to return him the letter to which we referred in our 23d number; he does not ask for a copy, but for the original. This we cannot do. It is our property as we have paid for it, and if he be disposed to make a fuss about it, it is necessary we should have it for self defence. We will bring the letter to Conference; if he will meet us there, he shall have every satisfaction that the principles of justice or gentility demands.

Several communications have been received that we have not yet had time to examine.

LITERARY NOTICES.

THE CASKET.—We acknowledge the reception of the first and second Nos. of vol. 16, of this most valuable Literary Magazine. This is a monthly pamphlet of 48 pages, published by G. R. Graham & Co., No. 36, Carter Alley, Philadelphia, at $3 per annum,—$5 will pay for two copies—invariably in advance. This Magazine is adorned with various cuts; indeed, the proprietors seem to be resolved to render it every way worthy of the public patronage, and having recently engaged a number of valuable contributors to the work, hope to make it at least equal to the best production of the kind in the country. We shall avail ourself of some of its articles to enrich our own columns.

THE LADY'S BOOK, published by Louis A. Godey, 211, Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, and edited by Mrs. Hale, Mrs. Sigourney and L. A. Godey, is a monthly Magazine of the same size of the Casket,—$3 per annum, in advance. We have received the January No. of the XX vol. It is executed with exquisite taste; is embellished with several beautiful cuts. This work has probably the greatest number of able Lady contributors of any thing of the kind in the country. Pretty soon, we shall give an article from this "Book," entitled the "Exclusiveness," by Mrs. Embury. Her Fred. is a man of such noble sentiments,—his opinions are in such perfect accordance with our own, that whether he ever had a being or not, we cannot withhold them from our readers. But could we only gain an introduction to this most elegant writer, we would whisper to her the propriety of guarding against the use of certain phrases, which in the estimation of some pious people, might be considered too irreverent, such as "Heaven's Fred," "Lord brother," &c. Said a great mind, "if meat make my brother to offend, I will not eat it while the world shall stand."

BROTHER JONATHAN.—This "Great Western among newspapers" pays us his weekly visits with much regularity, except the time of the deep snow storm, he could not raise steam enough to pass the mountains, when we missed him for a season; but we know how to excuse him. We give him much credit for the able manner in which he pays the "ruffians" and "rowdies" of Congress their dues. While his pages have been of considerable use to us, we trust, in turn, he has been benefited from our services; for in looking over his weekly receipts, we see acknowledgments from many of our own subscribers, and more from the towns and villiges through which our paper circulates. There are now few better mediums in the west for general circulation than our own. We at present, send papers to about three hundred post offices, scattered over the country, from the foot of Laurel Hill to the Territory of Iowa. And we still have a steady increasing patronage.

AMERICAN WESLEYAN OBSERVER.—This is an imperial sheet, to be published weekly, at Lowell, Massachusetts, at $1 for six months, edited by Messrs. Horton & Scott, the 2d No. of which is before us. While the editors promises to give a summary of general intelligence, they propose to discuss "the principles of universal liberty," but particularly the liberty of the slave. The editors, we believe, are in fellowship with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and must rely, we should think, mainly on the members of that church for support. As their paper is to be, of course, what is termed an Abolition paper, and as Zion's Watchman, of New York, is one of that description, already in existence, and relying on the same source for patronage, it may be asked, what is the reason for introducing to the public, this late paper? We are here, in the absence of information, left partly to conjecture. We think it probable, however, that the "Observer" carries its views of LIBERTY farther than the "Watchman." The latter, while contending very chivalrously for the emancipation of the colored man, says little about the emancipation of the white man. The itinerant ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church have claimed the power by Divine authority (see 94, whole No., Christian Advocate) to exercise an absolute control over more than 6,000,000 laymen and local ministers. To this claim the Watchman seems to have but little objection. So far as white men are concerned it only wishes to transfer the papacy from Rome to London. It is highly probable that the Observer in its views of "universal liberty" proposes contending for the emancipation of the white as well as the colored man; or in other words that it is in favor of the claims of the Methodist laity to representation. If such be its course it shall have our best sympathies.

"To be—or not to be"—a Price Current.—We have but a few words to say on the subject of continuing the BALTIMORE PRICE CURRENT, of which we have been the proprietor, sole editor, and have performed every other office in reference to it, except what pertains to the mechanical department, for nearly two years; and as long articles are not in character with ourself or patrons, we ask the simple question, Shall this paper be sustained?—have we sufficient strength in Baltimore to cherish its existence? For it is here, and among the business men, the high-minded and proud-spirited, where it germinated, and here it must be nourished and resuscitated when it droops—or here it must perish! Three more numbers will complete the second volume, and unless we receive additional support, No. 52 of Vol. 2, will be the last paper. We have exerted all our energies and our patience; and these, with unceasing industry, constituted our capital—when these are exhaused, we are broke.

Will it take better with the public by changing the title of this paper? How will it do to call it the "COMMERCIAL RECORD, and Baltimore Price Current?" Then, again, we shall trespass somewhat on the rights of contempories; for there is scarcely a craft in port, with a piece of bunting at its mast head, that has not "Commercial" upon it.—Lyford.

Will our brother of the type permit us to suggest to him the propriety of enlarging his sheet, and making it also a vehicle for Foreign and Domestic News: giving at the same time articles on Literature, Politics, &c. &c., after the plan of Bicknell? We are extensively acquainted with the wants and wishes of this region of country.—Most business men here are inclined to take but one eastern paper, and they want that to contain the essence of every thing. We hope this suggestion will be taken in kindness, as it is made from the best of feeling. We consider yours a well conducted and valuable business paper, and of much utility to the west, as so large a portion of our produce is vended in Baltimore. And if it could answer the description above, we think it would be well patronized, when known, in this section of country. We should regret to see the "Baltimore Price Current" go down for the want of patronage.

EASTERN MARKETS.

BALTIMORE.—Flour.—Sales of Howard street Flour were made early in the week at the prices which prevailed at the time of making up our last report, $5,62½; and for choice brands 5,68¾ was paid for a few hundred barrels. On Wednesday the price declined to 5,50 for good common brands, and on that and the subsequent days, about 1000 bbls sold from stores at 5,50, and 3 a 400 bbls at 5,47½, while at the same time choice brands brought 5,62½ per bbl. The article was probably a little firmer yesterday than the day previous; the harbor getting open, buyers found it necessary to fill their orders without delay.—The wagon and car price had declined to 5,37½, and continued at that rate yesterday, but some dealers expressed an unwillingness to pay over 5,25. The receipts of the week have been large. Sales of city mills at 5,62½, which we quote.

Provisions.—The stock of old descriptions still continues heavy, as transactions are very limited. We notice the sale of 80 bbls new Mess Pork, of superior quality, at $20 per bbl. Old is still held at 15,50 for mess, and 10 a 10,50 for prime. New Bacon is held at 11 cents for hams; 10 middlings; and 9 for shoulders. We note the sale of 100 kegs western No. 1 Lard at 10½ cts. on time. Butter remains rather inactive.

The Home Market.—There were not exceeding 250 head of Beef Cattle in market on Monday, only 70 of which were taken by the butchers at 6,50 a $7; and 33 by a packer, at 6 dollars.—On Thursday 40 were sold, (all in market,) at 7 a 7,50 a 7,75, the latter for prime. Live Hogs continue to sell, as wanted, at 7 dollars per 100 lbs. Slaughtered are no longer brought forward.—Lyford, February 1st.

PHILADELPHIA.—Flour.—There has been a slight decline in the price of Flour, and buyers for export have again come freely into market this week. The sales exceed 7000 bbls at $5,50 to 5,62½ per bbl. The demand for city use has been to a fair extent at from 5,79 to 5,75 per bbl.—To-day the stock is very light, and no sales have transpired, owing to the snow storm. Rye Flour—sales at 3,50 per bbl.

Provisions.—The sales of Pork, this week, have only been in a retail way, at 15,50 per bbl for Jersey mess But little doing in Bacon, and old has taken a wider range in price.

Cattle Market.—Beef Cattle have been in fair demand, and 400 a 450 were disposed of at 6 a 8 dollars per 100 lbs as in quality.—Bicknell, February 4th.

PITTSBURGH.—Business continues dull and very little doing. Flour from wagons and sleds is selling at 3 dollars to 3,12½, and from stores by the quality at 3,25, and by retail 3,37 to 3,50 per bbl.

Wheat commands 56½ to 60 cents for very choice, and inferior 50 cents per bushel, being a slight advance.

White Lead, has been reduced to 2,50 a keg.—Harris, Feb. 1st.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

Friday, January 31. Mr. Smith, from the committee, reported back, with sundry amendments, the bill concerning divorce and alimony. The amendments were severally considered and agreed to, until the question came up to agree to the recommendation of the committee to strike out the fourth section, and insert a different provision. The original section reads as follows:

"Sec. 4. That the guilty party shall forever thereafter be prohibited from intermarriage; any law, usuage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

The amendment of the committee prohibited intermarrying "for the space of five years."

A division of the question was called for, when the original section was stricken out.

The recommendation to substitute 'five years' for the words 'forever thereafter,' was then lost.

Mr. McLaughlin (Mr. Smith in the chair) moved to fill the blank with 'four years;' which was lost.

On the motion of Mr. Thomas, the blank was filled with 'three years.'

Mr. Faran moved an amendment to the amendment, which provided for the trial of divorce cases by jury, as in other cases of breach of contract; the jury to settle the amount of property to be set apart for the divorced party, and which of the parties shall have the custody of the children.

At the suggestion of Mr. Smith, Mr. Faran withdrew his amendment for the present.

The amendment of the committee, as amended on motion of Mr. Thomas, was then disagreed to—yeas 15, nays 16.

Mr Glover moved to strike out of the first section of the bill, the eight cause of divorce, which is 'habitual drunkenness for the space of two years.' The motion was lost—yeas 8, nays 21.

Mr Faran then moved to recommit the bill to the committee on the Judiciary, with instructions to incorporate the provisions of his amendment, as above.

Mr McLaughlin called for a division of the question. And the question being upon recommitment, it was carried—yeas 16, nays 15.

The Senate then took a recess.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, February 3. The bill to repeal the internal improvement law of March 24, 1837, was passed, by a vote of 54 to 6, and reads as follows:

Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That the act entitled "an act to authorize a loan of credit by the State of Ohio to rail road companies, and to authorize subscriptions by the State to the capital stock of turnpike, canal and slackwater navigation companies," passed March 24, 1837, be and the same is hereby repealed: Provided, nothing herein contained, shall be construed as to prevent the payment by the State to all the companies, with which the State is now connected, the amount now due said companies, on the subscriptions already made, without the addition of any new subscriptions by said companies or the State.

On motion of Mr Morris, it was Resolved, That the Board of Public Works be, and they are hereby, required to lay before this Legislature, at as early a period as practicable, information touching the following points to-wit:

1. The number of agents, sub-agents, managers, or directors, with their names, in any way now, or within the last year, engaged upon salary, or per diem wages, in the employment of the State of Ohio on the National Road.

2. The salary, or per diem rates, to each severally paid, with an explicit statement of services rendered the State, as to kind, &c.; as well as in relation to the kind of contract entered into between the State and said individuals in its employ upon said road.

3. Whether any perquisites attach to any or either of the officers or agents, connected with the management of said road in this State.

We had occasion some time since to allude to "Mr Drake and the Tolls." We then intimated as our opinion, that all was not honestly conducted in relation to the national pike matters. We are satisfied the public is imposed on by the managers of that concern, and we hope the above resolution will drag the corruption to light.

ITEMS.

The New York Courier, alluding to the bill to repeal the charter of the Bank of the United States, says: "We repeat, however, our firm conviction that these corruscations will end in smoke. The credit of the State of Pennsylvania would be annihilated, its vast internal improvements stopped, thousands of men be thrown out of employ, and most important interests sacrificed, were the ostensible objects of the enemies of the Bank really carried into effect."

Having heard during the early part of last week that the bank of the United States had refused to endorse its notes when presented for that purpose, and as bound to do by law, we on Wednesday, sent a note to the banking house for the purpose of testing the matter, when the officer to whom it was presented refused to make the endorsement, and also refused to assign a cause.—Bicknell.

A writer in the Philadelphia North American is of opinion that the Pennsylvania Legislature will repeal the charter of the U. S. Bank.—ib.

United States Bank Stock sold in New York, on Saturday, the 25th ultimo, at 77½—in Philadelphia at 82½.—ib.

A whig U. S. Senator has been elected by the legislature of Michigan.

N. P. Tallmadge, whig, has been elected U. S. Senator of New York, by a majority of 19.

A bill to abolish imprisonment for debt passed the Indiana House of Representatives on the 6th by a large majority.

Wheat down to fifty cents. How now, do the farmers feel?—Star.

They feel it going against the grain.—Steubenville Herald.

Henry D. Gilpin, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed and confirmed Attorney-General of the U. S., vice Felix Grundy, resigned.

The number of bankrupts in England and Wales from November 1, 1838, to November 1, 1839, were nine hundred and thirty.

A public dinner has been given to Judge White at Washington, on the occasion of his resigning his seat in the Senate. Mr. Clay, Mr. Preston, and almost every Whig member of Congress were present. It was a highly intellectual affair. Few men are more highly estimated than Judge White.

The editor of the Grand Gulf Whig was lately atttacked by two brothers, named Smith, knocked down, and twice fired at. He, however, recovered himself, and with a knife inflicted several severe wounds on each of his assailants, which it is thought would prove mortal to both.

THE BEEF PRESSURE.—During an examination before the Judges of the Quarter Sessions and the Register of Wills, a few days since, relative to the appointing of administrators to the estate of Anthony McConnell, drover, deceased, it was stated by the counsel of one of the persons who was an applicant for letters of administration, that his client had, in one single transaction, in company with Mr. McConnell, purchased $177,000 worth of beef cattle during the past summer, for the purpose of supplying the New York market.

This contract, as we understand, was entered into at about the time when Philadelphians were told that owing to the scarcity of beef cattle, the drovers could not obtain them for our market.—Philadelphia North American.

THE AMISTAD CASE—APPEALED.—To the surprise of the friends of these poor Africans, and of many other persons, the District Attorney informed the Judge, at the adjourned District Court, 23d inst. at Hartford, that he had received instructions to appeal, in the name of the United States, from the decree of the District Judge relative to the Africans, and also from the allowance of salvage to Lieut. Gedney, &c. on the property represented by the Spanish minister. A portion of the goods being claimed by the Spanish owners individually, an appeal was also taken in their behalf from that part of the decree allowing salvage. The counsel for the Africans do not, at present, deem an appeal necessary, to raise the question relative to the disposition of the Africans by the court below.

The government of the United States, we learn, although willing the business should take the course pointed out by the District Judge, found that it would not do to sanction what they deem the erroneous principles of that decree, as they would be supposed to do by acquiescence.—Emancipator.

Extract from the Correspondence of the Middletown Mail, dated Cincinnati, January 31, 1840.

Produce is still arriving in small lots by wagons, and is readily sold; flour $3,-75 to $3,81, bulk meat and lard is also arriving freely, the former, brings from 4½ to 5c. and the latter, 6 to 7c. per lb. according to quality.

Money matters are as tight as ever, and no possible change can take place for the better, until our spring trade opens in full. Our Banks are as solvent as ever, and the bad reports against the Miami Bank, are wearing off, and her "post notes," are now bought up by our Banks, at 2 per cent. discount, so you will see that the Bank can't be broke yet! * * *

In the way of news we have nothing very interesting. There was a grand Ball held at the Theatre last night, for the benefit of the poor! It seems to me a little strange that aid cannot be raised for the poor, without furnishing arrant folly, a chance of making itself merry! The Rev. Maffit is still with us, I am told that upwards of 800 persons have been converted under his preaching, and I am also informed, that some 50 are ready to be baptised in the Rev. Mr. Lynd's Church and many persons in the other Churches have been changed. There is still a great excitement in religious matters going on.

I am through I believe for the present, and so bid you and your dear readers, Adieu. A MERCHANT.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

In the House, after some debate, the resolution of Mr. Thompson, in relation to Abolition petitions, with Mr. Wm. Johnson's amendment, was adopted. So the House resolved, in substance that no petition for the Abolition of Slavery in the District of Columbia, or any State or Territory, or for the Abolition of the domestic Slave trade, should be received.

On Thursday, Messrs. Blair & Rives, of the Globe, were elected Public Printers.

From Bicknell's Reporter.

A DISGRACEFUL SCENE IN CONGRESS.—The scenes of excitement and outrage that from time to time, occur on the floor of the American Congress, are disgraceful in no ordinary degree to the national character. As described in the public journals, and copied and commented upon in foreign prints, they are calculated to make the most unfavorable impression abroad, as to the habits, manners, civilization and refinement of our people. How can we experience surprise at the misapprehension of European writers and travellers, when we look at the outrage and murder which continue to prevail in the South and South West; and when such transactions as that recorded below, continue to take from the dignity of the American Halls of Congress. We give the account for the purpose of holding the individuals who participated in the affair, up to the indignation of every well-regulated mind. Judging from this specimen, Mr. Bynum is little calculated to adorn or add dignity to any deliberative Assembly.—The whole scene is reprehensible, and cannot but call a blush to the cheek of every citizen who properly regards the reputation of his country.

Mr. Bynum, the member from North Carolina entitled to the floor, who had spoken through the day upon the Anti-Slavery memorial question before the House, was the prominent actor in the scene. His object was to trace a union between the Whig and Abolition parties, and in doing so he made some allusion to a Whig member from New York charging him with being an Abolitionist. The following dialogue and debate ensued.

Mr. Peck, of New York—"Does the gentleman allude to me?"

Mr. Bynum—"I allude to a gentleman by the the name of Peck."

Mr. Peck—"I can only say that if the gentleman alludes to me, and says that I am an Abolitionist, he says what is not true."

Mr. Bynum—"If the gentleman is not an Abolitionist,—as I understand Abolition, (great laughter)—then there is not one in existence. I believe he is one."

Mr. Peck—"I am not an Abolitionist."

Mr. Bynum—"Does the gentleman mean to say that I say false? [This question was then repeated. Mr. Bynum facing Mr. Peck, and in a most threatening and excited manner.]

Mr. Peck—(after a pause) "I mean to say that the gentleman from North Carolina has asserted what is not true."—(Laughter.)

Mr. Bynum (very excited) "then I say that the gentlemen is a blackguard—and a scoundrel—an Abolitionist, &c. &c."

A scene of confusion followed—the Speaker calling the members to order, and a majority of the members joining in the call.

Mr. Bynum was heard to say that he never willingly insulted any one.

Mr. Peck responded——"for the reason that he is incapable of it."

Mr. Bynum in the midst of the confusion called upon the Speaker to order the blackguard and scoundrel to take his seat.

Mr. Thompson, of S. C. with much reluctance rose. He could not sit by and hear such language made use of. No excitement however great justified the use of it, and he therefore moved that the House take an order upon the subject.

Mr. Jamieson, of Mo. moved an adjournment.

Mr. Peck demanded the yeas and nays, and being ordered, the motion was lost, 141 to 32.

Mr. Thompson said that he had waited until the member from N. C. was about to proceed in his remarks before he interrupted him.

Mr. Bynum asked Mr. Thompson to yield the floor, and he would make an explanation which would be satisfactory.—Mr. B. said that he had used the harsh language under excitement. He had been prompted to it by the outrageous insult of the member, but he would apologize to the House for the use of it.

Mr. Thompson was not satisfied. He thought the member ought to withdraw the offensive language.

"Never—never," said Mr. Bynum, and "never, never," responded many of his friends.

Mr. Johnson, of Md. thought that Mr. Bynum's apology to the House was satisfactory, and he moved that he have leave to proceed.

"No" and "yes" were heard from several voices.

Mr. Petriken, of Pa. contented that Mr. Peck, had provoked the insult, and should therefore withdraw what he had said.

After much confusion and an excited discussion of points of order, Mr. Peck addressed the House very briefly in vindication of himself. He had never been charged with being an Abolitionist, and he denied the charge, which being repeated, he denied again. If any member thought what he had said unparliamentary, he should feel it due to himself, to his constituents and to the House that they should decide against him, to make atonement to the House. But sooner than retract the last word he had said, he would leave his place in the House—he would leave the earth, and cease to exist.

Mr. Thompson was here persuaded to withdraw his call upon Mr. Bynum to withdraw his offensive language.

Mr. Duncan here moved that Mr. Bynum have leave to proceed. The majority were in favor of the motion, but the House adjourned before any remarks were made by Mr. B.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From A. Shearer, for Mrs. M Cotten,	-	$2 00
" Joseph Rodman,	- - -	2 00
" J Dalbey,	- - - - -	10 00
For W Garard, W Barnhill & John Armstrong Beach, and S Clancy, J Anderson & S Horner, 1 each.
" J Brown,	- - - - -	2 00
" J Hopwood, through H S Pennock,		10 00
For T Mapel, Widow Smith, Wm Ijams, S Coe and W Cole,	-
" J Allen, for G Dowler,	- -	2 00
" Jer Springer,	- - - -	4 00
For himself and Jos Springer,	-
" R Simonton,	- - - -	3 00
For W Carder 2, and J Baily, one,
" John Rodman,	- - - -	2 00
" O White, for Benjamin Getting,		2 00
" M N Warren, for E Duling,	-	2 00
" A K Earl,	- - - -	2 00
For J Sarkitt & J Turner, 1 each,
" J Fordyce, for P T Laishley,	-	2 00
" J B Irwin, (one year fm 22 No.)		2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W Ross, through A Shearer, 1 subscriber, cash in advance; C Woodruff, 1 subscriber; W Ringhart, J Dalbey, 3 subscribers, cash in advance for six months; H S Pennock, Joseph Allen, you say send the Recorder to Shinnston, but you do not say to whom, W Marshall, T Foster, 1 subscriber, we sent the paper from the 6th number, as directed to Birmingham, to A Lanning, we now alter to Millersville; W L Baldwin, 2 subscribers, R Simonton, 1 subscriber; A H Bassett, Hartley we have it, A McGuire, J Smith, "A K," M N Warren, D Crall, 2 subscribers, A K Earl, 4 subscribers, and pay in advance for two of them six months, either you must be mistaken or we overlooked the name of Dowley, D W Stewart, 2 subscribers, J Fordyce, A Criter, J Moore, W Burk, T P Armstrong, E H McCoy, L. D., T J Finch, A Shinn, forward to us and we will publish the notice in reference to your books.

It will be seen by the above, that we have received from our agents 17 subscribers, and 4 at the office, which make 21 in two weeks. If our friends will only keep at the thing we shall get along. The above contains 7 dollars cash, in advance; that is what we want.

VARIETY.

[PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.]

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Springer: Permit me, through your paper, to direct the attention of the public to a subject upon which depends the happiness, health, and often, the lives of many. That to which I refer is the Small Pox, which has caused such great devastation amongst mankind, principally in Europe, and which begins to make its appearance in the western country also, with more energy,—for instance, at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Oxford, and the vicinity of Zanesville, of late years, &c.

To guard ourselves against this, in many respects, dreadful disease, there is no surer remedy then Vaccination, although there is a great part of the community that have no confidence in it at all, believing the cow pox not to be a sure means of preventing the small pox, &c. Those unbelievers may be some what confirmed in it, by some cases which have occurred in their imperfect observation; still the fault lays in all such cases, not in the remedy itself, but in several circumstances which deserve the whole attention, particularly of those who are vaccinating, as the good or vain effects of the vaccination depends upon these very circumstances. It is therefore very important in the first place to have genuine matter, that is, such as is taken from real cow pox & not false; as there exists a kind that is called false, and as cow pox can be made false by neglecting the following points:—the matter must be fluid and must therefore be taken from the pox between the sixth and ninth day from the time of the vaccination, and not as it is often done, when the pox dries off, taking the scurf. This is one of the principal causes why vaccination sometimes does not have the desired effect, as the matter taken after the ninth or tenth day does not produce the real cow pox, but the above mentioned false one, which has a quite different course, and which we can easily distinguish, by other symptoms beside this: the false cow pox instead of the sixth or seventh day, will produce on the third or fourth day a pox, which forms a scurf on the six or seventh day, whereas in the real one it is formed on the thirteenth or fourteenth. Another point of importance is, that the matter easily looses its strength, or rather good quality, by being exposed to the atmosphere. To prevent this it must be secured against the influence of the atmosphere, light, heat, cold and wetness. This might be done in several ways, either rolled in beeswax, or two pieces of glass, or ivory, or small pieces of whale bone, or in well closed small phials.

It is also be observed that hardly any blood ought to come by vaccination. In regard to time and individuals, it is not necessary to make any particular choice, as we might vaccinate at any season of the year, and at any age except the first six or eight weeks of life. Experience shows, after all this is attended to, that we not only can keep the small pox from such vaccinated persons, but also, if vaccination is generally attended to it will entirely expel it from the country, as Europe, and particularly Germany, gives a fair instance.

After experience had sufficiently tested the effect of vaccination, government, in that country, passed a law providing that children should be vaccinated before their second year. Since when nothing is heard of the small pox, and a day is now celebrated in honor of Dr. Jenner, of England, who made the first observation on cow pox.

Let all superstition and ignorance be laid aside, and let not single cases be taken in view, but let every one's opinion be governed by the majority of cases.—We shall find, that vaccination has already done a great deal of good in this country also, and after it shall be introduced more generally, and performed in the right manner, then we shall see no more suffering and dying by this awful disease, and parents will have the gratification of seeing their children grow up as they were born and not as it has been seen, disfigured and crippled. For this reason alone, I would advise every one to get their children vaccinated before it is too late, and they will do good by it, not only to themselves but also to the public in general.

A. K., M. D.

DEFERRED ARTICLES.

A SPECK OF WAR.—Judging from remarks made by Mr. Buchanan, we are likely to have some further agitation in relation to the North East Boundary question. As somewhat connected with this subject, we give the following from the Montreal Herald, received by the eastern mail of last evening:

"In the Quebec Mercury of Thursday last we find the following memorandum issued by His Excellency Sir John Harvey, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of New Brunswick. We do not know the motives which have induced his excellency to issue it, but it may possibly be in consequence of information he has received from the Imperial Government, that, in the event of Messrs. Featherstonhaugh and Mudge's report of their survey of the disputed territory agreeing with the position already maintained by Great Britain, the whole energies of the empire will be called into action to enforce our possession of it, even at the cost of a war with the United States. Although these gentlemen have not allowed the particulars of their report to transpire, it is more then probable that its details are in the possession of Sir John Harvey, and that they are in our favor. In case of general war, the recommendations of Sir John are extremely judicious, and we understand they were acted upon with the most beneficial results during the war of 1812 and the subsequent years."

MEMORANDUM.—I am desirous of impressing upon the inhabitants of the frontier districts of this Province, that in the event of hostilities with the United States, the most prudent course to be pursued (on either side, for the measure to be effectual must be reciprocal,) would, in my opinion, be that of a strict neutrality. Let the Borderers remember that as connected with the war, if we should unhappily be compelled to engage in one, no national object can possibly be advanced by any display of hostile feeling towards each other—they might, it is true, mutually subject each other to constant alarms, great calamities, suffering and distress—but their utmots efforts must be to a drop of water to the determination of the great national questions at issue, which must be decided elsewhere by the naval and military resources of the great powers engaged in the conflict. And let the inhabitants of this Province repose with confidence upon the protection of the parent State, which is alike able and willing to throw her powerful shield over all who have a just claim to her protection and defence.

ONE HUNDRED HOUSES SWEPT OFF.—The Rev. Mr. Coan, of the Sandwich Islands, in a letter to his brother, published in the Evangelist, describes a scene of terror, witnessed one evening at Hilo during the progress of a protracted meeting, held there in November, as follows:—"I opened the meeting from the text, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." God wrought for us. Hundreds gave evidence of conversion. On the second day at evening, God came in terror! The sea rose suddenly to the perpendicular height of 15 or 20 feet, and fell in one mountain wave on the shore, sweeping away nearly 100 houses, their tenants and effects. All was sudden as a peal of thunder. No premonitions were given. None had time to flee. There was no earthquake, and no visible cause of the phenomena. The scene was awful. In a moment, hundreds were engulphed.—The roar of the raging sea was deafening, and the loud piercing cries of distress were heart-rending! Only eleven were drowned—but five have died since, by injuries received in the water. Had the catastrophe been at midnight, or had the people been less amphibious, hundreds must have perished. To drown a native of these islands, is almost like drowning a whale—so much are they at home in the water.

THE BANK OF THE U. STATES.—In reply to a correspondent, we state that in our opinion the Bank of the United States charter will not be repealed; and yet this opinion is not given with any great degree of confidence. The friends of the State Administration possess the power to repeal, and it is by no means impossible that they will exercise it. Were the state out of debt, they would doubtless leap over all other difficulties. Mr. Brown, moreover, who is the great advocate for repeal in the Senate, is a man of much talent, and great perseverance. We think that the repeal would prove greatly injurious to Pennsylvania, for a time, at least.

As somewhat connected with this subject, we may give the following from the Harrisburg Reporter, one of the organs of the State Administration:—Bicknell.

"The excellent spirit manifested in the Governor's Message, has been met in a corresponding spirit by those distinguished members of the legislature, Mr. Brown of the Senate, and Col. McElwee of the House, who have introduced into their respective bodies, bills to repeal the charter of the United States Bank, a measure equally called for by public justice, public policy, and public expediency. Until this Bank is swept out of existence, Pennsylvania can never know repose or prosperity."

STEAMBOAT ACCIDENTS IN 1839.—A writer in the Cincinnati Gazette enumerates the various steamboat accidents on the western waters during the year 1839. The following recapitulation may be of interest:

The sum total of losses is 40: of this number, 32 were an entire loss; snagged 21; struck rocks, or other obstacles, 7; burnt, 5; burst their boilers, 4; run into by other boats, 3—40. There were snagged on the lower Mississippi 11; on the Missouri 4; on the Ohio 4; on the Yazoo 1; on Red River 1. It is remarkable that a majority of the boats were snagged on their downward trips. Lives lost, by bursting boilers, 39; by other causes 6. Total, 45. The amount of property destroyed in boats and their cargoes, is certainly not less than a million of dollars. Of this, the heaviest burden appears to have fallen on St. Louis. The number of lives lost (though doubtless the above is a very imperfect list) is much below the average of several years past.

ANECDOTE.—A husband was continually finding fault with his wife for her want of neatness—that his house was not always kept like mirrors. This was one day very warmly expressed, and comparisons were instituted between her management and that of a neighboring quakeress, whom the husband had seen on that day. The wife promised compliance with his wishes; and on the husband's leaving the house, she put every thing in the most exact and neat order; not an odious particle of dust being suffered to appear. The husband returned rather later than usual, with a friend whom he had invited to dine with him. To his surprise he found the front door of his house locked—he knocked loudly, and with great vehemence demanded immediate admittance, when an upper window was raised, and out popped the head of his beloved spouse. "Thee cannot come in at the front door—thee must go round by the gate to the kitchen." The husband sheepishly complied, and ever after suffered the wife to manage her household affairs as she saw fit.

FALL OF METAMORAS.—Metamoras has fallen into the hands of the Federalists and volunteers from Texas. The New Orleans Bulletin of the 30th December, has advices from Metamoras to the 27th November. The siege commenced on the 12th of that month and lasted three days, during which there is said to have been hard fighting and great slaughter on both sides. The Texan government had nothing to do in this transaction. A small party alone of her citizens went over without authority and joined the Federal party against the Central, or Government party, and have thus gained one of the Mexican ports—it will doubtless prove but a temporary advantage.

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO CANAL.—It is a gratification to us to be able to state for the information especially of our readers in this District, Maryland, and parts adjacent that information has been received by letters from London, under date of the sixth ultimo, of the sale of a sufficient amount of the Maryland State five per cent. bonds issued in behalf of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company (added to the sales of said bonds made by the Directors in this country) to pay all the old debts of the Company to banks and bankers in the United States and in Europe, and leave a surplus for the redemption of the Company's scrip (notes) now in circulation.—National Intelligencer.

RELIGION IN FLORIDA.—The Quincy (Fa.) Sentinel, a paper just established at that place, says:

"We have been truly gratified with the religious feeling, which has overspread a large portion of Middle Florida during the present year. A general revival of religion has passed over the country, causing many to turn from sin to righteousness, and gathering many in the folds of Christ. The number that has been added to the different churches cannot be less than 2,000, among whom are many of our most respectable and influential citizens."

The American merchants at Canton are charged by the British with taking advantage of the British difficulties, and of monopolizing the tea trade, buying up from the Hongs the best qualities with remittances of silver, and then selling off the same at great advance to the British ships outside—in other words say the English "John Bull holds the horns of the cow and Jonathan milks her."

SUICIDE.—About 11 o'clock on the night of the 16th ult., Mr. Thomas Kirby, of Galena, Illinois, shot himself through the heart, with a pistol, at his boarding house, in St. Paul's st., Baltimore, and almost immediately expired. He went to Baltimore in the expectation of being married to a young lady, but being disappointed in this, was the cause of his committing the rash act.

DEFINITION OF A DRUNKARD.—A pious divine of the old school says: "a drunkard is the annoyance of modesty, the trouble of civility, the caterpillar of industry, the tunnel of wealth, the ale-house benefactor, the beggar's companion, the constable's trouble, the wo of his wife, the scoff of his neighbor, his own shame, the picture of a beast, and the monster of a man."

REVIVAL OF RELIGION.—A very great excitement has existed in this place and neighborhood within the last four or five weeks, upon the subject of the soul's conversion. Nearly four hundred individuals have united themselves to the Methodist churches alone, within the space of time above mentioned—two of our devils included.—Steubenville Herald.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.—A lad named Coit, fifteen years of age, employed in the Bristol, (Rhode Island,) post office, has been arrested and held to bail on a charge of purloining one hundred dollars from a letter addressed by Loring Burnham, of Bristol, to Elias Paine, of Boston. The money was recovered.

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south-west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.

January 25, 1840. 23

Literary Repository.

ON the 1st of January, 1840, the subscriber proposes the publication of a new literary journal, of the above title, should sufficient encouragement be given previous to that time.

THE REPOSITORY will be published semi-monthly in quarto form, each number containing eight pages of three columns each, at the low price of ONE DOLLAR a year. Its mechanical execution will be in a superior style—printed on beautiful fine paper, with new type. Appropriate engravings will occasionally be given, by way of embellishments. Its columns, excluding every thing of a party or sectarian nature, will be particularly devoted to the literature of the day, containing: Moral and Sentimental Tales, Pleasing and Dangerous Adventures, Biography, Sketches of Travels, Extracts from new Publications, Historical Anecdotes, Poetry, &c. &c.

The subscriber has the pleasure of stating that several Ladies, as well as four or five Gentlemen of decided literary talent, have volunteered their services to enrich the columns of the Repository with their productions. With their aid the publisher hopes to render the Repository equal, in point of merit, to any publication of the kind, extant.

A specimen number has just been published, and should two or three hundred subscribers be obtained previous to the first of January, 1840, (of which we have scarcely a doubt,) its publication will, with confidence be continued—at least for one year. Five hundred subscribers it is thought will fully meet the expenses; and our candid opinion is that twice this number may be obtained with but little effort.

It is earnestly hoped that those who wish to become subscribers, will send in their names as soon as practicable. The subscription money will be required immediately after the reception of the second number, as the terms of subscription will be strictly in advance, and no subscriptions received for less than one year.

All orders and communications must be POST PAID, to secure attention, and addressed to

A. B. F. HILDRETH,
No. 20, Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.

January 29, 1840. 23

The Southern Compendium

OF LITERATURE, AGRICULTURE, ARTS AND SCIENCES.

UNDER the above title it is proposed to publish in this place in January, a monthly periodical, to be devoted to Amusement and Instruction, embracing Literature, the Arts and Sciences, Agriculture, Horticulture, Domestic and Rural Economy, Sporting Intelligence, &c.

The Literary department will embrace interesting and instructive Tales, Naratives, Adventures, Sketches of travels, places and persons, Anecdotes, Poetry, Extracts from, and Notices of New Works, &c. &c.

All new discoveries in the Sciences and Arts, as well as interesting papers relating to either, will be immediately noticed, and when of sufficient interest will be transferred to our columns, or such extracts given as will furnish full information to our readers.

In the Agricultural department, special attention will be paid to the great interests of the South. From our Planters, we will endeavor to obtain much practical and useful information which now lies buried and known but to themselves. In order that we may the more fully and effectually carry out this part of our plan, we propose to make frequent excursions into the different sections of not only this, but also of the adjoining States, for the purpose of personally inspecting and reporting on all the various operations which may be carried on, on the plantations we may visit. By pursuing this plan steadily, (as we hope to do,) much highly useful information will be obtained, which cannot fail to be of immense service to the Agricultural community, inasmuch as our Planters will thus become acquainted with the practices of other sections of country, and may from time to time adopt such as may promise a greater recompense, than those, they at the time may follow. Nor shall we confine ourselves to practical information only, but from the rich stores of knowledge which are to be found among our Planters, we hope to draw much which will prove useful and interesting.

Horticulture will also claim our attention, and we will endeavor to raise it from the low estate in which it now exists among us, to one more worthy of it. We will accordingly give not only practical directions for the culture of Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, but entering into the scientific department, we will publish whatever we may find interesting. Descriptions of new Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, as well as their culture, will be given from time to time. The forcing department, which is but little attended to in the South, embracing the formation, building and management of hot beds, conservatories, and hot houses will also be attended to.

Domestic and Rural Economy will not be neglected, but whatever we can find likely to promote either will be given in our columns.

Sporting Intelligence, Anecdotes, On Dits, and various miscellaneous matters, which cannot well be classed, will swell our pages, and add interest to our periodical.

In furtherance of our object, we will do all in our power to render this periodical highly interesting and instructive, and one which shall be welcomed by every member of such families as may patronize it. To effect this, while we hope to contribute our full share to the Original Literature of the day, as well as add considerably to the stock of Agricultural information, yet we will freely draw from the sources open to us, in the numerous daily, weekly, monthly and quarterly periodicals, which embracing every subject, abound not only in America, but also in Europe, and from these we will select only such articles as may prove highly interesting or instructive.—The sources which are open to us in each department are ample, and we trust we shall so avail ourselves of them, as to render THE SOUTHERN COMPENDIUM a highly acceptable visiter wherever known.

Political and Religious discussions will be excluded, and while we have no preference in both, yet we will not admit any thing which may be likely to wound or offend the feelings of our readers.

We have thus sketched the plan of our Periodical, and respectfully solicit for it support, both by subscriptions and contributions.

TERMS—The Southern Compendium will be published on the 15th of each month, in octavo form of 64 pages, at $5 per annum, payable in advance.

JOHN D. LEGARE.

Charleston, S. C., Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

THERE will be application made to the Trustees of Springfield township, at their annual session, on the first Monday of March, at the usual place of holding elections in the town of Putnam for an alteration in School District No. 4, so as to make a new District out of the land of the following persons adjoining in said District, commencing at 160 acres owned by Bernard Wortman, also the farm of Cornelius Springer, Jos. Swaney, Scameron Rodman, Andrew Bumbaugh, Benjamin Maple, Joseph Wortman, Sarah Johnson, James Russell, Robert George, John George, William Kidd, Mary Perien, the Grayham farm, together with two farms owned by Abner James, and eighty acres of land owned by David Jones and occupied by Wm. Perry and Henry D. Morgan.

MANY HOUSEHOLDERS.

January 29, 1840. 23

Godey's Lady's Book.

EDITION 25,000—MONTHLY.

More than Sixty Figures of Fashions each year.

MRS. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, whose name is so intimately connected with the Literature of our country, and who has justly been termed the Hemans of America, will assist Mrs. Hale in the editorial department. It is with feelings of the greatest pleasure that the publisher of the Book makes this announcement. The editorial corps will now consist of Mrs. SARAH J. HALE, Mrs. LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, and LOUIS A. GODEY. Mrs. Sigourney will commence her valuable aid with the January Number. The Lady's Book has always been noted for the purity of its contents; that marked distinction which characterizes it shall still be preserved; indeed, with such conductors it will be impossible to go estray. This work has been emphatically termed the Ladies' National Magazine, as it is a receptacle for the contributions of the most celebrated Female Writers of America, most of whom of any eminence contribute to its pages.

Twenty volumes have already been issued. It is usual to announce that a small edition only will be published. Contrary to this, the proprietor of the Lady's Book announces that he will publish an Immense Edition, with which he hopes to supply all those who will favor him with orders, commencing with the January number. It will be seen by this advertisement that every effort has been made by the proprietor of this work to make it superior to any in America, and as a New Year's Gift, the Lady's Book is probably the most proper that could be desired for ladies, edited by their own sex, and assisted as the editorial department is by the pictorial embellishments, it is positively the Bourdoir companion.

There are other publications that advertise Fashion Plates—The publisher of the Lady's Book wishes it to be distinctly understood that the principal Fashions in this work are colored, and in every number, which is not the case with any other work published in America.

Uncolored Plates of Fashions, also monthly.—This is a novel feature of the work, and as it is no great expense to give plates of Fashions without coloring, the publisher will give from three to six figures each month, in addition to the three colored—This will make in all generally about nine Figures of Fashions monthly.

Lace Patterns of Embroidery will be published at regular intervals. These beautiful ornaments (particularly the former) have given great satisfaction.

The Musical Department is under the superintendence of J. G. Osborne, than whom no person is more capable of doing it justice.

The Literary Department is placed under the superintendence of Mrs. Sarah J. Hale and Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney. Two ladies so well known to the world that to mention their names in connection with any publication is at once a guarantee of its morality, virtue and utility. Of their capability to conduct the Lady's Book it is presumed no person will doubt, and the proprietor mentions with pleasure that no English or American Magazine can publish in connection with its Literary department two names so celebrated in the world of letters.

Fac Similies.—A great deal of curiosity is often expressed to see the Chirography of celebrated persons. We shall endeavor, as far as lies in our power, to gratify this feeling by giving from time to time correct imitations of the most celebrated Female writers of the day.

General Features.—Literature, Tales, Essays, Legends, Romantic incidents in History, Extracts from the old Poets, Reviews, Poetry, Female Education, Embellishments, Fashions colored and uncolored, Lace Embroidery, Fac Similies, Music, &c. &c. More than sixty Figures of Fashions yearly colored and uncolored, the proprietor being determined to consult all tastes. Any embellishments to be found in any other magazine may be looked for in the Lady's Book.

In 1838 we published 10,500 copies, during the months of January, February and March, 1839, we increased the list to 13,500 and had then to reprint three numbers and increase to 15,000.—With the next volume we advanced to 17,000, and we now print 25,000 copies monthly, probably the greatest monthly list of subscribers in the world.

Our Reading Matter is about the same in quantity as any similar production, probably a little in favor of the Book. It would be foolish and false to say that it contains more, and the proprietor is not willing to condescend to such means for any supposed advancement of his interest.

One advantage the subscribers of this work will have, is its early reception. It will be received at the remotest cities of the Union by the first day of publication.

The January and succeeding numbers will be printed on an entirely new type cast expressly for the work, and will be found on inspection to be a truly beautiful letter, not too small to be read with ease, nor too large to prevent the usual quantity of matter being given in each page. The paper is of the finest quality for periodical use—indeed the typographical execution has long been a subject of congratulation with those best acquainted with these matters.

The price of the publication is $3 00 per annum—two copies for five dollars. The money to be positively received before a number is sent.—No letters will be taken from the Post Office unless the postage on them is paid. Unless positive orders are given at the time of subscribing the work is continued after the first year, and if not paid during the year, the price will be increased to four dollars.

For the convenience of persons wishing to subscribe for any of the following publications, Burton's Magazine, Saturday Courier, Saturday Chronicle, Weekly Messenger, Saturday Evening Post—they will be furnished with the Lady's Book and any one of these publications one year upon the receipt of five dollars free of postage.

Address L. A. GODEY,
Jan. 15, 1840. 21. 211 Chesnut-st. Phil'a.

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single, all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms, at the works. The experience of one of the firm, in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO.

Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and priving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance; $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

olume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1840. Number 26.

COMMUNICATIONS.

SMITHFIELD, JEFF., O., FEB. 3, 1840.

Rev. C. Springer:—Sir, when the following y was written, the most remote idea of au- ship was not entertained by the writer; but, compliance with repeated solicitations from eral patrons of your very excellent paper, I e submitted it to your disposal.

E. H. M'CEY, M. D.

ESSAY ON NATURAL THEOLOGY.

Men in all ages, with very few exceptions, have mitted the existence of a Supreme Being. t few have paid that attention to this subject ch its importance demands, and would find mselves much embarrassed if asked a reason their belief of this primary article of natural revealed religion. Hence, the necessity of exhibition of the arguments by which a truth important and sublime may be the present discussion. The universe is d for evidence, and the existence of its Al- hty Sovereign, that which is to be proven by t evidence.

and has God, in the grand theatre of nature, ch forms a copious subject of scientific inves- tation, given us any evidence of his own exist- e? Is there in the earth, with all its count- variety of objects, its extensive plains, its ering mountains, its rolling oceans, its vari- ted landscapes; is there in the heavens above re lightnings flash and meteors play, where nets shine and stars unnumbered burn, and nets run their solemn rounds; is there in man mself the acknowledged sovereign of the earth; here in every animal that roams the forest or ds upon the extended vale,—in fine, is there every thing animate and inanimate, in every de of grass, in every opening flower, in every in of sand, in every atom of matter, an evi- ice of a first cause possessed of intelligence? there not in nature's vast domain, in all e sublimity, beauty and splendor of the mate- l universe, that which will lead us from Na- e up to nature's God, that which will silence Atheist and bring him to bow in humble sub- ssion before the throne of the Eternal?

Whilst we would attempt to investigate the rks of nature, and from them adduce proof of existence of nature's God, let us engage in with that solemn reverence which is due to e "August Majesty of Heaven's dread Sover- gn."

And in the first place, we will lay down a few ioms admitted by all Philosophers, and which e Atheist himself will not deny. Our first iom is:

1. That man is a conscious percipient sen- ent being.

2. Every conscious being truly judges himself exist.

3. The objects of our perceptions have actual existence.

4. No being can create itself, for self-creation ould imply action anterior to existence.

5. Every production and change must have had cause, otherwise they must have created and oduced themselves, which would imply action nterior to existence.

6. Contrivance in the effect, evinces contri- ance in the cause; and intelligence in the effect nd intelligence in the cause.

7. A cause must exist before it can originate ny effect.

According, therefore, to our 2d and 3d axioms, e ourselves and innumerable other objects exist. With respect to those objects which do exist, one f three propositions must be true. 1st. They ust have either created and produced them- elves; or 2dly, they must have existed from eter- ity as they now exist; or, 3dly, they must have een created and produced by some efficient ause.

That they did create and produce themselves s absurd and contrary to our 4th axiom, "no eing can create itself, for self-creation would mply action anterior to existence." It there- ore remains, that either they must have existed rom eternity, as they now exist, or that they vere created and produced by some efficient ause.

That things did not always exist as they now lo, will be admitted by the most hardened Athe- st, as it is evident that all the works of nature resented to our view, are undergoing perpetual hanges, either in respect to their structure or osition. Do we survey the objects around us, our ttention is arrestrd by one continued series of hanges.

We see one generation passing away and another succeeding. From the infant child that hangs upon its mother's breast, to the aged sire bending beneath the decripitude of years, all are on their onward march. Infancy but opens its tender eyes to take a single look at life and closes them again in death. Childhood breathes but a few short days of innocence and joy, when its last sigh tells its departure to another world. Youth, gay aspiring youth, with all its fairy vis- ions, its dreams of bliss and brilliant anticipa- tions, scarcely clasps the cup of joy, till death unnerves its hand, and life with all its promised blessings fades from its view and is lost in the grave. Manhood, bold and sturdy manhood, whose frame has buffeted the dangers, the cares and the toils of life, nerved by the hope of gain and glory, takes but a few hasty steps, when his pulse ceases to beat, and he too sinks to rest and is seen no more. Age, feeble and decriped age, wearied with the long and toilsome march of life, calmly lays down its grief worn head and sinks to rest. Alas! Infancy, Childhood, Youth, Man- hood and Age, are all passing away.

To man, in his present condition, there is no delay, but so soon as ushered into existence, time, like an overwhelming torrent, bears him down soon to launch him in the great ocean of eternity. But the mutations of time are not confined to man alone. At one time we see our earth deck- ed in all the loveliness of Spring,—at another, in all the gay attire of Summer,—again, in all the richness of an Autumnal harvest, and, anon, the "breath and wing of Boreas" sweeps across its frozen surface. If we direct our attention to the Heavens, which are garnished with resplend- ant orbs, rolling their courses through the vast immense, a new scene of successive changes burst upon our view. In the morning we see the bright Luminary of day, arising in the east; with a rapid ascent he approaches the zenith and soon we see him sink behind the western hills. The moon and the stars, which stud the midnight sky, are ever changing and varying their positions. But these changes are all effects and had a begin- ning; they must have had a cause, which cause must have existed before the beginning of chan- ges, agreeably to our [illegible], "a cause must exist before it can [illegible] effect." This [illegible] ing of change [illegible] ; to be the [illegible] perpetual changes. Man is not that [illegible] being, for he is a creature of yesterday. It follows, therefore, of necessity, that the objects of our perceptions did not exist from eternity, but that they were pro- duced by some adequate cause. Thus we have pro- ven the question, viz: that there is a first cause the primum mobile of all other causes.

Now, according to our axiom, already laid down, "contrivance in the effect evinces con- trivance in the cause, and intelligence in the effect intelligence in the cause," (see Dr. Bruce, on causation,) so that if any marks of intelli- gence exist in the universe, they evince intelli- gence in the author of the universe. As the universe evinces the existence of its author, so the relations which exist between its parts—the adaptation of those parts to their several purpo- ses, and the harmony which subsists throughout the whole evidently manifest it to be the work of a designing intelligent Being. "If a few types," says, Archbishop Fenelon, "were thrown to- gether, and some of them would form a word, this we believe might by chance; but if many such words were to be thus formed, we would suspect contrivance; and if a multitude of types should be found forming a continued poem, we would believe contrivance with the most undoubted conviction." Now, a continued series of rela- tions evinces contrivance as unequivocally as the supposed effect of the types in the case bro't forward by this distinguished Catholic Bishop, (see Fenelon and Calmet.) These relations exist in every thing by which we are surrounded. Examine, for a moment, the mechanism display- ed in the structure and formation of the human body—the nice adaptation of part to part—each one adapted to its proper function—a system to which nothing is wanting. Whether we survey all its parts unclad, [illegible] a complete system, [illegible] our admiration is equally excited. Can we make a strict examin- ation of the wisdom displayed in the structure of the eye. Its coats, its humors, its glands, its mussels, all performing their respective and prop- er offices—the manner in which the object is painted on the retina, the impression there receiv- ed and thence conveyed to the sensorium, the place it is situated, the manner in which it is de- fended. I say, can we examine this most admi- rable piece of mechanism, and not see the impress of its Divine Architect? Such is the display of the wisdom and omnipotence of the Creator, exhibited in animated nature, that no rational being can pass them by unobserved, and having considered them, but is constrained, at least, in his own breast, to acknowledge the existence and intelligence of their mighty Maker. Do we contemplate their numbers; myriads of myryads cannot tell the sum. From the massy whale that spouts itself upon the "ocean's wave," or rides upon its foaming billows, down to the small- est inhabitant of the deep. And from the huge elephant, down to the animalcula, all unite in harmonious concert to attest the existence and wisdom of their Creator. Yes, such is the dis- play of the wisdom and omnipotence of the Creator, as causes the hardened and deluded sceptic to stand abashed, whilst the wild and un- taught son of the forest prostrates himself before the "Great Spirit."

Now, as design and intelligence are so abund- antly manifest in the works of nature, it fol- lows of necessity, that there must have been a designer, and this designer must possess intelli- gence and power sufficient to execute his designs. And, if matter can neither produce nor organize itself, and if the evidences of design are so nu- merous and conspicuous, as to preclude the pos- sibility of chance, it follows, as an undeniable inference, that universal nature is the produc- tion of an Intelligent First Cause.

To me, it has ever been a paradox, how any one can feast on nature, or luxuriate in the high enjoyment of the arcana which science reveals: how any one can in ecstacy and rapture contemplate the celestial and terrestrial wonders of creation, and yet, be indifferent to the character or will of Him, who is himself still infinitely more won- derful and glorious,—how any one can admire the developements of creative wisdom, and for- bear himself to adore.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

STEUBENVILLE, OHIO, FEB. 11, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—In my last, I promised if the Lord should bless, to make mention of it to His glory. You have heard, through the medium of brother Brown's letter, that the Lord has done great things for us,—whereof, we are glad. It is true, however, that the information which Bro. Brown received, with regard to the number of accessions, was not correct, as at the time refer- red to in his communication, there were but SEVENTY-SIX added to the church. But the good work continued until the accession, from the time of the commencement of our protracted meeting to its close, which embraced a period of between four and five weeks, ONE HUNDRED AND TWELVE were received into the church, and nearly all professed to have found peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. A number of our brethren came to our help at different times, and rendered profitable assistance. Bro. Browning, our much esteemed friend and father in Christ, was with us in heart and in labor throughout the meeting. The members of the church, both male and female, laid hold to pur- pose. Bro. Springer, [illegible] have done you good to have witnessed the deep earnestly and untiring zeal of the c[illegible] for the salvation of sinners, and the effects which will always follow such exertions, to a greater or less extent. The Gospel is still the power of God to the salvation of such as believe.

We rejoice in the [illegible] and that of Methodist [illegible] destined, by the Great Head of the mystical body, to be a medium of much good to our sin- disordered world. May the Lord keep us united in the bonds of christian love and make us faith- ful in the discharge of duty.

JOHN BURNS, Sup't. Steub. St.

UNION CT., OHIO CON., FEB. 8, 1840.

Mr. Editor: We held a protracted meeting at Pleasant Hill meeting house about three weeks since, that was attended with a gracious display of divine goodness. This church had been on the back ground for some time. We spent the first day in adjusting some difficulties between brethren which was settled to the satisfaction of the parties. We then proceeded with the meet- ing and continued till the next Sabbath week.—During its progress from time to time there was such powerful manifestations of the presence of God that sinners were deeply convicted, and pro- fessors shouted aloud his praise. There were a- bout twenty-two who professed religion during my stay, and TWENTY who united with the church.

I had to leave the meeting to attend my second quarterly meeting which commenced on last Sat- urday in Richwood, Union county, Ohio, and closed on the following Thursday night. This, too, was a time of great spiritual power. Our meeting, through the kindness of our Episcopal Methodist brethren, was held in their meeting house. And the brethren of that church treated us with much friendship. Indeed, you could tell no difference between the two classes of Meth- odists. We had the ministerial assistance of J. Inskeep and J. M. Young, of our own church, and brother Brown, the preacher in charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church, came to our assis- tance and preached for us on Monday night, and was ready on all occasions to lend a helping hand. As the meeting proceeded [illegible] was literally crowded with seekers from [illegible] years old to mid- dle age. About SEVENTEEN professed religion in about one hour and a half. The preacher and leaders of the old church, at the time this pow- erful work was in progress, were attending to the business of the church in a leaders' meeting capacity, at the house of the former. But when they learned that their sons and daughters were so powerfully engaged for the salvation of their souls, they adjourned and come to our aid; and they came to witness a sight upon which angels might look down upon with delight. Something like TWENTY-SEVEN professed a change of heart and FIFTEEN were added to the church. SEVENTY- FIVE have been added to the church on this cir- cuit since Conference. Yours, in haste,

I. HUNT, Sup't. Union Ct., O. Con.

"RECORDER" OFFICE, O., Feb. 9, 1840.

Bro. Springer: There is no subject in- troduced in your paper, I presume, that gives more satisfaction to the majority of its readers than revival intelligence. And among the many cheering accounts we receive through that medium, from the different parts of our church, but little if any thing has been said concerning High- land circuit, in the Ohio District, of which I am a member. The reason of this neg- lect is unknown to me, as it certainly can- not be owing to the want of ability on the part of brother Ewans, the superin- tendent of the circuit, who is far better qualified to write for the press than this writer. Be that as it may, since no bet- ter hand will undertake it I will do the best I can.

Bro. T. Ewans, the superintendent of the circuit, reached his field of labor a short time after the adjournment of Con- ference, and is well received by the peo- ple. He appears to be a zealous and per- severing young man, and his labors, so far as I can learn, are blest to a consider- able extent. There has been forty mem- bers or upwards added to the church since Conference, and there is no small excite- ment of a religious character in various parts of the circuit, which, in my opinion, augurs favorably to a further accession to the church. The great opposition here- tofore raised against us has in a measure ceased, and we now stand as an acknowl- edged branch of the Church of Christ.—It is true that a few stand aloof and suffer us not to approach their altars. But even those, so far as I have visited acquaintance extended, no longer report, as heretofore, that we are "going down." And many seem to rejoice (and I have no right to doubt their sincerity,) on hearing of our prosperity on this circuit and elsewhere.

We, however, have our difficulties and embarrassments to labor under as well as others. One is the want of meeting hou- ses; another is the want of ministerial aid to co-operate with the superintendent of the circuit, and the last and most im- portant of all is a deficiency in means to supply the wants of those who labor with us in word and doctrine. The means we have, if the disposition to appropriate [illegible] sufficient [illegible] has been [illegible] with an abundance [illegible] good things of this life, and yet we withhold the hire of those who toil and continue to labor in the vineyard of the Lord. And I do well know from sad ex- perience, derived from six years of effi- cient labor in our itinerant ranks, that so soon as the church neglects her duty and suffers the hands of the preacher to hang down, the cause under his pastoral care must and will languish. I would not be understood as insinuating in the forego- ing remarks that there is a greater remis- ness of duty in this circuit, on this impor- tant point, than elsewhere. By no means, for I hazard nothing in saying that High- land circuit has some as magnanimous spirits as can be found anywhere. But there is a backwardness with some here as well as elsewhere. And I do hope the pen of some able and suitable hand will be employed through the medium of the Recorder to stir up the "pure minds of the people by way of remembrance."

Yours, in the bonds of love,

WILLIAM HUGHEY.

OBITUARY.

For the Western Recorder.

WILLIAM L. DUNLAP, a young minister of the Methodist Protestant Church, was the eldest son of Joseph and Elizabeth Dunlap, and was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, May 6th, 1813. His pa- rents removed to the west, where he died, leaving a widow and three children; after which the widow with her children re- turned to Fayette county, where she main- tained a respectable standing in the Pres- bytarian Church, until 1826, when death separated her from her children and friends; but her pious example and in- structions left a permanent impression on the mind of her son William, on whom nature, or rather the God of nature, had bestowed an uncommonly amiable dispo- sition; and who, therefore, passed through the years of boyhood and early youth un- contaminated by the vices and follies too common amongst young people. In the twentieth year of his age he was made a subject of converting grace, under the ministry of our brother George Brown; and after maturely and deliberately ex- amining the doctrines and discipline of the various branches of the Christian church, he united himself with the Meth- odist Protestant Church, and became one of her brightest ornaments.

In about one year from this time, he consulted with a confidential friend, in- forming him of an impression on his mind, that he was called to preach the gospel; and after attending to the counsels of friends, and exercising his gifts, he was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Con- ference of Monongahela circuit, on the 23d day of August, 1834. He soon after entered the itinerancy, in which he con- tinued to labor with great zeal and useful- ness, until his health became so much im- paired, that he was reluctantly compelled to retire from active service, to the great and serious regret of his numerous friends, both of the ministry and the pri- vate membership of the church; for few young ministers have been so generally beloved, as an upright christian, an amia- ble companion, and a useful and promis- ing minister of the Lord Jesus Christ.—During his last illness, which was a linger- ing disease of the lungs, he was not heard to murmur or complain; but frequently spoke of his approaching dissolution with entire confidence and composure. The writer of this brief notice was with him on the day of his departure from this world of toil and affliction, and had the privilege to witness, with other friends, the calm devotion and tranquility of his spirit. His countenance was placid, and his mind un- troubled; and he said with firm but mod- est assurance, "I shall soon be at home; I have peace with heaven and earth; I have obtained the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." With the same un- disturbed serenity he gradually sunk into death, and into the arms of that Divine Saviour, who has the keys of death and of hell, and who hath said, "He that com- eth unto me I will in no wise cast out, but will raise him up again at the last day."

William L. Dunlap had an active, well endowed with a considerable amount of mental energy, and was diligently [illegible] means of improvement, which [illegible] to the [illegible] his mind was [illegible] in view of that mysterious [illegible] which removed him from the [illegible] ministerial labors, in so short a time after their commencement; but he was enabled through grace to resign this matter, with all others relating to this world or the next, to the wise and merciful disposal of his Heavenly Father. The most promi- nent characteristic of his mind, was a mild and unassuming modesty, which in him was a disposition of nature, matured and perfected by the gracious influences of the Holy Spirit. His tempers, words and actions, were uncommonly pleasant, inof- fensive and conciliating; and we have just grounds to believe with christian con- fidence, that he has been removed from the church militant to the church triumph- ant, as one of the favored and happy jewels of immortality. He died on the 23d of May, 1839, aged 26 years and 17 days.

A. SHINN.

Allegheny, February 4, 1840.

APOTHEGMS.—1. In this world, we first aim to have things as we wish them; by- and-bye, we are contented to have things as we can get them.

2. A few things are not understood; many are misunderstood; most are not worth understanding.

MAGNIFICENT IDEA.—The folks of Switzerland talk of cutting a tunnel for a rail- road through the Alps, commencing near the lake of Geneva, and coming out in Milan, or at the foot of the mountain. It is a project worthy of a Napoleon.—Wheeling Gazette.

THE LATEST IMPROVEMENT.—"Say you, Fred Williams, war dat nigger what stood heah jist now?"

"Why he cut stick."

"Dah now, dat nigger all ober. Why dont you correct your furzeology? Say he amphitate timber, nigger, and talk like a white man."

A FACT.—A man in Greenwich street lately procured a piano for his wife, at the expense of four hundred dollars and fifty more for a teacher. The next day he was presented with a bill of three dollars which he declined paying, on account of the hard times! Such a man should be made to peddle pocket-combs, at a penny apiece, and live on the proceeds.

A good wife exhibits her love for her husband by trying to promote his welfare, and by administering to his comfort.

A poor wife "dears" and "my loves" her husband, and wouldn't sew a button to his coat to keep him from freezing.

A wise girl would win a lover by prac- tising those virtues which secure admira- tion when charms have faded.

A simple girl endeavors to recommend herself by the exhibition of frivolous ac- complishments and a mawkish sentiment, which is as shallow as her mind.

A good girl always respects herself and therefore always possesses the respect of others.

TURNING THE TABLES.—An excellent wo- man, the mother of five children, and made a widow by the devil and a grog dealer combined, had a bill similar to the following, sent to her a few weeks after her husband's death:

"Mr. ——— to J. ———, Dr.

"For refreshments, at different times, $2,81."

What consumate imprudence!—How modest, too, calling liquid fire refresh- ments! As an offset to the above bill, the lady presented the following cluncher:

"To eight weeks confinement to my bed, in consequence of an injury I received from my unfortunate husband, while un- der the influence of your liquor, $48; to sundry breakages by him, while in the same state, $20; to maintenance of my- self and family, for seven successive months, $224. Total, $292.

"N. B.—If you think this is not suffi- cient, there are certain expenses for the burial of my murdered husband."—Spir- it of the Times.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Advertiser.

A WINTER IN THE WEST INDIES.

Fort Royal, (Martinique,) March, 18, 1839.

When I went on deck this morning, our ship was coasting along the southern shore of this island, and we soon entered the spacious and magnificent bay, at the head of which stands—or rather lies in ruins—the town of Fort Royal. This island belongs to France, contains about 80,000 inhabitants, and exports annually about 60,000 hogsheads of sugar, each weighing about 1000 pounds. The reli- gion is exclusively Roman Catholic.—The legislative power resides in the Gov- ernor appointed by the crown; a Council [illegible] Upper House also appointed by the crown, and a Lower House elected by the people, and whose term of office is five [illegible] enacted by the local [illegible] in fo[illegible] till sanctioned by [illegible] beautiful [illegible] ded. About mid- [illegible] was and the ocean are [illegible] bristling with cannon, and [illegible] the town are works scarcely excel- led in strength by the citadel at Quebec. On each side of the bay, and in the dis- tance, in every direction, are lofty hills of endless varied heights and forms, some of them running up into the clouds, and seemingly enveloped in the smoke of their own volcanoes, while others are finely rounded and cultivated to the top. In front of us was the town so lately touched by the finger of God. The earth- quake which shook the whole Island and partially devasted the city of St. Pierre, concentrated its fury on this spot, where stands or once stood, the town of Fort Royal. Touched by the finger of God, it crumbled. "The hills melted like wax at the presence of the Lord."

Terrible as the spectacle must be, yet I had long desired to see a city over- whelmed by an earthquake. Such a city lay before me. With an interest ner- vously painful and intense, I hurried on shore to view the ruins. Language can convey no adequate idea of the scene which was presented to my eyes. Per- haps the description of a single spot will give the clearest conception of its horrors. The hospital which stood just at the out- skirts of the town was built of stone, and surrounded three sides of a quadrangle. Each of the three buildings was three stories high and about 200 feet in length. Outside of all the buildings and enclosing an area of several acres, was a thick and solid stone wall. On the 11th of Janua- ry, about six o'clock in the morning with- out the slightest [illegible] warning of any kind, "the earth shook and trem- [illegible] these stone walls, as if built of sand which by some power had been held rigid for a time, but now re- turned to its original state crumbled into a shapeless heap. Walls and roof, stone and timber, lay crushed together, as if they had not only fallen, but as if some additional power had kneaded or tramp- led them into one frightful mass or as if the earth had heaved and rocked till all the materials were mingled and ground together. Flight or escape was impossi- ble, even if the wretched had possessed their ordinary strength. But diseased and helpless as they are, they could only utter a shriek as they fell dead or man- gled in the ruins. Even the stone wall or fence lay crumbled. Like the mimic house which the child constructs with his blocks and then in play or anger dashes to the floor. The ruins were most ap- palling.

At the same instant, the whole city, containing 8000 inhabitants, felt the shock; whole blocks of stone buildings crumbled like the hospital; roofs tumbled in upon families in their beds, walls were rent and twisted, and houses upturned from the fountain. The earth heaved and rolled as if in the throes of the re- surrection morn or as if tossing in agony for the sins of men; and a cry like that which went up from the land of Egypt in that awful night when in every house there was one dead arose from this devo- ted city. Those who were not killed or mangled by the first shock, rushed naked and terrified into the streets, and from that trembling crowd rose such a cry of mingled terror and prayer, while walls, stone, and timber were falling around them, as will ascend from the guilty throng before the judgment seat, when they shall call for the rocks and moun- tains to fall and cover them. What a change has one brief instant made! The solid earth, but a moment before as still as if resting on everlasting foundation is tossing like a ship at sea. The morning slumber, the early toil, the varied hopes and joys of thousands, exchanged for one burst of devastation and anguish. Those who lay down the evening before in peace or laughing at the sins of the day; those planning new pleasures or profits for the morrow—those engaged in those deeds of darkness which the eye of God alone can see, awoke that morning at the bar of judgment, or opened their eyes amid the tempest of falling timber and rock, or lay crushed or mangled in the ruins.

Some Frenchmen seeing a man stand still in the high-way, during a heavy shower of rain, asked him why he did so? "Why," says he, "do you think I am mad, to ride in the rain, as you do?"

MISCELLANEOUS.

From Blackwood's Magazine for 1818.

NARRATIVE OF A FATAL EVENT.

If it could alleviate, in the smallest degree, the intense sufferings that have preyed upon my mind, and blasted my hopes, during a period now of almost seven-and-thirty years, I would account the pain I may feel, during the time I am attempting to narrate the following occurrence, of no more consequence than the shower of sleet that drives in my face while I am walking home from the parish church to my parlor fire.

It is within a few months of being thirty-seven years since I left the University of Glasgow, in company with a young person of my own age, and from the same part of the country. I shall speak of him by the name of Campbell; it can interest few but myself now, to say that it is not his real name. We had been intimately acquainted for years before we came together at the college, and a predilection for the same studies, a strong bias for general literature, and more especially for those courses of inquiry, which are the amusement rather than the task of minds given to the pursuit of knowledge, had, in the course of four swift years, bound us together in one of those friendships which young men are apt to persuade themselves can never possibly be dissolved, while, no sooner are they separated for a time, than every event they meet within the course of common life, tends insensibly to obliterate this youthful union; as the summer showers so imperceptibly melt the wreath of snow upon the mountain, that the evening, on which the last speck disappears, passes unnoticed. But our friendship was not destined to be subjected to the slow and wasting process; it was suddenly and fearfully broken off.

Campbell and I, after a winter of hard study, proposed to ourselves, and set out on a journey of six weeks, in order to indulge our predilection for natural history, among the mountains and isles of the Highlands.

We had one morning ascended a high mountain in Knapdale. Many objects were either new to us, or unobserved before, or we saw them under new views. Poor Campbell's spirits seemed to rise, and his mind to take wider flights, in proportion as he looked at the barometer that he carried, and observed the sinking of the mercury. The day was calm, the sky resplendent, and a view of the sea and the islands, from the point of Cantyre on the south, to Tiree and Coll on the north-west, (the most picturesque and singular portion of our native country,) was portrayed on the expanse before us. The scene had its full effect upon the mind of my friend, fitted alike to concentrate itself to grasp the most magnificent objects in nature.

We descended towards the shore of what is called the sound of Jura, through many a dull and bosky wood, sometimes loitering ere we stopped to examine the objects of our study, sometimes gaily walking over the barren moor. The sea shore presented us with a new field of inquiry, and a new class of objects; many curious and beautiful specie of fuci grew on these shores, and of several of the smaller and finer kinds we were enabled to acquire specimens, with the view of enriching our common herbarium.

As the ebbing tide began to discover to us the black side of the islet, we procured a boat at a small hamlet that overhung a little bay, and went on a mimic voyage of discovery. While we returned again to the main-land, the warmth of the day, and the beautiful transparency of the water, which, as the whole extent of the west coast, its rocky shore, it highly remarkable, tempted Campbell to propose that we should amuse ourselves with swimming. Owing to a horror I had acquired when a boy, from an exaggerated description of the danger of the convulsive grasp of a person drowning, or death-grip as it is called, I always felt an involuntary repugnance to practice this exercise in company with others.—However, we now indulged in it so long, that I began to feel tired, and was swimming towards the rocky shore, which was at no great distance. Campbell, who had not forgot his philosophical revery, in the pleasures of a varied and refreshing amusement, was sporting in all the gaiety of exuberant spirits, when I heard a sudden cry of fear. I turned, and saw him struggling violently, as if in the act of sinking. I immediately swam towards him. He had been seized with cramp, which suspends all power of regular exertion, while at the same time it commonly deprives its victims of presence of mind: and as poor Campbell alternately sank and rose, his wild looks, as I approached him, and convulsive cries for assistance, struck me with a sudden and involuntary panic, and I hesitated to grasp the extended hand of my drowning friend. After a moment's struggle he sunk, exclaiming, "My God," with a look at me of such an expression, that it has ten thousand times driven me to wish my memory was a blank. A dreadful alarm now struck my heart, like the stab of a dagger, and, with almost a similar sensation of pain, I rushed to the place where he disappeared; the boiling of the water, caused by his descending body, prevented a distinct view, but on looking down, I thought I saw three or four corpses struggling with each other, while at the same moment, I heard a loud and melancholy voice cry from the bushes on the steep bank that overhung the shore. As the boiling of the water settled, I was partly relieved from the extreme horror; but I had the misery to see Campbell again; for the water was as clear as the air.—He stood upright at the bottom among the large seaweeds—he even reached up his arms and exerted himself, as if endeavouring fruitlessly to climb to the surface! I looked in despair towards the shore, and all around. The feeling of hopeless loneliness was dreadful. I again distinctly heard the same melancholy cry. A superstitious dread came over me as before, for a few seconds; but I observed an old gray goat, which had advanced to the jutting point of a rock; he had perhaps been alarmed from the unusual appearance in the sea below, and was bleating for his companions. I now recollected the boat, and swam exhausted to the shore, while every moment I imagined I saw before me the extended hand of my friend which I should never more grasp. I rowed back more than half distracted. The water, where Campbell had sunk, was between twelve and fourteen feet deep, and, as I said before, remarkably transparent. Some people are capable of sustaining life under water far longer than others, and poor Campbell was of an extremely vigorous constitution. I saw him again more distinctly, and his appearance was in the utmost degree affecting. He seemed to be yet alive, for he sat upright, and grasped with one hand the stem of a large tangle; the broad frond of which waved sometimes over him as it was moved by the tide, while he moved convulsively his other arm and one of his legs. I remember well I cried out in agony, "Oh! if I had a rope!"—With great exertion, and by leaning over the boat with my arms and face under water, I tried to rouse his attention by touching his hand with the oar. I was convinced that, had there been length of rope in the boat, I could have saved him. He evidently was not quite insensible, for upon repeatedly touching his hand, he let go his hold of the tangle, and after feebly and ineffectually grasping at the oar, I saw him once more stretch up his hand, as if conscious that some person was endeavoring to assist him. He then fell slowly on his back, and lay calm and still, among the sea weed.

Unconnected ravings, and frantic cries, could alone express the unsufferable anguish I endured. His stretched out hand! I often see it still, yet it is nearly thirty-seven years ago. But the heart that would not save his friend, that saw him about to perish, yet kept aloof in his last extremity, perhaps deserves that suffering, which time seems rather to increase than alleviate.

It is vain that I reason with myself,—that I say "all this is too true;" I hesitated to aid him; I kept aloof from him; I answered not his last cry for help; I refused his outstretched hand, and saw him engulphed in the cruel waters; but yet surely this did not spring from selfish or considerate care for my own safety. Before and since I have hazarded my life with alertness and enthusiasm, to rescue others; no cold, calculating prudence kept me back; it was an instinctive and involuntary impulse, originating from a strong early impression, and in finding myself suddenly placed in circumstances which had been long dreaded in imagination!

But all this reasoning avails nothing. I still recollect the inestimable endowments and amiable disposition of my early and only friend; memory still dwells upon our taking leave of the city; our passage of the Clyde; our researches and walks into the woodlands and sequestrated glens of Cowal; our moon-light sail on Lochfine; our ascent of the mountain; the splendid view of the sea and islands; and our conversation on the summit; the first cry of alarm; the out-stretched hand and upbraiding look; the appearance of the sinking body; the bleating of the goat; my friend's dying efforts among the seaweed!

DR. CHARLES FOLLEN.

"Sunk though he be beneath the watery floor,
So sinks the day-star in the ocean's bed."

Dr. Charles Follen, who was lost in the steamboat Lexington, was born at Romrod, in Hesse Darmstadt, in the year 1796. His older brother, Augustus Follen, is now a professor in the University of Zurich, in Switzerland, and is an eminent German poet. Another brother whom we have heard spoken of as distinguished for his literary talents, is now a citizen of Missouri.

Previous to the year 1824. Dr. Follen was a professor of the law in the University of Balse, in Switzerland. He taught his science with a spirit of freedom worthy of the earliest days of the little republic in which he lived. In his character, benevolence and perfect gentleness were so happily blended with the greatest courage and firmness, that he was regarded by the students with a love approaching to enthusiasm. His animadversions on the subject of government and law became displeasing to Austria, a Power whose iron and relentless despotism is felt far beyond the limits of her territory. A formal demand was made on the authorities of Balse that Professor Follen should be delivered up to Austria, to answer for the freedom with which he had spoken of absolute government.—The question was debated, and the demand was refused; but afterwards, at the pressing instances of the Austrian Government, and through fear of provoking the vengeance of a Power which they were too feeble to resist, the authorities of Balse instituted a preliminary process against Professor Follen, in consequence of which he left Switzerland. He first went to France, where he was kindly received by Lafayette, who was just coming out to America, and who offered to bring him out with him and introduce him in New York. This proposal he modestly declined, although it was his intention to make the U. States his place of refuge. In the autumn of 1824, after Lafayette's return to France, Dr. Follen came out to America. He was soon afterwards employed as a professor of German Literature in Cambridge College, where his kindness of manners and varied knowledge made him extremely popular with the students. He subsequently embraced the profession of divinity, and was for a while pastor of a congregation in New York. At the time of his death he resided at Lexington, in Massachusetts, where he had charge of a religious society.

He was a man of strong intellect, much cultivated in the various departments of knowledge and inquiry, and his judgment was calm and solid. His experience of the evil of arbitrary governments, joined to the feelings of universal good-will, and to the gentle spirit of hope, which were ever strong within him, led him to embrace the purest democratic principles in regard to government and legislation.—The world had not a firmer, a more ardent, or a more consistent friend of human liberty. His passions, naturally energetic, were all so perfectly subjected to the control of the higher qualities of his character, that although you saw that they were held in their place and overruled by justice and benevolence. No man could have known him, even slightly, without being strongly impressed by the surpassing benignity of his temper. He is taken from us by a mysterious Providence, in the midst of his usefulness.

"It was that fatal and perfidious bark,
"Built in the eclipse and rigged with curses dark,
"That sank so low that sacred head of thine."

New York Evening Post.

Professor Follen, in one of his last lectures before the Mercantile Library Association, made the following beautiful quotation, unconscious that to himself it was so soon to be applicable:

"With noiseless tread death come on man;
No plea—no prayer delivers him:—
From midst of life's unfinished plan,
With sudden hand it severs him;
And ready or not ready, no delay,
Forth to his Judge's bar he must away."

It was a translation from Schiller, and taken down at the time by one of the young men.—Journal of Commerce.

THE DEVIL AND THE LAWYERS.—Saint Enova, a lawyer of Brittany, went to Rome to entreat the people to give the lawyers a patron. The Pope replied that he knew of no Saint, not already disposed of to some other profession. His holiness proposed, however, to Saint Enova that he should go round the Church of San Giovanni di Laterano, blindfolded, and after saying a certain number of Ave Maria, the first Saint he laid hold of should be his patron. This the good old lawyer undertook, and at the end of aves. stopped at the alter of St. Michael, when he laid hold, not of the Saint, but unfortunately the Devil under the Saint's feet, crying out,—This is our Saint, let him be our patron.

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR.—A gray hair was espied among the raven locks of a fair friend of ours, a few day days since. "O! pray, pull it out," said she. "If I do, ten will come to the funeral," replied the lady who had made the unwelcome discovery. "Pluck it out, nevertheless," said the dark haired damsel, "it is no sort of consequence how many come, if they only come in black."

AN INGENIOUS APOLOGY.—"Why," said a country clergyman to one of his flock, "do you always sleep in your pew when I am in the pulpit, while you are all attention to every stranger I invite?" "Because, sir, when you preach I am sure all's right; but I can't trust a stranger without keeping a good look out."

A BAD MEMORY.—A village pedagogue, in despair with a stupid boy, pointed to the letter A, and asked him if he knew it? "Yes, sir." "Well, what is it?" "I knows him very well by sight, sir—but, rat me if I can remember his name."

MARCH OF INTELLECT.—A person reading a quotation from the London Literary Gazette, respecting the consumption of oil, found the usual abbreviation London Lit. Gaz. Upon asking the meaning of a neighbor, he replied, it means that London is lit with gas.

"Oh, eat it up, dear—eat it up," says mamma. "I can't—I've eat enough."—"Oh yes, dear, eat up what's on your plate, so that it need'nt be lost." How common a practice that is; stuffing children beyond the wants of nature, and making them gluttons all their lives, so that the scraps may not be lost!

JEFFRIES.—Judge Jeffries, of notorious memory, pointing to a man with his cane, who was about to be tried, said, "There is a great rogue at the end of my cane." The man to whom he pointed, looking at him, said, "Which end, my lord?"

Dickenson Shearer and Elias M. Turner, were tried a few days since at Worcester, Mass., for kidnapping a boy named Francis, and transporting him to Virginia as a slave. The jury found them both guilty. Turner has applied for a new trial—the counsel for Shearer made no exception, and he was sentenced to seven years hard labor in the State Prison.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... FEBRUARY 19, 1840.

The British Queen, steamer, is hourly expected from Europe.

There is little alteration in the price of produce at the east since our last. The prospects for advanced prices appear to us dull.

Capt. H. Smith, of her Britanic Majesty's ship Volga, on the 11th of September last declared the port of Canton in a state of Blockade, in six days from that date; the American merchants remonstrated against this course. On the 16th of September this officer revoked his proclamation.

We learn that the whigs of this place are preparing to have a great parade. Three military companies are going from this place to the Whig Convention in Columbus on the 21st. They have provided twenty wagons for the purpose. We understand they expect to be joined by the Guernsey, Washington and Morgan delegation. It will be a real "general muster."

OHIO LEGISLATURE.—The case of W. B Lloyd was closed on the 12th inst.; he was decided "guilty of dishonest and dishonorable practices in altering the account book of one Isaac Newton," by a vote 46 to 23; the vote to expel him from the House stood 43 to 25. The constitution requiring two-thirds of a majority to expel a member this branch of the resolution was lost.—So Mr. Lloyd retains his seat in the House.—Since we remarked upon this subject before we have read the evidence of the two Newtons, as taken before the committee of investigation, and as published in the Ohio Statesman. We have not the least idea that Lloyd is guilty.

EASTERN MARKETS.

BALTIMORE, FEB. 8.—Flour.—In the early part of the week there was some little improvement in the price of Howard street Flour, and sales were readily made at 5,50 for common to 5,56¼ a $5,62½, for a choice of brands; in some instances the latter price was paid for good common brands on time, with interest added. On Thursday and yesterday buyers were not so readily met with at those prices, and particularly yesterday, although about a thousand barrels were sold at $5,50 cash, on coming out of the market, we thought this price less firm. The car and wagon rates continues at 5,37½. Sales of city mills to a considerable extent were made yesterday at 5,62½, which has been the predominating price during the week. There have been several vessels taken up to load for England at 5s per bbl., and others might find frieght here upon the like terms.—Lyford.

THE FLORIDA BLOOD HOUNDS.—It is currently believed that it is at least by the consent of the Government, that Blood Hounds have recently been imported from Cuba to be used in the Florida war, to hunt down the Seminole Indians We are pleased to see that this most inhuman and barbarous project, meets the almost unanimous execration of the American press. We have seen a number of ironies and bores upon the subject, among them is the following, from the St. Joseph's Times:

"By recent advices from Apalachicola, we learn the distressing news of the failure of the 'Blood Hound Speculation.' One of a party of gentlemen on a sailing excursion below that town, and who discovered a vessel aground near Dog Island, writes to us as follows: 'On approaching the wreck our ears were stunned with the most appalling and infernal sounds that ever broke upon the quiet of the sea, while our sympathies were at the same moment enlisted on discovering a half famished human figure waving from the mast head a signal of distress. On a nearer examination, it proved to be the schooner "Terrible," from Havana, with Blood Hounds to Government. The individual aloft, we recognized as the agent who had been entrusted with executing this dangerous and novel order. He explained to us as distinctly as he could, though scarcely intelligible from great thirst, the causes of the wreck, and his own peculiar and critical position. The Blood Hounds after leaving port, were turned loose upon deck, and seemed as pacific as lambs until having occasion to bleed one of the sick sailors, they became furious at the sight and smell of blood, and instantly rose upon the crew, killing and eating them with the most ferocious appetites.

"The agent surrounded by a few faithful Pointers, which he had purchased for his private use, effected a retreat to the foremast, which he climbed with great difficulty, remaining there under great anxiety of mind, as well as thirst and hunger, for two days previous to our opportune arrival. The dogs by this time, irritated by the stimulating qualities of human blood, and the want of water, exhibited the most extravagant symptoms of hydrophobia, and were yelling and fighting in the most fiend-like manner. Running the boat close along side, by aid of ropes and spars, the unfortunate consignee was rescued from apparently inevitable death. Before descending into the boat he looked anxiously around for his Pointers. Neatly picked bones, answering in size and number to those devoted quadrupeds, were all that remained of them. Our boat returned safely to Apalachicola. The Hounds, it has since been ascertained, jumped overboard and are all drowned, about two hundred of their number having floated ashore on Dog Island. The schooner has gone to pieces in the late blow—not a spar left to tell the tale—thus adding another abortion to this abortive war."

VERDICT OF THE CORONER'S JURY.—From the testimony adduced before the Court of Inquiry by the Coroner's Inquest to investigate the causes which led to the destruction by fire of the steamboat Lexington, the inquest are of opinion that the fire was communicated to the promenade deck by the intense heat of the smoke pipe, or from sparks, from the space between the smoke pipe and steam chamber, as the fire was first seen near the casing of the steam chimney, on the promenade deck. They are further of opinion that the Lexington was a first rate boat, with an excellent steam engine and a boiler, suitable for burning wood, but not coal, with the blower attached. Furthermore, it is our opinion that had the buckets been manned at the commencement of the fire, it would have been immediately extinguished. Also, inasmuch as the engine could not be stopped, from the rapid progress of the fire, with presence of mind of the officers, and a strict discipline of the crew the boats could have been lauched and a large portion of the passengers and crew, if not the whole, might have been saved.

It is the opinion of this jury that the present inspectors of steamboats, either from ignorance or neglect, have suffered the steamboat Lexington to navigate the Sound at the imminent risk of the lives and property of the passengers, giving a certificate, stating a full compliance with the laws of the United States, while in our opinion such was not the case.

That the system as adopted on board the Lexington, of using blowers on board of boats is dangerous, which has been proved to this jury by competent witnesses. And the conduct of the officers of the steamboat Lexington, on the night of the 13th of January, while said steamboat was on fire, deserves the severest censure of this community, from the facts proved before this jury, that the Captain and Pilot, in the greatest hour of danger, left the steamboat to her own guidance, and sought their own safety, regardless of the fate of the passengers, instead of the Captain or Pilot retreating to the tiller, aft, when driven from the wheel house forward, and the ropes then being burned off, there being at that time a communication to the same tiller, there appeared to be no other thought than self-preservation. And it further appears to this jury, that the odious practice of carrying cotton in any quantities on board of passenger boats, in a manner in which it shall be liable to take fire, from sparks or heat, from any smoke pipe or other means, deserves the public censure. Signed by James Goadby, Thomas E. Burlew, S. H. Harriot, Teunis Fokkes, James Green, P. M. P. Durando, jr., Edmund B. McVeagh, A. S. Chace, Abraham Creveling, Robert Butul, Richard M. Hoe, Henry V. Davids.

We, composing part of the Jury in the case of the loss of the Lexington, fully exonerate and exculpate Captain Stephen Manchester from any blame or censure after the breaking out of the fire on board.

(Signed) BENJAMIN VINCENT, Foreman.
JOSEPH S. HUNT.

January 31, 1840.

CONGRESSIONAL PRINTING.—If the people would encounter the trouble of examining this subject, they would very soon instruct their representatives in Congress to divorce the legislative and executive printing from the newspaper press. So long as this connection endures, so long will the party dominant in either House make the printing the reward of partizan newspapers, and so long will the two parties contend for victory in the election of a printer. If this were the end, no great harm would ensue. But the press to which the printing is granted, will feel interested in supporting the dominant party in all things, by all means, and for this purpose, will never hesitate in concealing truth and proclaiming error. In the present days of laxity in political morals, the temptation offered by the Congressional and executive printing, to an abuse of the press, is irresistible; and under its powerful influence, it is difficult for any press at Washington to be honest. The people gain nothing by a change of printers; for any press which swallows this golden bait, will make sport of truth, and support "all false doctrines, heresies and schisms," whenever so commanded by the party which bestows such lucrative patronage.

Nor is the corrupting tendency of this patronage less in prospects than in possession. Each party in Congres will have its organ in a press; and to secure the constant services of such press, the party for which it speaks must give to it the public printing when a majority, and promise it when a minority. Hence every press in Washington will continually strive to keep or obtain governmental patronage, and must therefore be devoted to the party from which it receives or expects this boon, in all things, right or wrong. From a press under such influence, and consequently so conducted, can the people justly expect light? They cannot. Neither do they receive it. Nobody can know the truth at Washington, without going there to see and listen; for he rarely obtains it from the press. The people can have no interest in supporting a corrupt press at the seat of the Federal government. Upon the press must they depend for correct accounts of what is done by their public servants, for they cannot be present to see and hear personally. Hence they are deeply interested in maintaining the honesty of the press at the seat of government, and consequently in removing it from all corrupting tendencies. A fundamental principle of all of our governments, State and Federal, is the responsibility of public officers, the servants to their employers, the people. But of what value is this responsibility, when the proceeding of the servants are concealed or misrepresented? It is merely theoretical, and not practical. We may be told that the press of each party will closely watch and accurately report the preceedings of the antagonist party. We admit the close watching, but not the accurate reporting; for each press will palliate the errors of its own party, and magnify those of the other. Besides, if the press of either party reported faithfully the proceedings of its opponents, the people the rank and file of each party would hear but one side, for their customs is to read no papers, excepting those of their own party. Hence a strictly partizan press at Washington is a pernicious instrument, and the corrupting influence of the public printing, whether in possession or prospect, renders the press at Washington exclusively partizan.

But this concealment or perversion of truth, this dishonesty of the press, is not the only evil of this connexion between newspapers and the public printing.—A partizan press must be rewarded or purchased, and if the necessary printing, legislative or executive, afford not sufficient patronage, more must be created by additional jobs. Hence each House becomes profuse in expenditure for printing, not only in paying exhorbitant prices, but by ordering unnecessary work. We have seen the executive party in the House ordering great amounts of unnecessary printing, for the purpose of furnishing lucrative jobs to the Globe. We have seen the opposition in the Senate ordering the unnecessary printing of an enormous amount of old documents, for the purpose of granting an hundred and fifty thousand dollars, in profit, to the Telegraph, edited by the notorious personage, who has lately figured in a project of partizan bribery. The expenses of printing have annually increased for the last ten or twelve years, and in a far greater proportion than the increase of legislative or executive business; and the motive to this lavish and needless expenditure, is the purchase of a partizan press, to sustain its employers and censure its opponents, without regard to public interest.

The remedy for these evils is simple and easy; and it is to divorce the public printing from partizan newspapers, and to have it executed by contract. Some of the newspapers tell us that this cannot be done. But we perceive no difficulty. It is done by contract with the publishers of newspapers. Then why cannot it be done by practical printers who do not publish newspapers? A newspaper contains no magic power to facilitate the business of printing.—Brother Jonathan.

The following, for which we are indebted to the Newark Daily Advertiser, is the tariff of duties imposed on wheat, when imported into England, as regulated by Act of Parliament:

Price of Wheat per bushel.		Duty per bushel.
$2—3 and upwards	pays	$0 03
2 00	"	0 07
1 96	"	0 18
1 92	"	0 30
1 90	"	0 38
1 88	"	0 47
1 84	"	0 52
1 82	"	0 59
1 79	"	0 60
1 76	"	0 63
1 73	"	0 66
1 70	"	0 68

And for each three cents per bushel that the price of wheat falls in England below $1 70, the duty is advanced three cents, and consequently when wheat has fallen to $1 19, the duty is also $1 19—taking just all that the wheat brings to pay the duty.

Thus, to all intents and purposes, our superabundant crops are excluded from the English market, as all the northern powers of Europe almost exclude our other staples.

A sailor by the assumed name of Lorenzo Dow, and five others who had been sent home by the United States Consul at Barbadoes in a brig, the Hartly, bound to Alexandria, but which is frozen up in the Potomac, within the district of St. Mary's, were brought to this city on Monday morning last by the Sheriff of St. Mary's county, and turned over to the United States' Marshal on a charge of Dow's murdering Capt. William C. Langdon, of the Frances, on a voyage from Wilmington, N. C., to Martinique, on the last day of October, in latitude 27, by knocking him down with a handspike while he, Capt. L., was engaged at the pump, as the vessel was leaking badly. The crew secured Dow, who is represented to be a native of Manill, to the ring-bolt of the long boat, in which they all embarked, leaving the F. in a sinking condition, and in about twelve hours were fallen in with by a British vessel, the Sterling, which carried them into Barbadoes.—Lyford.

A letter from an American merchant at Havre, published in the New York American, thus speaks in praise of our Minister's efforts to serve the American trade with France.

"General Cass has alike served the trade to Havre and his own countrymen, by representing to the Government, and causing to be removed, two evils which have long been felt. One was the quarantine regulations, now placed on a different and more convenient footing—the other, the want of an adequate number of the custom-house officers here to attend to the unloading of vessels. Merchants and masters of vessels had long complained of the delay and additional expense thus occasioned. The desired improvement has now been ordered, and is to go into effect on the 1st of January."

BLOOD HOUND WAR.—The Florida papers announce the arrival of Col. Fitzpatrick, from the island of Cuba, with a pack of blood hounds, imported, it is said, by the authorities of the Territory. The Globe announces, doubtless by authority, that the "War Department is only acquainted with the circumstance through public rumor, and knows nothing of the matter officially." If blood hounds are imported into Florida and to be used in the war against the Indians, it must be with the connivance, if not with the direct approbation of the Government. Is the Government prepared to take this responsibility? If not let it disclaim the measure at once.—Lebanon Star.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

EDNESDAY, ... FEBRUARY 19, 1840.

A letter from R. Baker, Plainfield, Ohio, ates, that J. S. Brown, an itinerant minister the M. E. Church, informed him that we had ated to him (Brown) that we would go half y to blend the two churches together, &c.— e recollect passing in company with this gen- eman, in the winter of 1838, from Norwich to anesville; and we recollect his expressing a wish at the two Methodist Churches would become nited in one. And as our conversation was ntirely friendly, and as we did not wish to be utdone in generosity, we remarked that we ere willing to go half way to effect this, which peared to him a desirable object.

That there may be no mistake upon this subct, we will now state how far we can go. Be- re we can ever unite with the M. E. Church ey must make their Bishops elective periodi- lly,—dispense with their order of Presiding lder, or make them elective, and they must ermit laymen to participate in the government the church. Now, we are willing to go all the ay up to this, but here is a great gulph we can ot pass; but any thing on this side we can get er.

But if our friend Brown made the impression at we were solicitous to return to the old fold, made a wrong impression. We have never en more comfortable in our church relationship, nce we have born the christian name, than we ve for several years past. And we have little oubt that if the Methodist Protestant Church eports herself as she ought, there will be no ne- essity for her to seek a home any where.

But whether the two churches ever become ended or not, we are happy to see a growing dis- osition to friendship between them. This we commend our brethren every where to culti ate; in all their communications to the paper, pecially in letters of revival intelligences, to ake as few unfriendly allusions to the old urch as possible.

We regret that our brother of the Protestant as been so afflicted at the remarks we made in ference to his use of the appellative Rev.; an explanation seems to be called for on our part.— e will inform him, then, that we are opposed the common use of titles and explicatives, es- ecially in reference to ministers of the gospel. nd we think the Baltimore paper has been some- hat exceptionable on this ground from its com- encement. Let us give an instance or two.— e recollect once it had General Whitaker, some- here in the south, stationed on a circuit; but hether it stiled him the Rev. Gen. Whitaker, no, we do not remember. We have seen its otices of the "Rev. Dr. W. W. W." And when eaking of the friends, immediately around it, too frequently uses the superlative degree, such s, the "greatest," the "most excellent," the most worthy," &c. &c. Now, as the Protest- nt is designed for general circulation, and as it calculated to effect the public taste, it certain- should give countenance to no usages or cus- oms contrary to the character of Methodist Re- formers. And if it condescend to ape titles, or use fulsome eulogies we shall hold it responsi- e to public opinion, even though it be the church aper.

What is said above is not particularly applica- le to the present editor. We think for some me past there has been an improvement in the aper, in this respect; but we think a little fur- her care on this point would do no harm. And robably there has been periods in its existence, hen, in reference to this matter ought could not e laid to its charge.

We regret also that the worthy editor has con- trued our allusion to the brethren of the Pitt treet church, in reference to whom we used the ppellation "boys," into an "attack" and an assault" upon them, than which nothing in the orld could have been further from our design. We imply used the term in reference to their age in he ministry, and according to his own showing, n this they are but boys. The brother might just s well fall out with Paul, who in allusion to oung converts to christianity, including every ge perhaps from ten to fifty years, calls them all babes." Probably in allusion to this very fig- re of the Apostle, it has been common among he Methodist people, ever since our first ac- uaintance with them, to call the younger minis- ers boys,—the phrase is very familiar, particu- arly among the ministry. Nor have we ever be- ore heard an intimation, that it was considered ny way invidious or disparaging even by the most fastidious critic. Nor can we believe, for a moment, that either of these brethren will sup- pose that we intended any unkindness toward hem. And should they, we think it would have been quite as well for the editor to let them ut- er their own complaints as for him to volunteer is service.

We had some how or other received the impres- ion that the editor of the Protestant was quite young man, but we cannot tell how, as we know ot that we ever saw the gentleman, nor can we remember to have heard any account of him. But rom the tone of his strictures upon us we con- clude that we must be mistaken in this matter. For when he affects to be "heartily sorry on our account," to "pity our manner," to feel "pro- foundly mortified" and to "blush for our gross indiscretion;" when he indicates that we are not "christian like," nor "gentlemanly," nor "kind;" and when he has assumed to give us a whole list of advice, we must conclude that he is a man of age and experience, whose matured observations upon the world, enables him to see our folly and disposes him to give us his friendly counsel. Well, we shall endeavor to profit by his fatherly advise, and shall be more careful to avoid "indiscretions" in future. Meanwhile, we can assure our brother that this little matter shall not, in the least, affect our feeling of kindness towards him, but if in any way we can serve him personally, or the interest of the paper under his care, it shall be done with pleasure.

In conclusion; although we are not very tena- cious about little matters, yet we think it the better way to avoid all honory titles in reference to the ministry, such as Dr., D. D., M. D., Rev., &c, &c, and use the simple appellation Brother. This course would, in our judgment, be more in accordance with the spirit of the gos- pel and the general taste of the better informed of the present day. The title Rev. is not altо- gether abandoned by our brethren of the west, but it is nearly so, and we are glad of it.

ESSAYS OF JUNIUS.

The editor of the Olive Branch some time since requested us to republish the Essays of Junius. We have waited to see them before we commenced. In relation to these essays, we think them, on the whole, the efforts of a very strong mind,—though there is not much in them which is new to us, and occasionally some things we think exceptionable; instance the following quotation in reference to Bishop McKendree:

"He was admitted into the travelling connec- tion, on trial, in 1788, and at the Conference of 1792 resisted the Bishops' power, by the part he took in the debate, growing out of Mr. O'Kelly's resolution. When that resolution was lost, he, with others, withdrew from the connection, and sent in his resignation, in writing, to Mr. Asbu- ry. In his conduct then he acted nobly. But in coming back, without assigning his reason for do- ing so, he has left it to the pen of the historian to say, he acted basely. He did not, it is true, like Æneas Sylvius, enrich the republic of letters by the production of his pen, for he was utterly incapable of writing—he was not even a passable preacher; but like that distinguished character, when he assumed the name of Pius II., he igno- miniously renounced the generous principles which he had formerly advocated for doing so, and he will float down upon the stream of time, if not among 'the wisest,' at least as one of the 'mean- est of mankind.' "—Olive Branch.

There are two particulars here to which we ob- ject: 1st. The assertion, "he was not even a passable preacher." 2d. That also, he was "one of the meanest of mankind." That the Bishop acted inconsistent, and that he was spoiled by the influence of unameanable power, are facts that we readily concede, but that he was desti- tute of preaching talents, or that he possessed an ultra meanness we cannot admit. We had a fine opportunity to become acquainted with his talent and his character; and we shall here give an article we wrote upon the subject soon after his death. It is as follows:—

In our former relation to the itinerancy of the church over which he presided, we had a tolera- bly intimate acquaintance with Mr. M'Kendree; and amongst the episcopacy he was our favorite. There were two traits for which the Bishop was particularly distinguished; in the first place he was a most consummate judge of human nature; secondly, he seemed born to rule. These, with several other accompanying qualities, destined him to be a principal member of any community with whom he might associate himself. The former enabled him to determine with almost unerring certainty the true character of those with whom he had to do, and giving him to know the worth of valuable men, he was enabled to ap- preciate true merit; he had a particular taste for young ministers of reading and enterprize, and had the happy art of giving them his appro- bation and encouragement, without exciting the jealousy of others.

Few men had a more commanding appearance than the Bishop. The moment you entered his presence, you were subdued by the glance of his countenance—you felt his superiority and sub- mitted. This was not the effect of the power of office, for, the presence of others of the episco- pacy provoked criticism, and sometimes resent- ment. It was by the prudent exercise of this natural authority, that he was enabled to ac- quire and exercise a greater control over the American Methodists, than any man probably in the connexion.

Mr. McKendree had a most dignified appear- ance in the pulpit, and in the prime of his days, on popular occasions, (which seemed necessary to excite his genius) an overwhelming eloquence. But the maxim, action is every thing in elo- quence, was particularly applicable to him. We have perused some of his written discourses, and there appears to be as great a contrast between his performances in the pulpit, and the produc- tions of his pen, as distinguishes those of George Whitefield.

The Bishop had a chaste and honorable mind. He was very respectful and gentlemanly in his intercourse with the world—never assuming a monkish sadness, nor condescending to levity; though frequently in the company of the preach- ers he would indulge in that kind of anecdote which would excite the mirth of all around him. But in this he retained his dignity—he would be cheerful but not trifling. Perhaps no man could grace a discourse, or amuse a company, with an anecdote, better than he; he always selected the most tasty, and in the relation of them, had the talent of fixing the attention on those incidents, in the narration, calculated to produce the very highest effect.

In his conflicts and intercourse with mankind, he was rather inclined to forbearance than to resentment. He sometimes very pleasantly ad- monished, but seldom reproved; if he did, it was not until the subject of it, had so far implicated himself as to remain defenceless; it was then done in a word, and with that keenness of retort and severity of manner never to be forgotten, and perhaps never to be forgiven.

As to his acquired abilities, they were but moderate—he had nothing more than a common English education. His great forte was his talent for observation—he learned men and things at the fountain head, without the aid of science or books. When he first started in the ministry, he was considered by many to be rather unprom- ising—his sermons were called the "dry ora- tions," and we were informed that he was advi- sed to return home from the itinerancy, because it was thought he would never be useful. But, by the exercise of that industry, which laughs at impossibilities, he ultimately succeeded to ad- miration. Notwithstanding all these adorning qualities, at last, the Bishop was a man of like passions—he had his defects. In the language of the Apostle his "besetting sin" was a love of power. In the late contest in the Methodist Episcopal Church for a modification of her govern- ment, his vast influence was wielded against liberal principles, in favor of despotism. He was the main spring in putting in motion that expel- ling process which has driven thousands from the Methodist Episcopal Church, scandalized Chris- tianity and produced a considerable amount of bitterness and human misery. By yielding a very little of his power, all this might have been prevented.

This generous nature was no doubt spoiled by the influence of the Episcopal prerogatives. These had been accumulated by a man of different stamp—to them he was elevated by the voice of the ministry—he accepted the gift. It is a max- im with us, that when a man takes into posses- sion unameanable and undelegated power, such as is held by a Methodist Bishop, he takes what the Almighty never designed him to have, of course God will not protect him in the use thereof, therefore, its native tendency is to spoil the possessor. To pray for God to give grace to use such power so as not to abuse it, would be as ridiculous as for a man of intemperate habits to take up the intoxicating glass, and pray: "Lord help me to use this good creature so as not to abuse it." The most High will hear no such prayers!

It is now universally admitted, says Mr. Wil- berforce, that power, instead of being used as the instrument of good, hardens the heart and injures the possessors. It is on this principle you may account for the unfeeling manner in which this venerable Bishop, in his latter days, beheld the creatures of his power, fulminating the Bulls o excommunication against worthy christians an amiable men, thereby, severing friends, breaking up connections, and producing all those afflicting sensations, which could not be exceeded by death itself. We speak that we do know and we testi- fy that we have seen. Toward the close of life his natural temper was considerably injured by the indulgence of power. He became irritable and peevish, and did not so sacredly regard the feel- ings of those who immediately surrounded him as in former years. If power would spoil a man of such a well balanced mind, who could expect to escape its deleterious influence? But we wish to tread lightly upon the ashes of the dead, and still to treat with respect a man for whom we have held so high a veneration.

It should be known that Bishop McKendree in his former years opposed the power assumed by Methodist episcopacy—the very power, which, when he got it into his possession, he held with such exceeding tenacity. He united with Mr. O'Kelly in opposing the ambitious claims of Mr. Asbury, and when the former left the Conference he followed him. It is true that he afterwards took the circuit which was assigned him, but this did not altar the character of his act. It is proba- ble the Bishop and his friends have some way of reconciling his former with his subsequent course, which is satisfactory to themselves, but we see no principle on which these could be reconciled, that would not reconcile the most glaring incon- sistencies under the heaven.

The following extract from an episcopal Meth- odist paper is in point.

"We were permitted through the politeness of his relatives, to inspect his papers, particularly those relating to the history of his life, which the vote of the Tennessee Annual Conference respectfully desired him to prepare for publica- tion through our General Book Concern. In the midst of manuscripts, all relating to his travels, labors and life, we found about thirty pages writ- ten consecutively in obedience to the request of Conference—beginning with his birth and break- ing off in the midst of the O'Kelly affair."

This would seem to indicate that the venera- ble man had some difficulty in proceeding beyond the "O'Kelly affair."

But we wish to pass no rash judgment upon his case, we will leave him in the hands of the "Judge of all the earth," who with him, and with us all, will do right.

We call the attention of the reader to the in- teresting communication from Brighton. When the brethren procure their Charter, if they will forward us a copy, we will publish it for them.

To Correspondents and Agents.—Our old friend J. G. Pigman, Esquire, of Coshocton, says: "I have talked with a number of people who want your paper, but there is no one here authorized to take subscribers," &c. We hereby authorize our friend P. to procure subscribers and collect moneys for us. Should he get any of the latter he can send it through his post office at our risk, or he can forward it to O. White, No. 104 Main street, Zanesville, by private hand. Should he send through the office perhaps the Post Master would frank the letter for us as the Department has decided he may, &c.

The P. M. at Chillicothe informs us that S. Little does not take his paper from the office,—a friend tells us that he heard him give his name as a subscriber. Will Bro. Carson attend to this if he please?

We can no longer furnish complete files of back numbers of the Western Recorder, but we have some ten or twelve, including all the min- utes of the Western Conferences. Any person who will pay for one year in advance, from our 27th number, shall receive all the back numbers we have on hand gratis, if he will inform us he wants them.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Thompson, wife of Johnson Thompson of Newton township, departed this life a few days since. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian Church; a pious and amiable wo- man, and her and her husband were among the early settlers of this country.

COMMUNICATION.

For the Western Recorder.

The citizens of Brighton Village, Township of Brooklyn, County of Cuyahoga, assembled at the Academy, on Monday, February 3d, agreea- bly to notice given, to consult respecting the establishment of an Academical School in said village, to be under the direction of the Metho- dist Protestant Church.

The meeting was organized by calling Richard Vaughn, Esq., to the Chair, and appointing Ed- ward J. Fuller, Clerk.

The object of the meeting being stated as above, the individuals present were called upon to express their views in regard to it. After a free expression of individual feeling and much mutual consultation—the minds of the meeting appearing to be highly favorable to the object pro- posed—it was voted that a committee of seven be appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the views of the meeting, to be presented at an ad- journed meeting. The following persons were accordingly appointed, viz:

L. M. Cochrane,	G. W. Marsh,
W. J. Case,	W. Smith,
E. J. Fuller,	R. Stickney,

C. Hubbard.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again at the same place, on Wednesday next, at 2 o'clock, P. M. Attest. Ed. J. Fuller, Cl'k.

Wednesday, February 5. Met according to adjournment. Richard Vaughn, Esq., took the Chair. The committee appointed at the last meeting submitted the following as their report:

Whereas, a proposal has been made on the part of several individuals connected with the Protestant Methodist Church, to establish an Academical school in the village of Brighton, to be under the direction of the Protestant Meth- odist Church; And whereas, a desire has been expressed to know the views and feelings of the inhabitants of this village and vicinity, in regard to the same: Therefore, Resolved, That we highly approve of the object proposed, and feel a lively interest in promoting its accomplishment.

Resolved, That should such a school be estab- lished, we would feel it to be our duty and pri- vilege to assist in sustaining the same by render- ing all the patronage and aid which it might be in our power to bestow.

Resolved, That a committee of nine be ap- pointed, whose duty it shall be to solicit aid and devise means to carry the proposed plan into effect—to collect and disseminate information, and to take all such measures for establishing and sustaining the proposed school as expediency shall dictate.

Resolved, That said school be commenced, if possible, as soon as the first of April next.

Resolved, That the above proceedings be for- warded to the Western Recorder, for publica- tion.

The foregoing report was unanimously adopted, the preamble and resolutions being put each by itself. The following persons were appointed a committee in accordance with the 3d resolution:

Richard Vaughn,	James Winchester,
Ed. J. Fuller,	William Smith,
Cyrus Brainard,	Cephas Hubbard,
William J. Case,	Joseph Williams.

Reuben Stickney,

The meeting then adjourned, sine die.

Attest, Edward J. Fuller, Cl'k.

Mr. Editor:—In accordance with one of the foregoing resolutions, I forward you the doings of the inhabitants of Brighton Village and vicini- ty, in relation to the establishment of an Aca- demical school in this village, with the request that you would give them an insertion in your paper. Permit me here, to state briefly, a few particulars. It is designed, that the contempla- ted school shall be one in which, not only the various branches of an English education may be pursued, but also, all those studies that are re- quired as preparatory to entering any of the various Colleges of the land. Immediate steps will be taken to secure an Act of Incorporation. The building in which it is designed to hold the school was erected for the express purpose to which it is now proposed to devote it. The large upper room is finished and furnished for the purpose. The lower room will soon be finished and occu- pied as a place for the meetings of the Protestant Methodist Church. That church has recently held a series of meetings in this village, and the result is seen in the conversion of some forty individuals. Eight families, as such, have re- cently united with the church here. To the blessed outpouring of the Spirit of God, may be attributed, in no small degree, the interest that is now felt in the establishment of an Academical school in this village. Our distance from Cleveland and Ohio City, is short of four miles. As it regards the location of our village, nothing need be said to those who have visited it. To those who have not, it may be said that the testimony of travellers and strangers, who have visited us, is that a pleasanter location is not found on the Reserve.

Yours, &c., Edw'd. J. Fuller.

ITEMS.

Mrs. Mary Woodbury, the mother of the Sec- retary of the Treasury, died recently in New Hampshire.

A Reason for Repentance.—The editor of the New Orleans Sun, by an accident was obli- ged to have a leg amputated. His brother of the Picayune thereupon advises him to repent forth- with, as "one foot is already in the grave."

Legal Decision.—In the Supreme Court of Massachusetts it has been decided, that a grand- child born eight months and a half after the de- cease of the grand father, is included in a bequest to "grand children living at his decease."

Pennsylvania State Loan.—The loan au- thorized last month was taken by the following banks:

United States Bank, - - - - -	$670,000
Bank of Pennsylvania, - - - - -	100,000
Girard Bank, - - - - - - - -	100,000

A man in New York, advertises that he is getting up a moving diorama to represent the recent loss of the Lexington. Well did Mr. Buchanan recently remark in the Senate, "that every thing was now sunk before a desire to grow rich."—North American.

Fourteen thousand bales of cotton, of the last crop, were taken into Vicksburgh on the rail road previous to the 13th of the last month. $300,000 will be required to finish the road to this place, erect the necessary warehouses, and place a suf- ficient number of locomotives and cars upon the road. The receipts upon the road and at the counter of the bank, are chiefly in their own pa- per, and cannot be used in finishing the road.— The large sum expended in constructing the road has tended greatly to embarrass the bank.

Mrs. Decatur.—We copied a letter from the Philadelphia Inquirer a day or two since announ- cing the death of Mrs. Decatur. The National Intelligencer, of Monday contradicts the state- ment. It says: "It gives us sincere pleasure to state that the annunciation was incorrect. Al- though very ill, Mrs. D. still lives, and we are happy to learn, is thought somewhat better than she was a week ago."

Lord Coke wrote the subjoined distich, which he religiously observed in the distribution of his time:—

Six hours to sleep—to law's grave study six,
Four spent in prayer—the rest to nature fix.

Sir W. Jones, a wiser economist of the fleeting hours of life, amended the sentiments in the fol- lowing lines:—

Seven hours to law—to soothing slumber seven,
Ten to the world allot—and all to heaven.

A Russian Sleighing Party.—The George- town, D. C. Advocate, says: The Russian Min- ister appeared in our streets on Saturday in a Russian sleigh, with driver dressed in Russian costume, and the ladies muffled in furs. The sleigh was manufactured principally of mehogany, and altogether of a novel and handsome appear- ance.—Bicknell.

Stolen Goods Recovered.—We understand that Messrs. Blaney & Hoffner, have succeeded in recovering a considerable amount of the hard- ware and cutlery, stolen from Messrs. Power and Barron, in north Third street. The establish- ment of Messrs. L. & B, it will be remembered, was robbed about a month since, of property to the value of more than five hundred dollars. The stolen goods were found in Shippen street, and have been returned to the owners.—ib.

Backing Out.—Among the petitions presented in the New York Senate, a day or two ago, was one from John Smith, a merchant tailor of that city, to be allowed to take the name of John Smith Frazier. His detail of grievances by rea- son of the inexpressiveness of his cognomen, is ludicrously affecting. Other men get his letters & intercept his business; his friends cannot find his whereabout; he is worse off than Peter Schle- mel who lost his shadow. Worst of all, all man- ner of rascals and wagabonds are continually bor- rowing his name, under which to perpetrate deeds of darkness and villainy; and as a natural consequence, he cannot announce his name in strange company without being mistaken or sus- pected for a villain himself. Such are the mise- ries of Smithdom.—ib.

As much as $1,500.000 in specie is said to have arrived in Philadelphia from New York on Monday last.

City Bank of Buffalo.—We learn from the Albany papers, that the Chan- cellor, at the request of the Bank Com- missioners, has granted an injunction against the City Bank of Buffalo, and ap- pointed Ex-Governor Marcy receiver.

Alarming Threat.—A member of the Ohio Legislature threatened to bring a distiller of that State before the House for contempt. The distiller replied that if he did, he would punish that member by stopping his distillery.—Bro. Jonathan.

The bill to compel the resumption of specie payments by the banks, passed the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania on the 30th ultimo, by a vote of 69 to 23. Petitions are pouring in from va- rious parts of that State for the establish- ment of new banks.

There are four reservoirs at the Phil- adelphia Fair Mount Water Works.— They cover a space of more than six acres, cost in the construction $134,824,- 42, and they contain 22,031,976 gallons, which is sufficient for five days supply for the city of Philadelphia and Liberties.

There is a rumor from Washington, says the Baltimore Patriot, that Mr. Ken- dall has expressed a desire to retire from the General Post Office, on account of continued ill-health. Ex-Governor Mar- cy, of New York, is spoken of as his suc- cessor.

A Fatal Accident.—Mr. Mahlon Hop- kins, of the firm of Hopkins & Brothers, Baltimore, on Monday afternoon, met with an accident which caused his death. In coming out of his residence he fell and struck his head with great violence upon the step, and soon expired.

The actual captal of the New Orleans Banks is $31,870,201. Their circula- tion on the 6th ultimo, deducting notes held by each other, was $3,917,423.— Specie, $3,231,969. Deposites, $4,878,- 943. Loans and discounts, $34,069,833, besides $1,241,704 loaned on bank stock.

The Nashville Whig says, that advices had been received in that city, direct from Texas, which state that General Samuel Houston had been shot, in a personal rencontre, by the Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives—no hope en- tertained of his recovery. Houston was a member from St. Augustine county.

The Lexington.—It is scarcely credit- able, yet we are informed on good author- ity, that the schooner James Lanphier, Captain Kenney, was within a few miles of the burning of the Lexington, knew her, made no attempt to rescue the pas- sengers, and on his arrival in New Lon- don, did not report the calamity.—N. Y. Courier.

A committee from the United States Bank and the Girard Bank, left town this morning to confer with the authori- ties at Harrisburg in regard to the State loan of $870.000 authorized this session. —National Gazette.

Can it be possible that "the Monster" is yet to prop the bankrupt treasury of Pennsylvania?

The Slave Trade.—Apostolical letters of the Pope, published in the most solemn form, ad futurum rei memorium, and pro- hibiting the negro slave trade, were pla- carded on the 5th, on all the walls of Rome. These letters dated the 3d of De- cember and signed by Cardinal Lambru- schini, severely forbid the Catholic laity or clergy to teach publicly or privately that this traffic is lawful.

Bicknell's Philadelphia Reporter says that the whole amount of State Loans, on which the interest was due at the Bank of Pennsylvania, on Saturday last, forms an aggregate of upwards of $28,000,000. The interest ranges from 4½ to 5 per cent. per annum, and the amount due and not paid on Saturday, was $690,860,78. The loan of 1821, for $930,000 at 5 per cent. and a 4½ per cent. loan for $200,- 000, are the only ones for which funds had been provided. The Bank has been the agent of the State since 1821, and this is the first occurrence of the kind.

A Pittsburgh paper relates the follow- ing anecdote of extraordinary presence of mind, and narrow escape:—Two sleighs came in contact in Liberty, near St. Clair street, which frightened a fiery steed in one of them, and he ran off down St. Clair street, throwing out the driver and breaking the sleigh all to pieces.— At the Allegheny bridge, he jumped over the railway and took the upper foot road, and on running about two-thirds over, met a woman, who with singular pres- ence of mind, and in a moment, climbed over the hand railing and hung to it un- til the horse and danger had passed, and then very coolly got back, and, after ta- king a survey of her narrow escape and her dangerous neighbors, she passed on unhurt, to the very great satisfaction of the anxious spectators.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LATER FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival at New York of the pack- et ship Philadelphia, Captain Morgan, we have London dates to the evening of the 27th, and Liverpool one day later than our previous advices. The news although not particularly important, is not without interest. We copy the chief items from postcripts in the New York Commercial, the Evening Star and the American of Saturday afternoon.

The news carried out by the British Queen was considered highly favorable.

The London Times of the 27th says, that money without being in any great request, still commands interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum at the stock exchange.

The Herald says that the Chartists have again commenced holding secret meetings in London.

Fighting is going on with great activity at Algiers, and the results seemed rather disastrous to the French, as no private correspondence came by the steamer which arrived at Toulon.

The passengers who arrived in her however, stated that hostilities continued incessantly from the 14th to the 16th, all along the line between Koleah and Fou- douk. On the 14th the Maison Carree was vigorously attacked by 3,000 or 4,000 Arabs, but without success. The French, however, lost 60 men in the af- fair. In the mean time, General Rulhi- reres defeated the Arabs, near Douera, with considerable slaughter. On the 14th the Amazon frigate landed 550 men of the 3d Regiment of Light Infantry, who were immediately sent to the Maison Car- ree, and on the 15th the two battalions of the 58th, landed from the ships of the line, proceeded in the same direction.— The next day the French army took the offensive along the whole line, and beat the enemy in every direction.

Importation of Flour Prohibited.— The committees of the Belfast public ba- kery lately addressed a memorial to the Lords of the Treasury, praying that they might be permitted to import foreign flour into Ireland, as the people of Eng- land may do in England.

At present American flour can be pur- chased in England for about 24*s* per cwt whereas the best flour here costs from 27*s* to 28*s*, though the American is about 2*s* per cwt. better. Yet we are not permit- ted to import a pound of the latter article, at a time when Irish flour is unfit to be used in our bakeries!

This is one of the many evidences which we have of the monstrous laws that in- terfere with our supply of food. The following is a reply to the memorial above referred to:

Treasury Chambers, Dec. 19th, 1839.

Gentleman—The Lords Commission- ers of her Majesty's Treasury have had under their consideration your memorial, praying the removal of the prohibition of the importation of foreign flour into Ireland, and their Lordships have direc- ted me to acquaint you that they cannot comply with your request.

I am, gentlemen, your very obedient servant,
R. Gordon.

The Belfast Flour and Bread Company, Belfast.

London Corn Market, December 27.— There is little doing in Wheat, but hold- ers are not at all disposed to take lower rates, and speculators have turned their attention more to bonded flour, or to wheat in the Baltic, where prices have advanced to 48*s* for Rostock.

There are buyers of Flour in bond, say Silesian at 31*s* and American at 32*s* per 196lbs nett.

POETRY.

Selected for the Western Recorder.

1. O thou Eternal One! whose presence bright,
All space doth occupy—all motion guide,
Unchanged through Time's all deviating flight,
Thou only God! There is no God beside.
Being above all beings! Mighty One!
Who none can comprehend and none explore,
Who fillest existence thyself alone;
Embracing all—supporting—ruling o'er—
Being, whom we call God and know no more.

2. In its sublime research, Philosophy
May measure out the ocean deep—may count
The sands or sun's rays—but God for thee
There is no weight nor measure; none can mount
Up to thy mysteries, Reason's bright spark,
Though kindled by the light, in vain would try
To trace thy counsels, infinite and dark;
And thought is lost ere thought can soar so high,
Even like past moments in eternity.

3. Thou from primeval nothingness didst call
First, chaos, then existence—Lord on thee
Eternity had its foundation; all
Sprung forth from thee;—of light, joy, harmony,
Sole origin,—all life, all beauty thine,
Thy word created all, and doth create;
Thy splendor fills all space with rays divine,
Thou art, and wert, and shall be glorious great!
Life-giving, life-sustaining potentate!

4. Thy chains the unmeasured universe surround;
Upheld by thee, by thee inspired with breath!
Thou the beginning with the end hast bound,
And beautifully mingled life and death!
As sparks mount upwards from the fiery blaze,
So suns are born, so worlds spring forth from thee!
And as the spangles in the sunny rays
Shine round the silver snow, the pageantry
Of heaven's bright army glitters in thy praise.

5. A million torches lighted by thy hand
Wander unwearied through the blue abyss,
They own thy power, accomplish thy command,
All gay with life, all eloquent with bliss;
What shall we call them? Piles of chrystal light?
A glorious company of golden streams?
Lamps of celestial ether burning bright?
Sunslighting systems with their joyous beams?
But thou to these art as the moon to night.

6. Yes! as a drop of water in the sea,
All this magnificence in thee is lost;
What are ten thousand worlds compared to thee?
And what am I then? Heaven's unnumbered host,
Though multiplied by myriads and arrayed
In all the glory of sublimest thought,
Is but an atom in the balance weighed Against thy greatness—is a cypher brought Against infinity! What am I then? Nought.

7. Nought but the effluence of thy light divine,
Pervading world, hath reached my bosom too;
Yes in my spirit doth thy spirit shine,
As shines the sunbeams in a drop of dew.
Nought; but I live, and on hope's pinions fly
Eager towards thy presence, for in thee
I live, and breath, and dwell, aspiring high,
Even to the throne of thy divinity,
I am, O GOD! and surely THOU MUST BE!

8. Thou art directing, guiding all thou art,
Direct my understanding, then, to thee;
Control my spirit, guide my wand'ring heart;
Though but an atom 'midst immensity,
Still I am something, fashioned by thy hand!
I hold a middle rank 'twixt heaven and earth,
On the last verge of mortal being stand,
Close to the realms, where angels have their birth,
Just on the boundaries on the spirit land.

9. The chain of being is complete in me;
In me is matters last gradation lost,
And the next step is spirit—Deity!
I can command the lightning, and am dust!
A monarch, and a slave; a worm, a God,
Whence came I here, and how? so marvelously
Constructed and conceived unknown? This clod
Lives surely through some higher energy;
For from himself alone it could not be.

10. Creator! yes, thy wisdom and thy word
Created me! thou source of life and good!
Thou spirit of my spirit, and my Lord!
Thy light, thy love, in their bright plentitude
Fill'd me with an immortal soul, to spring
Over the abyss of death, and bade it wear
The garments of eternal day, and wing
Its heavenly flight beyond this little sphere,
Even in its source, to thee, its Author, there.

11. O thought ineffable! O vision blest!
Though worthless our conceptions all of thee,
Yet shall thy shadowed image fill my breast,
And waft its homage to thy Deity.
God! thus alone my lowly thoughts can soar,
Thus seek thy presence—Being wise and good!
Midst thy vast works, admire, obey, adore;
And when the tongue is eloquent no more
The soul shall speak in tears of gratitude.

VARIETY.

The account of the earthquake at Ava is confirmed. Every building and pagoda of brick was prostrated, and many lives were lost by the calamity.

EXTRAORDINARY CAUTION.—An ignorant young spendthrift wishing to borrow some money as privately as possible, was startled at reading the beginning of the bond, "Be it known to all men," and declared his unwillingness to sign, as it must certainly come to his father's ears.

A LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR COWHIDED.—The Detroit Advertiser states that as Lieut. Gov. Mundy was a few days since proceeding from the Senate chamber to his lodgings, immediately after the adjournment of the Senate, he was assailed by Col. Edward Brooks, of Detroit, and violently beaten with a raw hide. A blow inflicted a severe cut on the left cheek of the Lieut. Governor, which bled profusely.

RETURN OF MISSIONARIES.—Rev. Cephas Bennett, his wife and four children, who have been connected for several years with the Baptist Mission in Burmah, have returned from Calcutta. Mr. Bennett's health having failed, he was advised to take this voyage with a view to its recovery.

Rev. Dr. Judson, who has been for 28 years connected with that mission, is in a very feeble state of health.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "FARM."—In the Saxons' time the estates which the lords of manors granted to the freemen were at the first but for a term of years, with a tender of a rent, which in those days, were of corn or of victuals, and thence the leases so made were called forms or frames, which word signifieth money, and terms of years into terms of life and inheritance retaining the rents and those called quit rents or the rents of those persons that were acquitted of fee.—Farmer's Mag.

HOW LONG WILL SHEEP LIVE BURIED IN THE SNOW?—We are informed by Mr. Durham, of Athens, that during the late snow storm two of his sheep were beneath a drift near the barn, and remained in that situation nine days and ten nights.—They were missed and at the expiration of the tenth day found by accident, some of the cattle having traveled over the drift and by stumbling made a breach in the snow bank by which the animals were discovered—one of them on being released, immediately went into the yard and commenced eating as though nothing had happened, the other was a little dumpish, and did not so readily realize the value of liberty.—Bellows Falls Gaz.

THE TEMPERANCE REFORM IN IRELAND.—A letter from Dublin, to Mr. E. C. Delavan, gives the following cheering account of the progress of Temperance.—Truly we live in an age of wonders. The days of weakness are past; what was a little taper, kept alive by the greatest care of a few, has now burst into a mighty flame. The principles of total abstinence are now spreading with a rapidity which their warmest friends never dared to hope for. The weekly Royal Exchange meeting in Dublin, has been so immensely crowded, that it has been found necessary to make a double charge for admission. But it is in the south that wonderful progress is making, under the labors of the Rev. Theobold Matthew, a Roman Catholic clergyman. Here the people are joining by thousands (9000 in two days lately.) Cork, Yonsel, Limerick, Clonmel, Dungarvon, seem to vie with each other in the extent and vigor of their movements. In Limerick alone 10,000 have taken the pledge. Dungarvon, recently the most drunken place in Ireland, seem to be taken by storm. A thousand and more have signed the pledge. In Drogheds are 1000 tetotallers, and during a period of nine months, since the reform commenced, there were two special, two quarter, and nineteen petty sessions, there was not a single person before it for any misdemeanor. In Belfast are 5000 members. Here workmen have formed themselves into anti-usage Associations, with excellent effect. All the Dublin associations, are in an active state, and in Carlow, Acklow, Wexford, Ennerscarthy, Shillelagh, good societies are active in their operations; 70,000 have been added to us. Full liberty has been given to Sir E. Blakeny, commander of the force in Ierland to hold Temperance meetings in the barracks, upwards of 2000 soldiers have been addressed, the meetings are to be held fortnightly.—Bicknell.

FOR THE LADIES.

WOMAN'S WIT.—The following dramatic passage is concerning Gustavus Vasa, when that distinguished Monarch took refuge from the Danish usurper in Dalecarlia, to mature his noble plan for the deliverance of his country:

"On the little hill just mentioned, stood a very ancient habitation, of so simple an architecture, that you would have taken it for a hind's cottage, instead of a place that, in times of old that had been the abode of nobility. It consisted of a long farm like structure, formed of fir, covered in a strange fashion with scales, and odd ornamental twistings in the carved wood. But the spot was hallowed by the virtues of its heroic mistress, who saved the life of the future deliverer of her country.

"Gustavus having, by an evil accident, been discovered in the mines, bent his course towards this house, then inhabited by a gentleman by the name of Pearson, whom he had known in the armies of the late administrator. Here, he hoped, from the obligation he had formerly laid on the officer, that he should at least find a safe retreat. Pearson received him with every mark of friendship, nay, treated him with that respect and submission which noble minds are proud to pay to the truly great when robbed of their external honers. He exclaimed with such vehemence against the Danes, that instead of awaiting a proposal to take up arms, offered, unasked, to try the spirit of the mountaineer; and declared that himself and his vassels would be the first to set an example, and turn out under the command of his beloved general. Gustavus relied on his word, and promising not to name himself to any, while he was absent, some days afterwards saw Pearson leave the house to put his design in execution. It was indeed a design, and a black one.—Under the specious cloak of a zealous affection for Gustavus, the traitor was contriving his ruin. The hope of making his court to the Danish tyrant, and the expectation of a large reward, induced him to sacrifice his honor to his ambition, and for the sake of a few ducats, violate the most sacred laws of hospitality, by betraying his guest. In pursuance of that base resolution, he proceeded to one of Christiern's officers commanding in the province, and informed him that Gustavus was his prisoner. Having committed this treachery, he had not the courage to face his victim, but telling the Dane how to surprise the Prince, who, he said, believed himself under the protection of a friend, he proposed taking a wider circuit home, while they, apparently unknown to him, rifled it of its treasure. "It will be an easy matter," said he, "for not even my wife knows that it is Gustavus."

The officer, at the head of a party of well armed soldiers, marched directly to the lake. The men invested the House, while the leader, abruptly entering, found Pearson's wife, according to the fashion of those days, employed in culinary preparations. At some distance from her, a young man in rustic garb lopping off the knots from the broken branch of a tree. The officer told her he came in King Christiern's name to demand the rebel Gustavus, who he knew was concealed under her roof.—The dauntless woman never changed color; she immediately guessed the man whom her husband had introduced as a miner's son, to be the Swedish hero. The door was blocked up by soldiers. In an instant she replied without once glancing at Gustavus, who sat motionless with surprise, "if you mean the melancholy gentleman my husband has had here these two days, he has just walked out into the wood, on the other side of the hill. Some of these soldiers may readily seize him, as he has no arms with him".

The officer not suspecting the easy simplicity of her manner, ordered a part of his men to go in quest of him. At that moment, suddenly turning her eyes on Gustavus, she flew up to him, and catching the stick out of his hand, exclaimed, in an angry voice, "unmannerly wretch! What, sit before your betters? Don't you see the King's officers in the room. Get out of my sight, or some of them shall give you a drubbing!" As she spoke, she struck him a blow on the back with all her strength; and opening a side door, "there get into the scully!" and giving him another knock, she flung the stick after him and shut the door. 'Sure,' added she in a great heat, "never woman was plagued with such a lout of a slave!"

The officer begged she would not disturb herself on his account, but she affecting great reverence for the King, and respect for his representative prayed him to enter her parlor while she brought some refreshments. The Dane civilly complied; perhaps glad enough to get from the side of a shrew; and she immediately flew to Gustavus whom she had bolted in, and by means of a back passage, conducted him in a moment to the bank of the lake, where the fisher's boats lay, and giving him a direction to an honest curate across the lake, committed him to Providence.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 24tf

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.
J. J. ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

THERE will be application made to the Trustees of Springfield township, at their annual session, on the first Monday of March, at the usual place of holding elections in the town of Putnam for an alteration in School District No. 4, so as to make a new District out of the land of the following persons adjoining in said District, commencing at 160 acres owned by Bernard Wortman, also the farm of Cornelius Springer, Jos. Swaney, Scameron Rodman, Andrew Bumbaugh, Benjamin Maple, Joseph Wortman, Sarah Johnson, James Russell, Robert George, John George, William Kidd, Mary Perien, the Grayham farm, together with two farms owned by Abner James, and eighty acres of land owned by David Jones and occupied by Wm. Perry and Henry D. Morgan. MANY HOUSEHOLDERS.
January 20, 1840. 23

Methodist Prot. Banner.

THE Methodist Protestant Church in the South, and particularly in South Carolina, being as yet in her infancy, her history is but little known, while the views and principles of her ministers have been studiously misrepresented. To enlighten the public mind in relation to those points, and to correct misrepresentations, is the object contemplated by the publication of this periodical. And there is every reason to believe that wheresoever those principles are known and properly appreciated—based as they are upon the union of spiritual and ecclesiastical liberty—it will be conceded that the church stands upon the high ground of scriptural truth. The Methodist Protestant Church has already attained a respectable and firm standing among her sister churches, in various parts of the United States, and we trust the day is not distant, when she will rank second to none, for piety, numbers and usefulness in the sunny South.

While the principal design of the paper will be to make known the history, present condition, and future prospects of the Methodist Protestant Church; to vindicate her principles, and defend her from the attacks of others; due courtesy will be extended to other churches, and notice taken of their condition and prospects—Literature, Science and the Arts, will not be forgotten.

Terms:—THE METHODIST PROTESTANT BANNER will be published monthly, on a quarto sheet, under the direction of a Committee of the South Carolina Annual Conference, at One Dollar per annum, payable in advance. Its enlargement in size and more frequent appearance, will depend upon the support it may receive.

Any person remitting Five Dollars will be entitled to a copy gratis.

Communications may be addressed to the Publishing Committee of the Methodist Protestant Banner, Charleston, South Carolina. 24

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.
LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Books! Books!! Books!!!

CATALOGUE OF BOOKS (in part,) to be had at the Methodist Protestant Book Concern, Baltimore, Maryland, withthe retail prices. A liberal discount will be made to wholesale purchasers.

Fox's Book of Martyrs, 2 vols. 8vo.	$2 25
Dr Macknight on the Epistles, sup.roy. 8vo.	3 25
Dr Scott's Commentary on the Bible, 3rs 8vo	7 50
Dr Dick's Theology, 2 vols. 8vo.	6 00
Dr Paley's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 25
Dr H. Prideaux's Connection of Sacred and Profane History, 2 vols. 8vo.	4 00
Crabbe's Synonymes, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 50
Dr Adam Clarke's Discources on highly important subjects, 2 vols.	3 00
Reese on the Sabbath,	37½
John Bunyan's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 00
Brown's Philosophy of the human Mind, 2 vols.	3 00
Scriptural Anthology,	75
Burn's Introduction to the study of the Scriptures, 2 vols.	7 50
Rev. John Fletcher's Checks against Antinomianism, 3 vols.	3 00
Preacher's Manual, 8vo.	1 50
Mitchell's Greek Testament,	1 20
Rev. Dr Geo. Burder's Village Sermons,	1 50
Brown's Reflections for every day in the year,	1 75
Lowth on Isaiah,	1 67
Locke on the Epistles of the New Testament,	2 00
Ship and Shore, by an officer of the U.S.N.	87
Sunday School Lectures,	50
A Well all about Zion, by the Rev. J. A. Clark,	75
Abbott's Teacher,	50
Bunyan's Holy War, fine,	75
do do common,	50
The Great Teacher, by Harris,	87
Dr Dick's Philosophy of Religion,	56
do do of a Future State,	56
do Christian Philosopher,	56
do Mental Illumination,	62
do Improvement of Society,	62
do Evil of Covetousness,	62
Berridge's Private Thoughts,	60
Buck's Theological Dictionary,	80
Christian Retirement,	1 00
Dr Adam Clarke's Commentarys on the Old and New Testaments, 4 vols. super royal, 8vo. bound,	13 00
do do do, calf, gilt, extra,	20 00
Williams' Bible Exercises,	25
Dr Cruder's Concordance, pocket,	50
Dr Chalmer's Works, 3 vols.	3 00
Christian Student,	75
Conversation on the Bible,	56
Drew on the Soul,	75
Drelincourt on Death,	1 25
Evidences of Chistianity, by Alexander Watson, Jennings, Leslie & Paley,	87
Rev. Dr Hunter's Sacred Biography, sheep, gilt, plates,	3 00
Rev. Dr Moshcim's Church History, 4th edition,	5 00
do do do, calf, gilt, plates,	8 00
do do do, Turkey, gilt edges, extra,	9 00
Rev. Dr Sprague's Letters to a daughter,	75
do do, to Young People,	75
do do, on Revivals,	87
Rev. Dr Doddridge's Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, 12mo. fine ed	1 00
Physical Theory of Another Life,	87
Young Infidel Reclaimed,	37
Sherwood's Scripture Prints,	75
Musical Manual,	50
Fathers Friend,	50
Methodist Protestant Catechism,
Family Bibles, various prices and sizes,
Paragraph Bibles, do do
Pulpit Bibles, do do
Teacher's Visit,
Bullock's Course of Time,
Young Man's Book of Christian Evidence,
do Ladies' do do do	44
Phillip's Devotional Guides, 2 vols 12mo	1 25
Poor but Happy,	31
Janney's Poems,
Adam the Gardener,	44
Praise and Blame,	37
Gospel Seeds,	44
Bible Companion,	62
Phillip's Manly Piety,	50
Merrod's Collection,	25
M P Church Discipline, late edition,	37
Life of Col Gardener,	37
Academical Reader,	50
Clarke's Advice to Preachers,	12
Williams' on the Lord's Supper,	19
Fletcher's Advice,	12
Howe's Works,	4 75
The Laurel,	50
Wilson's Letters,	37
Father's Fireside,	25
Fletcher's Address,	12
Plan for a Child to be Saved,	37
Bible Illustration,	56
Seneca's Morals,	50
Story of Paridise Lost,	31
Caroline E Smelt,	31
Real Dialogues,	50
Pastor's Daughter,	50
Basket of Flowers,	31
Piece Book,	25
Hints to Students,	25
Tree and its Fruits,	37
Evening Readings in History,	37
Child's Book on the Sabbath,	22
Girl's Best Ornaments,	25
Hero of Macedon,	25
Memoirs of Sullings,	25
Indian Narratives,	25
The French Soldiers,	25
Malcolm's Bible Dictionary,	40
Bishop Wilson's Analogy,	24
Picus Songs,	37
Sermons,	55
Phillip's Purity of Female Piety,	50
do Beauty of Female Holyness,	50
do Female Character,	50
do Love of the Spirits,	50
do On Redemption,	50
do Guides,	50
German Slave Girl,	25
Exiles of Egypt,	25
Life of Mrs. Leslie,	25
Golden Clue,	25
Memoirs of John Chamberlain,	25
Julia Graham,	55
Gems,	25
History of Joseph,	31
Loom Boy,	25
Good Grandmother,	62
Life of Bishop Heber,	50
Biography of Pious Persons,
McGavin's Protestants,	4 25
Harris's Sermons,	1 15
Gallaudet's Every Day Christian,	13
Conforms of Piety,	12
Daily Piety,	13
Token of Youth,	12
Hannah Sinclair,	25
Innes Adrice,	37
My Adventures,	37
Six Months in a Convent,	50
Supplement do	50
Martineau's Devotional Exercises,	37
Hannah Moore's Private Devotion,	25
Brown's Concordance,	37
Young Ladies' Sunday,	50
European Children,	25
Chloe Spear,	25
Early Life,	25
Memoirs of S. Lecce,	25
Counsel and Cardion to Youth,	25

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.
January 25, 1840. 23

Literary Repository.

ON the 1st of January, 1840, the subscriber proposes the publication of a new literary journal, of the above title, should sufficient encouragement be given previous to that time.

The REPOSITORY will be published semi-monthly in quarto form, each number containing eight pages of three columns each, at the low price of ONE DOLLAR a year. Its mechanical execution will be in a superior style—printed on beautiful fine paper, with new type. Appropriate engravings will occasionally be given, by way of embellishments. Its columns, excluding every thing of a party or sectarian nature, will be particularly devoted to the literature of the day, containing: Moral and Sentimental Tales, Pleasing and Dangerous Adventures, Biography, Sketches of Travels, Extracts from new Publications, Historical Anecdotes, Poetry, &c. &c.

The subscriber has the pleasure of stating that several Ladies, as well as four or five Gentlemen of decided literary talent, have volunteered their services to enrich the columns of the Repository with their productions. With their aid the publisher hopes to render the Repository equal, in point of merit, to any publication of the kind, extant.

A specimen number has just been published, and should two or three hundred subscribers be obtained previous to the first of January, 1840, (of which we have scarcely a doubt,) its publication will, with confidence be continued—at least for one year. Five hundred subscribers it is thought will fully meet the expenses; and our candid opinion is that twice this number may be obtained with but little effort.

It is earnestly hoped that those who wish to become subscribers, will send in their names as soon as practicable. The subscription money will be required immediately after the reception of the second number, as the terms of subscription will be strictly in advance, and no subscriptions received for less than one year.

All orders and communications must be POST PAID, to secure attention, and addressed to
A. B. F. HILDRETH,
No. 20, Merrimack St., Lowell, Mass.
January 29, 1840. 23

The Southern Compendium
OF LITERATURE, AGRICULTURE, ARTS AND SCIENCES.

UNDER the above title it is proposed to publish in this place in January, a monthly periodical, to be devoted to Amusement and Instruction, embracing Literature, the Arts and Sciences, Agriculture, Horticulture, Domestic and Rural Economy, Sporting Intelligence, &c.

The Literary department will embrace interesting and instructive Tales, Narratives, Adventures, Sketches of travels, places and persons, Anecdotes, Poetry, Extracts from and Notices of New Works, &c. &c.

All new discoveries in the Sciences and Arts, as well as interesting papers relating to either, will be immediately noticed, and when of sufficient interest will be transferred to our columns, or such extracts given as will furnish full information to our readers.

In the Agricultural department, special attention will be paid to the great interests of the South. From our Planters, we will endeavor to obtain much practical and useful information which now lies buried and known but to themselves. In order that we may the more fully and effectually carry out this part of our plan, we propose to make frequent excursions into the different sections of not only this, but also of the adjoining States, for the purpose of personally inspecting and reporting on all the various operations which may be carried on, on the plantations we may visit. By pursuing this plan steadily, (as we hope to do,) much highly useful information will be obtained, which cannotfail to be of immense service to the Agricultural community, inasmuch as our Planters will thus become acquainted with the practices of other sections of country, and may from time to time adopt such as may promise a greater recompense, than those, they at the time may follow. Nor shall we confine ourselves to practical information only, but from the rich stores of knowledge which are to be found among our Planters, we hope to draw much which will prove useful and interesting.

Horticulture will also claim our attention, and we will endeavor to raise it from the low estate in which it now exists among us, to one more worthy of it. We will accordingly give not only practical directions for the culture of Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, but entering into the scientific department, we will publish whatever we may find interesting. Descriptions of new Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, as well as their culture, will be given from time to time. The forcing department, which is but little attended to in the South, embracing the formation, building and management of hot beds, conservatories, and hot houses will also be attended to.

Domestic and Rural Economy will not be neglected, but whatever we can find likely to promote either will be given in our columns.

Sporting Intelligence, Anecdotes, On Dits, and various matters, which, though not strictly within, will well be classed, will swell our pages, and add interest to our periodical.

In furtherance of our object, we will do all in our power to render this periodical highly interesting and instructive, and one which shall be welcomed by every member of such families as may patronize it. To effect this, while we hope to contribute our full share to the Original Literature of the day, as well as add considerably to the stock of Agricultural information, yet we will freely draw from the sources open to us, in the numerous daily, weekly, monthly and quarterly periodicals, which embracing every subject, abound not only in America, but also in Europe, and from these we will select only such articles as may prove highly interesting or instructive.—The sources which are open to us in each department are ample, and we trust we shall so avail ourselves of them, as to render THE SOUTHERN COMPENDIUM a highly acceptable visiter wherever known.

Political and Religious discussions will be excluded, and while we have no preference in both, yet we will not admit any thing which may be likely to wound or offend the feelings of our readers.

We have thus sketched the plan of our Periodical, and respectfully solicit for it support, both by subscriptions and contributions.

TERMS—The Southern Compendium will be published on the 15th of each month, in octavo form of 64 pages, at $5 per annum, payable in advance. JOHN D. LEGARE.
Charleston, S. C., Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried on by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by the subscribers, and will in future be conducted by them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single of all sizes, and of superior quality, will be kept constantly on hand for sale on reasonable terms at the works. The experience of one of the firm in the manufacture of the article, will ensure all made to be of the best quality.
S. B. JOHNSON & CO.
Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just received. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.
Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.
JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.
JOHN MERCER.
November 28, 1839. 15

THE
WESTERN RECORDER
IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

olume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1840. Number 27.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

SACRED SONGS, NO. III.

SABBATH MORNING.

Tune—"Hail to the Chieftain."

ail to the morn that in triumph arises!
The morn on which Jesus awoke from the grave;
oudly and long may we sound forth his praises,
And sing to his name who has power to save:
Send forth in songs of love,
Praise to our God above;
Shout out in triumph, in gladness proclaim,
Jesus again has rose,
Triumphant o'er his foes,
Hail to our Saviour! All hail to his name!"

reat is Immanuel—great is our Saviour,
Amazing his love thus for mortals to die;
h! may we exhibit in all our behaviour,
That we through his blood have our wealth in the sky.
May we while here below,
By his example go,
Walk in his footsteps and on him depend,
And when bold death shall say
"Frail mortal come away,"
Meet him with gladness and call him our friend.

Death! all thy terrors were vanquished by Jesus
When he, on this morning, triumphant arose;
rom thy sting and thy terror, his triumph now frees us,
And we can with gladness, lie down to repose;
And if, while living here,
We are freed from thy fear,
Through Christ's precious blood, and through Jesus' blest love,
What will our transport be
When from thy power free,
We hail him in anthems immortal above?

Feb. 14, 1840. L. E. S.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor:—The institutions established in hio for ameliorating the condition of Lunatics, hd for the education of those unfortunate clas-s of our fellow-men, the Deaf and Dumb, and e Blind, are proud and enduring monuments the wisdom and philanthropy of our Legisla-rs, and furnish unequivocal evidence of the berality and charity that characterize the pres-nt age. A knowledge of the history and de-gn of these institutions cannot fail to carry nviction to the mind of every man, of the lib-al policy which conceived, and the enlightened gislation which established them. Already ve many of the poor and needy, the unfortu-ate and afflicted entered these noble institu-ons, and realized all the important advantages at were anticipated by their benevolent, high-inded and philanthropic friends and origina-rs. Here the Blind are taught reading, geog-phy, mathematics and music, and their condi-on is no longer that of gloom, isolation and scontent, which ordinarily mark their situa-on. The Deaf and Dumb are taught the anches of education usually taught in common hools, and they are thus enabled to gain access useful knowledge of every kind, from which ey were debarred by the want of that sense by hich the greatest part of our knowledge is ordi-arily received; and they are also enabled to rm those moral principles and habits, on which pend their future character and condition.—nd here too, the Lunatic, whose reason is "lost the stormy desert of his brain," is, by a course f moral treatment, restored to his right mind, nd returned to his family and friends, and ena-led again to act his part in the great drama of fe.

These institutions have much, yea, very much nterested me, and as I have leisure hour this vening, I propose to employ it in telling your eaders what I know about them; albeit many f them may be better acquainted with their istory, design, and achievements, than is your umble correspondent. I proceed therefore, Mr. ditor, and notice, in the first place,

THE OHIO LUNATIC ASYLUM.

A few years since the opinion became some-hat general in Ohio, that humanity, philan-hropy, and christian charity demanded an effort n the part of the State, in behalf of the Luna-ic, who may well be regarded as the most unfor-unate being of our race. The Legislature, in ielding a ready assent to said demand, author-zed the construction of a building in the vicini-y of Columbus, suitable for the reception of in-ane persons. In compliance with this legisla-ive enactment, the Ohio Lunatic Asylum, situ-ted about one mile east of Columbus, was built bout two years ago, principally by the labor of onvicts from the Penitentiary. It is a large rick building, consisting of a centre and two vings, and is about three hundred feet long.—The house occupies an elevated position in an pen space of ground, fronting the south. It is he most eligible situation which could have been hosen from its uniting the double advantage of roximity to a town, with the quiet retirement nd free healthy air of the country. When seen rom the public road, it presents an imposing pectacle, with its massy pillars and extended vings, and bears on its front, and throughout its eneral lineaments, evident marks of its being esigned for no common purpose. The east ving is allotted for the females, the west wing for the males; and the centre of the edifice is reserved for the use and convenience of the officers and domestics. One year's experience has proved the building to be most admirably adapted to the purpose for which it was intended.—The Legislature during the season of 1837-8, passed an act for the regulation and government of this institution, and elected a board of Directors, under whose supervision it has been managed. The Directors (Dr. Parsons, Col. Spangler and A. G. Hibbs,) being by law empowered to appoint a superintendent, they selected Dr. Awl, a physician of Columbus, who in my opinion, has proved himself eminently qualified for his responsible station. He had, previous to entering upon the discharge of the duties of his appointment, made himself familiar with the management of similar institutions in the eastern states, and his success in the treatment of Lunatics, has thus far realized the most sanguine expectations of the public.

All insane persons declared such by "five discreet freeholders," before any Associate Judge of any county in the State, are, whether paupers or not, entitled to admission into the Asylum. When application is made for the admission of Lunatics or insane persons who are not paupers, the superintendent is authorized to require, before receiving such persons, payment of three months' expenses, for the maintenance of, and attendance upon such persons, in advance; but it is provided by law, that every insane person whose estate is barely sufficient for the support of his or her family, that said person shall be supported in, and at the expense of the institution. Insane persons, who are not paupers, residents of other States, are also received in the Asylum when it is not crowded, in the same manner and on the same terms, as citizens of our own State. Should the Asylum at any time become crowded with patients, so that no more can be accommodated, whenever thereafter a vacancy occurs, preference is to be given to applicants from counties which have the smallest number in the institution, in proportion to their population; provided however, that in that case none shall be received from other states.

The Lunatic Asylum has now been in operation a little more than one year, and 157 persons have been received. They are composed of every intermediate grade of Lunatics, between the desponding and harmless, and the furious madman who thinks himself able to "strike flat the thick rotundity of the earth,"—between the Lunatic of a few weeks and him of 28 years,—between the poor dejected being who fancies himself doomed to a life of servitude, and he who imagines himself (with Lear) "every inch a king."

Of the whole number of patients received, 27 have been restored and returned to their families and friends "in their right mind,"—5 have been discharged as incurable,—2 as idiotic,—1 eloped, and 8 have died, leaving at present in the Asylum 114, of which 61 are males and 53 females. It appears that of the whole number admitted into the Asylum, 16 were rendered insane by masturbation; 15 by religious excitement, fanaticism, and fear of future punishment; 10 by disappointed love; and the remainder by intemperance, loss of friends, jealousy, fright, intense application, &c. &c. Six of the patients have been in a state of insanity for a period of between 20 and 30 years; 28 years being the longest period that any of them have been insane, (a long, horrible night of mental darkness!) Four of the inmates of the Asylum are between 60 and 70 years of age,—56 are married,—88 single,—11 are widows, and 2 widowers.

It is worthy of notice that none have been discharged from the Asylum as cured who had been insane for a longer period than two years,—a fact showing the necessity of placing patients into the institution at as early a stage of their insanity as possible. The importance of early admission of the insane into the Asylum is zealously urged by the Directors in their Annual Report, from the fact long since established in other institutions, and confirmed by the experience of this, that the proportion of cases cured—other circumstances being equal—is in the inverse ratio of the time of their duration. The more recent the case, the more ready and perfect the cure; and the longer, the contrary.—The Directors further remark that it is now an established fact, that diseases of the mind cannot take place in a sound and healthy condition of the brain, but that they are the consequence of, and dependent on, a morbid condition of that organ. This is supposed to be functional only, at first, but it becomes structural in process of time, rendering the organ under any circumstances incapable of resuming its natural functions as connected with intellectual operations. This doctrine being admitted, it becomes evident that the sooner the treatment is commenced after the attack of disease, before any organic changes are produced, the sooner will it be removed; and it is satisfactorily proven, that in such recent cases, about the same proportion of them may be cured as of ordinary fevers of a high grade.

The improvement of the condition of the insane that have been gathered up from the different counties of this extensive commonwealth, and that consist of every grade and variety of lunacy, from the drivelling idiot up to the raging madman, is a noble, holy enterprize, worthy of the great State of which I feel proud to be a citizen. All good and virtuous men must approve of such institutions, when conducted "on the principles of christian charity, and according to the active, commendable and liberal spirit of the times in which we live."

My sheet being full, and my leisure for the present, exhausted, I must defer to a future period, my notice of the Deaf and Dumb, and Blind Asylums.

HOWARD.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

WESTCHESTER, FEB. 10, 1840.

Mr. Editor:—I must ask the favor of you to publish the following appointments, to wit:

Mill Creek circuit,	- -	March 8.
Tyler mission,	- - -	" 15.
Woodfield circuit,	- - -	" 22.
Cambridge "	- - -	" 29.
Pisgah "	- - -	April 5.
Pennville "	- - -	" 12.
New Lancaster station,	- -	" 19.
Zanesville circuit,	- - -	" 26.
Zanesville station,	- -	May 3.
Pleasant Hill circuit,	- -	" 10.
Farmington, (extra)	- - -	" 17.
Grand River circuit,	- - -	" 24.
Cleveland "	- - -	" 31.

I have visited Youngstown, Mahoning and Deersville circuits, since I wrote you from New Lisbon. At the two first, there was nothing special of the revival character. At Youngstown we have a good people, a beautiful meeting house and excellent laborers; but a balance due on the meeting house, of some $500 had, in these hard times, produced great discouragement. This, probably, hindered the usefulness of our meeting. I am much in hope that our brethren there, some of whom are wealthy, will be relieved of that pecuniary incumbrance soon; as a meeting of the male members was called and a subscription started the day I left Youngstown, to pay off the above debt. God grant them success. Only three joined the church, while I staid, but the congregations were large, attentive and serious. Good may yet come of our meeting. On Mahoning circuit, we have no meeting houses. Our meeting was good, considering our opportunity. We occupied the meeting house of our colored friends at Williamsport. The weather was cold, and on Sunday we were much crowded. There appeared to be awakenings,—penitents came to the altar; a better opportunity might have led to better results. We closed without seeing much immediate fruit of our labors. I hope our brethren there will get up at least one good meeting house against next Conference, and that the Lord Jesus will yet give brother Tallentire success among our brethren on Mahoning circuit.

The Deersville meeting is now in progress in this town. Some twelve or fourteen have already joined the church, and the prospect is fine for a good work. This circuit is rising under the superintendence of brother Richardson, and bids fair to be one of our most important circuits. O, what a people hath God raised up in this region! May they ever be happy and prosperous. There is much success given to the ministrations of our brethren in the eastern parts of the District, so far, since Conference. Aye, and good news from several places, north, south and west. May God give us a revival throughout the entire church this year. Yours, truly, GEO. BROWN.

ALLEGHENY, PA., FEB. 12, 1840.

Brother Springer:

We belive there is no subject more interesting, nor intelligence more cheering to the lovers of the truth, as it is in Jesus, than the progress of revealed Religion in its ascendency over the powers of darkness and its hallowed influence on the human mind; therefore, we wish to communicate a few particulars respecting its success in this station. In the past year, we were not favored with any very special religious excitement, although brotherly love and christian harmony happily prevailed. A few weeks after my return from Conference, we held a meeting of ten days' continuance, during the exercises of which, we felt the gracious outpouring of the Divine Spirit. Sinners were converted, and believers comforted and edified. God was indeed "as the dew unto Israel." EIGHTEEN were received into the church, the greater number of whom had been "without God in the world."

In view of the regular visit of the President of the District, we appointed a meeting to commence on the 25th of December. The exercises opened with a general prayer-meeting at five o'clock in the morning. We continued regularly, without intermission, for five weeks. Bro. Brown labored with us the first week, to much profit among his old friends. We parted with him reluctantly; but knowing that duty called him to publish his Master's message to other people, we were submissive. Bro. John Clarke, of Pittsburgh circuit, came next to our assistance and labored faithfully in preaching Christ to sinners, and in instructing penitent inquirers to "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ." We had also a short visit from brother Hughes, who labored with us in word and doctrine, we trust, to edification. Our congregations were large and attentive. On the more careless and unthinking part, a religious awe seemed to rest, which manifested itself in a reverence for the word of God. Many were convinced of the heinousness of sin and brought to cry for mercy. Every night, after preaching, from six to fourteen seekers of religion were found meekly kneeling at the altar of prayer; among whom we have seen the child of eight years old and the sinner with hoary hairs: many of whom we have heard rejoice in the assurance of their "acceptance in the beloved." How many experienced the pardoning love of God, we are not able, precisely, to state FORTY-FOUR were received into the church on probation—in all, SIXTY-TWO, since Conference; the greater number of whom, we have reason to believe, were made partakers of the Divine favor. Some, also, whose "fine gold had become dim" were happily reclaimed and stirred up to greater diligence, to make "their calling and election sure." With our old members, it has been a time refreshing indeed. While with joy, they looked on the returning sinner coming to Christ, they felt "their peace to flow as a river" and "rejoice with joy unspeakable." Our prospects are still flattering; our congregations are large; our members are united, and in our Leaders' meetings we have union of sentiment and interest.

Our Sabbath School has proved itself to be an excellent auxiliary to the church, under the superintendence and care of our pious and intelligent members. Their instructions have had a salutary influence on the juvenile mind.

With these people I am happy, and in the enjoyment of a religion that incorporates with our experience "a hope that maketh not ashamed," I am joyful. I must record my gratitude to those brethren who rendered their assistance. I have spent some happy hours with them here, and I hope to spend a happy eternity with them in our Father's house above, when we shall have "ceased from our labors."

The revival is still going on with increasing interest on the Pittsburgh circuit. Bro. Guisinger has held a protracted meeting among the Germans, when several members were received from the Methodist Episcopal Church and a goodly number from the world. In all, he has received upwards of EIGHTY members since Conference. Bro. Dalbey has been holding a meeting for two weeks in Pittsburgh, with the assistance of brother Piper which is still in successful progress. Religious revivals are also in the congregations of the Episcopal Methodist, Cumberland and Old and New School Presbyterians in Pittsburgh and Allegheny town. We expect to hold another protracted meeting after the lapse of a few days with the assistance of brother Hughes. In the meantime, we hold prayer meetings every night. "The best of all, God is with us."

Yours, very sincerely, JOHN BEATTY.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, FEB. 11, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—When I came to this station, religion was at a very low ebb, and I may say, throughout the city. But amidst all the coldness in religion, there seemed to be a little leaven of Grace working in the hearts of the brethren. We had prayer meetings, statedly, on Friday evenings. It was in one of these meetings the first effort was made, when two approached the altar of prayer, and they were made to rejoice in the Lord. From that meeting, the work has continued to progress, and EIGHTY have united with us in church fellowship. A number of them are heads of families. Others are inquiring the way to Zion. At brother Kendal's in the suburbs of the city, a number have found peace in believing and united with the church.

Last evening we had Love-Feast. Many were enabled to rejoice in the love of God. Our meeting was continued for this evening. May the Lord come up again with his people and fill the church with the cloud of His glory, that all hearts may be made to rejoice. It rejoices my heart to see rational men and women coming to the standard of free Grace and free Government, casting the weight of their influence in the scale of Mutual Rights. We do not mean by free government, exemption from law, for where there is no law, there is licentiousness and every evil work; but we mean by a free government, one in which the people participate.

Yours, truly, A. C. BARNES.

MT. VERNON, JEFF., ILL., JAN. 3, 1840.

Dear Bro. Springer:—At the last session of the Illinois Conference, of the Methodist Protestant Church, I was appointed to travel the Saline circuit as superintendent. I commenced operating the 1st of November last, and have just finished my third round. This circuit embraces a territory of country 435 miles in circumference. I found it in rather an unpromising condition, with but sixty members. But our cause is beginning to look up. Notwithstanding the opposition of the old church we are increasing in number, and I trust in piety. There are now NINETY-ONE members, making an increase of THIRTY-ONE since Conference; and our prospects are promising for a very considerable increase in a short time.

Our 1st quarterly meeting was held at a brother Hale's, in Galliton county, the 21st and 22d days of January; and I think, considering the inclemency of the weather and the size of our congregations, I never witnessed such a gracious season in all my life. Two embraced religion, three joined the society, and three have joined since in that class, and the work of the Lord is still going on. Yours, in Christ,

WM. PATTERSON.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, FEB. 15, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—Matters in this station remained pretty much as I explained them to be in my former communication to you, until our first quarterly meeting, which began the first of December last, and continued for four days, at the close of which we had a refreshing season, but no accessions to the church. From that time, our meetings became more interesting.—Meanwhile, our episcopal brethren had a considerable excitement in this place, and report says upwards of sixty have been added to their church.

On last Saturday we commenced our second quarterly meeting, and it grew more and more interesting down till last evening, when we were suddenly checked in our devotion by an alarming cry of fire. The only help I had was brother Clemens and Little, save some very kind assistance from bros. Miller and Stimpson of the old Fellowship. But more signal displays of the Divine presence I have rarely witnessed. FOURTEEN have been added to the church as the fruits of this meeting, and more have professed religion.

The fire alluded to commenced just as we were opening our services. It originated in about the centre of the town, and the wind being high it seemed to threaten the consumption of the whole place. Two of the finest rows of buildings in the place are entirely destroyed;—the loss is estimated $40,000. No lives were lost, but one man is said to be badly hurt. It is supposed the fire was communicated to a stable by some boys with a candle. Yours in haste,

D. H. STEPHENS.

CONGRESSIONAL.

ABOLITION DISCUSSION.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WEDNESDAY, Jan. 15, 1840.

Mr. Coles, of Virginia, having moved that the following be added to the standing rules and orders of the House:

"All petitions, memorials, and papers touching the abolition of slavery, or the buying, selling, or transferring of slaves in any State, District, or Territory of the United States, shall, upon their presentation, be laid on the table without being debated, printed, read, or referred, and no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

After some remarks from Mr. Coles, Mr. Thompson, of South Carolina, moved to lay the resolution on the table to enable him to offer another, which was read for information, as follows:

"Upon the presentation of any memorial or petition praying for the abolition of slavery or the slave trade in any District, Territory, or State of the Union, and upon the presentation of any resolution or other paper touching these subjects, the question of the reception of such memorial, petition, resolution, or paper shall be considered as made, and the question of its reception shall be laid upon the table without debate or further action of the House."

And the motion to lay the resolution of Mr. Coles on the table having passed in the affirmative—

Mr. W. Thompson said he was sure there was no man who would doubt the fidelity of the gentleman who had offered the resolution which he (Mr. T.) had proposed to lay on the table, to the best interests of the South and of the country upon this question. But (continued Mr. T.) when my friend asserts that his resolution is the same as mine, I think he is infinitely mistaken. They are as wide apart as the poles. My proposition is, that the question of reception shall be made and laid on the table. I know we have a right to reject these petitions. I do not doubt it—but I have just as little doubt that that right will not be conceded.

What then are we to do? Receive the petitions and lay them on the table. How can we lay them on the table if we do not receive them? If we lay them on the table, can we not take any other action upon them? And does not the gentleman see that in conceding the question of reception he has conceded all that is vital? Does it not erect this body into a platform for the perpetual agitation of this subject? Does it not subject me to the daily torture of having my feelings goaded and my people slandered by men on this floor who would not be received as overseers on our plantations—men who would not dare to breathe their vile calumnies but for the safety which they find by skulking behind the protection of this House? They are not the men, sir, to do it, if they did not know themselves to be thus protected. I say I hold this as vital; and he who knows any thing of the progress of abolition in Great Britain knows that as late as the year 1820, all purpose of abolition was disavowed, and all that they wanted was a platform in the House of Commons from which to agitate upon this question.

I know that there are honorable men of both parties who desire to put this thing down at home, and I am willing to give them every facility so long as I can do so without conceding a vital principle. There are all around me men in regard to whom I should belie my own feelings if I were to regard them as tainted with this dangerous fanaticism. But I cannot yield this principle. I must say to gentlemen with whom I have been associated here, if in nothing else, in opposition to the profligacy and corruption of this Administration, that the people of the South can regard no question as paramount to this. It is with me the question, and those who sustain me and my people from insult to their rights and outrage upon their feelings are my friends: and if gentlemen cannot take the responsibility of the vote, if they cannot stand at home by taking this ground, the more the pity—the more deeply is it to be regretted.

If I might be permitted to give a word of advice upon a matter in which I am so deeply interested, I would say to them, "take the bull by the horns"—the only way to overcome real danger is to look it full in the face; gentlemen have given this subject importance by investing it with dangers which do not belong to it.

I believe that the vast majority of the northern people are sound on this subject—more disposed to take strong ground, and put down this dangerous fanaticism, than their Representatives—as the people generally are, on all great questions, bolder, because more disinterested than their Representatives. I know, too, that a large portion of the Representatives on this floor are ready to take their stand in putting down this infamous faction, but cannot vote with us on this question of reception, although as untainted with abolitionism as I am—men of as high honor, elevated patriotism, and generous intrepidity as any living.

[Mr. Gates here interrupted Mr. Thompson, and said he hoped the gentleman would not include him among those around him who agreed with him in sentiment.

Mr. Thompson. Oh no, sir; I did not allude to the gentleman: I was speaking of high honor, elevated patriotism, generous intrepidity. I surely did not refer to the gentleman.]

Mr. T. concluded by saying that he had not heretofore trusted himself to speak upon this subject. He knew that he could never speak with coolness and self-command upon it, and had therefore forborne, as much as he could, from mingling in the discussion—if, indeed, a southern man is justifiable, which he doubted, in opening his mouth upon it, even to denounce it.

Mr. T. moved the previous question, but, on the appeal of Mr. Granger, saying that he desired to reply to Mr. T's denunciations, Mr. T. said, "I withdraw it—I withdraw it."

Mr. Monroe, of New York, then addressed the House upon the subject—after which

Mr. Granger rose and said: Mr. Speaker, before proceeding to the question before the House, permit me to say to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. W. Thompson) that, after having debated a proposition in the manner in which he debated that now under consideration, it was not like him to demand the previous question, without affording to other gentlemen an opportunity of reply. Permit me also to say that, when a moment's reflection had taught him that he might have done injustice, it was like him to withdraw that demand.

It is necessary for us as the Representatives of the People of this nation, to carry our minds back a little, to ascertain how it is that we arrived at the point at which we now are. Who is there from the south—who is there from the north—who is there in this broad universe that looks to this as a land of freedom—who could have believed that, in one short half century from the formation of the Government, the People of the United States would have arrived at a position presenting them before the nations of the earth as we are now presented?—a position that would show that a People boasting more of freedom than any upon earth are the veriest slaves to local opinion that can be found on the habitable globe? I speak not this in any feeling of unkindness towards any one. I know how strong are local circumstances. I admit myself to be probably as strongly bound by them—as much influenced by the effects they may produce, as any gentleman in this Hall; but still, sir, it is due to myself, to the petitioners, and to the cause upon which I am now speaking, to declare—what every man who knows me well knows—that I never have been, and am not now, an abolitionist; so far from it, indeed, that gentlemen who know my course, and have thought it of sufficient consequence to notice it, are well informed that, whilst I have felt myself, in courtesy, and from considerations of personal respect, bound to answer questions propounded to me by the abolitionists, my answers to those questions have not met with their unqualified approbation.

But I am called to meet here a question which forces the battle of abolitionism to be fought on the right of petition; and let me tell gentlemen upon this floor, that is an issue from which the abolitionists of the north do not shrink. And why? Because they know that the universal feeling of the north is, that this right of petition has been outraged here; and no matter how party drill may have been applied to sustain men in power—northern men with southern principles—let me tell you that gentleman dare not at home advocate the doctrine which here they virtually, at least, approve by their votes. Let me tell you that gentlemen who, upon this question, leave their seats and are founded among the wounded and the missing, know that, in following the requirements of party, they are going against their own solemn convictions, and against the sober feeling of the constituency which they represent. But I do not feel at liberty longer to detain the House upon these matters, and I will proceed at once to the question before us.

The gentleman from South Carolina, (Mr. W. Thompson) has been speaking of these petitioners, and declaring them all to be contemptible—men whom he would not employ as overseers on his plantation. It is true he would not, sir, for they are men who acknowledge no master but the God who made them, and can never be commanded except when their blood may be wanted in defence of the Constitution and the laws of their country. Let me tell the gentleman that, however they may differ from him on this question, there are those whose names will be found upon these petitions not inferior to him in standing, in character, or in talent, in wealth, in influence with their fellow-men; men who, like him, if the interests or the honor of their country should be assailed, would defend them at the cannon's mouth—men who were at the battles of Lundy's Lane and Bridgewater, and who mingled in the sortie from Fort Erie.

I come now, Mr. Speaker, to the history of the proceedings of this House on abolition petitions. Any gentleman who will go back to the records of this House will find that for five and twenty years this question has been presented here, that the petitions have been received under the guaranty of the Constitution of our country, and have been referred to the appropriate committee to which, I think, gentlemen will finally refer those which will be hereafter presented. It chanced that, in the year 1836, from considerations of patriotism or of political calculation, it was found necessary to object to the reception of these petitions in this House, and then it was that a flame was kindled, not by abolitionists, but by gentlemen representing a country which for five and twenty years had submitted to this outrage, as it is called, and who never before had suspected that the rights and the honor of their people were invaded. This is a fact rather material in this business, and which can be established by the records of this House. A proposition was then made by a gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Pinckney) to refer these petitions, without being read, to a committee, that they might be reported upon. Every body felt that a blow had thus been struck at the right of petition; but local feeling, local patriotism, and, probably, local fear, carried these petitions to a committee, who reported resolutions which could not, for a moment, have stood an argument upon their merits. The gag-law was applied—and that, too, upon the most important constitutional question that had for years been presented to this House; not an hour's discussion was allowed.

Well, what next? At the next session, an honorable gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Patton) introduced a resolution that went a little farther to confine this right of petition. The resolution was passed in the same manner as the former. This violent and unconstitutional action having got to a point where it was well to show that not only southern men dare do these things, but that northern gentlemen, if not imbued with southern principles, were at least ready to lend themselves to southern action and the southern views for the benefit of northern men—then, I say, it was that a gentleman from a free State (Mr. Atherton) was found ready to present a gag resolution tied down by the previous question, to be voted upon, not only by gentlemen from the South who perchance felt bound to do it, but by gentlemen from the North who were bound by a stronger tie—the political tie which I am free to admit, with the gentleman from South Carolina, has secured a course of action here contrary to the public voice—a course of action forcing a mental debasement which southern slaveholders would never attempt to force even upon their slaves. But, sir, at last we have arrived at a point a little beyond that. And what is the proposition? It is to incorporate in the rules and orders of the Representative Assembly of the only free Government on the face of the earth an order that no paper shall be received which even presumes to speak upon questions involving personal liberty. Here is a position so beautiful as connected with the representative system of this Government—so perfectly in accordance with those Jeffersonian principles of which we hear so much—so perfectly consistent with what is the present democracy and republicanism of this country, that we are called upon to send forth to the world as a standing order of the House, that any petition which may have been offered at your doors involving questions of personal liberty is not entitled to the poor consideration of being placed upon the journals. Has it come to this? Can it be that in a Government like ours, in the very morning of our existence, we have arrived at a point where the only proposition that may not be discussed is a question involving the liberty or slavery of man? I ask you sir, is this the way to convince the nations of the earth that our institutions are to endure forever? If it be true that we have engrafted upon our system principles which will not bear even discussion—if it be true that there is fastened upon us, by the Constitution and the laws, that which cannot be discussed now, when we are in the vigor of our days, when lusty manhood courses through our veins. and all is action, force, and energy, what is to be the condition of our country when probably she will be saddled with debt, when corruption crawling in upon us through every avenue of patronage shall have brought us to the position of the old Governments of the world, and when, in addition to their burdens and corruptions, we shall be borne down by a system which gentlemen say cannot and must not even meet discussion?

In turning from this part of the subject, I will take occasion to remark that there is no man here who will hold more sacred than I will, the constitutional engagements upon which we have entered, so long as they exist. But this nation is not to be kept quiet by any such course as is here adopted. Men who feel no interest in this question in relation to slavery in the District of Columbia—men who are among the first to sustain and uphold the Constitution of our country unbroken, feel that the right of petition has been invaded, and that, if it can once be violated here, it can be elsewhere; if upon this question, it can be upon others—men who feel that, in this Government, above all others, it is essential that the friends of freedom should resist every encreachment in the beginning. And my colleague (Mr. Monroe) spoke truly when he said that, if this question was urged in its present form, you would find enlisted under the banner of the abolitionists, that they may there fight in the cause of the right of petition, many gallant spirits who will never yield to fierce denunciations, and who when they feel that their rights are invaded, will show to the world that citizens of the South are not the only freemen possessing moral force; that the South is not the only part of this nation which knows its rights, or, knowing, dare maintain them.

Before I conclude, permit me to say a word to the gentleman from Louisiana, [Mr. Chinn.] That gentleman, in a spirit of liberality that considering the position in which he is placed, could arise only from patriotic impulse, asked for a suspension of the rule to introduce a certain proposition. I was unwilling to vote for the suspension, because I did not believe, nor do I now believe, that, before a single petition has been presented, it is right, or within the spirit of the Constitution, to lay down a course of action upon petitions involving questions of personal freedom, different from that which would have been pursued in the ordinary business of the House. But if the gentleman, upon the presentation of these petitions, had offered his resolution, adding instructions to a committee to report thereon, his proposition would have received my vote. I am not of those who believe that the time of the House should be consumed in reading petitions of this or any other character, and I feel it due to those who, in common with myself, offer them, to say that their reading never has been called for, so far as I recollect, except when gentlemen have been driven to it by feeling that they have been treated with severity; that their constituents were wounded through them; and that the Constitution of their country had received a still deeper wound than was inflicted on these petitioners. I trust the proposition of the gentleman from Louisiana, [Mr. Chinn] which I suppose to be substantially the same as that of my colleague from the city of New York, [Mr. Monroe,] will be so framed as to refer these petitions to a committee to be reported on.—But I am unwilling to incorporate such a proposition among the standing rules of this House. I do not believe that it becomes the Representatives of the People of this nation to send forth to the world a rule which will show that we contemplate the presentation of petitions which cannot be acted upon in the usual way; and I do believe that if the gentleman from Louisiana will, at the proper time, present his proposition, when petitions shall be presented, that it will receive the unanimous vote, at least, of all those who agree with me on this floor.

Sir, there is no gentleman in this nation who regrets more sincerely than I, that this question should have been agitated. But I am not willing that those with whom I am associated—men whose lives are as pure, and whose standing in the community that sent them is equal to that of any gentleman here—men who would scorn to do any thing that would not bear the light of day, and whose every action is marked by a disinterested patriotism—are to be regarded as unworthy of consideration, merely because they may entertain a conscientious differeuce of opinion upon matters of public policy. I say it is not becoming the courtesy of this House. Where shall we find ourselves if this Hall is to be made the scene of personal recrimination upon these questions? We stand here the Representatives of a people claiming to be free. Our duty is to see the Constitution and laws of the country preserved inviolate. In doing so, whilst we invade no right belonging to the South, we will never permit the South to trample upon the rights which have been secured to the North by that Constitution. And here let me say, sir, that the clause of the Constitution guartying the sacredness of this right for which we contend, and engrafted upon that instrument in the form of an amendment, was presented by the State which you in part represent on this floor. I therefore call upon old Virginia, the State which would not take the Constitution until a clause had been inserted sufficiently securing this right—I call upon her to see that an amendment which she herself affixed to that sacred instrument is not now trampled in the dust.

In conclusion, Mr. G. moved the previous question upon the amendment of the rules offered by Mr. Thompson, of South Carolina; but the motion not being seconded, and the question again recurring on the amendment—

Mr. Gentry said: This is a question of great importance, and one of peculiar delicacy for gentlemen who represent slaveholding constituents to vote upon without explanation, especially when they intend to give a vote against the policy which this house has heretofore deemed it most expedient to pursue in regard to petitions for the abolition of slavery. But, entertaining opinions on this subject different from those of some gentlemen who represent constituents with interests identical with the interests of those whom I have the honor to represent, and having determined, as I always do, to act out the convictions of my own judgment without regard to personal considerations, I desire to avail myself of the courtesy of the House whilst I briefly state the considerations which will control my vote on this question, and express my opinion as to the policy which I believe is demanded by the best interests of the whole country—the South and the North—on this delicate and very important subject. And, for myself, [continued Mr. G.,] I totally repudiate the idea that this is a question which belongs exclusively to the South, or which threatens to bring ruin and destruction only upon southern interests and southern institutions. It is a question which involves in its consequences the integrity of the Union and the preservation of the public liberty.—The South and the North, the East and the West, are alike interested in the preservation of the Union; and, whilst it is true that the continued agitation of this subject threatens to bring the most fatal calamities upon the South, it is also quite certain that these calamities cannot be visited upon the South, without involving the North in the same general vortex of ruin and disaster—for I hold it to be incontrovertibly true that the interests of the South and the North are indissolubly connected "for weal or for wo," and you cannot bring ruin and destruction on the one section, without injuriously affecting the other. Mr. Speaker, this being the high and important character of the question under consideration—a question involving, as it does, the interests of the South and the North—the preservation of the Union, and of the public liberty—it ought, above all others to be looked at with the calm eye of reason, uninfluenced by our passions, our prejudices, or resentments, to the end that we may take such wise and prudent action in regard to it as will allay excitement in the North and the South, and prevent those disasters which a continued agitation of this subject must, inevitably, bring upon our common country.

Mr. Speaker, I concur with the gentleman from New York, [Mr. Monroe.] who remarked that the battle of abolition must be fought by the North. Yes. sir, the only reliance of the South for a peaceful and harmless settlement of this question is upon the exertions of the patriotic portion of the North, who take a just view of this subject, and who desire no improper interference with the domestic institutions of the South. When the North shall be united against us on this question—if that day shall ever come—they will be able to outvie us here; and we shall then have no alternative left us but to stand to our arms, and maintain our rights at the point of the bayonet. And, I repeat it, Mr. Speaker. it is idle to hope for a peaceable and harmless settlement of this question, unless that object can be achieved by the exertions of those patriotic citizens of the North who are with the South on this subject. And this being the case, I hold it to be highly inexpedient to place this question in such an attitude here as will deprive us of the cooperation of the Representatives of the North who are with us on the main question. The resolution of the gentleman proposes the non-reception of petitions praying for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia and in the Territories of the United States; and we know that the whole people of the North look upon this as a violation of the right of petition as secured to the people by the constitution. And when we ask our friends of the North, who are with us upon the main question, to act with us in supporting this resolution, we ask them to trample into the dust a right which they believe is secured by the constitution that they have sworn to support, and to do an act which effects nothing towards the settlement of the question at issue; and which, by throwing them against the current of public opinion at home, destroys their weight of character, and deprives them of that influence which, under a different state of things, could be and would be most usefully exerted to bring their constituents to a just sense of their obligations to their brethren of the South. And, thus, whilst we place our friends of the North, who, from motives of patriotism, are willing to co-operate with us in putting down that diabolical spirit which threatens so much of evil to our common country, in a position which destroys them, without accomplishing any thing for us, we at the same time place in the hands of the abolitionists an engine with which they are enabled to operate far more effectually than they could otherwise do. And, Mr. Speaker, if I desired to favor the infamous schemes of the abolitionists of the North and of unprincipled politicians of the North and South—who desire to fan the excitement in both sections of the Union, with a view of making that excitement subserve their mean ambition—I do not believe that I could more effectually accomplish that desire than by voting for the resolution offered by the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Thompson.) I implore gentlemen not to persevere in the course which has heretofore been pursued in regard to abolition petitions, for you thereby enable those deluded fanatics to blend with abolition the right of petition, and enable them to address the sympathies and obtain the support and countenance of thousands, who, under other circumstances, would hold them in detestation and abhorrence. The best and most patriotic citizens of the North, those who sympathize with the South on this question, believe that the constitutional right of petition is violated by the course which is contemplated by the resolution; they are unwilling to see that right invaded; they feel bound by high considerations of duty to maintain it. Let us then, Mr. Speaker, place this matter in such a shape as will enable that portion of the Represenatives of the North who are with us on the main question, to give us their co-operation, and at the same time not destroy themselves.

Sir, it becomes the Repsentatives of the South, on this floor, to look at this question practically—sensibly—uninfluenced by passion or resentment. We must meet this issue sooner or later. When will there come a better time? Shall we wait until abolition shall have gathered more strength? Better it is that we meet it now in all its shapes and aspects. Let the subject be fully debated. Let the patriotism of the North represented on this floor, speak out. If you are for us on this vital question, speak out, and quiet the apprehensions of the South. If you are against us, speak out, and let us prepare for the final issue. Let us meet these petitioners as the Sunday mail petitioners were met. Let us receive and refer their petitions to a select committee, with instructions to report that the prayer of the petioners ought not to be granted, and the reasons in full why they ought not to be granted. If the House shall adopt this course, will it not be as effectual in allaying the excitement on the subject of abolition as it was in quieting the excitement in regard to the Sunday mails? I believe that, if the House will adopt and steadily persevere in this course, abolition will be deprived of the aliment on which it lives, and will speedily die a natural death, "unwept, unhonored, and unsung." Thus believing, Mr. Speaker, I desire the adoption of a resolution like that proposed by the genleman from Louisiana, who comes from a state as deeply interested in this question as any in the Union, and he has probably a deeper personal interest involved in its proper settlement than any gentleman on this floor, being, as I am informed, the owner of very many slaves. No one can suspect him of recreancy to southern interest on this most vital subsubject. Let us no longer take counsel from our passions, our prejudices, or our petulence of temper; but let us rather resort to the weapons of reason and argument. With these, and with the aid of the virtuous and patriotic of the North, we shall be able to put down this fell spirit which disturbs our repose and threatens to destroy the Union. If we fail, what then? I will not permit myself to contemplate the last final alternative. But I maintain that it is our true policy to meet this issue now. No advantage can be gained by staving it off. Let us know what this thing is, in all its proportions, shapes, and and aspects. We cannot overcome the dangers that are thickening around us by shrinking from them. We must meet them manfully, fearlessly, but calmly and temperately. Let the North speak out on this floor. Let us know what you intend to do, gentlemen. Let us have a report from a committee, telling the abolitionists that their prayers cannot and ought not to be granted. Let us see if gentlemen from the North will unite with us in making such a response to these petitioners. If they will not, we ought to know it. I believe they will. I cannot believe that the descendants of those patriots who fought the battles of liberty at Lexington, Bunker Hill, and other fields famous in our country's history, will be so recreant to the principles of the American Revolution as to lend themselves to the wicked schemes of the abolitionists; and I am therefore convinced that the best interests of the whole country, the South and the North, require us to pursue the course I have indicated; and, thus believing, I will vote against the resolution offered by the gentleman from South Carolina, (Mr. Thompson,) and every proposition of a similar character, so that I may have an opportunity of voting for a proposition similar to that offered, by the gentleman from Louisiana, (Mr. Chinn.)

Resources of the West.—Few persons I suspect, thoroughly realize what are the capacities of the valley of the Mississippi, though every body has been talking and writing about it these 20 years. A writer in the N. Y. Review sets the matter in a most forcible light as follows:

"Look at it; in that valley there are one million four hundred thousand square miles, or eight hundred and ninety-six millions of acres, while Great Britain, with all its islands, contains but about eighty-eight thousand square miles, or fifty six and a half million of acres. And what is the character of this region.—One third of it at least, is capable of cultivation and thick settlement, and one third is four hundred and sixty-six thousand square miles in extent, about seven time as great an era as all the available land in England Wales, Scotland, and the islands. Look at it more minutely, and you find it from the cleared fields of Ohio and Indiana, to the edge of the barren prairies of the Missouri, and from the wild rice swamps of the north, to the cypress swamps of the south, fertile beyond example, almost level or undulating, and accessible in every direction. Never was there a finer country for the agriculturist; standing at his farm house door, in the interior of Ohio, Indiana, or Illinois, a thousand miles from the salt water, he may see his produce afloat on its way to New York, or Europe in a very few years five complete lines of water and railway communication will exist between the interior of Ohio and the ocean; four are now in operation. Nor is that valley destined to be less eminently manufacturing than agricultural. The State of Ohio, if we may rely on her geologist, Mr. Mather, contains as much bituminous coal of good quality and easy access, as all England and Wales; and Ohio in this respect is, he thinks, no richer than Western Pennsylvania, Western Virginia, and Kentuky; judging from the little that is known, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri, are probably underlain to a considerable extent by this same great mineral treasure. Nor is it coal alone that abounds in the west; from the head waters of the Cumberland river across Kentucky and Ohio, extend a bed of iron ore twenty miles in width. Tennessee is filled with iron; immense beds were lately opened in Indianan—and who has not heard of the Missouri mountain of that most precious metal. Already do Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, yearly, manufacture some seven or eight millions of dollars worth of iron articles for exports to other ports; and lead abounds also; salt is met with in inexhaustible quantities; lime is universally distributed; and the finest freestone found in the greatest profusion.

Here then, is a land, the soil and climate of which favour tillage in the highest degree; the interior of which is far more easy of access than the interior of any country in Europe, and filled with mineral wealth. Within its limits, grow maize, wheat, hemp, flax, tobacco, and sugar. It is a land which scarce needs foreign commerce; it is a world within itself; there is scarcely one considerable article of commerce, if we except coffee and some dye-stuffs, which the Mississippi valley cannot furnish. The first flint glass made up in America, was at Pittsburgh; the porcelain earth found within the limits of that region, rivals that of China: the lakes abound in fish; and the burr-stone of Ohio may compare with the best from France.

Now what, in the common course of things must be the result of this wealth and capability. A dense population, a population of not less than one hundred and twenty millions of people; nay, if we base our calculations on the present population of France. of not less than one hundred and sixty millions, that is to say, a population greater than that now living in Great Britain, Ireland, France. Holland, Spain, Portugal, and all Germany.

Russia.—We have read and interesting article from the Paris National on the subject of Russian encroachments.—The progress of this gigantic power is traced from the time when Peter the Great laid the first stone of St. Petersburg, in 1703, until now, when the black eagle's wings are flapping over the domes of St. Sophia. Before the first named period, Moscow was unknown to the great nations of Europe. Russia possessed not a single point upon the shores of the Baltic; she was hemmed in by Turkey, then a formidable power; by Poland, as yet inviolate, and by Sweden, a vigorous, enemy. Her maritime territory now bordered by the Baltic, extends on the north side from the bottom of the Gulf of Bothnia to beyond the Niemen, including Finland and Eastern Bothnia which she has wrested from Sweden. She has acquired large domains from Turkey, and, what is of more importance, she has obtained the exclusive navigation of the Black Sea. Poland exists no longer. After enumerating her encroachments towards Persia and in other directions, the article in the National continues:

"With the incontestible evidence of so rapid and gigantic conquests recorded indelibly on every map and geographical work, who can for a moment doubt of the ambitious projects of Russia, not merely upon Constantinople, for that is beyond all doubt, but with respect to India, as also of her capability of carrying them into execution? Sufficient attention has not as yet been paid, nor can too much be said with respect to the granduer, skill and perseverance of the policy adopted by the Czars, from the time of Peter the Great to the present—a policy connecting every thing by an indissoluble chain, and which makes every thing tend to the same object.

"Russia finds herself impelled by the force of events to become a great maritime power of the first class; the waters of the Baltic could no longer suffice for her navy, and to increase her influence in the Black Sea, the possession of Constantinople was indispensable. Her armies have already encamped under the walls of that city; she only waits a fitting opportunity of descending once more into the plains of Adrianople; and should this occur, she will not stand still there, but will push onwards to that city so much coveted by Napoleon, and hold perpetual possession of it. This was the perdition of Napoleon."

As a means of counteracting the vast designs of Russia, the Paris journal declares that it is of the first importance to establish French influence and civilization in Egypt.—Baltimore American.

Arnold's Escape.—Mr. Ebenezer Chase was a private in the New Hampshire militia, which relieved the Pennsylvania line at West Point in 1780, when those troops, being veterans, were wanted elsewhere. Mr. Chase, with several others, being off duty, was on the shore of the Hudson when Arnold deserted. When Gen. Washington assigned the command of West Point, he left his own barge in his possession. A temporary hut was erected on the east shore, for the accommodation of the four oarsmen who managed the barge. On the morning of his desertion, Gen. Arnold rode down to the shore from his head quarters at Robinson's farm, very fast, as was his custom—threw the reins to his attendant, and ordered the barge to be manned. He then directed his course towards the Point; but on reaching the middle of the river, the boat was observed to take a course down stream, and move very swiftly through the water.

The explanation was afterwards made by the boatmen. He hoisted a flag of truce and told them to pull for the Vulture sloop-of-war, which lay below, saying that he had some business with her captain, and promised. if they would row him down to her as soon as possible, to give them a guinea and a gallon of rum each. On nearing the Vulture, and being within range of her guns, Arnold opened his plan, saying, "I have served the ungrateful scoundrels long enough, and declared if they would go with him they should have double pay, and be made sergeants in the British serivce. One of the men replied that "he did not understand fighting on both sides." "Then, said the General, "you are prisoners."

When they came alongside the sloop of war, Arnold ascended the deck, and was received by the marines with presented arms. He then ordered his men to come on board as prisoners of war.—One of them, who had been their spokesman just before, said, "It was a shabby trick, as they had toiled to their utmost strength to get the boat along, now to refuse the promised reward, and make them prisoners to boot." The English captain heard their murmurs, and stepping forward, observed—"Gen. Arnold, I command this ship, and while I walk this quarter-deck, no such transaction shall take place. I know the meaning of my words, sir, and will meet their comment." Then addressing the men, he continued—"My good fellows, I respect your principles and fidelity to your country, although you are enemies to your King.—You shall have the liberty to go or stay, as you please. Here," taking them from his purse, "are your guineas. Steward, put up four gallons of rum for these men." The boatmen thanked the gallant and generous sailor, and returned in safety to head quarters to report their proceedings to General Washington, who had just arrived in camp. Arnold, chagrined and enraged, retired without uttering a word, to the cabin of the sloop-of-war.

This statement was made by Mr. Chase, about a fornight before his death, in 1831. He also stated that he saw Major Andre going to execution, riding in the centre of a troop of eight horses.

Arnold, before his escape, had received information that "John Anderson," the name with which he had filled Andre's pass, was taken The information was sent him by the unfortunate person himself. This determined his purpose for sudden flight. He was afterwards distinguished for the inveteracy with which he carried on his predatory warfare against the property of his fellow countrymen. After the war he went to England, where, although he received the countenance of the British government, his good intentions in his unsuccessful plot against the liberty of his country were despised by the British officers.—The unfeeling wretch called upon the widowed mother and sister of his unfortunate victim (Andre.) The servant announced to them the name of Gen. Arnold; and they immediately returned a message that they did not desire to see him.

Incidents of the Lexington.—The following stories show on how small a circumstance our life sometimes depends:

When the Philadelphia morning boat arrived on Monday, the 13th, one of the gentlemen passengers called a hack, and agreed with the driver to take him to Eighth street. Another gentleman being about to get in, the former admonished the driver that he must not zig zag about the city, but go directly to Eighth street. "Yes sir," said the driver, "I will take you first; it will not be out of the way for this gentleman." When the hack had gone on some distance, the two gentlemen fell into a conversation, and the second one stated that he was on his way to Boston, and was then going to the Providence boat. "To the Providence boat, sir!" exclaimed the other; "why, we started from the very next pier to the Providence boat, and here this rascal of a hackman is taking you a journey of three miles, and you will certainly be too late." Such was the fact; but the gentleman imposed upon was out of health, and could not help himself, and so had to go the round, and probably pay for it too, and be made too late besides; for the Lexington had gone when the hack returned, and so the man's life was saved. This story shows the advantage of being cheated, and is calculated, not to make us approve of fraud, but to rejoice that there is a Providence which can bring so much good out of so vexatious an evil.

One of our citizens who was very anxious to go to Boston in the boat of Monday evening, was, by a series of apparently untoward circumstances, prevented from finishing his business at Philadelphia in time to return here on Saturday, and as he could not conscientiously travel on Sunday, he remained at Philadelphia until Monday. His Boston trip was accordingly deferred, and thus his life was saved. This shows the advantage of keeping the Sabbath.

Another gentleman had made all his arrangements on the Saturday previous, to take the boat on Monday for Stonington. But learning that a creditor who held a demand against him, was watching his opportunity to catch him, and reflecting that the boat would be the place at which he would be sure to be found, he determined on taking the New Haven route, and so his life was saved. This shows the advantage of being in debt. Let no man complain of his lot, in this respect. Doubtless there are many more cases in which some little occurrence, seemingly unmeaning, prevented persons from being on board. Oh! that it had pleased the good Being who guides our destiny, to have turned all feet away from the Lexington on that day.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Sound travels in water about four times quicker,—in solids from ten to twenty times quicker than in air.

ESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

NESDAY, ... FEBRUARY 26, 1840.

e weather for some time past has been quite
The frost is entirely out of the ground.—
Saturday and Sabbath we had a real old med rain; the ground has not been so well ted with water for nearly two years.

will be seen by a letter on our first page destructive fire occurred in Springfield, O., e evening of the 14th inst. Property to mount of $50,000, is said by the papers to been destroyed.

SPATCH.—The editor of the South Western tian Advocate informs us that some of his s were nine months going from Nashville,
., to Harrisonburgh, La.

E BLOOD HOUNDS.—Petitions have been for-ed to Congress to put an end to the employof Blood Hounds against the Seminole In-. It seems that the government is likely saddled with this matter at last. We hope ountry generally will petition against these rous doings.

e Whigs have nominated THOMAS CORWIN ran for Governor of Ohio at the ensuing ion. A person present informs us there was osed to be 15,000 persons who attended Convention on the 21st at Columbus. They d thither upon wheels one log cabin, one nboat, one barg, one skiff, two canoes, and ort, called fort Meigs.

e have had one case of the small pox in the ity of our office recently. A family who e in Indiana, having visited their friends in ington, Del., on their return stopped at s Kitchen's, where the lady was immedi-taken down with the small pox, of which, ad a pretty smart crop. Mr. K's family had vaccinated before, but to guard more fully ist the disease were vaccinated again. We ve the lady has recovered without communi-g the disease either to the family or to the nborhood. It would probably be well for the nunity to guard themselves against this af-ng disorder by vaccination. See some approe remarks on this subject, in our 25th No.,
A. K.

TERARY NOTICE.—We have received the 4th
Vol. 1st of the LITERARY REPOSITORY, from ell, Mass. This work is published half month-a quarto medium sheet, at $1 per annum dvance, by A. B. F. Hildreth. It is a work worthy of patronage. The same person ishes the LITERARY SOUVENIR, a weekly pa-at two dollars per annum in advance. This ave received for some time, and find it an resting literary sheet.

UNATIC ASYLUM.—We refer the reader's ation to the interesting communication of VARD, on the first page, in relation to the LUNATIC ASYLUM. This State has rendererself distinguished for the magnitude of her ic works; they are a splendid monument of esources, intelligence and enterprize. But ning places her so elevated in the estimation he Christian and the Philanthropist as her itable and benevolent institutions about seat of government. Her Penitentiary, her atic and Dumb Asylums, and her Institufor the Blind, are all lasting monuments of benevolence of her character. And while magnificent improvements of Ohio will com-nd the admiration of the public, these benev-nt institutions will secure for her the esteem ll good men.

We think, with Howard, that Dr. Awl is a suitable person to take charge of this Insti-on. We rode in the stage with this gentle-n from Springfield to Columbus, soon after his t to the East, whither he had been sent by a olution of the Legislature, to gain information the Lunatic Asylums established in that ion, for the purpose of constructing one at umbus on the most improved plan. He seem-to enter into the subject with all that enthum which never fails to render success in any erprize whatever. He greatly interested us, le travelling together, in relating the impro-modes of managing the insane. Instead of solitary and coercive method formerly pursuthe very reverse is now practised. The ine used to be confined with chains or kept ked up in dark cells, but now they are taken o the open air for exercise, and introduced o company as much as possible. A mild and ciliatory deportment is maintained toward m; they are never contradicted, but are hu-red in all their whims and caprices. Visi-s are taken round and introduced to them, ing care to neglect none. As one fancies he
Gen. Washington, another that he is Bona-te, a third that he is the Holy Ghost, &c. &c.; angers are always introduced to them, not in ir real names, but in their imagined charac-
s. This is Gen. Bonaparte,—this is the mmander of the Ocean, &c. The Doctor in recitation of facts stated to us the following iking case, illustrative of the propriety of the ld and pacific mode of treatment: a strong, letic man, in the prime of life, was brought one of the Asylums he visited, raving mad, ing some five or six to manage him. When arrival was announced the keeper was at ner; the persons who attended him were in-ucted to bring the insane into the dinner l,—they were told to take off his fetters,—this y did, and immediately bolted for fear of sequences. The manager evinced no sur-ze, but calmly invited him to set up and e some dinner. When he looked all round d saw no person assailing his rights,—no op-hition, he responded, "I don't care if I do,
." By the time dinner was over the keeper ving entirely gained his confidence, proposed take a walk with him, took him by the arm d led him, without any resistance, to his a-rtment.

We have no doubt of the correctness of this mild and accommodating mode of treatment, especially in reference to all who are what is called Monomania. They have taken wrong positions, it is true, but grant them their premises and they will reason as correctly as any one, and are just as competent, on their own premises, to judge of correct treatment as the most sane.

If the Doctor will forward to us a communication on the subject of the treatment which his experience has found to be the best, in reference to this unfortunate class of mankind, we will gladly publish it for him. Our medium of circulation is pretty good,—we send papers to about 300 post offices scattered over the West. And as there are many laboring in the incipient stages of mental derangement, throughout the country, it would certainly be philanthropic to give information in reference to the best mode of treating such cases. It might be instrumental in many instances of effecting a cure before the fatal disease became seated.

Will Howard be so good as to favor us, as soon as possible, with essays on the other benevolent establishments of the State? Such information is much called for by the public.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.—In the House, on the 19th instant, on the presentation of Petitions for "the repeal of colored laws—the right of trial by jury," &c. "Mr. Jenkins moved that these petitions be rejected." But he soon found the House was not prepared for this, and asked and obtained leave to withdraw his motion.

A resolution passed the House on the 18th instant, by a vote of 37 to 27, to appoint a joint committee to inquire into the expediency of removing the Seat of Government from Columbus to New Ark, Delaware or Mt Vernon. On the subject of this resolution there was manifested a good deal of heat. It was supposed to have been introduced by way of chastisement to the citizens of Columbus, upwards of sixty of whom had certified their belief in the innocence of Mr. Lloyd, of Cuyahoga, who had been by a majority of the House voted guilty of forgery, in altering the account books of Mr. Newton, and which certificate was published by Mr. Lloyd in the State Journal. A Bill is also up in the House, probably from the same cause, to repeal the Act for the erection of a new State House in the city of Columbus. We are of opinion that the present State House ought to suffice until times become better in relation to monetary matters.

The Baptist brethren in this town, at Mr. Parr's church, have had, for some time past, quite interesting meetings and a considerable revival. A number have received baptism, but of the correct amount we have not been informed. Mr. P. is well spoken of by those of our friends who have heard him; he has charge of the first Baptist Church.

The society of Protestant Methodists, at the Springfield Church, two miles from this office, has been in a healthy and encouraging condition for a year past. They sustained through the summer past, a very interesting Sabbath School, and have kept up through the winter, two regular weekly prayer meetings, one at the meeting house and the other moving round through the private families of the neighborhood. This school and these meetings have been principally sustained by the younger members of the church, who have became attached to it since its organization; the prayer meetings have generally been seasons of comfort and serious impressions. And though there has not been many added to the church, yet we always expect, in the order of nature or of grace, reaping after sowing time.

We attended the quarterly meeting for Zanesville circuit, at Brownsville, on the pike, fourteen miles west of this town, Saturday and Sabbath two weeks since. There were a considerable number of the members of the circuit present, cheerful in hope and in the spirit of the work.—We understand, after we left, they had much excited attention to religion in the village, the result of which we have not heard.

DIFFICULTY OF SUSTAINING A RELIGIOUS PAPER IN THE SOUTH.—The last Southwestern Christian Advocate at Nashville, (Tenn.,) says there is but one Religious paper south of Louisville, Ky., and west of Richmond, Va., beside itself, that is the Cumberland Presbyterian. It names some sixteen which were commenced in that region, but have all either failed for want of support, or have been merged in other papers at a distance. And the question of the existence of the remaining two it indicates is somewhat doubtful. The principal cause seems to be the immense expense required to sustain a paper in that quarter.

MARKETS.

ZANESVILLE.—Wheat is firm at 50 cents; Flour, 2,62½ a 3 dollars; Corn, 25 cents; Oats 18 a 20; Clover seed in demand at 6,50.

NEW YORK, FEB. 12.—Flour—Duty 50 cents per 112 lbs. Ohio, via Canal, $6,25 a 6,37½; Troy, 6,37½; Western Canal, 6,37½ a 6,50; Philadelphia, 6,25 a 6,37½; Baltimore, Howard st., 6,37½ a 6,50; Richmond city mill, 6,75 a 7,00.—Brother Jonathan.

BALTIMORE, FEB. 15.—Flour—The transactions in Flour for the week include about 5,000 bbls. part for foreign shipment & part coastwise. The sales of Howard street have been generally made at 5,50 cash, to 5,56¼ a 5,62½, for cash or short credit with interest added. Yesterday, prices appeared a little firmer; and although there were a few sales at the first quoted price, the greater part were made at 5,56¼, some holders refusing to sell under 5,62½. The wagon and car price continues at 5,37½, and receipts pretty large. Sales of city mills chiefly at 5,62½, at which 400 bbls. were made yesterday. Some holders ask a fraction over.

Provisions—There have been sales of about 100 bbls. prime Beef at 11 dollars; and 360 do. old prime Pork at 10 dollars per bbl, the latter on a credit of six months. Some sales are making of prime old Sides of Bacon, to the extent of about 10,000 lbs. at 8 cents short credit; Baltimore cured Hams, new, at 11 cents cash; and 25,000 lbs. new Frederick county and Baltimore cured Middlings at 9½ cents cash; besides a considerable lot of assorted at 9½ cents short credit. We note the sale of 100 kegs Western Lard at 10cts. cash. Butter is not in much request, but taken by the trade as wanted at quoted prices. —Luford.

PHILADELPHIA, FEB. 17.—Fish—Mackerel continues in limited request, and there is no change in prices.

Flour—The Flour market has again become more active, and sales to a fair extent have been made, both for export and city use, at $5,62½ on the Delaware, and on Broad street at 5,62½ a 5,50 per barrel. The roads in this vicinity being in bad order, supplies come in slowly, and the stock in market is light. To-day holders are firm.

Provisions—Small sales of Pork at $16 for Jersey Mess; over 100 bbls Prime Western sold at a price not reported. In Bacon the sales have been very trifling. Lard—large sales of Western at 8½ a 9 cents, for old, and new Jersey at 10 cents per lb. Sales of Butter at 10 a 12½ cents in tubs and kegs;—prime at the latter price.—Bicknell.

PITTSBURGH, FEBRUARY 14.—Although the rise in the rivers will give a new impulse to trade, yet for want of money, and the usual discounts, every thing is painfully dull, indeed, if there is no early arrangement, the want of money will destroy the prospects of any thing like a fair spring and summer business. Having carefully corrected our price current we give a very brief review. Bacon—receipts moderate, and sales at 4½ out of waggons. Butter is plenty and very dull. Roll 11 to 12, keg 8 to 10 cents per lb, and few sales. Flour—the stock is ample for the demand; from waggons and boats 3 00 a 3 12½, and from stores 3 25 a 3 37½. Wheat—small sales at 56 to 61; Oats 30 a 31 cents per bushel. Iron Blooms—small sales at 60 dollars, 6 months. Pig Metal—a small lot of Kentucky sold at 25 dollars, 6 months. Clover Seed has become very scarce and in demand; small sales at 6 50 a 7 dollars per bushel. White Lead, per keg 2 50

Iron and Nails.—Flat bar iron, common sizes, per pound, 5 a 5½; ditto, smaller sizes 5½ a 7¾; Lock Iron, 6½; Round and Square Iron, 5 a 8; Hoop Iron, 5¾ a 9; Sheet Iron, 7¾ a 9½; Boiler Iron, 7½ a 7½; Stove Plates, 8; Nail Rods, 7; Deck and Spike Rods, 6½; Plough Slabs, 6; do Wings, 6½; 10, 12, 16 and 20d nails, 5¾; 6 to 7d, 6½; 8, 8½, 4 and 4½ inch spikes, 6½; 5, 5½ and 6 inch spikes, 7 cents.—Harris' Intelligencer.

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED.—On Tuesday, the 18th inst., by the Editor of this paper, Mr. NAAMAN R. GRANT to Miss SARAH ANN HIBBS, both of this county.

ITEMS.

FLOUR.—The average price of Flour in the principal cities at the latest dates, was $5,17.

The Cincinnati papers announce the arrival at that place of many steamers from New Orleans.

Printers have the advantage of other mechanics,—they can set and stand, both at the same time.

Printers looking up.—Wm. P. Rogers, Esq., President of the Senate of Pennsylvania, is a practical printer.

All the records, deeds, &c., of the county of Monroe, Ohio, have been destroyed by the burning of the recorder's office and adjourning buildings at Woodsfield, the county town.

Several suits have been commenced at Providence, R. I., against the proprietors of the Lexington steamboat, by owners of goods lost on board.

The Atlantic Silk Company, at Nantucket, the Valentine Silk Company, at Providence, and the Northampton Silk Company, Massachusetts, have failed.

ANOTHER OF THE MURDERED.—The Boston Transcript says that a young man by the name of Walker, of Belchertown, Mass., was also on board the Lexington.

PUNCTUATION.—A Southern paper advertises a black runaway by the following description: "He is about 25 years of age, his nose turns up six feet high, had on," &c. What a noozle that must be.

GAME.—The Chicago Democrat of the 1st inst., says that game of all kinds was never more plenty, and upwards of a hundred deer had been killed in the two preceding weeks near that city. In one day a single person shot seven.

A CHURCH IN LUCK.—The First Presbyterian Church at Auburn, N. Y., has recovered a verdict of $7,666 66 damages, against the Auburn Railroad company, on account of the said company passing through the grounds of the church.

Two hundred German emigrants, who were passenger in the steamboat Belle, recently lost on the Mississippi, had with them a large amount of money, which was destroyed in the boat.—One man alone lost 16,000 dollars in gold.

DISGRACEFUL.—The pastor of a church at Adrian, Michigan, was assaulted and beaten lately, for having published the names of certain young men and women who were in the habit of disturbing public worship. This outrage should be severely punished.

Henry Vanhining, Esq., a soldier of the revolution, died recently in Norton, Medina county, Ohio, at the age of 102 years. Mr. V. was in active service through nearly the whole of the revolutionary war, among the rangers, in the State of New York. He was one of the early settlers of Northern Ohio.

FAILURES IN NEW ORLEANS.—The New Orleans American of the 28th ult. says; "Yesterday some two or three heavy mercantile houses gave way beneath the tremendous pressure of a deranged currency and disordered state of trade. It is calculated that some one million of liabilities are involved."

SINGULAR AND FATAL CIRCUMSTANCE.—While Mr. Owen Downey, an elderly man, was at supper, at the Hotel of Mr. Christy, in Wilmington, Del., on Saturday evening, Feb. 8, he suddenly fell, as was supposed, with an apoplextic fit.—Medical aid was almost immediately procured, but he expired in a few minutes. A piece of beef steak, about two inches in length, had lodged in his throat and choaked him. He was in perfect health at the time.

PIN LODGED IN THE EAR.—The last number of the Medical and Surgical Journal contains an account of a recent event in England, where a young woman nearly lost her life by allowing a pin, with which she was picking her ear, to fall into it. The day when the accident occurred is not mentioned, but she entered the Hospital on the 28th January, 1839, and it was not until the 28th May following—four long months—(during which she suffered the most excruciating torment, two drachms of laudanum per day affording her no relief, nor inducing scarcely a moment's sleep,) that the pin was discovered and extracted.

THE BANKS AND THE LEGISLATURES.—We learn from Mobile that the Relief Bill, so called, had passed the House of Representatives of that State, and had been sent to the Senate.

Tennessee.—Here a resolution requiring the banks to resume specie payments was indefinitely postponed.

Georgia.—The banks have suspended in this State, and the legislature rejected a bill to compel the banks to resume specie payments.

Maryland.—The banks have suspended in this State. The governor talks consistently, and in our opinion judiciously, recommending lenient measure towards them.

Ohio.—The governor has taken a mild and judicious stand in reference to the banks.

South Carolina.—Banks suspended Here a bill imposing penalties on the banks for suspending cash payments and compelling them to resume within a reasonable time, was rejected.

Illinois.—The State Bank of Illinois suspended specie payments, and forfeited its charter. The legislature has revived the charter and allowed the bank one year to resume in.—Bicknell.

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT.—On Monday we visited the Monongahola River, and were delighted to see it covered with Steamboats from the Bridge to the point; and riding beautiful within a few feet of the top of the banks; such a sight was to us truly heart cheering. During the week there have been various arrivals and departures, and we have the manifest of one of them, by which it will be seen, that our Cotton Factories are getting a supply.—Harris' Pitts. Int. 15th inst.

THE LATE FLOOD AND THE RIVERS.—On Monday the 10th inst., precisely 8 years from the great flood of the 10th Feb., 1832, we had another great flood in all our rivers, which rose to within almost 7 feet of the flood of 1832 and which, if the weather had not suddenly changed and became cold, would have risen still higher, and caused immense damage.—All the ice from both rivers passed off, mixed with drift wood, &c. About 50 families had to move in Allegheny; and there was some damage on both rivers.—ib.

THE BLOOD HOUNDS.—As an evidence of the value of explanations in the official organ, the Madisonian of this morning says: "Mr. Wise stated in the House, on Monday, that the War Department had admitted the fact, officially to him, that the Government had authorized the employment of blood hounds." Thus, then, it would seem the Globe had no authority for its "authorized" statement that the War Department knew nothing of the transaction except through rumor and the Florida papers.

Is it not proper, in every aspect of the case, that the Government of the Union should make haste to "define its position," in regard to this importation and proposed use of blood hounds?

The conduct of the Captain who preferred saving his tide over the bar, to rescuing the persons who perished in the Lexington from a horrible death, is a stain upon human nature and the American character. Let his home and lineage be noted, that all other places and people may disclaim him, and that those among whom he was born, may defend themselves by designating the peculiar causes which contributed to the production of such a monster. Speaking of an act of far less heineous heartlessness, a foreign periodical exclaims: "How coldly unpatriotic is the man who commits a deed like this! It spreads as a national reproach; and the crime of the individual is spoken of as if the nation were a party to its perpetuation!"—Charleston S. C. Mercury.

MELANCHOLY.—Our town has been thrown into great consternation for a few days past, by the accidental caving in of a Well, about half a mile from Massillon, in which a Mr. Corneman, the owner was engaged in taking up the stone. The Well is about 80 feet; but having filled up 20 feet at this point, Mr. Corneman was at work at the curbing, when dreadful to relate, it caved in at the top burying the unfortunate man in the ruins.—Every effort is making to rescue, him, if by miracle he should be alive. This is the fourth day, and it is believed that before sunset, they will reach him. The result we shall be obliged to postpone until our next.—Massillon Gazette, Feb. 14.

Thirteen prisoners were discovered yesterday morning, about 4 o'clock, in attempting to effect their escape from the jail. They had nearly succeeded in making a break through the wall, when the falling of some stones on the outside gave the alarm to Mr. Brotherton, the sheriff, who happened to be standing near the place. The only implements they had to operate with were an old knife blade, a small stick, about six inches long, and an iron poker, used to stir the fire. By heating the poker they succeeded in burning a hole through a four inch plank, large enough to admit a man's body; they then proceeded to remove the stones, and had nearly accomplished their design when they were discovered. They were waiting their trials for criminal offences. —St. Louis Rep. Feb. 1.

FROM WASHINGTON CITY.

WASHINGTON, FEB. 15, 1840.

After having been blockaded for upwards of a fortnight, by the dreadful condition of all the roads and bridges of the South, and deprived of the use of the Southern mails, the ice gave way the day before yesterday, and clearing the Potomac, permitted the egress and ingress of the steamers, and we have now some prospect of having a free intercourse with the world.

I am happy to say, beside this, that there is a fair prospect that the difficulties that have existed between the Wilmington, Philadelphia and Baltimore Rail Road, will be adjusted, and the Northern mails will be once more allowed to take their free course, without interruption. As spring advances, our hopes of better times and days become more exhilarated; and in despite of all the muss of the banks, and of the currency, it is believed that the Republic will exist, and continue to flourish. In a day or two, Mr. Clay goes to Virginia, to spend the 22d of February, Washington's birth day, with the friends of his youth, and the companions of his riper years. Great preparations are making among the Whigs of the Old Dominion to receive him; and I suppose they will get up a very magnificent gala on the occasion.

The proceedings of Congress, are distinguished rather for their dullness, than for any thing else. The consideration of Mr. Grundy's Report, on Mr. Benton's non-assumption resolutions, occupies the larger part of the time of the Senate, and the subject, as usual, gives rise to a series of very long and uninteresting speeches.

For the last few days, the House of Representatives has been constantly devoted to the consideration of a resolution offered by Mr. Casey, of Illinois, to instruct the Committee on Ways and Means to report an appropriation of $150,000, for the continuation and completion of the Cumberland Road, in the State of Indiana.

This resolution has been made a theme for a debate, that is as wide as any of the vast prairies of the West. Every thing in the heavens above, and in the earth below, have been involved in it; and as is usual, the whole debate has had a direct squinting toward the Presidential election. It is yet going on, and does not promise a very speedy close. There will probably be two hundred and fifty speeches delivered on the subject.

As it is not at all probable, that any business, connected with the actual interests of the country, will be transacted this session, it would be well for the public press, in all sections of the Union, to call for an adjournment. The session ought not to be protracted beyond the 1st of May. All the business of Congress, can be satisfactorily transacted long before that date.

The action of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, in reference to the banks, and the currency creates a great deal of solicitude and curiosity in this quarter of the country. The decision of your legislature, on these subjects, no matter what it may be, will produce a very great effect in the Union.

The Senate did not sit to-day.

In the House nothing of the least importance. The Cumberland Road Bill was first considered, and then Mr. Sergeant made an unsuccessful attempt to have the New Census Bill passed.

Mr. Goode spoke for some time in relation to General Harrison and the Battle of Tippecanoe. Mr. Corwin also spoke with ability upon the same subject, and vindicated the military skill of the heroic old chief.

And then, the House adjourned.

A message was received from the President urging early action in relation to the report from the Commissioner of Pensions. The bill upon the subject was read twice, and a member stated he would call it up again on Monday.—Bicknell.

Business Department.

WHEELING, VA., FEB. 17, 1840.

Dear Sir:—After a long time I send you pay for the Recorder, which here permit me to say I admire very much, and weekly take great pleasure in perusing its well filled columns.

The M. P. Society is almost without a man here, yet there are many friends to the cause who would like to peruse your valuable paper.—You miss it much by not having an agent here.

With much respect I remain your friend,
F. W. BASSETT.

REV. C. SPRINGER.

Will Bro. Bassett please to act as our agent for his town? He knows to whom we send the paper, (or can know by calling on our good friend Deleplaine, one of the clerks of the post office,) and send us the pay soon as possible; and some new subscribers if he can procure good ones.

A quarterly meeting will be held on the 28th and 29th of March, at S. Ramsbottom's on Eagle creek, Ohio, under the care of S. W. Thornton, who requests the attendance of Bro. Hunt on the occasion.

At a called quarterly meeting for Lawrenceburgh circuit, held on the 17th inst., it was resolved, for various reasons, to be inexpedient for the present, to form an Indiana Conference; and the committee charged with that subject, according to their request, are hereby informed of the opinion of this circuit. WM. SMITH, Sec.

I concur in opinion with the quarterly Conference. J. SIMPSON, Sup't. Law. ct.

The quarterly conference of White river circuit, held in the Liberty meeting house, 8th and 9th inst. have past a resolution in favor of an Indiana Conference, with which I concur.

E. K. M'MASTERS.

The P. M. at Newcomerstown says the Western Recorder directed to J. Pinkerton has not been called for, for three months. Will Brother Warren attend to this and let us know the whys and the wherefores?

We say to Bro. Clawson that we have sent to Frenchtown papers to both Jesse & John Smith: we did not send to John for some time after the paper was started, but we then sent him the back numbers.

Bro. Simpson, you say that W. Smith has paid for his paper twice; we do not understand how: but if it be so you can do as you propose.

It will be recollected that when Post Masters wish to frank letters, that they must put their names on the back, otherwise when they reach our office we are charged, notwithstanding they may write "free" on the letters.

We say to brother W. L. Baldwin, that since we wrote him, matters have so transpired, that we will not want the help to which we referred in our letter.

We inform brother S. of Cambridge and brother T. of Jefferson, that their communications, tho' they contain good sentiments, would not well do for the press without re-writing; for this we have not time,—at least, at the present.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From I Thrap, for C Fairbank,	- -	$2 00
" J Beatty,	- - - - -	5 00
For C Avery, J T Miller, two each, and one for J R Fleming,	-
" Rezin Baker,	- - - -	2 00
" A McGuire, through Geo. Replintz,		2 00
For Wm Whalen,	- - -
" W Marshall,	- - - -	6 00
For G Metcalf, N Pedwin and W Reney,	- - - - -
" D H Stephens, for Stephen Bell,	-	2 00
" D E Stanton, for Mrs Stanton,	-	2 00
" F W Bassett,	- - - -	2 00
" George Brown,	- - - -	6 00
For J Flagle, W Crooks & P Fulton,
" J G Pigman, for A T Jones,	-	2 00
" J Guest, for S Blackley,	-	2 00
" Isaac Lewis, for W Clawson,	-	2 00
" S Clawson, through G W Lorentz,		5 50
For F King, two, for a name yet to be sent, 2 and 1 50, for John Smith; 50 cts. not forwarded.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

E J Fuller, J Burns, I Hunt, J G Pigman, one subscriber; I Thrap, J Beatty, A C Barnes, R Baker, A McGuire, one subscriber, cash in advance; J Hale, W Marshall, one subscriber; E Slagle, P B Sarchit, W Patterson, two subscribers; D H Stephens, one subscriber, cash in advance; D E Stanton, F W Bassett, G Brown, one day too late for 26th No.; L E S, J G Pigman, will do; J Guest, S W Thornton, J Dixon, J S, J D Wilson, one subscriber; I Lewis, one subscriber; J Moore, W Smith, J Simpson, T Oliver, 2, I Hadley, E K McMasters, S Clawson, through G W Lorentz, one subscriber, cash in advance.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS OF THIS PAPER.

1. In remitting money, give the person's name to whom credit is to be given, the State in which he lives, and the Post-office where he receives his paper.

2. In forwarding subscribers, be careful to give the Post-office, county and State, where the papers are to be sent, writing the name, office and county in a fair hand.

3. When a paper is to be transferred, give the place whence it is to be taken, as well as the place where it is to be directed,

4. In all cases where moneys are paid for papers, receipts should be taken; without these we shall consider our subscribers responsible. Experience in conducting a paper, has shown us that attention to this rule is essentially necessary to secure justice to a publisher.

5. Our paper is $2 per annum on the reception of the first No. On the first opportunity, therefore, be so good as to hand this amount to an agent, or remit, post paid, (except $10 be sent) by mail, at our risk. If any of our agents have made different stipulations with subscribers as it respects the time of payment, we cheerfully abide their arrangement. But in all other cases, and in future, we shall expect our "Terms" to be complied with. This will be absolutely necessary to enable us to continue our paper.

Credits will be given in our paper for the moneys we have received.

☞All the travelling preachers are considered agents for this paper.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

1. In every instance where a communication is forwarded to us for publication, the proper name must accompany it, or no attention will be paid thereto.

2. Any one who may wish to animadvert upon any of the functionaries of the church, the provisions of the discipline, or any of the exciting topics of the day, must permit us, at our own discretion, to connect his proper name with any communication he may write on any of these subjects.

3. We will cheerfully publish any selected extracts, our friends may desire, not inconsistent with the character of our paper; provided, they will send, addressed to the "Western Recorder" the paper or pamphlet containing them. But, if sent in writing, we cannot attend to them.

4. We are willing to pay postage on the following letters: 1. All that we have especially invited to write for our paper. 2. The communications of the Presidents of the Districts, giving an account of the spiritual condition of their charges. 3. All letters containing at least five new subscribers. 4. All which contain ten dollars cash;—5. or all which contain at least two new subscribers and five dollars cash. If any person wishes an agent to write to us when these terms cannot be complied with, he must advance to such agent the postage of the letter. If these rules are violated, we will notice it on the reception of the letter, so as to bring them to the recollection of our friends.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Philadelphia Casket.

A TIGER HUNT.

One of the warmest friends I had in Calcutta, was Major Heath, of the British eighteenth. He was celebrated for the number of tigers he had killed, and bore the reputation of the boldest hunter on the Peninsula. He often expressed his wish to shew me a tiger-hunt, but at that time I had no expectation of witnessing this sport. About six months afterwards, however, we met in the Peninsula, and I enjoyed the long wished for opportunity of witnessing this exciting, but dangerous amusement.

It was a bright sunny morning when we set out toward the thicket, in which after being driven from a surrounding jungle, it was said a magnificent tiger had taken refuge. Our company consisted of the major, a half dozen brother officers, mounted upon elephants, with a numerous train of natives on foot, whose business would be to start the game from his retreat. We were all armed with rifles; and were confident of success. The major, however, coolly informed us that we must take our chances of a spring, as the animal, when forced to abandon his covert, would most likely single out some one of us for his leap. We laughed gaily in reply and set out.

A long ride through the jungle at last brought us within convenient distance of the thicket, and obeying the major's instructions we looked at the state of our rifles, and then gave the order to the native hunters to begin. Hitherto all had been careless gaiety on our parts, but as the danger began in good earnest, our laughter was hushed, and we sat silently waiting the proceedings of our allies on foot. It was not long that they kept us in suspense. Warily approaching the thicket, they set up their wild cries, and finding this ineffectual, they sent their dogs into the covert, urging them forward with shouts, and now and then pricking them with their long spears. A hoarse growl, or rather scream from the inmost recess of the covert, at this moment, betrayed the position of the game, and convinced us that the monster was rousing from his lair. We all stood in eager expectation, waiting for his deadly spring. But after a momentary rustling in the thicket, all again was still, as if the animal had risen to reconnoitre his foes, and convinced of their overpowering numbers, had suddenly retreated to the most impenetrable part of his fastness. A half an hour succeeded of unavailing attempts to dislodge him; but save a deep growl at times from the centre of his covert, there was no evidence of the monster's neighborhood.

"This will never do," said the major at length, "we must scorch the rascal out —hillo! here, you, villians, why hav'nt you begun it before?"

The thicket was one of no very great extent, but apparently utterly impregnable. It was an oversight that the lighting of fires had not been attempted before, but perhaps the native hunters had trusted to their usual efforts to dislodge the monster. Now, however, they set about it with alacrity, and in a short time had completely surrounded the royal beast.

A scene of intense interest ensued, which every moment became more exciting. The shouts of the men, the heavy tramp of the elephants, the crackling of the ruddy fires, and at intervals the deep growl of the enraged monster awoke in the mind sensations of strange delight, not unmingled with a consciousness of imminent danger. As the fires became more glowing the louder and more frequent growls of the impatient beast warned us that he would soon break from his covert, and, forgetting every thing but his approaching appearance, we grasped our rifles, keenly fixed our eyes on the thicket, and breathlessly waited his first desperate spring. The hunters meanwhile ceased their shouts, the elephants were silently posted in convenient positions, and nothing for a few minutes was heard but the crackling of the fires, and the now quick an angry voice of the infuriated monster,—until suddenly a roar was heard, a few, short, rapid leaps followed in the covert, and instantly the huge beast was seen sailing through the air, his tail streaming out behind, and his very hair bristling upon him in his rage.

Almost simultaneously the major shouted, "Look out there—here he is—a quick eye boys, and a steady trigger."

But before the warning had reached us the tiger had alighted on our elephant, and was clinging within a yard of me to the bleeding side of the beast. For a moment I confess I was too startled to do any thing:—that instant of bewilderment had almost cost me my life. The situation of the monster, was such that my companions were fearful of firing lest they should hit myself,—while the native spearmen, dreading the despair of the ferocious animal, would not approach near enough to succor him. A second however of bewilderment, followed by another of cool, clear thinking, and I placed my rifle almost at the heart of the monster and fired. But at that very instant a frantic movement on the part of the tortured elephant jerked the tiger so that he partially slipped off, and I saw with horror that my ball had only grazed the upper part of his head, inflaming him doubly without in the least injuring him. I should have had another rifle, but when I turned to grab it, I saw that in the frenzied struggle of the elephant to get rid of his opponent, it had fallen from my seat upon the ground, I had no weapon left but my hunting knife, and the huge monster was already collecting himself for another spring. My very blood seemed to freeze within me, and a cold, icy shiver shot through my frame. Destitute of fire-arms, despairing of succor, without the least spark of hope, I resolved, notwithstanding, to make a desperate resistance, selling my life as dearly as I could. All this, however, had not occupied a minute, for the monster was just recovering himself from his first spring. But that minute was sufficient. Already I could feel his breath upon me, —already I beheld the foam upon his lips. Holding my weapons firmly before, in expectation of the last mortal struggle, I heard the voice of the major shouting,

"Lie flat—down—down!"

And mechanically obeying the injunction, and casting myself at full length on the cushions, I heard the next moment the sharp crack of a rifle—then another —and as a third echoed in the morning air, the vast monster gave a quick, short movement, struggled so frantically as to shake even the gigantic beast on which I rode, and almost instantaneously fell backward dead upon the ground. He was a perfect colossus, measuring fifteen feet from the tip of his snout to the extremity of the tail. Such was my first tiger-hunt in India; and its interest may, perhaps, excuse a temporary digression.

January, 1840. C. F. W.

A SCENE IN OUR VILLAGE.—A stranger alighted from the eastern stage, just arrived at the little inn of our village, and from the acompanying "haul" of trunks by the driver, indicated the intention of stopping for the night. He was young, well dressed, and with gentle though manly features, a physiognomist would have told you of a frank and generous heart there, though weighed down with some secret remorse or misfortune.

Shortly after supper, the young stranger retired to bed. I was standing in the hall door of the inn, (being a physician and a citizen of the village,) when the young man went up stairs; the glance of his restless eye struck me, as I thought it mirrored the workings of a troubled mind. In the morning he did not make his appearance at breakfast. I felt intuitively apprehensive—ran up stairs—called; but the echo in the hall answered me. I burst open the door, and the inanimate form of the young stranger lay before me. He had poisoned himself with laudanum! Upon opening his trunks to discover his relatives, if any, his family were found to be old and respectable. He was a lawyer, young and in the May-spring of life. In one of his trunks, were the letters of a kind old mother!—the warnings, the incentives to the path of virtue—the solicitudes—the prayers for his prosperity! and further down, and preserved with scrupulous care, were the letters of her he loved! No mother's tears moistened the pallid cheek! no bright eye of affection cheered the agony of death! "he died and made no sign!" —Feelings of delicacy for that family, were they not all gone, would even have prevented the penning of this: it is a true narrative, stripped of varnish or color.

Few knew the motives that induced that young stranger to rush wildly into the presence of his God. What was it, do you ask, young man, just launched on the stream of life! It was the bowl! the enchanting, the injurious bowl!—the bowl, whose influence the light of education, the parental entreaties, the mother's prayers, the burning beacons, could not drive from his lips, that caused him to leave, in a fit of remorse, his newly adopted state, where a lucrative practice ever awaited him, and rushing to a far off spot, to end a life that made him the slave to a despicable passion.—Sat. Courier.

A PURSUIT.—No human being, however exalted his rank and fortune, however enlarged and cultivated his understanding, can long be happy without a pursuit. Life is a ladder on which we climb from hope to hope, and, by expectation, strive to ascend the enjoyment; but he who fancies he has reached his highest hope, or who enjoys the utmost of his wishes, is miserable indeed; for many who have been most successful in their respective undertakings, have given the gloomiest description of the emptiness of human pleasures. The pursuit alone can yield true happiness; and the most trifling object that has power to fascinate the hopes of man, is worthy his attention. It has been well observed that the defects of the mind, like those of the face, grow worse as persons grow old.

INDUSTRY.—Industry is the grand antagonist of crime as well as property.—It is the salt which preserves from moral corruption. Were industry duly and universally inculcated in youth, and enlightened, encouraged and honored, we should have much less need of jails, and poor houses, and we opine of lawyers, than we have now—three items of expenses that consume much of our substance.—The late Bishop Ashbury, having in one of his sermons offered a bitter reproof to those who neglect the duty to their children, of bringing them up with moral and industrious habits, suddenly paused and said, "but you will say this is hard! —Alas!" he added letting his voice fall to a low and soft key, "is it harder to be damned!" And temporally speaking, it is harder to see them in the jail or poor house, as vagabonds at large.

No!—is a useful word; be not afraid to use it. Many a man has pined in misery for years, for not having courage to pronounce that little monosyllable.

METEOROLITES, OR STONES WHICH HAVE FALLEN FROM THE SKY.—The chronicles of almost every age and country record the fall of these bodies. The Chinese and Japanese noted down with great care every thing connected with the appearance of these extraordinary phenomena. The Chinese actually made catalogues of them, believing they were connected with contemporary events. There is no occasion for laughing at this oriental superstition, since there were not wanting, half a century ago, philosophers in enlightened Europe, who declared the impossibility of stones falling from the atmosphere at all.

A thin crust, of a deep black color, covers the whole of them. They have no gloss, and the surface is roughened with small asperities. When broken, they are internally of a grayish color, and are of a graduated texture, among which four different substances can be discovered by a lens. Those which occur most frequently, vary from the size of a pin's head to that of a pea. They are of a grayish color, sometimes inclining to a brown; opake, with a little lustre and capable of giving faint sparks with steel. The second kind is of a reddish yellow, and black when powdered. A third consists of small particles of iron, in a perfectly metalic state. From the presence of these, the mass possesses the quality of being attracted by the magnet. The fourth is in general of an earthy consistence, and crumbles when pressed between the fingers. These bodies are composed of iron and nickel, both in a metallic and oxidized state; sulphor,silex, (an earth,) magnesia, and about one per cent of crome.

One of the most remarkable cases of antiquity is that mentioned by Pliny, in his Natural History. This stone fell near Egospotamos, in Thrace, about 465 years before the Christian era. Pliny informs that it was still shown in his day, and that it was the size of a cart, and of a burnt color. The Greeks believed it to have fallen from the sun, and that the philosopher Anaxagoras had predicted the exact period when it should arrive on the earth's surface. According to the historians who have recorded the event its fall was proceeded by a meteoric appearance of a very unusual character.—We are told that a large fiery body like a cloud of flame, careered through the heavens with a vague uncertain motion. By its violent agitation, several fragments were projected from it in various directions sweeping with the velocity of "shot stars down the troubled sky." On examining it after its fall, no trace of combustible matter was found, and the stone, although large, did not at all correspond to the dimensions of the meteor. Various other instances are recorded of the fall of meteoric stones in ancient times.

ASSAM TEA.—A communication has been received from Mr. Bruce, superintendent of the Government tea-grounds. From this, it appears that Upper Assam may be considered literally an entire tea-garden; and that the extension of the cultivation has scarcely any other limits than those arising from the deficiency of workmen. The tea plants double in size and luxuriance those in China; indeed, they are so vigorous that the chief object in the first instance will be to check their exuberance.

There is much humanity in the following advice given by a correspondent of the Pennsylvanian: "Those who have the care of horses at this cold season, should be careful before bridling them, to hold the bit in the hand until it is warm, instead of putting iron into the animal's mouth. so cold that the skin will adhere to it and be torn off. A neglect of this caution gives the animal a sore mouth, much pain, and causes it to feed badly for several days."

About a thousand dollars of the money buried by Gibbs and Wansley, on Cony Island has been found, and large number of persons are digging for the remainder. It is part of the $54,000 plunder obtained by the murderous crew of the Vineyard, in Nov. 1830, the horrors of which transaction must still be fresh in the recollection of many of our readers.

BURIED ALIVE.—Two Irishmen wading across one of the principal streets in the city, one of them was knocked down by a dray driving furiously along. "Arrah Pat," said the other, "arn't ye dead?" "No," replied the prostrate son of Erin, "but I'm buried alive."

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

THERE will be application made to the Trustees of Springfield township, at their annual session, on the first Monday of March, at the usual place of holding elections in the town of Putnam for an alteration in School District No. 4, so as to make a new District out of the land of the following persons adjoining in said District, commencing at 160 acres owned by Bernard Wortman, also the farm of Cornelius Springer, Jos. Swaney, Scameron Rodman, Andrew Bumbaugh, Benjamin Maple, Joseph Wortman, Sarah Johnson, James Russell, Robert George, John George, William Kidd, Mary Perien, the Grayham farm, together with two farms owned by Abner James, and eighty acres of land owned by David Jones and occupied by Wm. Perry and Henry D. Morgan. MANY HOUSEHOLDERS.

January 29, 1840. 23

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Books! Books!! Books!!!

CATALOGUE OF BOOKS (in part,) to be had at the Methodist Protestant Book Concern, Baltimore, Maryland, withthe retail prices. A liberal discount will be made to wholesale purchasers.

Fox's Book of Martyrs, 2 vols. 8vo.	$2 25
Dr Macknight on the Epistles, sup.roy. 8vo.	3 25
Dr Scott's Commentary on the Bible, 3vs 8vo	7 50
Dr Dick's Theology, 2 vols. 8vo.	6 00
Dr Paley's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 25
Dr H. Prideaux's Connection of Sacred and Profane History, 2 vols. 8vo.	4 00
Crabbe's Synonymes, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 50
Dr Adam Clarke's Discources on highly important subjects, 2 vols.	3 00
Reese on the Subbath,	37½
John Bunyan's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 00
Brown's Philosophy of the human Mind, 2 vols.	3 00
Scriptural Anthology,	75
Horn's Introduction to the study of the Scriptures, 2 vols.	7 50
Rev. John Fletcher's Checks against Antimonianism, 3 vols.	3 00
Young Preacher's Manuel, 8vo.	1 50
Griesbach's Greek Testament,	1 20
Rev. Dr Geo. Burder's Village Sermons,	1 50
Sturm's Reflections for every day in the year,	1 75
Dr Lowth on Isaiah,	1 67
Locke on the Epistles of the New Testament,	2 00
Ship and Shore, by an officer of the U.S.N.	87
Sunday School Lectures,	50
A Walk about Zion, by the Rev. J. A. Clark,	75
Abbott's Teacher,	50
Bunyan's Holy War, fine,	75
do do common,	50
The Great Teacher, by Harris,	87
Dr Dick's Philosophy of Religion,	56
do do of a Future State,	56
do Christian Philosopher,	56
do Mental Illumination,	62
do Improvement of Society,	62
do Evil of Covetousness,	62
Beveridge's Private Thoughts,	60
Buck's Theological Dictionary,	80
Christian Retirement,	1 00
Dr Adam Clarke's Commentarys on the Old and New Testaments, 4 vols. super royal, 8vo. bound,	13 00
do do do, calf, gilt, extra,	20 00
Williams' Bible Exercises,	25
Dr Cruder's Concordance, pocket,	50
Dr Chalmer's Works, 3 vols.	3 00
Christian Student,	75
Conversation on the Bible,	56
Drew on the Soul,	75
Drelincourt on Death,	1 25
Evidences of Chistianity, by Alexander Watson, Jennings, Leslie & Paley,	87
Rev. Dr Hunter's Sacred Biography, sheep, gilt, plates,	3 00
Rev. Dr Mosheim's Church History, 4th edition,	5 00
do do do, calf, gilt, plates,	8 00
do do do, Turkey, gilt edges, extra,	9 00
Rev. Dr Sprague's Letters to a daughter,	75
do do, to Young People,	75
do do, on Revivals,	87
Rev. Dr Doddridge's Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, 12mo. fine ed	1 00
Physical Theory of Another Life,	87
Young Infidel Reclaimed,	37
Sherwood's Scripture Prints,	75
Musical Manual,	50
Mothers' Friend,	50
Methodist Protestant Cathecism,
Family Bibles, various prices and sizes,
Paragraph Bibles, do do
Polyglot Bibles, do do
Teacher's Visit,
Pollock's Course of Time,
Young Man's Book of Christian Evidence,
do Ladies' do do do	44
Phillip's Devotional Guides, 2 vols 12mo	1 25
Poor but Happy,	31
Janney's Poems,
Adam the Gardener,	44
Praise and Blame,	37
Gospel Seeds,	44
Bible Companion,	62
Phillip's Manly Piety,	50
Harrod's Collection,	25
M P Church Discipline, late edition,	37
Life of Col Gardener,	37
Academical Reader,	50
Clarke's Advice to Preachers,	12
Williams' on the Lord's Supper,	19
Fletcher's Advice,	12
Howe's Works,	4 75
The Laurel,	50
Edson's Letters,	37
Father's Fireside,	25
Fletcher's Address,	12
Way for a Child to be Saved,	37
Bible Illustration,	56
Seneca's Morals,	50
Story of Paridise Lost,	31
Caroline E Smelt,	31
Real Dialogues,	50
Pastor's Daughter,	50
Basket of Flowers,	31
Piece Book,	25
Hints to Students,	25
Tree and its Fruits,	37
Evening Readings in History,	37
Child's Book on the Sabbath,	22
Girl's Best Ornaments,	25
Hero of Macedon,	25
Memoirs of Sullings,	25
Indian Narratives,	25
The French Soldiers,	25
Malcolm's Bible Dictionary,	40
Bishop Wilson's Analagy,	24
Pious Songs,	37
Keystone,	55
Phillip's Variety of Female Piety,	50
do Beauty of Female Holyness,	50
do Female Character,	50
do Love of the Spirits,	50
do On Redemption,	50
do Guide,	50
Burman Slave Girl,	25
Tales of Egypt,	25
Life of Mrs. Leslie,	25
Golden Clue,	25
Memoirs of John Chamberlain,	25
Julia Graham,	55
Gems,	25
History of Joseph,	31
Loom Boy,	25
Good Grandmother,	62
Life of Bishop Heber,	50
Biography of Pious Persons,
McGavin's Protestants,	4 25
Harris's Sermons,	1 15
Gallaudet's Every Day Christian,	13
Conforms of Piety,	12
Daily Piety,	13
Token of Youth,	12
Hannah Sinclair,	25
Innes Adrice,	37
My Adventures,	37
Six Months in a Convent,	50
Supplement do	50
Martineau's Devotional Exercises,	37
Hannah Moore's Private Devotion,	25
Brown's Concordance,	37
Young Ladies' Sunday,	50
European Children,	25
Chloe Spear,	25
Early Life,	25
Memoirs of S. Leece,	25
Counsel and Caution to Youth,	25

Methodist Prot. Banner.

THE Methodist Protestant Church in the South, and particularly in South Carolina, being as yet in her infancy, her history is but little known, while the views and principles of her Members have been studiously misrepresented. To enlighten the public mind in relation to those principles, and to correct misrepresentation, is the object contemplated by the publication of this periodical. And there is every reason to believe that wheresoever those principles are known and properly appreciated—based as they are upon the union of spiritual and ecclesiastical liberty—it will be conceded that the church stands upon the high ground of scriptural truth. The Methodist Protestant Church has already attained a respectable and firm standing among her sister churches, in various parts of the United States, and we trust the day is not distant, when she will rank second to none, for piety, numbers and usefulness in the sunny South.

While the principal design of the paper will be to make known the history, present condition, and future prospects of the Methodist Protestant Church; to vindicate her principles, and defend her from the attacks of others; due courtesy will be extended to other churches, and notice taken of their condition and prospects —Literature, Science and the Arts, will not be forgotten.

Terms:—THE METHODIST PROTESTANT BANNER will be published monthly, on a quarto sheet, under the direction of a Committee of the South Carolina Annual Conference, at One Dollar per annum, payable in advance. Its enlargement in size and more frequent appearance, will depend upon the support it may receive.

Any person remitting Five Dollars will be entitled to a copy gratis.

Communications may be addressed to the Publishing Committee of the Methodist Protestant Banner, Charleston, South Carolina. 24

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.

January 15, 1840. 21tf

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.

January 25, 1840. 23

The Southern Compendium

OF LITERATURE, AGRICULTURE, ARTS AND SCIENCES.

UNDER the above title it is proposed to publish in this place in January, a monthly periodical, to be devoted to Amusement and Instruction, embracing Literature, the Arts and Sciences, Agriculture, Horticulture, Domestic and Rural Economy, Sporting Intelligence, &c.

The Literary department will embrace interesting and instructive Tales, Naratives, Adventures, Sketches of travels, places and persons, Anecdotes, Poetry, Extracts from, and Notices of New Works, &c. &c.

All new discoveries in the Sciences and Arts, as well as interesting papers relating to either, will be immediately noticed, and when of sufficient interest will be transferred to our columns, or such extracts given as will furnish full information to our readers.

In the Agricultural department, special attention will be paid to the great interests of the South. From our Planters, we will endeavor to obtain much practical and useful information which now lies buried and known but to themselves. In order that we may the more fully and effectually carry out this part of our plan, we propose to make frequent excursions into the different sections of not only this, but also of the adjoining States, for the purpose of personally inspecting and reporting on all the various operations which may be carried on, on the plantations we may visit. By pursuing this plan steadily, (as we hope to do,) much highly useful information will be obtained, which cannot fail to be of immense service to the Agricultural community, inasmuch as our Planters will thus become acquainted with the practices of other sections of country, and may from time to time adopt such as may promise a greater recompense, than those, they at the time may follow. Nor shall we confine ourselves to practical information only, but from the rich stores of knowledge which are to be found among our Planters, we hope to draw much which will prove useful and interesting.

Horticulture will also claim our attention, and we will endeavor to raise it from the low estate in which it now exists among us, to one more worthy of it. We will accordingly give not only practical directions for the culture of Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, but entering into the scientific department, we will publish whatever we may find interesting. Descriptions of new Fruits, Flowers and Vegetables, as well as their culture, will be given from time to time. The forcing department, which is but little attended to in the South, embracing the formation, building and management of hot beds, conservatories, and hot houses will also be attended to.

Domestic and Rural Economy will not be neglected, but whatever we can find likely to promote either will be given in our columns.

Sporting Intelligence, Anecdotes, On Dits, and various miscellaneous matters, which cannot well be classed, will swell our pages, and add interest to our periodical.

In furtherance of our object, we will do all in our power to render this periodical highly interesting and instructive, and one which shall be welcomed by every member of such families as may patronize it. To effect this, while we hope to contribute our full share to the Original Literature of the day, as well as add considerably to the stock of Agricultural information, yet we will freely draw from the sources open to us, in the numerous daily, weekly, monthly and quarterly periodicals, which embracing every subject, abound not only in America, but also in Europe, and from these we will select only such articles as may prove highly interesting or instructive.—The sources which are open to us in each department are ample, and we trust we shall so avail ourselves of them, as to render THE SOUTHERN COMPENDIUM a highly acceptable visiter wherever known.

Political and Religious discussions will be excluded, and while we have no preference in both, yet we will not admit any thing which may be likely to wound or offend the feelings of our readers.

We have thus sketched the plan of our Periodical, and respectfully solicit for it support, both by subscriptions and contributions.

TERMS—The Southern Compendium will be published on the 15th of each month, in octavo form of 64 pages, at $5 per annum, payable in advance. JOHN D. LEGARE.

Charleston, S. C., Jan. 29, 1840. 23tf

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by subscribers, and will in future be conducted them. WINDOW GLASS, double and single all sizes, and of superior quality, will be constantly on hand for sale on reasonable t at the works. The experience of one of the in the manufacture of the article, will ensu made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & C

Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of di ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varie in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good as ment of Bridles and Martingales: riding priving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage heavy draft Collars, which will compare and with any others made here or elsewhere. A fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and com fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just rec ed. Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and do covered wagon whips, varying in quality and p to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for work, is the testimony and long experience of old customers and friends. He is still anx to please and accommodate those who may on him, and hopes to share so much of the pu patronage as his attention to his business s merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a and improved mode of ascending and scending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. T improvement supercedes the necessity of hors stationary power, by giving to the locomotive gine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles the motive, which connects with an extra rail laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wh on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with extra railing and propels her onward. The struction and connection of the pilot wheel a extra railing is of such a character that it not o necessarily advances, but advances perfec smooth, and cannot be impeded by the conge ing of ice, the connection of the wheel and ra ing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanti further information, will please address the s scriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has tained the right of the State of Maryland by p chase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who h the right of Georgia, North and South Carolin on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure t hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL. This machine can be attached to any of t powers now in common use, and is calculated save a great amount of manual labor. Clove seed can be hulled at the rate of from three five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at t rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Ba ley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thir bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn ca be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bush els per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelt or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fi teen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Fa mer of the advantage of possessing such a labo saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he ca prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth the time usually spent, and with one-fourth the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instea of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushe Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity durability, portability, and usefulness of thi Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirabl and money producing machines of modern inven tion.

Those wishing to procure this machine i Georgia, North or South Carolina, can addres William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those the State of Maryland, can address Richard E Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county other sections can address the subscriber at Har risville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most lib eral terms will be given to mechanics who ma wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill i sections not yet occupied. We invite the pub lic to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4, 1840. | Number 28. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE | $2 50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

ected from the Brooke Republican—by the Author.]

SACRED SONGS, NO. IV.

DAVID'S LAMENTATION.

2d Samuel i. 19—27.

'he beauty of Israel is slain on the height, how are the mighty ones hurl'd from their might!
tell not in Gath—nor in Askelon's street, claim the sad news of this fatal defeat,
t Philistia's daughters should shout and rejoice,
e uncircumcised sing with a triumphant voice!
mountains of Gilboa let there not be dew, let ye the clouds drop their rain upon you, your fields be no offerings, for there the proud shield
the mighty is vilely cast far from the field;
shield of brave Saul is cast down without spoil, though he had not been annointed with oil!
from the fat of the mighty, the blood of the slain,
e strong bow of Jonathan turn'd not again,
ll turn'd it in triumph—and Saul's sword and bow, me home never empty from spoiling a foe!
ey were lovely and sweet while their lives did remain, divided in death, but together were slain;
ey were swifter than eagles, than lions more strong,
d their foes bow'd before them as they march'd along!
Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul, ur king and your champion—ah, weep for his fall!
cloth'd you with scarlet—he gave you delight—put on you ornaments golden and bright.
Oh how are they fallen, the strong fall'n low!
the midst of the battle, oh Jonathan! oh!
ou wast slain—in the height of thy glory wast slain, nd I weep o'er my brother who lowly is lain.
a I am distress'd, oh my brother for thee,
w pleasant wast thou, and how kind unto me!
y love was far stronger to me, 'twas more dear an the love of fond woman unmingled with fear.
Oh how are the mighty ones fall'n from their might!
nd the weapons of war, oh how perish'd in fight!

L. E. S.

February 15, 1840.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

LITERATURE.

Mr. Editor:—Many persons have expressed astonishment at there being so small a number of learned men, when in fact, we should be surprised there are so many, if we consider all the concurring circumstances requisite to constitute a man of real learning. Might we hazard an opinion, we should say, knowledge is more frequently acquired by chance than by premeditation or design. By this assertion, however, we would not be thought to countenance ignorance, or favor the decay into which letters may have fallen; but on the contrary, the advantages of real knowledge are so great, that in showing the difficulty of gaining the summit of this rugged mountain, we should hope to stimulate and encourage those who may be frightened at the labor, instead of repulsing them by magnifying those obstacles which must be overcome.

To form a learned man, natural talents are the first requisite—next, solid sense, an acute mind and a faithful memory, sound health and a vigorous constitution, an equanimity of temper, perseverance, an insatiable desire for information, and an invincible attachment to study.—But even all these advantages are useless, if fortune has been sparing of her favors. A man born in servitude or poverty, who wants the necessaries of life, is forced to think of the means to acquire them, in preference to every other thought. He must direct his attention to common concerns of life before study, and think of the means to live instead of those to obtain fame. Besides, we are born subject to the will of our parents—they dispose of us according to their interest or views, without knowing or examining our talents. In all the disposals which parents make of their children, we never find one who brings them up to the profession of letters. They give them the general education for common life, but not to make them men of learning.

In addition to the requisites already enumerated, it is necessary to possess courage, in order to resist those incidents in life which interrupt the sweetness of study: such as taxes, war, sickness, law-suits, losses, persecutions of the envious and the inconvenience of bad neighbors.—Studious men, from their pacific temper and retired life, are affected more than others by these occurrences. But the man who is possessed of all these qualifications and dedicates his life to letters without seeking any recompence but what the study of them actually affords, will, having attained the pleasures of Literature from the lofty heights of true knowledge, look down with compassion on the world and pity the errors and vain amusements of the vulgar crowd. This is the dignified pleasure which men of real learning obtain by study. They who suppose it will confer riches are deceived. Genius seldom enjoys the favors of fortune; the profits of authors do not keep pace with their reputation. Numerous and melancholy is the catalogue of men of letters, who have pined in misery and sunk under pressure of indigence. Painful reflection!

The philanthropic GEORGE DYER, in his Dissertation on the Theory and Practice of Benevolence, has treated this subject with energy and feeling, to which we refer the reader. We cannot, however, omit extracting the following animated apostrophe: "Oh, Genius! art thou to be envied or pitied, doomed to form expectations the most sanguine, and to meet with disappointments the most mortifying. To indulge towards others the most generous wishes, to receive thyself the most illiberal treatment. To be applauded, admired and neglected. To be a friend to all, befriended often by none. Oh! thou creative, discriminating power, source of inexpressible delight and nurse of unknown sensibilities that perpetuate distress, fancy shall embody thy form and often visit the grave of Chatterton to drop the tear of sympathy over that ingenious, unfriended, unfortunate youth!"

To the honor of Literature in England, a society to support authors, in distress, has been instituted. Many ingenious, unfortunate men, have received timely assistance from it. May its influence extend to the latest posterity!

J. S.

Holliday's Cove, Va., Feb. 19, 1840.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

WESTMINSTER, ALLEN, O., FEB. 15, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—The Recorder is esteemed a good paper generally, but more especially has it been appreciated for a month or two past,—and wherefore? Because of the cheering intelligence from the prosperity of Zion. Our second quarterly meeting closed on Monday evening; it was a good time from beginning to the end.

Yours, &c., JOHN GUEST.

TYLER, VA., FEB. 9, 1840.

Dear Brother:—I have formed two societies in this mission and have a third under way. Since my last, I have had five new calls for preaching, which will make for me fifteen appointments; but high water and ice have much hindered me. There is scarcely a week but I take in members. I am much at a loss for Hymn books and Disciplines; I could sell some $25 worth of these, in a short time, if I had them. I hope to raise a respectable little circuit here against Conference. Your paper with a little exertion will have a good circulation here.

Yours, truly, J. DEGARMO.

WHITE RIVER CIRCUIT, INDIANA, February 13, 1840.

Bro. Springer:—Our second quarterly meeting closed last Sabbath evening. On account of the great rains and the disagreeableness of the weather, our congregations were small and none of the preachers attended but Bro. Alexander and myself, yet, we had an impressive and refreshing time.

The Lord is carrying on a good work in some parts of this circuit; especially at a new preaching place on Stoat's creek. This appointment was taken into the circuit some three or four months since, and was then a neighborhood noted for wickedness. We have there, at present, a society of ten members, and on my last visit to them there were about twenty anxious seekers of salvation. Our prospects on the circuit are good and every day bettering.

Your brother, &c., E. K. MCMASTERS.

The Cherokee Nation, in General Council convened, have chosen John Ross, who is now at Washington, to be their principal Chief.

A train of cars on the Columbia rail road run off the track on Saturday near Paoli, and a gentleman named Bradford had his leg fractured, and other passengers received serious injuries.

A bill to repeal the Internal Improvement system of Illinois, has passed the Senate of that State, by a vote of 22 to 18.—It prohibits the commissioners from paying out any money except for work already done, and no damages to be allowed for right of way except when the road is actually constructed.

The Huntsville Ala. Advocate of the 23d inst says: "A bill has passed the House requiring the Presidents and Directors of every bank to pay up in CASH all their liabilities either as principles or securities, before they take their seats.—In the Senate, it has been referred to the State Bank committee, and will pass that body in some shape.

A distressing case of hydrophobia occurred at Reading, Pa., a few days since. A little daughter of Mr. John Rodgers was bitten by a cat with which she was playing, and which had been bitten by a rabid dog. The physicians were prescribing for the little sufferer at last accounts, she having been taken with the horrible symptoms.

The court in bank, at Columbus, have decided that every description of bank issues, payable at and after date, and assuming the force of circulation, is illegal, and a violation of the charter. We, of the Gazette, have insisted upon this, and labor to prevent our banks from attempting these issues, but without success.—We wish them safely out of the scrape.—Cincinnati Gazette.

IRON ORE.—Every day brings increased evidence to confirm the opinion that there is a ton of iron ore for every ton of coal in our region. The veins of both are found contiguous, and the ore can doubtless be furnished at an average price of two dollars and a half.

The inclement weather of the past week has prevented our personal inspection of several new openings, which we shall deem it a duty to visit and report thereon, as soon as practicable.—Pottsville paper.

The London United Service Journal, in a review of Cooper's American Naval History, which it severely condemns, pays the following handsome compliment to the American Navy:

"Before we begin our review of the work, we propose paying the Navy of the United States the compliment which is justly its due. From its infancy to the present state, most bravely, most gallantly, have the officers and men of the naval profession in America upheld the honor of their flag. There is scarcely one action in which the slightest imputation can be cast upon any individual.—They have never avoided their enemies, excepting where it would have been the height of imprudence to have faced them; they have fought with the most determined valor; they have in many cases been successful over a nation which held undisputed the command of the ocean;—and this very circumstance of combatting an enemy flushed with almost universal victory adds a greener laurel to the Navy of the United States."

A GOOD DESCRIPTION.—We take the following graphic description of a company of travelling gentry, from the Montrose (Pa) Spectator. It suits our latitude also.—[Worcester paper.]

A caravan of loafers, aspiring to the dignity of apes and baboons, going around the country the laughing stock of idle, filthy boys, shiftless women, and dissipated men generally constitute a circus.—Confined principally to cities, they sometimes spread their baneful influence into the country, breeding idleness, debauchery, and all manner of impurities. In connection with theatres and publications favoring similar immoralities, they are to virtue what the slaver is to liberty. They constitute the greater portion of the grand machinery to corrupt the young of both sexes in the country, and lead them through the whirlpool of passion down to the chambers of death in cities. The sinks of iniquity are fed by them. Strange that men laying claims to decency will show their faces inside of a circus tent! We rejoice to perceive that they appear less attractive than formerly in this community. One (we hope the last) wandered through here last week. The performances closed in a snow squall, and the day wound up with a street fight. Shame! Shame!

THE QUEEN'S INTENDED.—A correspondent of the Liverpool Times, who happened to meet the Queen's intended on board a steam boat, furnishes this account of him:

He entered into conversation on a variety of subjects in the most affable and intelligent manner, and convinced me that he possessed a well regulated mind, calculated for and disposed to philosophical subjects. He appeared kind-hearted and humane: this I collected from his conduct to one of the servants of the suite, who unfortunately fell down the hold of the vessel, and was considerably hurt, and also from some other circumstances of too minute a nature for detail. His Highness is in stature rather above the middle height, exceedingly well proportioned and of very manly appearance for his years—I have taken him for 24 or 25; his general manner is easy, unaffected and graceful; his features are regular, well defined, and exceedingly English; his countenance is open, its expression mild, and there is a certain inexpressible something above his light smiling eyes, which seems at once to inspire esteem and confidence.

From another quarter, we derive these particulars of the bridegroom elect.—Albert Francis Augustus Charles Emanuel, second son of Ernest, reigning Duke of Saxe Cobourg and Gotha, who succeeded his father Francis, in the small principality of Saxe Saalfield Cobourg, on the 9th of December, 1806; and by the death of Frederick IV. with whom the male line of Saxe Gotha Altenburg became extinct, came into possession, in right of descent from the female branch, of a considerable portion of that inheritance, and took the title of Saxe Cobourg and Gotha, on the 12th of November, 1826. The Duke had been twice married; first to Dorothy Louisa Paulina Charlotte Frederica Augusta, daughter of Augustus, the last Duke but one of Saxe Gotha Altenburg, from whom he separated on the 31st of March, 1826. On the 23d of December, 1832, the Duke married Antoinette Frederica Augusta Maria Anne, Princess of Wurtemburg. By the first marriage the issue was Ernest Augustus Charles John Leopold Alexander Edward, hereditary Prince of Saxe Cobourg and Gotha, born the 21st of June, 1818, and Albert, the young bridegroom elect of Queen Victoria, born the 26th of August, 1819, and therefore not of the legal age of 21 until August, 1840. The Queen was born on the 24th of May, 1819, and is, therefore, three months older than her intended husband.

We may add that the singular fortunes of the Cobourg family, are among the extraordinary things of the age.

The domain of Cobourg, the patrimonial estate of the present Duke, the eldest of the family, and brother Leopold, was a very small principality; the nett revenue did not exceed £700 per annum. Of course, upon such an income the family pride was difficult to support, and the means of education for the younger branches extremely restricted. On account of the smallness of means, none of the family could venture an appearance at court, at Vienna, save the Duke, and he rarely. The portion of the inheritance of Gotha-Altenburg, which came to him, greatly improved his standing, and extended his possessions—an inheritance which would not, perhaps, so readily have been conceded to him, but from the powerful alliance and countenance of this country through Leopold. The territory of Cobourg and Gotha may be estimated to contain together 160,000 souls. The revenue is estimated at £100,000 per annum, from which has to be deducted the interest of the debt or mortgage upon the property amounting to £464.000, which, taking the rate at six per cent. not a high rate for Germany, will be an annual charge of £27,840. The duchy is rated to furnish a contingent of 800 men to the Germanic Confederation.

At the time of his selection by the Princess Charlottee, Leopold was a simple major in the Austrian service, and his whole means and prospective expectations centred in his profession. His rise led to and was the prelude of that of the whole family. His sister became Duchess of Kent, and was adopted like himself into the royal family of England, and in course, if not queen mother, mother of the Queen. Leopold himself is king of Belgium; one nephew, Ferdinand, King Consort of Portugal; and a third about to become Prince Consort of the Sovereign Queen of Great Britain. Never before, perhaps, in so short a space of time, did a family attain fortune so magnificent, without deeds of arms or special services of any public nature.

The Queen's husband will, in the first place, have the title of Royal Highness conferred upon him. This will give him rank in all state ceremonials immediately after His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, but confer no political power or rank, and it is not likely that his Serene Highness will be created a peer of Parliament. The Prince's real position will be that of a prince of the blood before created a peer of Parliament, as the late Duke of York, whose title was previously Bishop of Osnaburg, and King William the Fourth, who was only Prince William Henry. The Prince will successively be created a knight of the garter, a general and field marshal in the army, and after his appointment to military rank, a knight commander of the bath.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SPEECH OF JOHN QUINCY ADAMS,

On the Subject of Abolition Petitions.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 22, 1840.

Mr. Adams, of Massachusetts, offered the following:

Resolved, That the following be added to the standing rules of this House, to be numbered the 21st:

"Every petition presented by the Speaker, or by any member, with a brief verbal statement of its contents, shall be received, unless objection be made to its reception for special reason; and whenever objection shall be made to the reception of a petition, the name of the member objecting, and the reason of the objection, shall be entered upon the journal. The question in every such case shall be, Shall the petition be rejected? and no petition shall be rejected but by a majority of the members present."

Mr. Adams said it was his intention to detain the House but for a short period; indeed, he had been much inclined to suffer the question on the resolution, which after many attempts he had at length succeeded in presenting to the House, to be taken without debate. The proposition, said Mr. A., is a very simple one, and relates to the reception of petitions presented to this House on any and all subjects. It is not confined to petitions praying for the abolition of slavery and the slave trade in the District of Columbia; nor to any other of that class of petitions, commonly known by the name of abolition petitions: a term exceedingly indefinite in itself, and in regard to which this House has had a ten days debate without coming to any understanding as to what is meant by it. I shall not now enter upon that subject at all, nor shall I discuss the subject of abolition, nor of slavery, nor of the slave trade in any form. If I were to do so, I should think it necessary to enlarge the field very much. As it is, a vast amount of time has been expended without coming to an issue of any consequence whatever to this House or to the country. I say this because, on the proposition relating to memorials on abolition, the classes of those memorials are so imperfectly defined that no man in this House knows what memorials would be received, and what would be rejected, under any of the resolutions which have been offered. To exemplify: the first class of these memorials pray for the abolition of slavery and of the slave trade in the District of Columbia. Well, gentlemen have wasted their eloquence in making constitutional objections against the reception of such memorials by this House, contending that Congress has no power to legislate on that subject. Admit that, (which I do not,) but supposing it is a valid reason for the rejection of all petitions of this subject, there is another class which pray for the abolition of slavery and of the slave trade in the Territory of Florida. What becomes of all these constitutional objections when the question relates to the Territories? That case presents a different question, and must be met by a different argument.—Supposing, however, both these classes of memorials to be included in your resolution, there is still another class which pray that no new State shall be admitted into the Union whose Constitution tolerates the existence of slavery. Not one of the arguments which we have supposed valid against the other classes of petitions applies to this class; and supposing you to exclude all which relate to slavery in the District or in the Territory, that does not exclude these, and as soon as one of them shall be presented, the whole subject of slavery and of the slave trade will be as completely open to discussion as it would have been on the other classes of memorials. A fourth class relates to the admission of the Territories of Florida as a slave State. Congress has the constitutional power to admit or not admit: the question then arises, shall Florida be received or not received?—And here again is the whole subject open to discussion. I shall not enter on the discussion, but I say that these memorials throw the whole subject open as much as any of those which have been specified in the resolution under discussion. But, besides all these, there is another and a distinct class of petitions which pray for the establishment of Diplomatic relations with the Republic of Hati. I do not believe that it is in the mind of any gentleman in this House to raise a constitutional question on that subject. It is indisputably in the power of Congress to act on such a prayer; and when such a memorial shall be brought up here, the whole subject of slavery and of the slave trade is as fully open for discussion as it could have been on a petition praying for the abolition of slavery in this District. I will not go further; but I put it to gentlemen who complain of the waste of time, and of the agitation in the country, occasioned by the reception of abolition memorials to inquire of themselves, and answer to themselves, how long they think that the discussion of slavery and of the slave trade can be excluded from this House? I ask whether they expect to suppress that discussion here by refusing to receive petitions for the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia. Supposing a resolution passes that petitions on this specific subject shall be excluded, you do not get rid of the general subject; it goes further. I ask again, is there here any individual who has the slightest fear of any member rising in his place and offering a resolution to abolish slavery and the slave trade in the District of Columbia? I wish they would only allow it to be done, that they may see what number of votes can be obtained in support of such a proposition. I say this in kindness to the South; if their object is to put down petitions of that character, I do in my conscience believe that the first thing they should do is to admit them to be presented. If, out of the whole two hundred and forty votes, such a measure receives ten, I shall be much surprised. As to myself, I have long ago professed my belief on the subject. From the time that I first entered this House, which is now, I think, between eight and nine years, I have always declared that I am not prepared for the immediate abolition of slavery in this District; and since the adjournment of the last Congress I have explicitly and publicly avowed my sentiments on that matter to the very petitioners who pray for it, and who have sent me their memorials to be presented here. With the exception of my friend from Vermont, over the way, (Mr. Slade.) who, I am obliged to believe, is prepared for such a measure, I do not know another gentleman in this House who I think would go for it. There may be many others; I do not say there are not; but I do not myself know of one, nor do I believe that ten votes could be got for such a proposition in this House. And even my friend from Vermont himself, whose able argument against slavery, delivered last week, was not as much attended to in this House as it will be by this nation—even he, who, I believe, once offered to introduce a bill for that object, declared to us, in that argument, that abolitionists generally attributed far more importance to the measure than he himself did. I take it for granted that he would vote for such a measure, but I think it at the same time extremely likely that, when the House came to be divided, he would find himself in the "glorious minority of one."

I say again to gentlemen of the South, if you want peace, if your object is to allay agitation, if you want to see what is the real opinion of the Representatives of the North, be they Whigs or Administration men, offer yourselves, or get some one else to offer, a resolution for the immediate abolition of slavery in the District, and call the yeas and nays upon it—then you will understand what is our feeling on that subject, and what is the feeling of our constituents. As matters now stand, we often hear one of the gentlemen of the South speak our own opinions more nearly than any one from the North. I believe that this is true in most cases. But what I now say is, that you cannot suppress a discussion on slavery by suppressing petitions for its abolition in this District; and what I say of one class of petitions I say of them all. I have now in my drawer not less than a hundred and fifty of them, waiting till we shall be allowed an opportunity to present them to the House, and I will here say that I think these petitioners have ground to inquire of this House how it happened that, while the reception of petitions is pre-eminently and most emphatically the business of this House, we have been fifty days in session, and yet the Representatives from only two States have been permitted to present the petitions of their constituents. I have petitions of great importance on other subjects, entirely distinct from abolition, which I am waiting to present here, but I cannot, because this question is now brought up, and the House is openly called upon to suppress the right of petition; and we are here debating, from day to day, about excluding one petty class of petitions relating to an object for which none would vote if they were received. I hope to be discharged from the responsibility of consuming the time of the House on such a matter as this. I have been charged with it. The House has been heretofore debating for weeks, and I have been most unjustly charged with it all, but I cannot be charged with it now. I say to this House and to this nation, that I have no part of the blame. Who is the responsible person upon a debate which has occupied eight or ten days? On the 30th of December, almost immediately after the House was organized, (or rather, let me say, organized in part, for we are not more than half organized to this hour,) a gentleman from Virginia, (Mr. Wise,) whom I am sorry not to see in his place, and for the cause of whose absence I am still more sorry, presented a resolution which I believe is identically the same with that now before the House. He presented it out of order—contrary to the rules—so that he was obliged to move that the rules be suspended for its introduction; but he could not carry that motion. There was the first step in this matter. At that time not a single petition had yet been presented. There was the beginning of this debate. The next day he renewed his motion, and it again failed. The gentlemen then gave notice to the House that he would renew the same motion every day of the session till the object be granted. I thought at that time that it was not in order to repeat a proposition which had once been rejected, but the Chair ruled otherwise. The gentleman, however, thought better of the matter, as most of us ought to do in regard to what we often say in the heat of debate, and he did not renew his motion; but, not satisfied with the stoppage which had been put to an exciting debate, a colleague of the gentleman (Mr. Coles) offered another resolution on the same subject, in these words:

"All petitions, memorials, and papers touching the abolition of slavery, or the buying, selling, or transferring of slaves in any State, District, or Territory of the United States, shall, upon their presentation, be laid on the table without being debated, printed, read, or referred, and no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

There was this difference between the two propositions: The proposition of the latter gentleman did not make the question of reception the issue; that of the other gentleman [which is the proposition now before the House] did make the question of reception the issue. The one proposed to hang up between heaven and earth the question of reception, so that nobody should know whether abolition memorials were received or not; and we had an edifying debate on that very question, in the course of which I recollect that an astute gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. Underwood] said that his vote, for or against the resolution, would depend on that point; but that as the resolution stood, he could not tell whether the memorials were received or not. [Laughter.] I say, sir, the question of reception was suspended between earth and heaven, or between earth and—another place.—[Loud laughter.] The resolution now before us does not leave the question of reception in that extraordinary predicament; it is framed in such a manner that, according to a decision made by your predecessor in that chair, [Mr. Speaker Polk,] the fact of the reception of the memorials is established; for that precise question was brought to him in regard to the same proposition now before us, and which was adopted by the last Congress, I say the question was then specifically made, whether petitions, under the effect of that rule, were or were not received by the House, and the then Speaker of the House decided that they were. I presume, therefore, that all the abolition memorials then presented remain still on file in the Clerk's office.—Well, this second proposition [Mr. Coles'] again failed, because two-thirds of the House were not willing to receive it; but then came the self-same proposition in the form of an amendment to a report of the committee of the revised rules of order; and that is the position of it at this time. We are now discussing it as an amendment to the rules of this House, and in that form it did not require a vote of two-thirds to introduce it. It was therefore received and discussed, and, after discussion, was laid on the table by a majority of the House. Still, I say that the whole discussion, in all its forms, has taken place by the agency of gentlemen representing the Southern portion of this Union; and, whatever agitation the discussion may have produced either in or out of the House, lies at their door, not at ours—especially not at mine, for I have taken no part in it, unless it has been for the last eight or ten days to worry the Speaker every morning till I could get my resolution before the House. [A laugh.]

I shall not now enter upon the great and wide question of slavery or the slave trade in any State, District, Territory, dominion or nation on the face of the globe. The subject is too large. I hope the day will come when I shall have an opportunity of delivering my opinions on the whole subject, but I assure gentlemen that I shall not attempt it on a little petty resolution about the reception of petitions. There are ways enough to get at the subject. I could bring it into this house tomorrow. I can tell gentlemen that it will come upon this House in forms very different from this; and, to give the House a piece of my mind, I think it ought to have been before this House already. It should have formed one of the topics of the President's Message. Here are at this moment four States of this Union on the verge of civil war, avowedly on this very subject, and we see no more mention of it in the Message, than if those States were in the moon. Do gentlemen from Virginia, from New York, from Georgia, from Maine, from New Hampshire, expect that this question is not to come before Congress? That it will not be discussed here in all its breadth and length and depth? Very well, gentlemen—go on—to sleep and to slumber, but remember you will be waked from your sleep by voices more than from the dead. I say again, to gentleman of the North, and gentleman of the South, you cannot keep that discussion out of this House; and you will soon give up trying to do so, by passing small resolutions about abolition petitions.

And now, having discharged myself, and those with whom I act, from all the responsibility, of this debate, I will relieve the South, also, from all responsibility, at least so far as moral principle goes, by rendering to them here my public thanks for having opened the question. I believe the time thus far consumed in that discussion has been well spent. We have listened to speeches of great ability on both sides; we have heard slavery defended by all that can be said in its defence, and the cause of freedom advocated—I will not say by all that can be said in its behalf—but at least by something. The reserve has been all on that side.—Indeed, I do not think that any gentleman has attempted formally to contend for it, but my friend from Vermont (Mr. Slade.) All the speeches I have heard, save one by the gentleman behind me, (Mr. Granger,) have been on the other side. Gentlemen from the North have shown us how far they can go in supporting the rights of the South. That has been the subject; that has been the argument. They have been arguing the cause of slavery, although they are the Representatives only of freemen. The cause of freedom, in all its power, has not even been touched, save by the gentleman from Vermont, and even by him rather in the way of apology for the unfortunate abolitionists, than by appeals to the laws of God, the laws of Nature, and the Declaration of Independence. When the general subject comes to be discussed, I trust that it will be argued on those grounds; that we shall not merely attempt to apologize for a certain class of petitioners, but that the appeal will be to the laws of God, the laws of Nature, and the Declaration of Independence, made by the original thirteen States of this Union, among whom I can bring, gentlemen, high and illustrious names from Virginia, from Georgia and from South Carolina. That is the ground that will be taken by the defenders of freedom. But, I will not now enter into that question. The resolution I now offer refers simply to the rules of the House; that is the subject we are discussing.

[Mr. Cooper, of Georgia, here interposed and begged leave to correct the honorable gentleman in one particular. The gentleman had made one broad remark, which might seem to cover Mr. C. It was, that all had been said in this debate which could be said in defence of slavery. Mr. C. disavowed having entered upon the general question of slavery at all: he had only endeavored to defend those who held property in slaves under the Constitution.]

Mr. Adams resumed. I did not understand the honorable gentleman otherwise. I did not mean to say more than that he thus defined the Constitution as making property of human beings. That is what I call slavery. But the question is now on the rules; and the immediate question before the House is on the resolution moved by the gentleman from South Carolina, in these words:

"Resolved, That, upon the presentation of any memorial or petition praying for the abolition of slavery or the slave trade in any District, Territory or State of the Union, and upon the presentation of any resolution or other paper touching that subject, the reception of such memorial, petition, resolution, or paper shall be considered as objected to, and the question of its reception shall be laid on the table, without debate or further action thereon."

This is identically the same resolution which was offered by the first gentleman from Virginia, (Mr. Wise,) and which seems intended to get rid of the question of reception by suspending it between the two parts of the universe I referred to, leaving it utterly uncertain whether these petitions are received by the House or not. That of itself is objection enough to me; and I will say, for a high-minded chevalier, which I consider the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Thompson) to be, as brave and gallant as Bayard, without fear and without reproach, it seems to me a very small way of getting rid of the question, to hang it up between those two places. He will not say, reject it; no. He will not say, receive it; no. He will not reject it or receive it, but lay the question of reception on the table—so that neither this House, nor the Clerk, nor the world, shall know whether it is received or not. It seems to me it would be more bold, open, and candid, and better becoming the gentleman, to say one thing or the other: yet I will say the same thing in regard to the gentleman from Virginia, (Mr. Wise,) which I have said of the gentleman from South Carolina, (Mr. Thompson.) I highly respect him. I believe him to be an honest, fair, open-hearted, open-mouthed man, [laughter;] and I respect and honor him for it. Sir, I am a Yankee, and Yankees are said to be famous for their trickery in public dealing: how that may be I do not know; but to me it seems that this resolution as well deserves the character of a "wooden nut-meg" as if it had come from the acutest of Yankee pedlars. [Loud laughter.] I know that neither of these gentlemen would ever have proposed to dispose of the question in this way if they had not found, from experience, that they could not get rid of these abolition memorials in a manner more agreeable to them. The gentleman from Virginia, (Mr. Wise,) is for rejecting them at once—for refusing to receive them, and for openly saying so to the world. Where the expedient of hanging up the question of reception came from, I do not know; I hope it did not come from Yankee land. [A voice. Yes it did. It came from New Hampshire.] Well, wherever it came from, I wash my hands of it. That is the proposition, however, on which the House will be called to vote by yeas and nays, if they reject mine; that is the proposition on which the previous question was called yesterday, and it failed but by a single vote; and I say that, if southern gentlemen declare themselves to be ashamed of it, I hope they will vote against it.

Now, sir, I will state to the House why I propose that my resolution shall be entered as the 21st rule of the House.

The 20th rule declared—

"As soon as the Journal is read, the Speaker shall call for petitions from the members of each State, and delegates from each Territory, beginning with Maine and the Territory of Wisconsin, alternately; and if, on any day, the whole of the States and Territories shall not be called, the Speaker shall begin on the next day where he left off the previous day; provided that, after the first thirty days of the session, petitions shall not be received, except on the first day of the meeting of the House in each week."

And the 21st rule, which now immediately follows it provides—

"The petitions having been presented and disposed of, reports from committees shall be called for and disposed of; in doing which the Speaker shall call upon each standing committee, in the order they are named in the 70th and 98th rules; and when all the standing committees have been called on, then it shall be the duty of the Speaker to call for reports from select committees before the House passes to other business, he shall resume the next call where he left off. Resolutions shall then be called for in the same order, and disposed of by the same rules which apply to petitions; provided that no member shall offer more than one resolution, or one series of resolutions, all relating to the same subject, until all the States and Territories shall have been called."

I would place mine between the two; and here, as a justification for my extreme anxiety on the subject of the right of petition, I will ask the attention of the House to the order of business which these rules establish. What is it? The very first business in order to receive petitions; and this regulation dates from the beginning of the Government. There is a reason for it. What is Government instituted for but to redress the grievances of the People? What is the object of all Government? What are we here for? What is the Constitution for? Why does Congress meet every year, if not for the redress of grievances? All else is of subordinate importance. The appropriation bills are very important for the conducting of the Government, and for performing its duties of justice to the People. But what else have we to do but to redress grievances? It is therefore just and reasonable that the first thing the House does should be to inquire what grievances are to be redressed; but how can we know this unless the people tell us? The right of petition, therefore, is essential to the very existence of Government: it is the right of the People over the Government: it is their right, and they may not be deprived of it. I presume it will be admitted here, so thoroughly is this fact established, that if that amendment of the Constitution by which Congress are prohibited from interfering with the right of petition had not been adopted, the right would nevertheless have existed just as really as it now does. The amendment insisting on its preservation was adopted at the instance of the great and glorious Old Dominion. It was inserted then, not to confer the right, but to secure it against violation by Congress. Will any man say that the right to petition Government would not exist unless written down in the Constitution? It is interwoven with the nature of Government itself; it does not belong to a Republic alone, or to a monarchy, or to an aristocracy, but it is common to them all. The greatest despot on the globe is compelled to receive petitions from his meanest subject. The Grand Turk never rides out but he is besieged with petitions, and he is obliged to receive them all.—Holding, then, that his right is founded in the immortal nature of man, who petitions his Maker, I am against all abridgment of it; but, color it as you please, the resolution of the gentleman from South Carolina does abridge this right; for, if you say that you will not receive certain petitions, or if you will not tell whether you receive them or not, I say it is the same thing, in the result, as if you rejected those petitions. And when this is done, not in regard to one petition, or 20 petitions, but to a whole class of petitions without distinct specification, it amounts to the exercise of an arbitrary discretion in this House whether the House will receive any petition or not. I say you cannot specify any one class of excluded petitions without claiming the right of extending your interdict to all other classes of them.

A very luminous illustration of this is to be found in the practice of the British House of Commons. I remember that, at the last session, the practice of that House was adduced here to justify the refusal of abolition petitions, and we had long arguments to show that there was a discretion in this House as to the reception of petitions, because there was such a discretion in the House of Commons. There is such a discretion in that House, but it extends to one class of petitions only; there is one class which the House of Commons does not receive. When a petition of this class is presented, if objection is made, the petition is refused to be received. I do not, of course, when I say one class, refer to petitions which contain insulting language and are disrespectful to the Government. Nobody pretends that petitions of this description ought to be received by any legislative body; that fact alone is a valid reason for their rejection; but, besides these, there is one class, and one only, which the House of Commons excludes, and those are petitions against taxation. The House of Commons, being a taxing machine, cannot bear to hear petitions against the exercise of its taxing power. If any gentleman will take the trouble to look into Hatsell's Book of Precedents, he will find, that when the petitions of the people of America against the Stamp Act were presented in Parliament, this rule was applied to them, and they were accordingly not received. There is another instance recorded of the same kind: it is a petition to the King from the first Congress of the United States. The King referred it to the House of Commons: the petition itself may be found in the journals of the old Congress: it was addressed to the King in 1775, and Sir George Saville, it is said, OFFERED to present the petition (much of the style of some entries made here, of late years, in our journals.) The name of Sir George Saville is well known as the friend of liberty. It is an historical name, venerable in his native country as it is throughout the civilized world. This gentleman, it is said, "offered to present the petition of persons styling themselves Representatives of the people of the North American Colonies." Objection was made, and an argument ensued which I should be glad to read if there was time to do so. It is the very argument which we now hear in this House. It prevailed then and there. And the petition of our Representatives was in consequence rejected. And these, sir, are the precedents from the House of Commons which were openly adduced in this House (and I do not know but they may be adduced again) to prove the right of the House to refuse abolition petitions!

Now, to apply this to my argument. If this House, on the force of these precedents, is justified in the principle that it may reject abolition petitions, I ask if the same precedent is not much more powerful, and still more in point, if applied to petitions which relate to the tariff? The parallel would then run on all-fours.—Then the precedent of the House of Commons would be of authority. If it has any force in the one class of petitions, it has still more in relation to the other. I ask gentlemen of the north and gentlemen of the south, are you ready to reject petitions against duties imposed for the revenue? The rule includes the resolutions of State Legislatures. I repeat, that if you can reject abolition memorials because the House of Commons rejects memorials against taxes, you can reject petitions against all taxation, and the precedent is of stronger authority. If you can do it in relation to one class, you can do it in relation to any other class; and if you can do it in relation to the petitions of whole classes of individuals, you can do it to the petition of any one individual. Nay, I think I heard it expressly argued here that the right of petition is not infringed when you reject a single petition, because the Constitution says that the people have a right to "assemble" to petition Congress for a redress of grievances. So there must be an assembly of the people, or else the rejection of their petitions is not unconstitutional! I say that argument will apply precisely. If once you admit the principle that the House has a discretionary power to reject petitions, the question will at last be made here whether the petitioner is of the politics of the majority or of the minority. That will be the next step; and when that step is taken, what will have become of the right of petition?

One objection I have to the resolution of the gentleman from South Carolina is, that it is a novelty, and that in two respects. Heretofore, to my extreme grief, sorrow, and, I would add indignation, if that were of any avail, this House, during the four or five sessions last passed, has sanctioned the reception of abolition memorials, and has then ordered them to lie on the table without being read, printed, or acted on in any way. That measure I consider as another wooden nutmeg; it is an expedient to get rid of the consideration of these memorials, and yet to escape the odium of refusing to receive them. That is a distinction of great power with some northern gentlemen. If you only receive the memorial, they are satisfied; no matter whether you ever read it or look at it again. But they will never refuse to receive a petition! Oh, no, sir! But they will not hear them read. That is the argument of one class of reasoners. Still this was something. And, since the question has been up, we have twice had the precise question of reception put to the House, and the yeas and nays called upon it. In examining those yeas and nays, I find that the very distinguished gentleman from New York, over the way, [Mr. Vanderpoel,] who is ready thus sternly to suspend the question, did vote for reception. Well, sir, every man has his own system of logic. For my own part, I thank no gentleman either in the name of these petitioners or in my own name, for receiving their petitions and then laying them on the table without being read. Nay, sir, to me it is insignificant whether they are read or not, unless they are considered. It is the right of the petitioner, and the duty of this House, that, when a petition is presented to it, the House should inform itself what that petition contains—should then consider, and then answer it. As the practice of the British House of Commons has been visited on us in debate, and is likely to be again, I will read from Hatsell:

"We learn from an examination of all these instances that this practice has been confined, as it ought to be most strictly, to the refusing to receive such petitions only as object against a tax which the House of Commons is imposing for the current service of the year; and that it has never been applied to petitions which have been offered in a subsequent session, desiring a repeal or reconsideration of the taxes imposed in a former. Indeed, the House ought to be particularly cautious not to be over rigid in extending this rule beyond what the practice of their ancestors, in former times, can justify. To receive and hear and consider the petitions of their fellow-subjects, when presented decently, and containing no matter intentionally offensive to the House, is a duty incumbent upon them, antecedent to all rules and orders that may have been instituted for their own convenience: justice and the laws of their country demand it from them."

That is the comment of Hatsell, and is there any discovery in that? Is it not a dictate of common sense? When you assume the right of petition, does not that right, in all sound logic and in all moral principle, carry with it the duty to receive, hear, and consider petitions? If not, then is the guaranty of that right the greatest of mockery. This House says to an American citizen, "O yes! you have certainly the right to petition, but I will neither read, hear, nor consider your petition when you send it." Sir, what difference is there between saying this, and telling the man at once you have not the right to petition us? You only cheat the man by a false pretence, while you give him a right which you take care shall be of no avail. This is the objection I have to all resolutions which refuse the hearing of petitions.—This House should speak the language of a great and generous nation; it should deal with the people in a fair, open, and candid way; and it is not so dealing to say to them, We will receive your petitions, but we will not consider them. If you refuse to hear and consider, as well as to receive, you do in substance deny the right to petition. Sir, decent language will not express what you do. It is conduct that would be unworthy of a single individual, and is vastly more so of the Representatives of this great and mighty nation.

I have already stated the substance of another objection to the resolution, namely, that it will not answer its purpose.—If you succeed in rejecting all these memorials, you have not thereby got rid of the question. You will have the question of slavery and of abolition forced upon you every day; you cannot keep it out of the House; and, if you persevere, you will, before you are aware of it, have a civil war raging while you are excluding the only means that can put an end to it.

I have not taken up, neither will I, the correspondence between the Governors of Virginia and New York, and between the Governors of Georgia and Maine, presenting, as it does, a state of things on which the House at this moment ought, in my opinion, to be deliberating. What is the substance of this correspondence? It is a difference of opinion as to the interpretation of the Constitution. They discuss that difference with great ability on both sides, but they come to no agreement. The Governor of Virginia says that the Governor of New York must give up the point, or——

[At this point Mr. Adams was arrested by the Chair, and it was declared not in order to discuss this correspondence.

Mr. Adams. Others have spoken of it without being rebuked.

Chair. It cannot be done but by consent of the House.

Mr. Cooper, of Georgia. I have no objection to the gentleman's proceeding, so far as New York and Virginia are concerned, but when he comes to Georgia I give notice that I shall object.

A Voice. You yourself alluded to the subject.

Mr. Cooper. Yes, but I was called to order.

Mr. Waddy Thompson. The gentleman from Massachusetts is strictly in order, and I hope he will be allowed to proceed. The question must come up.

Cries of "Go on! Go on!"]

I was going to observe that, in the last sentence of this correspondence, the Governor of Virginia declares that, unless the Governor of New York recedes from his position, either there must be an amendment of the constitution, or Virginia must refer to first principles and take her rights into her own hands. I pretend not to give the precise words, but that is the substance. Now, I enter not into this question. I said I would not. I ask not which is right, the Governor of New York or the Governor of Virginia; but here is a State which is in wealth the first in the Union, and in intelligence equal to any other; and here is another State, equally distinguished in this Union, equally respected and beloved by me; both are at that point with each other as sovereign States. I ask how long this question is to be kept out of this House? I have named four States, but there are also two other States, of most respectable character, were recently in the same condition, and who negotiated between themselves and agreed upon some sort of a compromise. The compromise may prove satisfactory, though I doubt it.—The principle in question was as much contested between these states as between Georgia and Maine, and to-morrow Massachusetts and South Carolina may be in the same condition. Sir, there are no two States in the Union—one of them slave-holding, and the other not—which may not be in that condition from day to day. And are we to continue under a state of things, progressing, as such a state of things naturally does, and must, from words to action? For I take it for granted that the Governor of Virginia is no bully; that he did not expect to frighten the Empire State by his message.—Suppose these two great States were to come to action; is that a subject to be kept out of this House? No, sir, it cannot be; and therefore I say that the proposition of the gentleman from South Carolina is small and paltry. Nor is that of Virginia any better. I do not attribute the fault to those gentlemen; it lies in the nature of the thing itself—it is fanning the sun with a peacock's feather to make it cool. The resolution will not answer its purpose, and its only effect will be to agitate and vex a number of petitioners as respectable as any others in the Union. It cannot suppress the discussion of the subject. I say, again, I thank the gentlemen of the South for having opened that discussion fully. I do not conceive that the eight or ten days expended in the debate have been lost time; much has been said that will be considered. Such discussion has a tendency to bring the parties together, not to alienate them.—Let us say what we have to say. Say you what you have to say, and then we must come to some compromise, which is required on both sides. This has been done before; it was done in the Convention which formed the constitution. The discussion was as heating then as it is now; yet they came to an understanding—they agreed upon a compromise. It is true, they were obliged to resort to a little external interference by prayer for it, (and I should be glad we did the same now, and that we had a Chaplain to perform the duty,) still the two parties came together, and they kept together for fifty years. Do gentlemen from the South, believe that, by excluding these memorials, they will ever convert our petitioners? Do you believe it? Do you expect to bring them to your terms? I heard two of the gentlemen yesterday say that, as to slavery, they should not discuss it; they had nothing to say about; and so says the Governor of Virginia. And what does the Governor of New York say in reply? I did not ask you to discuss it; I did not put it in issue. So we say now. Gentlemen of the South, we do not interfere with you in your institutions. Keep your institutions! Cherish them! Hold them for BLESSING?—We shall not disturb either your creed or your practice; but on subjects in which we are as much interested as you, and when the matter has come to a question of peace or war, freemen can stand up their rights as well as the holders slaves. When Jove appeals to his thu der, the fable tells us that Jove is wron Why will you not discuss this questio Do you fear the argument? If not, w do you refuse to enter into it? If y are so firm, so confident, so immoveab resolute, why will you not speak? I c upon you to speak; explain this subje to us who do not understand it. Show the "blessings" of this institution. L us look at them. I believe some of yo think that slavery is a blessing which v ought to take to ourselves. If so, give your reasons; show us how it will be f our interest, and how it can be made conform to our sense of duty. Perha we shall come round; who knows b you may convert us? [A laugh.] I c not resist; I am open to conviction. Su pose you try it.

The Governor of Virginia, when h puts on his armor, and clothes himself i complete steel, cries, "I am ready to figh on the question," and so says the gentl man from South Carolina and the gentl man from Virginia; but I beg leave t say to them that the tone of defiance i not the tone to make peace. No; defen your own institutions as you think prope if they are assailed by violence, defen them by violence; but if not, I say t those gentlemen, come and let us reaso together; let us have a cool, dispassion ate comparison of opinion. That is m wish; that, I think, is the true course.

But the proposition of the gentlema from South Carolina, goes, in two pa ticulars, further than ever this House ha gone before. Heretofore, the House, b special resolution, has declared that m morials shall be received and laid on th table without reading, but the effect the resolution has always been confine to that particular session in which it ha passed; but now here is a step forwar in the process of rejecting petitions; th petitions are not received, but the que tion of their reception is suspended. Tha is one step. Then the resolution, instea of applying to this session only, is pro posed as a standing rule of the House Of course, it will extend through tw sessions at least, and, by the ordinar practice which has hitherto prevailed o adopting the rules of order of a previou session, the rule will, in fact, become, i some respects, a permanent law of th House. On both these grounds I objec to it; and I call the attention of the House to an observation of the gentleman from Rhode Island, (Mr. Tillinghast,) which struck me when it was made with pecu liar force. These petitions are address ed to the Senate and House of Represen tatives—to the whole Congress. The pe titioners have as much right to go before the Senate as before the House of Repre sentatives. If you interrupt the progress of their petition by refusing to receive it, or still more by suspending the question of its reception, you deprive them of their privilege of going before the Senate. It is a double violation of their right of petition. I know it may be said that the petitioners are at liberty to present another copy of their memorial to the Senate. This is true; but if you suspend the question of reception, you deprive them in effect, just as much, for, let them present their memorials as they will to the Senate, when they come to the House, here is the rule; for under this resolution I suppose you will not receive a bill from the Senate on the subject of abolition any more than you will receive a petition. I say, then, that you deprive a whole class of petitioners, and that the largest class of any in the country, of all hearing not only in this House, but in the Senate also.

Now my proposition is very simple. It is this:

Resolved, That the following be added to the standing rules of this House, to be numbered the 21st:

"Every petition presented by the Speaker, or by any member, with a brief verbal statement of its contents, shall be received, unless objection shall be made to its reception for special reason and whenever objection shall be made to the reception of a petition, the name of the member objecting, and the reason of the objection, shall be entered upon the journal. The question in every such case shall be, Shall the petition be rejected? and no petition shall be rejected but by a majority of the members present."

It will be observed that this resolution, if adopted, does not specify in what manner the petitions shall be treated after they are received. I say this by way of answering a large portion of the gentlemen on the other side, who wasted a vast deal of argument by putting supposed cases of the presentation of absurd and unconstitutional petitions. I do not deny the right of the House to receive a petition when it is first presented, but I wish all petitions to be received, unless their reception is specially rejected to. What shall be done with them afterwards is for the House to determine. What I want to settle is the principle that the right of petition includes within it the right of having petitions received unless special objection exists against it; and to show whether this is the case, I require the name of the persons objecting and the reasons of the objection to be entered on the journals of the House. Now it is possible for the House to adopt this resolution, and yet to pass another that the petitions, when received, shall neither be read nor considered. But if the House shall adopt this resolution, I confess that it is my impression that there is not a man in this House who will be willing to record as to the ground of his objection to its being received, that it is abolition. There may be some, there may be

y, but I believe that, if the question eception is put to the House, they can- get a majority to vote against it. do not believe that there is a man here is willing to have such a thing go n the record in a single case; and if e is—there may be many for aught I w—but if there is, put the question to decision of the House, and see how majority will go. I do not believe you can get a majority for it, if there man that would move it; and for reason, by receiving a petition, you de nothing, and I was willing to put n the record my acknowledgment of right of the House to reject petitions. ly and freely admit it, but I say it t be done for a special reason, which t be assigned on the journal, to go be- the world—before posterity; and if e is a gentleman here who would not ple at putting his name to such an tion on the journal, I will answer for at in twenty years hence he and his dren would blush to see his name with n an addition to it, come he from the th or the South, or where he may.— ou adopt my resolution, you only set- he principle that all petitions shall be ived, unless a special objection, which o be entered on the journal, shall be le, and then that there shall be a spe- vote upon it by the House. Rely n it, that, if this resolution passes, you hear no more objections, not only to reception of the petition, but to its re- nce; to the hearing of it; to consid- g it, which is as much the duty of the se as to receive it. I am willling to it upon this. I am willing to ad- the right of the House to refuse to re- e, in any case in which a majority of House is willing that the reason for cting the petition shall go upon the rnal.

nd now, Mr. Speaker I have no more ay. I will not enter upon the subject lavery or the slave trade in the Dis- t of Columbia.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

DNESDAY, ... MARCH 4, 1840.

rother Jonathan, of N. Y., says Mr. Seba th is the "original author of the Downing ters."

he Brother Jonathan comes to us this week rged. He is determined not only to "go a- d" but to KEEP AHEAD.

t will be recollected that when Post Masters to frank letters, that they must put their es on the back, otherwise when they reach office we are charged, notwithstanding they write "free" on the letters.

he Cross and Journal, requests us to give the ber of Protestant Methodists in the State of o. We have examined the Minutes, and there are about 8,000 within this State.— church is in a more prosperous condition at sent, than at any former period.

We are thankful to Mr. Henderson, of the Sen- of Ohio, for the Report of the Bank Commis- ers. We did not receive it for some time r it was forwarded to us, it being addressed Putnam instead of Zanesville, where we do business.

The Blood Hound business is attracting con- erable public attention. A great many ex- nations and apologies are offered;—but it will all do. They could not have been imported any other purpose but the destruction of the r hunted Seminoles.

The health in the neighborhood of this office been good during the winter; but a very short tance south of us the scarlet fever has prevail- —there has also been other fevers prevailing ough the same neighborhood, some cases of ich have been fatal.

The Post Master General has decided that Post Master may enclose the subscription of a rd person, and FRANK the letter, if it be writ- by himself. If he see the letter and knows elates to nothing else, is the same thing. As the present post office law is such an un- teous taxation upon literature and the press, have requested our friends to avail themselves this privilege, on our behalf, and a number of m have done so. And we thank both them d those Post Masters who have had the kind- ss to lend us their aid.

The rise of water in our river last week, has ne considerable damage. It has broke round e west abutment of the dam across the Musk- gum above this town, and it is said from two four acres of the bottom is washed away.— hen the river gets low it must all go through s breach. The west abutment fell down. A breach is made in the canal bank immedi- ely below Mr. Reeves' mills, in this town, and e water pouring through carried off the princi- l part of Mr. R's long shed which was erected the accommodation of his customers' horses; d they had considerable difficulty in prevent- g the water from underminding the south end the mill. This breach was occasioned by a mporary frame dam which was thrown across e canal to prevent the water from standing on e lower part of it; this dam not being suffi- ently secured at the ends, the water broke nd next to the river and soon tore the bank ay, and ultimately poured out directly into the er.

The McConnelsville Standard says:

"Had the water risen to the heighth that it frequently heretofore done, almost the entire rk at this place must have been destroyed. It s saved with the exception of tearing down e abutment and the loss of some embankment, ly by the efforts of the citizens generally for its otection. Every person must see that the whole rk in its unfinished state, must rapidly be de- stroyed, unless the Legislature speedily furnish- es the means of protection."

We are now left in such a situation here that we can neither get up or down the river. A few more such improvements and we are ruined.

The last New York Luminary, says: "It is really amusing to a looker on, to witness the zeal with which some of our good brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church are contending for human rights, while they appear to forget their own bondage." We think so too; and if the papers under their patronage will contend for the rights of the white man as well as the colored, we shall think more favorably of their consistency.

MARKETS.

ZANESVILLE.—Flour 3 dollars, wheat 50 cents.

BALTIMORE, FEB. 22.—FLOUR.—The price at which the market closed last week, $5,56¼, for Howard street Flour continued until Thursday last, the sales during the time amounting to several thousand barrels, but on that day and yesterday, there was less disposition manifested amongst buyers to purchase, and with the exception of 1000 bbls on the first, and 3 a 400 on the latter day at $5,50, no other transactions took place, although the article was freely offered at the latter price. The car and wagon price continues at 5,37½. The sales of City Mills have been to a fair extent at 5,62½, and in one or two instances a fraction over was obtained. The purchase have been chiefly for foreign shipment.

PROVISIONS.—We note sales in small lots of No. 1 Mess Beef at 13 dollars, four months, and of Prime ditto a 10 dollars per bbl cash. Small sales, also, of old Prime Pork, at 10.25 a 10,50, cash. The operations in Bacon have been extensive, and include 3 a 4000 old Hams to go out of the market, at 7 a 8 cents; a lot of 10,000 lbs old Joles, in good condition, at 4½ cts; old Middlings at 8 a 8½; Shoulders, 5 a 7; new Western, assorted, at 9¼ a 9½, equal to cash; and Lard, 9 a 9½, ditto, which is a decline in the latter. There have been some few operations, also, in Butter, but at reduced prices: we quote No. 3, as wanted, 10 a 10½; No. 2, 13 a 14; and Roll, 15 a 16 cts with a heavy stock and limited demand.

SEEDS.—Clover seed has become scarce and in brisk demand for good. We note a sale of 175 bushels at 9,50, and 50 ditto, to arrive, 9,75 per bushels.—Lyford.

PITTSBURGH, FEB. 21.—Our rivers are all in excellent order, and the Pittsburgh market is becoming well supplied with New Orleans sugar, molasses, rice, fish, and many European items, such as steel, queensware, and other heavy goods, via New Orleans by our steamers which are now daily arriving.

BACON—Sales of new from wagons 6¾, and stores 7 to 7½ cents hog round.

BUTTER AND LARD—Roll Butter very plenty and dull at 10 a 10½ cents per lb, and keg 8 to 9 cents. Lard 7½ a 8 cents.

CLOVER SEED, very scarce and in demand.—Sales from wagons 7 to 7,50, and from stores 8 to 9 dollars per bushel.

FLOUR.—Pretty large sales at the river, 2,75 uninspected, 2,87½ inspected, and 3 dollars a bbl from wagons.

GRAIN.—Wheat 56½; Rye 40; Corn 37½; Barley 50; Oats 20 cents per bushel.

MOLASSES.—Good new N O, 35 cents cash and 40 cents out of stores.

SUGAR.—Prime N O per hhd 6¼ cash, and 6¾ a 7 cents on time or per bbl.—Harris.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.

A bill passed the house on the 25th ult. by a vote of 37 to 27, to repeal the act for the erection of a new State House at Columbus.

Mr. Bartley, the chairman of the committee on the Banks and the Currency, has reported to the House of Representatives, a "bill to regulate and reform the Banking System of this State."—The bill we have not seen, but give the following synopsis of it from the Columbus Bulletin:

"A general banking law, under which banks are to be authorized to go into operation by a vote of the Legislature—the banks now in existence, by surrendering their charters, may be continued by coming under the provisions of this law—a bank fund to be created, similar to the New York safety-fund system. Unqualified individual liability. In case a bank fails, the corporate property is to be first exhausted—next, the property of officers and directors—lastly, of all other stockholders. The banks are required to exchange paper and settle their accounts with each other once a month, under the supervision of the Bank Commissioners at Columbus.—Each bank is required to take the paper of every other, at par, in payment of its own debts.—The circulation is limited to the amount of stock paid in, and loans and discounts to twice that amount. Stock to be paid in gold and silver; and to keep $1 in specie on hand to $3 in circulation. Stockholders and directors restricted in the amounts they may borrow. Extravagant loans to favored individuals prohibited.—Banks prohibited from engaging directly or indirectly in the business of brokers, and from exporting specie. Laws prohibiting the circulation of small bills, and for the establishment of the Board of Bank Commissioners continue in force."

It is thought to be doubtful, even by the friends of Bank reform, whether this bill will pass at present.

A petition was presented on the 26th ult. by Mr. Ford, from citizens of Cuyahoga county, for the incorporation of the Methodist Protestant Academy, in Brighton, in said county: also, for the incorporation of the first Methodist Protestant Society of Brooklyn, in said county,—which were severally referred to Mr. Ford. Bills for both these purpose are reported in the Senate.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—The Boston Herald states that Mr. E. D. Stevens, Druggist of that city, accidentally swallowed some Prussic acid, with which he endeavored to destroy the nerve of an aching tooth. In about an hour after the application, at 6 o'clock in the morning, he was seized with intense pains, and his father was immediately sent for, but ere his arrival the unhappy sufferer was speechless, and he continued in the same state till 1 o'clock, when he expired. His sufferings must have been horrible, as his head swelled to twice its usual size.

AGRICULTURAL.

FEEDING HOGS ON OIL CAKE.—We had been frequently told that oil cake, if fed to hogs, would assuredly injure the pork by turning it yellow and rendering it oily; and that these effects would remain for months after you ceased feeding with the cake. But we were informed by Mr. Thomas Maple, of Green county, Pennsylvania, that if the cake were pulverized,—mixed with water and let sour, it would produce no such effects. As Mr. M. has a large farm, an extensive milling establishment, including an Oil Mill, and raises a considerable amount of stock, we concluded his experience, especiably when we know him to be a man of discriminating mind, was worth noticing. And grain being remarkably scarce and dear last summer, we concluded to try the oil cake, and had two barrels for the purpose, one souring while the other was feeding. With about five dollars worth of cake, including the ordinary slops about the house, we kept thirteen hogs through the summer, in first rate order, the improvement on any two of them was equal to the whole cost. When the corn was ripe enough we quit the oil cake and fed them on the former until killing. We never had whiter, firmer nor sweeter pork.

BLIGHT IN PEAR TREES.—It is a fact, that through this region of country, the pear trees have nearly all perished with some unknown disease, which for the want of a more definite name has been termed the BLIGHT. This disease commits its ravages in the growing season. The leaves on the point of a limb will turn black and decay, and by degrees the disorder passes downward on that particular branch, the leaves all turning black and perishing, until the whole, down to the main trunk is destroyed. Perhaps some six or eight weeks will transpire before this work of destruction is completed. The next year another limb will go in the same way, and so on till the tree is entirely dead, which sometimes happens in two or three years after the first attack, and sometimes not for ten.

We have carefully kept our eye on every agricultural paper that has come under our notice,—we have examined with scrutiny every agricultural book that has came into our possession, and in our extensive intercourse with the west, have inquired of every person who would be likely to have information in reference to the cause of this mysterious disease, so destructive on the pear tree. We have been informed from all these sources it was the BLIGHT, and hear the inquiry ends. The only conjecture we have seen, which seemed to have any plausibility in it, was a suggestion made by a writer in the Ohio Farmer, a few years ago, that it was caused by an over charge of fluid, which burst the vessels of the tree, and caused death as the bursting of a blood vessel would in an animal. This is made plausible by facts which have passed under our own notice.—About eighteen years since, we planted some twenty pear trees. Two of them were situated on the brow of a poor bank or point-clay soil, at an elevation of some ten feet above the creek bottom; two more in quite thin soil on another brow of a hill some sixty or eighty feet higher.—These four trees have grown quite slowly, but so far, they are perfectly healthy. The others were planted in rich soil, had a rapid growth, but have all perished, in the manner above described, some years since. Rich soil and rapid growth, so far as we are capable of observing, is the only difference in the condition of those trees which have died and those that prosper.

But, then, this richness of soil and rapidity of growth, though it may be a pre-disposing, cannot be the main cause. For, twenty-four or twenty-five years ago, when we first became acquainted with the settlements about the mouth of the Muskingum, the pear trees were flourishing in the rich bottoms of the Ohio, this being one of the oldest settlements in the State. Many trees had reached their maturity, with a most rapid growth, but this indefinable disease was then scarcely known there. But since that it has made sad havoc among the pear trees in that quarter.

Though we do not even pretend to guess at the cause of the destruction of the pear tree, yet, from this experiment and from the observations we have made in general, we are satisfied that a thin hard soil, having a southern exposure, is the best adapted to the health of the pear tree.—This much experience and observation have taught us, and experience should be our guide in all such matters.

SOWING CLOVER SEED.—The practice of sowing clover seed is beginning to fall into disuse in many places, especially in western Pennsylvania, and timothy is used as a substitute. From the experiment we have made, we are satisfied that timothy is preferable to clover, especially on strong clay soil. As to pasturage there can be no doubt on this subject. Clover is certainly the poorest of all grasses for this purpose. It is not ready, in this country, to turn on before about the middle of May; then, by the first of July, a period of some seven weeks, it begins to slabber, after which most horses or hogs, without other food, would starve to death on it.

Indeed, in its best estate, it is a poor grass on which to fatten stock. It is entirely too washy and scouring. Timothy is abundantly better for fattening, and is good for any kind of stock the whole year.

Timothy is the best also to stand the severity of the weather. We have had a field, for experiment, the two past seasons, part in timothy and part in clover;—the drought has destroyed nearly every vistage of the clover while the timothy stands firm and flourishing.

The only questions which can admit of any doubt in relation to these two grasses, is, which is best for the soil?—Which will improve its fertility the most? Although, contrary to the common opinion, we are inclined to the belief that timothy is the best even for that purpose. It makes a far better sod than clover, which, when rotting renders the ground loose and open so that the roots of vegetation can easily penetrate it to receive their wonted nourishment. What produces better corn or potatoes? or what would produce better wheat, if fallowed, than timothy sod? If any person should wish to make the experiment, let him sow one acre of good land in timothy, another of the same quality in clover, and after remaining in grass for three years, let him fallow them for wheat, or plant them in corn and see which will produce the best crop. If the advantage is not in favor of the timothy sod we will then acknowledge we are in error.

Beside, look at the enormous expense of clover seed for these several years past. To sow his land with this kind of seed it will cost the farmer at least one dollar per acre; whereas from twelve to twenty cents worth of timothy seed will suffice. It is our honest conviction that there is no greater bore upon the public than this very practice of clovering land, by which they punish and half murder their stock.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor: I have just finished hauling to the mill one field of wheat I raised the past year, of twenty-eight bushels sowing, and I had 907 bushels, which is 32 11-28 bushels increase. About two acres of the field being very rank fell so early that it did not fill, and accordingly was not reaped. The grain was stacked out and thrashed in the field; in consequence of the stacks damaging I should judge I lost about one hundred bushels.

I raised off the same field last year 855 bushels. It was then sowed on a clover sod turned under. The stubble was simply turned over for the present crop;—two ploughings raised the two crops. The field lies about one mile below Zanesville on the Muskingum bottom—west side.—My whole crop of wheat this year is between eleven and twelve hundred bushels. Yours, &c.

February 28, 1840. JACOB P. SPRINGER.

If we throw off two bushels for that part of the field not reaped, and add 93 bushels for the loss in damaged stacks, we shall have 40 bushels for one; or 40 per acre.—ED.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Jonas Stansberry, Sr. of this town, departed this life on Sunday the 23d ult., in the 80th year of his age.

ITEMS.

A NEW DEFINITION.—"Mail stage"—a machine for the transportation of oysters.

A fire in Charleston, S. C. destroyed three houses belonging to Messrs. Renlock & Harvey, on the 11th ultimo.

Orders have been received at Norfolk to fit out the sloop of war Yorktown, for a three years' cruise.

Recent incendiary attempts in St. John, N. B. have destroyed several houses.—The papers there attribute them to dissolute females.

ANOTHER BODY FOUND.—The body of Mr. J. A Leach, of Boston, one of the unfortunates of the Lexington, was washed ashore on Long Island on Wednesday night.

A box containing $1100 dollars in specie, the property of a passenger from Newark Ohio, was stolen from the mail stage on Friday last. The thief must have had a broad back.

The Columbia, Penn. Spy, says that the quantity of ice which passed down the Susquehanna during the late freshet, is estimated at three millions cubic feet the hour. Rather wild, we think.

On Thursday, the 12th instant, the remains of the lamented General Hayne were brought to Charleston, and interred in St. Michael's Church. An enlogium on his life and character was delivered on the occasion by Gov. McDuffie.

The Yarmouth, N. S. papers, state that on last Sabbath in January, the wreck of the brig Charles, of Halifax, was discovered under the high cliffs near Cape St. Marys. All hands must have perished; and the body of one only had been found.

A tremendous gale was experienced at Bristol, R. I., on the 13th, doing much damage to shipping at the wharves. One schooner was driven on shore, and remains high and dry. Other vessels were injured more or less in their spars, &c.

The Globe says that it is intended to hold the blood hounds with a leash when in the field, and to use them only as guides, to follow the track of the Indians. To let them loose against the armed Seminole would be only to send them to be shot or tomahawked.

The papers from the interior of Pennsylvania bring accounts of destruction of property by freshets, but by no means to so great an extent as during some previous years. As, however, the water is said, at Pottsville, to be six inches higher than it was during the great freshet of last year, we may be prepared to hear of disasters by the next mails. Some bridges are mentioned as swept away.

MOB LAW.—It appears from the Vicksburg (Mississippi) papers, that the terrible exhibition of mob law, which disgraced that city, a few years since, in the destruction of the gamblers, has not answered the purpose. They have again returned, and resumed their occupation; and a public meeting has been called to devise means to get rid of them. The papers warn them to be off in time, and do well so to warn them—both for the credit of the city, and the lives of the accused.

RELIGIOUS REVIVALS.—Great revivals have taken place in the Baptist Church in this place, (Troy) and at Piqua. Between 30 and 40, have been immersed in Troy. The good work of grace is spreading to other churches, the labors of the ministers of the Gospel, are incessant, and are now going on in the Baptist, Methodist and other churches.—Troy Times.

A revival is also going on in the Methodist Church at Lebanon—between 30 and 40 have been added to the church, within the last two weeks. At Monroe, Butler county, nearly a hundred have attached themselves to the Methodist church within three or four weeks past.—And to the different denominations of religious societies in Cincinnati additions of more then 1100 members—chiefly however to the Methodist denomination—have been made during the late, or rather progressing revival in that city. God speed the good work until the knowledge of Jesus shall encompass the earth—until righteousness and peace shall prevail and influence the hearts of the whole human race!—Lebenon Star.

ZANESVILLE DISTRICT, Ohio Conference,
M. E. CHURCH.

If angels rejoice over repenting sinners, how much more should it gladden the hearts of the pious on earth to behold the triumphs of the cross? Great indeed has been our joy, whilst witnessing the recent displays of the grace and power of God, in the salvation of precious immortals committed to our care. God has mercifully visited us with time of refreshing, and hundreds are actually turning to God. Most of the circuits in the district are blessed with extensive and powerful revivals of religion. But Newark, Granville, Rushville, Putman and Cambridge circuits, have been peculiarly favored.—At their late quarterly and other stated meetings the cloud of mercy gathered; and though at first apparently no larger then a man's hand, yet at length it overspread the heavens and continued to empty its gracious contents until the thirsty land have been made springs of water. As the result of these revivals, nearly five hundred have experienced religion, and more then eight hundred have been added to the church, whilst the work of sanctification has been carried on to some extent amongst the membership.

That others have labored and we are reaping the fruit of their labor, is not at all improbable, as, in the language of our Saviour, "One soweth and another reapeth." But it may be said, with great propriety, of all the preachers, that they are at their posts, and quitting themselves like men. They seem to have caught the mantles of their honored fathers in the ministry, and are zealously and preseveringly engaged in preaching the peculiar doctrines of Methodism, justification by faith only, the direct witness of the Spirit, and christian perfection. O that the present year may form an important epoch in the history of the church, and that revival may succeed revival, until our country shall be like unto a well watered garden. In haste,

R. O. SPENCER.

Zanesville, Jan. 14, 1840.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LATER FROM ENGLAND.

By the transient ship Tarolinta we have received later foreign dates, viz: London to Feb. 3d, and Liverpool to Feb. 4th; but we cannot boast of receiving much news. The general character of the intelligence, in regard to commercial matters is considered much more cheerful and gratifying than was anticipated; but there is nothing very decisive in the character of the intelligence.

The money market was easier. Stocks were rising. The state of trade in Manchester improving; and Cotton 1-8d per pound higher.

In political news there is nothing of moment. The trial of Frost, the Chartist leader, had commenced at Monmouth; and strong reinforcements of troops had been ordered into Wales, in support of the judiciary, and to awe those into submission those who might contemplate farther disturbances.

RUMORED MINISTERIAL CHANGES.—Marquis of Normanby to go to Paris as British Ambassador, vice Lord Granville. Lord Granville to go to India as Governor General, vice Lord Aukland. Lord Ebrington to take Lord Normanby's place in the Home Office, and the Duke of Devonshire to be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

The stock of Cotton on hand, 31st Dec. was 250,490 bales, of which 206,000 is in Liverpool.

The deliveries to the trade during the year were 1,058,776 bales.

The corn market had not advanced—the averages were lower, and consequently the duties had increased.

The duty on foreign wheat was raised to 20s 8d per qr; on flour to 12s per bbl. American flour in bond has been sold at previous quotations.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET, JAN. 2.—There has been a fair business done today at rather higher prices. The sales are 5000 bales. 200 Pernam 9¾ to 9¾d; 30 Bahia 9 3-8; 40 Maranham 9¾; 30 Egyptian 11; 400 Surat 4¾ to 5¼d.

The total amount during the last year amounts to 1,016,401 bales. The sales during the same period 1,297,330 bales; of which the trade have taken 980,000 bales; the remainder for speculation and export; and the stock on hand in this port 205,042 bales, against 248,340 held the same time in 1838.

CORN MARKET, DEC. 31.—All kinds of free flour were in limited request at former prices. Of American in bond, however, some further sales were made for holding over at 31s. per bbl.; but 31s 6d to 32s. being now asked serves to check the demand, the buyers refusing to comply with the advance required.

SOUTH AMERICA.—The correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, at Montevideo, under date of Dec. 20th, states that the French Admiral, Dapotet, had arrived at Rio Janeiro, with six or eight bomb vessels, but without extra troops, but thinks that the Buenos Ayreans will see their city bombarded to atoms, before they will agree to the original ultimatum of the French. Rosas had succeeded in checking the revolutionary movements in the Southern Province, after many barbarous executions and confiscations of property. In the North a battle was pending between Rivera, the revolutionary commander, and Echague, the result of which would, it was thought, be decisive.

MEXICO.—We learn, via New Orleans and Havana, that a terrible fire occrred in the city of Mexico, on the night of the 27th December, destroying a large part of it.

Texas dates are to the 3d February. The Comanche Indians were suing for peace, and offered to return all their white prisoners as one of the conditions. The frontiers were quiet.

Business Department.

Brother M. N. Warren promises us eight or nine subscribers in the course of three weeks from Plainfield, Ohio.

Cannot Bro. Barnes, of Cincinnati, aid in collecting our dues and procuring subscribers for us in his city? Bro. Lyon can give him a list of those to whom we send papers, &c.

Brother Degarmo, any money on the sound Banks of Ohio, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Indiana or Illinois, will answer us. In reference to your qustion about the best mode of getting Books, I know no better plan than to send by some of your merchants to Baltimore for them, and have them brought on with their goods. If you meet with no opportunity of this kind, you might send directly for them, stating in your bill the amount you wished to purchase, and name some commission and forwarding house in Wheeling, to whose care you wanted them directed, and they will forward them to any point on the river you wish. Any merchant in your neighborhood can inform you on this subject better than we can.

CEDER CREEK, SUSSEX CO., DEL.

Dear Sir: I received from a friend residing near Zanesville one number of your excellent paper, which I am highly pleased with, and have often wished that I could have an opportunity of becoming a subscriber; but there is no agent in this section of country for the Recorder, neither can I remit you a bank bill that will be of use, therefore, if you please, you can send your paper to this place, and next fall, as I shall have business in Zanesville, I will call and pay the subscription, and no doubt get several others.

J. C. SHOCKLY.

We give the above for the purpose of suggesting to our friends who do not file the Recorder, the propriety, instead of tearing up the papers, after they have done reading them, of sending them off to their friends both east and west; in so doing they can serve both us and the cause, as the above instance shews.

For the Western Recorder.

PITTSBURGH, FEBRUARY 19, 1840.

Brother Springer:—I acknowledge the receipt of a copy of my letter alluded to in your last paper. As you express a desire to be at peace, I am glad to have an opportunity to complete the reconciliation. After an attentive perusal of my letter, I am free to admit, that milder language might have been used, and I will add, should have been. I regret the spirit exhibited in the letter is not as much in accordance with the spirit of christian charity as I now desire. But you will permit me to remark, that whatever I may have said, was on the presumption that you had received my letter and refused to acknowledge its reception, or send it back as I requested you. I hope what I have said will be received by you as a sufficient apology for any offence I may have given you. THOMAS OLIVER.

We say by way of explanation, that we did not mean to indicate in the remarks we made in our 23d number, that there was any thing like a dishonest disposition about brother Oliver, we do not so believe, nor did we wish so to be understood. We take pleasure in stating that we receive his explanation, and now say that we recall whatever of unjustifiable severity we may have used toward him. Meanwhile, he will permit us to remark, that what was said was done in self-defence against his attack upon us. But being now satisfied on that subject we shall cultivate good feeling toward our brother. We hope he will receive the above explanation and apology for any offence we may have given him.

EDITOR.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips: between 180 & 200 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common farming Harness. A lot of first rate carriage and buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double covered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, March 4, 1840. 23tf

VARIETY.

A SLAVER CONDEMNED.—On Tuesday last, the case of the schooner Ann, which had been pending for several weeks in the Circuit Court of the United States, was concluded. It will be recollected that this vessel was seized by the Marshal, on suspicion of having been built and fitted out expressly for the slave trade.—The court decreed the vessel to be condemned as a slaver. J. R. Nelson, Esq., appeared on the part of the prosecution, and Reverdy Johnson, Esq., for the defence.—Baltimore Sun.

The scurrility of the political press is "past finding out." A whig paper in Pennsylvania, calls the President a "Jackanapes," and a democratic one in Maine calls Mr. Webster a "political loafer."—Is there no way of canvassing political opinions or principles without compromising all the decencies of life?—Boston Times.

Yea! a very easy way. Let each political editor consider that the persons whom he assails may be no worse, and perhaps better, than himself.

TAILOR DEFINED.—A tailor, instead of being the ninth part of a man, possesses the qualities of nine men combined, as follows: 1. As an economist, he cuts his garments according to his cloth. 2. As a gardener, he is careful of his cabbage. 3. As a cook, he provides himself with a hot goose. 4. As a sheriff's officer he does much at spunging. 5. As an executioner, he furnishes many gallowses. 6. As a general, he brandishes not a sword but a bare bodkin. 7. As a sailor, he shears off whenever he thinks it necessary. 8. As a lawyer, he attends to many suits. 9. As a christian and divine, it is his chief aim to form good habits for himself and others.

GALENA LEAD MINES.—Galena, although 500 miles farther up, has an advantage over Potosi, the chief one of the Missouri mining stations, in being on navigable water, while Potosi is 40 miles from the Mississippi. Galena is a flourishing town, and contained in 1835 between twelve and fourteen hundred inhabitants. The richest mines are distant about four or five miles from the village. The mineral, galena, is found at various widths—mostly at the depth of 60 or 70 feet. It is raised in lumps of all sizes, from that of half a pound to that of 150 lbs. There is little foreign matter mixed with the ore, except some particles of blende, and a portion of the ochrey oxide of iron.

THE TARIFF.

A reduction of duties, equal to one-tenth of the excess over 20 per cent. on the value, as it existed on the 3d of March, 1832, took place January 1. This is the fourth similar reduction that has taken place under the compromise act of 1832, making four-tenths, in all, of the excess over 20 per cent, on the value. Of the remaining "excess," one half comes off on the 1st of January, 1842; and the remainder six months thereafter. So that on and after the 1st of July, 1842 should the existing tariff laws remain unaltered, no article of import will bear a higher duty than 20 per cent. on the value. The reduction which took place on the 1st inst. will lessen the revenue according to Mr. Woodbury, $300,000.

NEWSPAPER PATRONAGE.—Of all trades, professions or calling none are so poorly paid as publishers of Newspapers. This may be set down as a truism. Many patrons (Heaven save the mark!) in other respects, worthy, punctual men, think it no sin to let the publisher of a Newspaper wait year after year for his dues; and, at last, if he is compelled to pay, he does it with a very bad grace.—"Mr. Typo must have his money, must he—the ungrateful scamp—I subscribed for the paper merely to patronize him, and now he has the impudence to be importunate for his pay. But if he must have it, he must. But do you hear! Stop the Paper! There is no such thing as gratitude in this world." If any body believes this picture is overdrawn, just let him ask the opinion of the nearest Printer.—Raleigh Register.

Gov. Pennington's letter, conveying resolutions of the New Jersey legislature, to Speaker Hunter, denying his right to occupy the Chair of the House, has been answered in a way most essentially to rebuke his "Broad Seal" Excellency. The Speaker refused to present them to the House.—Phil. Times.

This conveys an erroneous impression. The Speaker declined presenting them, because they were not addressed to him in his official capacity, which was right. When properly addressed by the Governor of New Jersey, they will be presented to the Federal House of Representatives by its Speaker.—Brother Jonathan.

The liberality of the Bostonians has become almost a proverb. Get their feelings aroused in any philanthropic movement, any project of benevolence, and there is no people on earth that can go ahead of them. The condition of the widows and children of Finn and Eberle, who were lost in the Lexington, touched a sympathetic chord in the breast of the Bostonians, who had been so often delighted with the genius of those celebrated actors. They immediately got up a benefit for each of the families of the bereaved, by which the following sums were realized: For the family of Mrs. Finn, $1072,25; and for that of Mr. Eberle, $909.—ib.

MISERY AND CRIME.—The Baltimore Clipper says that a person in that city lost six dresses, a pair of pantaloons and a shawl, and arrested a little girl about eight years old in the street, having the shawl wrapped around, her, who confessed that her sister, some two years older, stole the articles. The child, mother, and sister were brought before Justice Snyder, who found them in a state of utter wretchednes and misery; the mother, a miserable drunkard, who kept the girls out constantly engaged in begging, almost naked and without shoes or any covering for the feet.

We here see the fruits of the grog shop system; for without the facilities which they afford, this mother would not have so easily become a "miserable drunkard." Yet do we find legislators and presses willing to remove all restrainst from the detestable business of retailing spirits, and thus of converting parents into drunkards, and children into beggars and thieves.—ib.

A CHILD IN THE WOODS.—Some sensation has been caused in the neighborhood of Sherbrooke, Lower Canada, by the discovery of a white child, supposed to be four or five months old, in the possession of a small party of the St. Francis Indians. The poor little creature was in a wretched state of suffering—emaciated almost to a mere skeleton—lashed to a board, pappoose fashion, with a piece of raw venison in its mouth, which the squaw who had it in charge had given it to satisfy its ravening hunger, being herself incapable of supplying the proper food designed by nature for infants of that tender age.

The poor child was purchased from the Indians by a kind hearted Captain Adams, who paid them for it five dollars and a barrel of flour. He also provided for it a suitable nurse and comfortable clothing. It is intimated that the parents are known, or at least suspected. The child was not stolen from them, but transferred by themselves to the Indians—with what purpose the Canada papers do not say.

THE DEACON'S DECISION—Its Beneficial Effects.—Let those who are still under the delusion that hard labor cannot be performed without intoxicating liquor, read the following It is instructive.

Mr. Corey:—While in the town of Quincy not long since, I happened into the store of Mr. J. L. Heywood, where the following dialogue took place between Mr. H. and a gentleman by the name of Torrey.

Mr. H. Good morning, sir; can I sell you a pair of boots?

Mr. T. Where were those boots manufactured?

Mr. H. In the town of ———, in Massachusetts.

Mr. T. Are you sure of it?

Mr. H. Yes; I knew the man that made them.

Mr. T. What town were you from?

Mr. H. I was from the town of Grafton.

Mr. T. Was you? Why, I was from the town of Sutton. Did you know old Deacon Stone, not Deacon Giles, the champion of N. E. rum, but Deacon Stone, of Grafton.

Mr. H. O yes! well; and his son is now with me in the store.

Mr. T. What! the youngest? Let me see if he looks as he used to. Why (addressing the young man,) it was Deacon Stone who cured me from drinking rum, when you was a little boy, and a rogue too, and I shall never forget him for it. I will tell you how it was. I had been all over Grafton to get work in haying, and could find none to hire me. A friend of mine advised me to go with him over to Deacon Stone's and see if he could not hire me during haying. So over we went, and soon made a bargain with him. After we had left, and gone about ten rods, the Deacon cried out,

"Do you drink rum?"

"Rum!" said I, "yes!"

"Well, then," said the Deacon, "I don't want any man that drinks rum."

"Well," said I, "I can drink it if I find it myself,"

"No you can't," answered the Deacon promptly, "I won't have a drop of rum, nor any man that drinks it, on my farm."

"Well," said I, "I will come and try, and if I can't stand it, I can leave."

"No you can't," replied he; 'if you commence you must go through haying—I can't be disappointed in this way. But I will tell you what I will do: when you get through haying, if you will not say you feel better for not having drunk rum, I will pay you the difference."

I though this a fair offer and went to work, and worked four weeks, and never felt better or worked harder in my life.—When I got done haying I was weighed, and had gained twelve pounds, during which time I had worked without rum.—From that time I have been a temperate man; and it was old Deacon Stone who cured me from drinking rum, and I shall always feel grateful to him for it.

Mr T. is a member of the Baptist church. —Ill. Temp. Her.

From the Methodist Protestant Banner.

A sharp controversy has been carried on for some time past, between the various papers published under the patronage of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on the subject of introducing an article into the General Rules, to prohibit the members of that Church from using, or trafficing in, ardent spirits. At the head of the opposing parties, are Dr. Bangs, Editor of the Christian Advocate and Journal, published in New York, and Dr. Capers, Editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, published in this City, who write under their respective signatures. These learned Doctors maintain opposite opinions, as to whether the rule proposed to be inserted, was contained in the General Rules originally drawn up by Mr. Wesley, or not; the former strongly contending that it was, and the latter, as strenuously denying it. When doctors disagree, who shall decide? And yet it seems exceedingly strange that a doubt should exist as to what was really the rule published by Mr. Wesley. If the gentlemen will not charge us with impertinently interfering with what does not concern us, we would recommend them to refer, for a settlement of the difficulty, to the 5 h Volume of Wesley's Works, page 191, or to a little book call the "Constitution and Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church," page 75, each of which contain, an exact copy of the original rule. Our object, however, in refering to this controversy, was not to take part in the discussion of a question in which we feel not the slightest interest, but to notice a circumstance that has been elicited thereby, well calculated to astonish the uninitiated in the "History and Mystery" of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Bangs quotes from the Discipline published in 1789, in proof of his position, while Dr. Capers quotes from the edition of 1792 in support of his, both of these editions professing to be the veritable proceedings of the same General Conference, each party publishing the title page of the Book from which he quotes, not omitting the name of the printer, and of whom it could be bought.—Does not this fully substantiate the charge so often made, that the Discipline has been altered, and interpolated at various times, to suit the views and designs of the men in power, and palmed upon the Church as the acts of Mr. Wesley?

But this is not the only astonishing circumstance connected with this strange controversy. Dr. Capers denies the authority of the Conference to make any law, by which a member shall be expelled from the fellowship of the Church, unless such law be founded upon the explicit declaration of Scripture! In reply to a remark of Dr. Bangs, in which he says "I hope he (Dr. C.) will furnish me with the privilege of feeling an obligation to him of a much higher character, by his ceasing to object to the restoration of a rule so scriptural and seasonable as that of Mr. Wesley on the traffic and use of spirituous liquors," he says, "How, my brother? oblige you at the expense of my conscience? I say the cause of temperance, or any other cause, is a foreign foundation for the Church, or for the fundamental law of the Church, and that the BIBLE is the foundation, the sole and exclusive foundation. Shall we make arbitrary laws for the Church of God, and lord it over the consciences of his people? Shall we dare to cast out souls from the fold of Christ, for the crooking of a pin, or rumpling a feather? If one arbitrary law, why not another? When you have loosed from the Bible, whither may you not be carried?" Now we do most heartily, and fully concur in the sentiment of Dr. Capers, as here expressed, and because we do so, is the sole reason of our opposition to the government of the Church of which he is so conspicuous a minister; and we think it passing strange that he should have hazarded such a remark, and published it in a Church paper. Why is not the whole system of the M. E. Church government based on a foreign foundation? Nay, not only foreign from, but adverse to, the plain declaration of Scripture? Are not the Ministers of that Church constantly "lording it over the consciences" of the membership, by the enactment and enforcement of arbitrary laws, "and casting out souls from the fold of Christ for the crooking of a pin, or rumpling of a feather?" Witness that section of the Discipline, aptly termed the "gag law," by which a member is unchurched at the will and pleasure of the preacher, for daring to express an opinion against the Church government, which is termed inveighing against the Discipline. Witness the scores and hundreds of reformers who have been excised in various parts of the United States, simply for desiring a change in the government of the Church, and the restoration of local preachers and laymen, of their usurped rights. Is there any warrant for all this, or any part of it in the Bible? If so, we should be glad to be directed to chapter and verse. Surely the Doctor has written his own condemnation. Has he forgotten the occurrences of 1833 in this City, when he was preacher in charge, and in which he took so conspicuous a part? Does he not remember citing nine Official members of the Church to trial, whose moral characters were unimpeachable, under the charge of "Disobedience to the order and Discipline of the Church?" And did he not fully and publicly sanction the proceedings of his successor, who excised these same persons under this same charge? We have given the charge already, and that there may not be a loop upon which to hang a doubt as to the immorality of the acts for which the expulsions took place, we will add the specifications. They are as follows:

1st. Taking a part in a meeting calling itself the Church in its corporate capacity, and which assumes the right to do away at pleasure the order and rules of management prescribed by the Discipline to remove from office its Trustees, fill their place, change their responsibility, &c.

2d. Receiving appointment as Trustees under the assumed authority of said meeting, thus organizing a Board for the transaction of the business of the Church in opposition to the Board appointed under, and acknowledged by, the Discipline."

And to crown the whole, a third specification was subsequently added, which goes fully to prove, that to question the infallibility of a preacher, is a crime of so heinous a character, as only to be expiated by explusion from the Church. It reads thus:

"After a written avowal of your determination not to perform any acts that would be a palpable violation of Discipline, and after having received from the Preacher in charge, a decision, declaring the course you have adopted to be a palpable violation of Discipline, you have gone to law with the Trustees, by levying upon the property of one of their tenants, thus giving evidence of a determination to pursue your own course in defiance of the constituted authority of the Church."

Where was "the Bible, the sole and exclusive foundation," when all this was being done? Was there no "casting out souls from the fold of Christ for the crooking of a pin, or rumpling a feather?" Was there no "loosing from the Bible," and "lording it over the consciences of the people?" Verily, "conscience" can be bought sometimes at a very small expense." Dr. C. triumphantly asks, "Do you discern no difference between a minute of Conference, and one of the General Rules?" We ask, Do you discern no difference between a disciplinary anathema and the Bible? And we advise him to study the 5th Article of Religion which he so complacently recommends to Dr. Bangs, and first cast the beam out of his own eye, before he undertakes to pull the mote out of his brother's eye.—"The Holy Scriptures contain all things necessary to salvation, so that whatever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an article of faith, or be thought necessary to salvation." TITUS.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 2tf

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J ANDERSON & Co.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

THERE will be application made to the Trustees of Springfield township, at their annual session, on the first Monday of March, at the usual place of holding elections in the town of Putnam for an alteration in School District No. 4, so as to make a new District out of the land of the following persons adjoining in said District, commencing at 160 acres owned by Bernard Wortman, also the farm of Cornelius Springer, Jos. Swaney, Scameron Rodman, Andrew Bumbaugh, Benjamin Maple, Joseph Wortman, Sarah Johnson, James Russell, Robert George, John George, William Kidd, Mary Perien, the Grayham farm, together with two farms owned by Abner James, and eighty acres of land owned by David Jones and occupied by Wm. Perry and Henry D. Morgan. MANY HOUSEHOLDERS.
January 29, 1840. 23

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.
January 25, 1840. 23

Methodist Prot. Banner.

THE Methodist Protestant Church in the South, and particularly in South Carolina, being as yet in her infancy, her history is but little known, while the views and principles of her Members have been studiously misrepresented. To enlighten the public mind in relation to those principles, and to correct misrepresentation, is the object contemplated by the publication of this periodical. And there is every reason to believe that wheresoever those principles are known and properly appreciated—based as they are upon the union of spiritual and ecclesiastical liberty—it will be conceded that the church stands upon the high ground of scriptural truth. The Methodist Protestant Church has already attained a respectable and firm standing among her sister churches, in various parts of the United States, and we trust the day is not distant, when she will rank second to none, for piety, numbers and usefulness in the sunny South.

While the principal design of the paper will be to make known the history, present condition, and future prospects of the Methodist Protestant Church; to vindicate her principles, and defend her from the attacks of others; due courtesy will be extended to other churches, and notice taken of their condition and prospects—Literature, Science and the Arts, will not be forgotten.

Terms:—THE METHODIST PROTESTANT BANNER will be published monthly, on a quarto sheet, under the direction of a Committee of the South Carolina Annual Conference, at One Dollar per annum, payable in advance. Its enlargement in size and more frequent appearance, will depend upon the support it may receive.

Any person remitting Five Dollars will be entitled to a copy gratis.

Communications may be addressed to the Publishing Committee of the Methodist Protestant Banner, Charleston, South Carolina. 24

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.
Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840 (Jan. 29: 23.)

Books! Books!! Books!!!

CATALOGUE OF BOOKS (in part,) to be had at the Methodist Protestant Book Concern, Baltimore, Maryland, with the retail prices. A liberal discount will be made to wholesale purchasers.

Fox's Book of Martyrs, 2 vols. 8vo.	$2 25
Dr Macknight on the Epistles, sup.roy. 8vo.	3 25
Dr Scott's Commentary on the Bible, 3vs 8vo	7 50
Dr Dick's Theology, 2 vols. 8vo.	6 00
Dr Paley's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 25
Dr H. Prideaux's Connection of Sacred and Profane History, 2 vols. 8vo.	4 00
Crabbe's Synonymes, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 50
Dr Adam Clarke's Discources on highly important subjects, 2 vols.	3 00
Reese on the Sabbath,	37½
John Bunyan's Works, 1 vol. 8vo.	2 00
Brown's Philosophy of the human Mind, 2 vols.	3 00
Scriptural Anthology,	75
Horn's Introduction to the study of the Scriptures, 2 vols.	7 50
Rev. John Fletcher's Checks against Antimonianism, 3 vols.	3 00
Young Preacher's Manuel, 8vo.	1 50
Griesbach's Greek Testament,	1 20
Rev. Dr Geo. Burder's Village Sermons,	1 50
Sturm's Reflections for every day in the year,	1 75
Dr Lowth on Isaiah,	1 67
Locke on the Epistles of the New Testament,	2 00
Ship and Shore, by an officer of the U.S.N.	87
Sunday School Lectures,	50
A Walk about Zion, by the Rev. J. A. Clark,	75
Abbott's Teacher,	50
Bunyan's Holy War, fine,	75
do do common,	50
The Great Teacher, by Harris,	87
Dr Dick's Philosophy of Religion,	56
do do of a Future State,	56
do Christian Philosopher,	56
do Mental Illumination,	62
do Improvement of Society,	62
do Evil of Covetousness,	62
Beveridge's Private Thoughts,	60
Buck's Theological Dictionary,	80
Christian Retirement,	1 00
Dr Adam Clarke's Commentary on the Old and New Testaments, 4 vols. super royal, 8vo. bound,	13 00
do do do, calf, gilt, extra,	20 00
Williams' Bible Exercises,	25
Dr Cruden's Concordance, pocket,	50
Dr Chalmer's Works, 3 vols.	3 00
Christian Student,	75
Conversation on the Bible,	56
Drew on the Soul,	75
Delincourt on Death,	1 25
Evidences of Chistianity, by Alexander Watson, Jennings, Leslie & Paley,	87
Rev. Dr Hunter's Sacred Biography, sheep, gilt, plates,	3 00
Rev. Dr Mosheim's Church History, 4th edition,	5 00
do do do, calf, gilt, plates,	8 00
do do do, Turkey, gilt edges, extra,	9 00
Rev. Dr Sprague's Letters to a daughter,	75
do do, to Young People,	75
do do, on Revivals,	87
Rev. Dr Doddridge's Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul, 12mo. fine ed	1 00
Physical Theory of Another Life,	87
Young Infidel Reclaimed,	37
Sherwood's Scripture Prints,	75
Musical Manual,	50
Mothers' Friend,	50
Methodist Protestant Cathecism,
Family Bibles, various prices and sizes,
Paragraph Bibles, do do
Polyglot Bibles, do do
Teacher's Visit,
Pollock's Course of Time,
Young Man's Book of Christian Evidence,
do Ladies' do do do	44
Phillip's Devotional Guides, 2 vols 12mo	1 25
Poor but Happy,	31
Janney's Poems,
Adam the Gardener,	44
Praise and Blame,	37
Gospel Seeds,	44
Bible Companion,	62
Phillip's Manly Piety,	50
Harrod's Collection,	25
M P Church Discipline, late edition,	37
Life of Col Gardener,	37
Academical Reader,	50
Clarke's Advice to Preachers,	12
Williams' on the Lord's Supper,	19
Fletcher's Advice,	12
Howe's Works,	4 75
The Laurel,	50
Edson's Letters,	37
Father's Fireside,	25
Fletcher's Address,	12
Way for a Child to be Saved,	37
Bible Illustration,	56
Seneca's Morals,	50
Story of Paridise Lost,	31
Caroline E Smelt,	31
Real Dialogues,	50
Pastor's Daughter,	50
Basket of Flowers,	31
Piece Book,	25
Hints to Students,	25
Tree and its Fruits,	37
Evening Readings in History,	37
Child's Book on the Sabbath,	22
Girl's Best Ornaments,	25
Hero of Macedon,	25
Memoirs of Sullings,	25
Indian Narratives,	25
The French Soldiers,	25
Malcolm's Bible Dictionary,	40
Bishop Wilson's Analagy,	24
Pious Songs,	37
Keystone,	55
Phillip's Variety of Female Piety,	50
do Beauty of Female Holyness,	50
do Female Character,	50
do Love of the Spirits,	50
do On Redemption,	50
do Guides,	50
Burman Slave Girl,	25
Tales of Egypt,	25
Life of Mrs. Leslie,	25
Golden Clue,	25
Memoirs of John Chamberlain,	25
Julia Graham,	55
Gems,	25
History of Joseph,	31
Loom Boy,	25
Good Grandmother,	62
Life of Bishop Heber,	50
Biography of Pious Persons,
McGavin's Protestants,	4 25
Harris's Sermons,	1 15
Gallaudet's Every Day Christian,	13
Conforms of Piety,	12
Daily Piety,	13
Token of Youth,	12
Hannah Sinclair,	25
Innes Adrice,	37
My Adventures,	37
Six Months in a Convent,	50
Supplement do	50
Martineau's Devotional Exercises,	37
Hannah Moore's Private Devotion,	25
Brown's Concordance,	37
Young Ladies' Sunday,	50
European Children,	25
Chloe Spear,	25
Early Life,	25
Memoirs of S. Leece,	25
Counsel and Caution to Youth,	25

Glass Manufactory.

THE GLASS-WORKS recently carried by R. P. ROBINSON, has been taken by subscribers, and will in future be conducted them. WINDOW GLASS, double and sin all sizes, and of superior quality, will be k constantly on hand for sale on reasonable te at the works. The experience of one of the fi in the manufacture of the article, will ensure made to be of the best quality.

S. B. JOHNSON & CO
Zanesville, Oct. 31, 1839. 3w11

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on h 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of dif ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varie in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good asso ment of Bridles and Martingales: riding priving whips: between 80 and 100 carriage heavy draft Collars, which will compare and w with any others made here or elsewhere. A fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and comm fancy Harness. A lot of Bear skins just rece ed. Trunks, valises, saddle-bags, and dou covered wagon whips, varying in quality and pr to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for work, is the testimony and long experience of old customers and friends. He is still anxi to please and accommodate those who may on him, and hopes to share so much of the pul patronage as his attention to his business s merit.

Putnam, August 15, 1839. 3tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a n and improved mode of ascending and scending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. T improvement supercedes the necessity of horse stationary power, by giving to the locomotive gine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles the motive, which connects with an extra rail laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wh on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with extra railing and propels her onward. The c struction and connection of the pilot wheel extra railing is of such a character that it not o necessarily advances, but advances perfec smooth, and cannot be impeded by the cong ing of ice, the connection of the wheel and r ing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers want further information, will please address the s scriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has tained the right of the State of Maryland by p chase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who the right of Georgia, North and South Caroli on commission.

JOHN MERCER
November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL this machine can be attached to any of powers now in common use, and is calculated save a great amount of manual labor. Clov seed can be hulled at the rate of from three five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, B ley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thi bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bu els per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spe or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of teen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the F mer of the advantage of possessing such a lab saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth the time usually spent, and with one-fourth the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—inste of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bush Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and se for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplici durability, portability, and usefulness of M ill, recommend it as one of the most desira and money producing machines of modern inve tion.

Those wishing to procure this machine Geo.g a, North or South Carolina, can addr William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those the State of Maryland, can address Richard Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesvi Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of M Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking coun other sections can address the subscriber at H risville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most l eral terms will be given to mechanics who m wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill sections not yet occupied. We invite the pu lic to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER
November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHE

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be publish weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annu in advance: $2.50 at the end of three month $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, exce at the discretion of the publisher, until all rearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral cha ges, who do any thing at all for the paper, they will direct us where, a copy shall be se gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, p paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copi sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must b directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, ar post paid, except such as contain subscribe names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance befo the expiration of the subscription year, will b considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will b open to discussion on all moral questions;— will give articles on Literature, Mechani Agriculture,—an abstract of Religious and P litical intelligence, and whatever may be inte esting and instructive to families in genera A portion of its columns will be open to a vertisements and prices current,—another po tion to sustain the interests of the Methodi Protestant Church in the West. These tw latter objects will not likely occupy more tha one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand again Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11, 1840. | Number 29. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

ITEMS.

The best practical rule of morality is ver to do any thing but what you are ling all the world should know.

A good wife will never attempt to rule appear to rule her husband, and will ays greet his appearance with smiles.

ooks are instructive and agreeable com- ions, that can be entertained without emony and dismissed without offence, enever you please.

Marriage enlarges the scene of our ppiness or misery; the marriage of e is pleasant, the marriage of interest y, and a marriage where both meet ppy.

When prosperous times come to the r, they grow rich rapidly, because of ir habits, when hard times come to the , they grow poor rapidly, because of ir habits. Luxuries and ornaments uld not be considered necessaries, ex- vagance the basis of respect, not idle- s happiness.

The following is conceived to be the rtest way to murder character. Profess great friendship for the man ll how much you love him; proclaim many excellent traits he possesses; then with a solemn sanctified look, most impressive sigh, express your —yes, your fear, that all is not as it uld be."

"If I were an American," says Mr Mur- , in his work on this country, "I con- I should be proud of my country— d of its commercial enterprise—of its antic resources—of its magnificent ers, and forests, and scenery—still e proud should I be of its widely dif- d education and independence, and of mperishable memory of its heroic fa- and founder."

t. Granville of Covington, La. has n arrested and held to bail, on suspi- of having caused the death of a slave, maltreatment. The body was disin- ed, and the evidence of the bruises to the master's arrest.

pprehensions are expressed in New eans, that the ship Star, of New York, t. Mallet, has been wrecked on the ida coast. Vessels which cleared re and on the day the Star left New k, have arrived at New Orleans, and of them reports having seen a vessel wering to her description ashore.

IMPORTANT DECISION FOR THE PUBLISH- OF NEWSPAPERS.—Judge Thompson, diana, at a late sitting of the Circuit rt, at which he presided, gave the fol- ing decision: "That if a subscriber periodical failed to notify the editor iscontinue the paper at the end of the subscribed for, or pay up the ar- rages, he was bound for another year.

decision of court was recently made Ohio, in which the owner of a steam- t which ran into another and sunk it, mulcted in $23,000 damages. The er thus fined, brought a suit against pilot in the Supreme Court, and a dict of $21,000 was returned the de- dant. This settles the liability of pi- in Ohio, at any rate.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.—The Mas- usetts State Temperance Convention, , or lately in session in Boston, num- s between thirteen and fourteen hun- d members and delegates. So large dy, representing a proportional num- of constituents, would seem to indi- a strong temperance party in Massa- setts.

SECURITIES OF STEAMBOAT PASSENGERS. The Committee on Commerce, in the ted States Senate, are engaged upon revision of the law relative to steam- ts, and the whole public anxiously for the report. We hope among the visions introduced will be one making mperative upon the owners of each mboat to furnish her with safe boats ugh to save all the passengers in case such an accident as occurred to the ington.

DESTRUCTIVENESS.—Veneration is cer- ly not a leading attribute of the Amer- n people; and, we fear, that if any sen- ent be singled out as their character- c, it must be "Destructiveness." The se where Shakspeare was born is still ding, and is preserved with a reli- us veneration by his countrymen.— e proprietor has no inducement to de- y what is a source of income to him m the pilgrimage of the curious who ere the bard of Avon. France, mer- ial as she is, pays like honor to her at men, by cherishing the places which y frequented. In America, however, have little of that sort of feeling.— e house in Boston where Franklin was n, was hardly known even to Bosto- ns as the birth place of that sage; and , we notice by the Boston Traveller, that it is in progress of demolition. It was built in the year 1698, and we join with the Traveller in the hope that the proprietor will preserve the original inscription, as also the globe or ball which remained on the old building, to denote its age, and cause them to be placed conspicuously on the front and corner of the new one—as they will ever be viewed with interest by all lovers of antiquity. Perhaps, after all, the utilitarian philosopher, Franklin, would warmly approve of a change which will make the property more valuable.—Brother Jonathan.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

[The following may have found its way into print ere this, as it has, for some months, been in possession of several friends—but if so, I have not seen it.]

SACRED SONGS, NO. V.

LOVE.

13th Chapter 1st Corinthians.

TUNE—Star Spangled Banner.

O though I could speak with the wisdom of men,
Though an angel's sweet voice to my tongue gave its power;
Though mine be the gift the dark future to ken,
And all the bright secrets of knowledge my dower;
Though faith were my own,
To bid mountains of stone
Remove from their base and in ocean be thrown,
Yet, yet, without LOVE I am nothing, alas!
But a cymbal of noise and a trumpet of brass.

And though I should give all my goods to the poor,
Though the flames, in rude billows my heart strings should sever;
Though the stranger should never go sad from my door,
And the widow and fatherless bless me forever;
Yet nought can bestow,
Solid pleasures below,
Nor bliss in the skies where the faithful shall go,
But LOVE both to God and to man, and alas!
Without it I'm nought but a trumpet of brass.

LOVE suffers full long and is kind and serene,
Not envying the great, nor in poverty sorrowing;
Does not vaunt itself up, nor by flattery's sheen,
Is it puff'd with false pride, fickle greatness thus borrowing;
Unbecomingly never—
LOVE'S constant endeavor,
Is to seek others good, not its own, and forever,
To live without anger with all, and alas!
Without it I'm nought but a trumpet of brass.

LOVE does not rejoice in sin, but the truth,
And this, both of earth and of heaven, believing,
Covers every transgression in manhood and youth,
Hopes and suffers for all things—not foolishly grieving;
LOVE never shall fail,
But the prophet shall quail,
Learned tongues become useless and science grow stale;
For we know and can prophesy only in part,
But LOVE is perfection and fills up the heart.

When I was a child then I spoke as a child,
But manhood arrived and my young folly vanish'd;
For now, as through glass, I see dimly and wild,
But ere long, face to face, all obscurity banish'd;
Now I know but in part,
But then my full heart,
Shall know as 'tis known, nor at wisdom shall start,
And I, in the bright world of pleasure above,
Shall bask in full knowledge and glory and LOVE.

Now FAITH, HOPE and LOVE, still encompass my way,
But FAITH by full knowledge above shall be shaded,
And HOPE, like an anchor, still clings to that day,
When it by fruition of heaven shall be faded;
But that which shall prove,
All others above,
In earth and the bright world of glory, is LOVE;
And then, when the other bright powers shall cease,
My LOVE shall be perfect, my LOVE shall increase.

February, 1840. L. E. S.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

DEAF AND DUMB ASYLUM.

The Deaf and Dumb Asylum is situated half a mile east of Columbus, in the vicinity of the Lunatic Asylum. It is a large three story brick building, pleasantly situated and well adapted to the purpose for which it was designed. The Asylum went into operation on the 16th of October, 1829, and the whole number of pupils since its establishment, has been one hundred and seventy-one. Seventy-one remain in the institution, and one hundred have "gone forth into the community prepared, in some degree, to perform their duties and enjoy the advantages of their allotments in life. They have gone forth with minds brought out of the deep darkness of intellectual and moral midnight, and stored, at least, with the first principles of moral and religious truth, of which they were wholly ignorant, and with the added power of making new acquisitions."

Of the one hundred and seventy-one, the deafness of seventy was congenital, and of the remainder, it was occasioned by colds, fevers and various other diseases, incident to infancy and childhood. Eleven of the seventy-one pupils now in the Asylum are pay-pupils, that is, whose parents or friends pay for their tuition, and the remainder are State pupils, whose expenses are defrayed out of the State treasury.

Pupils are admitted into the Asylum for one hundred dollars for the session of ten months, commencing on the first day of October and ending on the first day of August. This sum, payable quarterly, in advance, covers all expenses except for clothing, travelling to and from Columbus, and in case of sickness, the physician's bill. It is particularly enjoined on pupils to present themselves for admission into the Asylum at, or very soon after the beginning of the session, and at no other time, except in extraordinary cases. Payment must be made at the rate of one dollar and fifty cents per week for those pupils who are permitted to remain in the Asylum during the vacation. Application for admission may be made to the Rev. JAMES HOGE, Columbus, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, or to Mr. H. N. HUBBELL, Principal of the Asylum; and every application should be accompanied by testimonials from the Associate Judges of the proper county, or other responsible persons, respecting the suitableness of the applicant to be received and educated agreeably to the design of the Legislature. All applicants must, in order to be admitted, be free from immoralities of conduct, and from contagious and offensive diseases. Five years are required to take a pupil through an entire course of study, and all pupils, and especially the State pupils, are required, or at least expected to remain in the institution long enough to complete the entire course of study, unless providentially prevented. Parents and guardians are recommended to send pupils at the age of ten or twelve years, and that previously they should be taught to write, to know their own name and the names of their parents, and brothers and sisters, and place of residence.

One-fourth of the duties collected on sales at auction in the city of Cincinnati, amounting usually to about two thousand dollars annually, have been by law appropriated to this institution. And to what more noble purpose could they be applied? To what object more philanthropic than this institution, in which "the Deaf are taught to hear with the ear of the mind, if not with the ear of the body; in which the utterly unformed and uncultivated intellect is regulated and informed and brought into action; in which those who know not, and cannot know while uneducated, their spiritual and moral nature, or the Author of their being and destinies, are made acquainted with themselves and Him. An institution in which the mute is introduced into a new world of mind and of morals, and the light and the love of that religion which is a high blessing to man on earth and prepares him for happiness above, are shed forth upon the soul, that else had not dreamed of such an unspeakable gift of God to man."

To see the State extending her nurturing care over such an institution is well calculated to strengthen our attachment to our laws, our government and our country. Would not the parent who has children that are Deaf and Dumb, feel a warmer affection for his country that made such ample provision for his unfortunate offspring as does Ohio, than for a country that made no provision whatever, for improving their condition? Unquestionably the father, the patriot, the philanthropist is inspired with a purer love for his country when it munificiently nurtures and cherishes such institutions of philanthropy. The great object of this institution, says the Governor in his last annual message, being to diffuse moral and intellectual light in the minds of an unfortunate class of our population and to fill up a place in our great system of education; it affords me a high degree of pleasure to be able to state, that at no time since its establishment has the institution been more promising for accomplishing this object, and at no period has it been more deserving that high estimation in which it has always been held by the public than at the present time.

There are at present seven Deaf and Dumb Asylums in the United States, two of which, the American Asylum at Hartford, Connecticut, and the Asylum at Danville, Kentucky, have each been endowed by Congress with a township of land. Ohio, it is believed, is the only State in the Union, which unaided by the general Government or sister States, sustains of itself an institution for the Deaf and Dumb. We are therefore, not behind in exertions to meliorate the mental and moral condition of the mute or in works of enlighted philanthrophy generally.

When the last census was taken, in 1830, there were in Ohio, four hundred and forty-six white Deaf mutes, and eight blacks, making the proportion of mutes in our State, one to every two thousand one hundred and fifty-six of our whole population. The same returns show, in the United States, six thousand one hundred and six, or one to every two thousand one hundred and six of the whole number of inhabitants. In Connecticut, which contains the largest proportion of mutes of any of the United States, there was one to every nine hundred and ninety-two; while in Missouri, which contains the smallest number, there is only one to every four thousand and fourteen.

Mr. H. N. HUBBELL is the principal instructor and has been from the time it was put in operation, and he is at present aided by five assistants, one of whom is himself a mute. Ideas and knowledge are communicated to the mute by means of signs, and it is really astonishing to see with what facility these mutes converse after they have been a few months in the Asylum by means of their pantomimic or sign-language.—But facts are abundant, going to show, that it can and is made so perfect a medium of communication, as to express all the variety and modified meaning of words and even the most abstract ideas in any and in all languages. In arriving at this result however, says Mr. HUBBELL, we do not commence with the pupil by talking about the differential and integral calculus, or speculate on Saturn's ring, or the complexion of the lunar inhabitants; but with the very beginning of all book knowledge, the alphabetic characters. We tell him that certain positions of his fingers represent certain letters, and that certain combinations of these letters in a certain order, stand for certain things. Sensible objects the most familiar are first presented, then their names, colors, parts, use and material. Then follow in illustrative examples in sentences, the most common adjectives, verbs, nouns and adverbs. Thus by enlarging the pupil's vocabulary daily, as his mind can grasp and retain the knowledge, the teacher by a most gradual and patience-requiring process, restores his fellow creature to the society of his fellow man, and redeems and brings under cultivation immense wastes of mind, and thus qualifies his pupil to discharge understandingly, all the duties of a citizen and christian.

"The greatest difficulty which the teachers of mutes encounter are the idioms and peculiarities of our language, which is such a piece of patchwork, and so made up of scraps from all the dispersions of Babel; so many idiomatic and conventional forms of expression which have been coined in the necessities of ages and have been increasing since man began to use a language, that it is barely within the range of possibility to give definite ideas of their meaning. It is impossible to catch and commit to paper, either pictorially or in written language, the thousand of attitudes of the body, the gestures of the arms and of the evanescent expressions of the countenance which are daily employed to give force and veracity to the meaning of these attitudes and signs; consequently there can be no dictionary of signs. The teacher's text-book is nature itself throughout all its wide extent, and he is obliged to lay the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms under contributions, and to hunt up from all things, and all worlds, even illustrations, and helps to assist him in the great object which he has in view, that of setting at liberty an imprisoned mind and restoring it to the rank of its fellow mind."

The branches of education taught in the Asylum are what are usually termed those of Common School education, though when these have received sufficient attention, and there is time and talent, the higher fields of literature lie open to the mute in common with their more fortunate fellow beings. Reading, composition, writing, geography, history, arithmatic and grammar, occupy most of the pupils' attention, while at the [illegible] compared with the two first, the latter are but amusements. Reading, in particular, differs essentially from what is understood by that term in other schools. It consumes at least nineteen-twentieths of the teachers' and pupils' time; and is nothing less than the learning the orthography, meaning and use of as many of the eighty thousand words which our language contains, as the pupil has thoughts to express. A competent knowledge of geography and of as much arithmatic as they have occasion for, is very easily acquired. There is not time during the short period allowed to complete a whole course of study, to thread the labyrinths of grammar, without distracting their attention too much from other studies, a knowledge of which cannot be dispensed with. Grammar, however, is taught practically from the commencement, and no more is aimed at in teaching it as a distinct branch of education than is necessary to throw a light on the analysis and construction of language; that department of instruction which requires so much of the teachers' time and talent.

From very considerable personal observation and from information, I hesitate not to declare Mr. HUBBELL to be most eminently qualified for the station of instructor of mutes, and the public voice in Ohio bids him prosecute the work with zeal and devotedness—educate the mute, cultivate his mind in all its powers, give him all the benefit of education and mental and moral cultivation, which his forlorn and outcast condition will permit; and as nearly as possible, place him on terms of equality with others more favored by providential circumstances. The education of the mute is a work of humanity worthy of the great State of which we are citizens, and a history of these institutions must carry conviction to the mind of every man of the entire practicability of instructing the Deaf and Dumb, whatever may be the difficulties with which the attempt is beset. Our future historian will find no brighter page in our history than that on which he records the commencement, object, design and success of the Asylum for the education of the DEAF and DUMB. HOWARD.

For the Western Recorder.

CHRISTIANITY—ITS INFLUENCE UPON MANKIND.

Christianity is the religion of christians. It consists in believing and obeying the doctrine taught by Christ. This doctrine may be sumed up in love to God and love to man. He who loves God with all his soul, might, mind and strength, and his neighbor as himself, may be called a christian, because, in doing this he obeys the doctrine of Christ, and gives evidence of the sincerity of his belief. All the duties of christians flow after and follow as a necessary effect from love to God and love to man. And the blessings promised by Christ are only to be found, realized and enjoyed in the performance of these duties.

The influence of the doctrine of christianity, upon man, has ever been productive of the most happy results. Perhaps there is no doctrine that has ever been taught, or believed, by man, that has a better effect in hindering evil and promoting good, than the doctrine that teaches the existence of a Divine Being, and man's accountability to Him. This doctrine lies at the foundation of the christian religion. And a conviction of its truth seems to have been originally implanted in the human mind. This might be proven, were it necessary, from the fact that it has been believed by the majority of mankind in all ages of the world. Happiness is desired by every intelligent being. But no individual can enjoy it substantially while he feels conscious of the disapprobation of the Divine Being. This every person must feel, when he reflects, who knows that he has transgressed the law of God and has not obtained pardon for that transgression. And every human being that is thus destitute of true happiness is quite disqualified to meet the various difficulties, losses and afflictions incident to this life, and altogether disqualified to discharge his duties to himself, to his fellow beings, and to his Creator, Redeemer and Preserver.

But, the christian who has obtained a full, free and complete pardon through the merits of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and the seal, or testimony, of this pardon by the Holy Spirit given unto him, can view by faith that God who spake the universe into existence, and upholds it by the right hand of His power; that God at whose rebuke the waves of the boisterous sea has to retreat; that God who speaks and listening to His voice new life the dead receive. I say the christian can view, by the light of Revelation and nature, the great, glorious and lovely Being, feeling at the same time confident that he enjoys His approbation; and if faithful, that he shall enjoy His presence, smiles and protection forever. This sense of his acceptance with God is a greater source of comfort and happiness, and better qualifies him for usefulness than any other possible attainment. There is nothing that can so well qualify a person for the various duties of this life, for the disappointments, difficulties, conflicts and perplexities common to the children of mortality as the christian's hope of immortality in heaven. There is nothing that can so effectually subdue and destroy every evil appetite, affection and passion of the vicious and corrupt heart—that can so thoroughly make a man or woman a loving and lovely being, as living in obedience to the law of love. Indeed, I think we may safely assert that a man can be only comparatively great without religion. One strong evidence that goes to prove this assertion to be true, is, the fact that all the truly great have been religious. We may take a brief survey of past ages and we will find that the most noble and distinguished characters that have ever made their appearance on this stage of action, were those that adhered closely to some of the cardinal principles of christianity. Even among those who had only the light of nature to guide them, the wisest and greatest are found to be those who believed and taught principles corresponding with the doctrines of the Bible. Plato, an illustrious philosopher of antiquity, who died at Athens 348 B.C. aged 81 years, held the doctrine of a future state. Socrates, one among the greatest of the ancient philosophers, who was born at Attica 407 B.C., and who, it is said, was put to death by the Athenians on a false charge of atheism, in the 67th year of his age, believed in the existence of a Divine Being, and taught the necessity of living innocently and virtuously, in view of a future state of rewards and punishments. Marcus Tullius Cicero, one of the greatest men of antiquity, whether we consider him as an orator, statesman or philosopher, who, it is said, was born at Arphineum, January 3, about 107 years B.C., and who was assassinated in the 64th year of his age, also taught the doctrine of a future state and the necessity of living virtuously. Cincinnatus, who was born 456 years B.C., and who was called from the plough to be Dictator of Rome, and who succeeded so admirably in restoring public tranquility, was, it is said, a sincere worshipper of the Divine Spirit.

But when we turn our minds for a moment to view some of those ancient worthies, who enjoyed the glorious privilege of Inspiration, we behold some of the most conspicuous examples of exalted human nature. Time would fail us to notice closely Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joshua, David, Elijah, Daniel, the three Hebrew children, and various other prophets, "who, through faith, subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the enemies of the aliens."

Again, among those that have been convinced of the truth of Revelation and have embraced christianity, are to be found the wisest and best men of modern times. Here again time would fail us to notice a Boyce, Locke, Bacon, Littleton, Addison, Watson, McHenry, Luther, Wesley, Clarke, and a numerous company of others, all of whom have been conspicuous for their knowledge, piety and usefulness. Indeed, it is clear, from the very nature of the christian religion, that he who regrets it can neither be wise, great nor happy.

Now, just as Christ's religion makes an individual wise, great and happy, so will it make a nation wise, great, prosperous and happy. Was the law of love to God and love to man obeyed by all the individuals that compose a nation, that nation would certainly enjoy harmony, peace and prosperity, unless molested by a foreign foe. In such a nation tyranny and oppression of every grade and color would have to cease. Well, in reference to our beloved country, the only sure way for us to proceed, if we desire the destruction of sin that stalks abroad through our land in a thousand hideous forms, is for us to cultivate, in every possible way, the principles of love to God and love to man. It is high time for the watchmen on Zion's walls to cease striving about minor points in Theology and unite in proclaiming to the world the Divine command, "Do unto all men as ye would they should do unto you." If all who bear the name of christian in these United State, would, by precept and example, impress the importance of this command on the minds of their fellow beings—in a word, if they would obey this command themselves, slavery, both ecclesiastical and political, both mental and physical, would soon have to fall to rise no more. At least such is the humble opinion of Springfield, O., Feb. 28, 1840. D. H. S.

For the Western Recorder.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Mr. Editor: You will oblige me by publishing in your periodical, the statements which follow, for the information of those friends who have kindly agreed to assist me in the distribution of my books on the "Benevolence and Rectitude of the Supreme Being;" and also for the information of others who may be disposed to favor me with their patronage.

I was in Philadelphia about six weeks, superintending the matter, and remained till the whole of it was in type. It covered 403 pages, exclusive of the Appendix, which I had to leave out, because the booksellers assured me the work could not be safely and judiciously extended much beyond the 400 pages, at the retail price of $1 25, and I wished to guard against hazard of pecuniary loss and embarrassment.

Since my return I have devoted considerable attention to the matter which was omitted in the publication; and though it is a necessary Appendix to the preceding discussion, yet I rejoice that it was not then published; because I perceive it can be improved and enlarged to great advantage; and I intend hereafter, if the Lord will, to publish it under the title of "Calvinism and Arminianism compared: with a view to remove 'Difficulties,' which stand in the way of Christian Harmony." It will probably contain 150 or 160 pages, and the price will be fixed accordingly. All this, however, refers to the future; and how distant that future may be, will depend upon circumstances. I have already contracted a large debt, on the encouragement given by those friend who engaged to assist me; and I rejoice that their character furnishes a sufficient pledge, that nothing will be wanting on their part, in using those measures whereby I may be furnished with the means of discharging this obligation.

The publisher in Philadelphia entered into a written obligation to have all the books ready for distribution by the opening of the canal navigation, 1840. I therefore expect their arrival in Pittsburgh, some time in April; and I wish to receive all necessary information, to know how they can be distributed to the best advantage. I wish to know particularly to what business house they can be directed in Zanesville, as a place of deposite, that they may be distributed to my friends in that region of country, according to the number of their several subscriptions. I hope Bro. Marshall or Bro. Davis will give me information concerning this matter; and that every friend will give due notice of whatever may facilitate the business.

In regard to the matter of this publication, the subject in itself is deep; and therefore it was the aim of the writer, to make the language as plain as possible. Still it will require thinking; and as the author has devoted great attention to the subject for five years, he hopes his judicious friends will make up their minds to devote equal attention to it for one year, before they draw a final conclusion, in regard to the correctness or incorrectness of its positions. If any friend should find difficulties, that may seem to require solving, let him suspend his judgment till he shall have seen "Calvinism and Arminianism compared," &c., the Appendix which has been just referred to; and the writer hopes he will be convinced that truth is always consistent with itself, and that its harmonious connections are really essential to the honor and glory of God, and to the best interests of mankind. A. SHINN.

Allegheny, Feb. 27, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor:—The twenty-fifth number of the Recorder contains a communication over the signature of "J. Smith," which, making a direct allusion to me, deserves some attention.

The writer is correct, when he understands the object of your paper to be the promotion of the Methodist Protestant Church in the west, but is grossly in error, if he supposes this can be done by conniving at what he calls "a moral offence." And to my mind, it seems that he passes no very desirable encomium on the editor, if he supposes him to have vested a thousand or fifteen hundred dollars to get up a partial, one-sided religious periodical to support a party at the expense of truth. I would inform him, that the generous and patriotic editor of the Recorder professedly and practically abhors the policy that will keep truth in the dark, and wink at crime in order to secure the favors of the great and receive the applause of the giddy multitude. Such encomiums as "J. Smith" would bestow, if this be a specimen, are an insult to our much esteemed friend.

I was not a little surprised to learn that "J. Smith" "has been a regular reader of your paper, has paid particular attention to its contents," and yet, has either misunderstood, or entirely overlooked the prospectus. This, if he will take the trouble to read it, will inform him that "the pages of the Western Recorder will be open to discussion on all moral questions." He may have seen this pledge however, and supposed that it was intended merely to give character to the paper by avowing a principle which it never intended to practise. If so, it may not be amiss to inform him that neither the editor nor the church is capable of such dishonesty.—But, whatever may have been his views on this subject, I infer from the authoritative manner in which he writes, that he is some venerable father distinguished for his zeal in promoting the benevolent enterprizes of the day, who, though not a member of the church whose ecclesiastical polity he so highly approves, yet feels it a duty incumbent on him to fix the rule of ministerial conduct for those who labor therein in word and doctrine. It is to be regretted however, that his fatherly admonitions are not of a character to produce obedience on the part of those for whose benefit they were given. For one, I acknowledge that I cannot swerve from duty on account of his profession of friendship for our church polity. First: Because infidels may profess the same regard for our church polity, and at the same time despise the gospel of Christ; besides, we consider the purity of the church of greater moment than the friendship of any man who opposes her sanctification from the pollutions of slavery. Secondly: however well meant, I consider his admonitions anti-scriptural. God says, "show my people their transgressions," but this kind FATHER and DICTATOR to the ministers of Christ's gospel, cautions them against the discussion of "a moral offence" in a religious periodical, and enforces his caution by two strong assertions. First: "It can do no possible good under the heavens." Secondly: "But is calculated to do injury to the paper and the church." Thus he has shown us, that if abolitionists are "men of one idea," he at least, could entertain two; whether of much value or not, is not necessary for me to decide. Should the embassadors of the Cross cringe and succumb to such dictations, it will not be long until popular taste will render it imprudent in the eyes of such men, for them to denounce sins of any description. What is the duty of ministers if it be not to denounce sins of every grade, however popular in the eyes of the wicked? And by whom ought their privilege to speak and write in behalf of the dumb victims of oppression and cruelty be called in question? Who is authorized to bring a grave charge of imprudence against them, while the voice of God is sounding in their ears, "Is not this the fast that I have chosen to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens and to let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke?"

As for the prejudice we may thus provoke against us, we have only to say, "the servant is not greater than his Lord." And while we believe that our feet are fixed upon the immutable truth of God, as upon a rock, we trust we shall neither be bribed from our integrity, nor intimidated from the performance of our duty. We are conscious to some extent of the weakness of human nature to resist the temptations of an alluring world for the truth, yet as the Redeemer resisted the temptations of the FATHER of slavery when he said "all these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me," so in Christ's strength, we hope to stand immoveable, grounded and settled in the truth, encouraged by this conviction, that truth will ultimately triumph over error and overcome the vicious system of American slavery.

But why should "J. Smith" take such exceptions to my declaration of sentiments? I believe slavery a moral evil, and he "a moral offence." The language is nearly the same. Perhaps the secret is here. I said nothing against abolition. Had I given the reader to understand that my opposition to abolition is as great as it is to slavery, all I suppose, would then have been well enough. There are many who take great pains to let the world know how much they hate slavery and abhor abolition. Let ministers act on the same principle, and I presume "J. Smith" would be highly gratified in hearing them preach against sin of every description as something very bad, and the act of breaking off from its commission a good deal worse, than gamblers, thieves, robbers and man-stealers, all, all, would be likely to become a church-going people, and contribute liberally to the support of the ministry.

But says our friend, "if he desired to make a public avowal of his principles, why did he not unite with an Abolition society," &c. Answer. I think, to say the least of it, that I have, or ought to have, as good a right to make my principles known to the church, for whose interest I have labored since her first organization as "J. Smith," who has not interested himself enough in her welfare to become a member. Again: in my opinion (and I am not alone in this) the time has fully come when every member of Church and State ought to be decided in this matter. No man does the oppressed and cause of humanity more injury than he who is anything, or every thing that suits the times. The dumbness of churches and want of candor on this subject, have already retarded the wheels of emancipation for years, and still nothing is gained by remaining mute, for the time is not far distant, when all must speak on this subject.—Slavery itself will compel them to speak and act upon it. As a church, the longer we put it off the worse it will be for us. If slavery had not controlled the highest department of the M. P. Church, we should not have desired a western free press for the discussion of its abominations. The columns of our church organ are closed against Annual Conferences on this question, not permitting their official acts to be published to the world through that medium, authorized by the church. Now, Mr. Editor, when slavery, an admitted moral offence by most thinking slaveholders themselves, controls the decisions of the highest assembly in the church, is it not high time that every friend of truth and virtue should raise his voice against the evil, and plead for God and the purity of His Zion. Should this nation and the churches continue to slumber on, closing their ears to the cries of the oppressed and downtrodden, it is to be feared that the time is not far distant, when that God who slumbers not, whose ears are open to the cries of the poor and needy, will permit the oppressed to arise like a terrible storm and sweep over this devoted land, demolishing her boasted institutions and levelling her glory with the dust.

Yours, in behalf of humanity,

JOEL DALBEY, JR.

Pittsburgh, 29th February, 1840.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

PISGAH CIRCUIT, O., FEB. 28, 1840.

Mr. Editor:—Our second quarterly meeting commenced the 15th of February, at the Bethel meeting house, and closed the evening of the 21st. We commenced worship in the day time, at about 10 and sometimes 11 o'clock; in the evening at five, and seldom closed before 11 or 12 o'clock. The Lord was powerfully with us at the commencement and throughout the continuance of the meeting: it is difficult to decide what session proved the most victorious. Sinners were made to tremble before the mighty God of Jacob—backsliders were encouraged to start afresh for the kingdom—mourners came forward at every invitation, and sometimes more wished to come than we had room to receive. The cry among them was, "What shall we do to be saved?" Fifteen or twenty professed to find the Saviour's love, and twenty-eight gave in their names, wishing to enjoy church fellowship with us,—all from the world save two, they were from the old fellowship. The most of them are good materials. May the Lord build them up in the spiritual house a holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices holy and acceptable to God.

Bro. Thompson administered the sacrament and preached on Sabbath evening, to the great benefit of the people. Bros. Marshall and Tracy, and Bro. R. Bell, exhorter, labored with us through the meeting. May the Lord bless and reward these kind and faithful laborers! Our responsibility to God increases in proportion to the rich display of his heavenly grace. May we so live that we may teach the old and young to fight with weapons that are not carnal, but mighty through God "to the pulling down of the strong holds" of Satan's kingdom, and to establish the coming kingdom of our blessed Redeemer. Yours, &c.,

C. WOODRUFF.

JACKSONSBURG, O., FEB. 17, 1840.

Dear Brother Springer:—Through the goodness of a gracious Providence, I am in good health, and am now at the mansion of our much esteemed brother Thomas, of this place, on my way to Retreat Cabin, to visit my family after an absence of some four months.

I wish to say through the Recorder, that the prospects of Washington circuit are pretty good. The brethren are generally united and in peace. Our second quarterly meeting was held at Jamestown, embracing the 1st and 2d days of this month: it was a solemn and prosperous season,—several were added to the little church of that place. We were favored with the attendance and labors of brothers Flood, Dobbins, Dalbey and Edwards of the itinerancy, together with the unstationed brethren of the circuit.

On the 8th of February, a protracted meeting commenced at Whiteoak Grove meeting house and continued four days, at which, the Lord poured out His spirit in awakening and converting power.—Some eight or more precious souls professed to have obtained the forgiveness of sins. Much good was done, blessed be God. The prospect here is promising, indeed, several were added to the church. There have been twenty-five added to the circuit since Conference, up to this time.

The unstationed brethren have undertaken to supply the several appointments with regular preaching during my absence. O may the Lord bless them and their labors, and give abundant success!

I have attended the second quarterly meeting of Twin circuit, that closed on the evening of the 25th instant. It was a gracious time. Several were added to the church. Bro. Dalbey will doubtless, report to the Recorder the result.

The 3d quarterly meeting for Washington circuit, is appointed to commence at Walnut Grove meeting house, near South Charleston, on Saturday the 2d day of May next. Ministerial brethren of the adjoining circuits are affectionately invited to attend. Respectfully, yours,

WM. W. PAUL.

From the New York Observer.

RELIGION AT WASHINGTON.

It came in the writer's way during the first extra sessions of the last Congress, to pass a few days at the seat of Government, and being anxious to learn the truth of much that he had heard, respecting the wickedness in those high places, he spent considerable time in making observations and inquiries on this subject. Just at this juncture when all eyes are directed toward the Capitol, the Christian community will read with interest any thing that promises to give them information concerning the character and conduct of those who are set in authority over us. If any statements now made should be doubted or denied, the writer can only say, that, he relates what he has seen and heard, and is anxious to be corrected if his assertions are at variance with the more intimate acquaintance of others, with the state of things at Washington.

Prayers in the House of Representatives.

I had often heard that the devotional exercises with which bussiness is opened in Congress, were regarded with total indifference by some members and treated with open contempt by others. It was therefore with no little solicitude that I watched the opening scenes in the Lower House.

Precisely at the appointed hour by the clock in the Hall, the speaker rapped with his ivory mallet on the desk before him, and the Chaplain, a respectable clergyman of the Methodist church, rose and said, "Let us pray." The Hall was at this time nearly full. Few members were absent from their seats. Instead of confining my attention, as perhaps I should, to the Chaplain's prayer, I leaned over the gallery to observe the deportment of members. And though my testimony may be in conflict with that of others, I am free to say, that I never saw an assembly manifesting more apparent devotion than the House of Representatives. With but one single exception (a man who sat in an obscure corner and continued writing) the whole body instantly assumed a devotional attitude chosen according to the forms to which the several members were accustomed and gave decent attention to the exercise. Never have I been present at a more solemn devotional season than this. To see the Representatives of a mighty nation in Congress assembled, pausing before they entered on the labors of the day, and acknowledging their need of wisdom from on high to guide them in the discharge of their responsible trusts, was a solemn and moving spectacle. I looked on for a moment, and joined most heartily in the fervent and appropriate petitions which were offered to the throne of divine grace.

So far, therefore, from the House being treated with indifference or contempt, I presume, no church in the United States, of a Sabbath day, will present a congregation of apparently more devout worshippers, than the Hall of the House of Representatives did, on the mornings that it was my happiness to worship with them.

A Sabbath in Washington.

I attended church in three different places, and in each of them found many whom I had seen and heard on the floor of Congress. Divine service is regularly attended on the Sabbath in the Representatives' Hall, which by the way is a much easier place to preach in, than to debate in. Great complaint is made of this hall as being the worst in the world, for speaker or hearer. But when only one speaks at a time, there is no difficulty in hearing him in any part of the house. And the secret is, that, the reverberation in the Hall is so perfect, the conversation and laughter, and walking and coughing, that are constantly going on in the midst of an interesting debate, are redoubled and reflected till, oftentimes, the spectator begins to think that he has wandered into Babel instead of the American Capitol. But let a man rise to speak whom the members wish to hear, or let the chaplain rise to pray, or to preach Christ crucified, and you may hear every word that falls from his lips, as easily as in the Tabernacle of St. Paul's.

Here, again, as I saw so many Senators learning wisdom, and so many rulers taught righteousness, I was delighted with the outward respect, at least, which was paid to religious institutions, by a great number of members of both houses of Congress. As I was coming out of the door of one of the churches, I said to a gentleman, a stranger to me, "Can you tell, sir, where the President attends church?" He replied, "The late President, Gen. Jackson, attended here, but Mr. Van Buren, goes all around."

Morality of the Members.

There are many of them abominably wicked—openly so. Intemperance is a leading sin at Washington. I heard some members of the House attempt to speak, when they were so much intoxicated as to be unable to stand firmly erect, or to speak coherently, or to keep or be kept in order for a moment. At such times, the spectacle was disgustingly distressing to the patriotic and pious heart.

The buffoonery of the intoxicated member was the source of unbounded and unbridled merriment to the rest, and the most quiet method of ridding the house of the nuisance was for the Speaker to suffer the unruly member to satisfy himself with talking and reel into his seat.

Profanity is a common vice. Not only is it indulged most freely in conversation, but many members incorporate the most irreverent expressions into their speeches. This language does not always find its way into the printed speeches, and may, therefore be attributed to the warmth of debate. The few days that I listened to the debates, furnished too many instances of unpardonable profanity as revolting to good taste as to sound morality. I heard one member illustrate the suffering of the country under the alleged mal-administration of government, by referring to our blessed Saviour's agony in the garden of Gethesemane. Candor requires me to say that this was the worst specimen of morality I heard at Washington.

No very excellent opinion can be formed of the good morals of the majority of the members, by those who remember the duelling scenes of the second session, and the Sabbath breaking scene that disgraced the close of the third session, of the last Congress. For the honor of God and the nation, it is hoped that such scenes will never be re-acted at the seat of Government.

WESTERN RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, ... MARCH 11, 1840.

The following article from the Charleston (S. C.) Mercury, is probably a correct account of the Blood Hound enterprize; and altho' the scheme may have originated with the authorities of Florida, yet, it is no doubt, sanctioned by the officers of the general Government. This article shows how much faith is to be put in those accounts which talk about the harmlessness of those animals. The appeal to our sympathies, by calling to view the innocent blood of women and children, &c., would produce its wonted effect, if we could divest our minds of the fact that the poor Seminoles had not some innocent blood, also.—Let the government of the United States be bargained and cheated as these ignorant savages were, and see if they would not break treaties too to defend their homes and their fire-sides. What is much to our discredit in this matter, we profess to be a civilized and christian nation, while the Seminoles are but savages. Shame on the Government for their treatment to these poor savages.

"BLOOD HOUNDS.

"Mr. Editor—I perceive there has been some excitement in Congress on the late importation of Blood Hounds, from Cuba, to operate against the Seminoles in Florida. It is not to be credited, that either the President or Secretary at War, will shrink from any responsibility they have assumed on the subject; but it is due to truth to say the experiment, whether reprehensible or not, originated with, and has been consumated thus far, by and exclusively with the funds of the people of Florida. At an early period, at the last session of the Territorial Legislature, an appropriation was made to enable the Executive to afford protection to the defenceless and constantly harrassed families of Florida, and among the measures canvassed by the members, that of attaching Dogs to each company in service, was most approved.

"An occurrence in the neighborhood of Tallahassee, in which a gentleman with his faithful dog, hunting in a hammock near his residence, jumped an Indian instead of a Buck, and killed him, and thus miraculously saved his family from the massacre premeditated for that night, was encouraging to the project of hunting with Blood Hounds. Active measures were immediately taken to carry it into effect, and he who writes this article, was one who cheerfully responded to a call from the Governor, for an advance in specie, from the Union Bank of Florida, to enable him to send an Agent for the purpose to Cuba. Col. Fitzpatrick, formerly of this State, was the Commissioner, and his report on his return to Council, evinces the promptness with which he discharged the delicate trust. If Mr. Wise, or any other gentleman at Washington, require investigation into the matter, let them meet the Representatives of the Territorial Legislature in their own halls, where they may listen to, if not deaf, heartrending tales of reproach on those, who have manifested, at a distance, so much sickening sympathy for the blood thirsty and cruel savages of the South. There has been an unaccountable romance and chivalry cast abroad on this contest in Florida, which we at home, not knowing the hour or the night, when our wives may be scalped and our children tortured, are unabled to comprehend. The savage from the shade of a bush, or under the concealment of darkness, levelling his unerring rifle, against defenceless and unsuspecting innocence; and effecting his escape before the light of day can enable the white man to pursue or overtake him, may be an adventurous hero in the imagination of those who slumber in security, and awake to please, but with us he is an assassin beyond the pale of law, or the sympathies of humanity, and should be pursued, whether by the parent whose family have been murdered; or by the more sure sented dog, who can follow on his blood stained track, and more certainly secure the criminal. The refugee Seminole, the lawless vagabond wanderer from the Creek confederation, who has sought the wilds and fastnesses of Florida for the spoils he may gather and the blood he may suck, can scarcely even merit the Blood Hound as competitor. The noble dog who in the chase, sounds the alarm, and in the contest, proffers fearless battle, and let him whose tomahawk is reeking with the blood of innocence, use it if he dare or can, on the faithful domestic of man, who would die, ere he turns on his master and benefactor. Can any one say as much for the Indian, for Occola, who shot his Agent with the Rifle, he had but the week before in peace and friendship presented him.

But to return to the narrative. The Blood Hounds, some 5 or 6 in number have been distributed to each company in the Territorial service, and a portion of them turned over to the regular army.—They are now in training for a grand hunt and if they but fall upon the track of a Seminole which has been dyed with the blood of mother or of child, the anthen of thanksgiving should be sung to the ennobled Towser who takes retribution for the cowardly and inhuman deed.—Five years of agonizing sufferings and apprehensions on the part of the citizens of Florida, is a reproach on those who have not earlier used all the means "which God and nature gave" of terminating this assassin warfare. A FLORIDIAN."

THE BLOOD HOUNDS AND THE MEALY MOUTHS.—It is with regret and mortification that we have read the old womanish injunction of the Secretary of War, that such Blood Hounds as may be borrowed from the Florida authorities for the United States service, shall be muzzled. We trust that the authorities of Florida will lend very few, if any, to be thus neutralized, but on the contrary, use unmuzzled all they have. We cannot understand this tenderness for the Seminole murderers. Gen. Scott was probably instructed to do as little harm to them as possible! The injunction of the Secretary gives countenance to the mawkish orators in Congress, whose gingerbread speeches were delivered to make political capital out of the sympathies of such northern boarding school misses and clergymen, as went on pilgrimage to kiss the blood stained hand of the murderous negro CINQUEZ.

The next move of northern humanity will be to insist that our troops for fear of hurting the sweet savages, shall fight with blank cartridges. It is time for southern men to take the defence of themselves and their families into their own hands, since it is evident that the dominant tenderness of our northern brethren is for any people south of the Potomac, except the white men. They have no feeling of brotherhood for any but the Indian and Negro.—Charleston (S. C.) Mercury.

It is a mark of genuine humanity, to sympathize with the weak and oppressed.

The following compliment to Mr. CORWIN, one of the present candidates for Governor of Ohio, and who is now a member of Congress, is from an eastern paper, and is said to be a just tribute to his talent:

"Mr. CORWIN, permit me to say, is the ablest, best, most eloquent and successful speaker in the American Congress; his manner and his matter, are purely original; they hold no alliance or affinity with the eloquence of Webster or Clay; and Mr. Corwin, of course, in his career, as a statesman, or as an aspirant for parliamentary fame, does not come in collision with either of these eminent men. He is remarkably well read in the light and polite literature of the age; is an elegant scholar, without being pedantic: a happy and a good natured strain of irony and satire plays through all his parliamentary efforts; and he probably more resembles Sheridan than any man since the palmy and brighter days of that, at one time, pride and boast of the British House of Commons. Mr. Corwin makes up the largest portion of his speech with attic salt and refined humor; but when he suffers himself to soar in the higher regions of pathos, he is pathetic beyond conception; and nothing can excel the majesty and beauty of his bursts of passion, or the severity of his chaste and withering invective.

"He made his first appearance in Congress about ten years ago, but never spoke till the year 1834, to my knowledge; since that period, he has spoken on four occasions, and though he, on each occasion spoke impromptu, he won by his efforts a reputation that might well be envied—a fame that will probably be far more stable than that which falls to the lot of most American statesmen. He is excessively modest, and notwithstanding he has been many years in Congress, he realizes very great embarrassment on first taking the floor; and it is only by aid of the most pressing persuasion, that his friends can get him to speak at all."

AGRICULTURAL.

HORTICULTURAL.—Strawberry beds, made in August and September, should be kept clear of weeds, and hoed if the ground becomes hard; cut away all runners if the vines attempt to make any. Old beds should be kept free from grass and weeds, and all superfluous runners cut off. Plants in pots, for forcing, should be placed in a frame.

Raspberries, Currants, &c. may be removed the latter part of this month with safety.

Peach stones, plum stones, and other fruit tree seeds, should be sown this month or early next.

Fruit trees, of all kinds, may be safely removed this month, and when there is much planting to do, it will be better to begin now than to wait until spring.—Hort. Mag. Oct., 1839.

From the Farmers' Register.

OATS NOT AN EXHAUSTING CROP.—Oats (all agree) are to be prefered to rye, being a spring crop, and on that account less liable to be destroyed by the chinch bug. But fears are entertained by many persons that oats exhaust land more than any small grain. Now, sir, this is a mere prejudice, for no one can assign a good reason for the opinion. Taking a different view of the matter, and wishing to test its correctness by an experiment, I eight years ago determined to put a piece of land in oats every year during my life, or the land's. I sowed this devoted (as some of my neighbors thought) piece of land six years in succession in oats, and the seventh year (1838,) thinking it a little too foul for oats, put it in corn. This year it was in wheat. I shall put it next year to its former occupation, and continue the crop of oats on it to the end of the chapter. If any injury has been done to this field, by the six years successive crops of oats, I have been unable to discover it, but on the contrary think the improvement evident. I should mention that the land was grazed during the interval of rest, which was very improper, and that it was never fallowed but in the spring. Hereafter it shall not be grazed, and the fallow will be in the fall. Under this latter treatment I expect great improvement. My friend, T. T. G., tried the same experiment for four years, and the result satisfied him that the vulgar opinion was incorrect. But if oats did exhaust equally with wheat, (which I utterly deny,) for on the plantation, the quantity of manure would be very much increased, and at the end of five or six years larger crops of wheat would be made by applying it to the crop; for as to the notion that wheat straw is necessary to good compost, it is all humbug. I had as soon litter my farm pen from a pine thicket as from a straw stack. The corn made on the field in 1838, under the disadvantages of bug and season, was as good as the field usually brought before it was put in oats. As the signs of the times indicate that at a period not very remote eastern Virginia will find it necessary to raise her own meat, I hope to use this experiment to the increase of my stock for market.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN P. BOLLING.

Amelia, Oct. 14th, 1839.

AMELIA, OCT. 15, 1839.

I observed this experiment of Mr. Bolling's with some interest, having thought oats more injurious to land than any other in corn and wheat, and its present appearance has convinced me that I was mistaken. There is no doubt that a field not grazed, and fallowed in September might be put in oats for any number of years, with slow but continued improvement. WM. PURYEAR.

A BOTTOMLESS MEADOW.—As the line of the Glasgow and Ayrshire railway crosses from Ayrshire in Renfrewshire there is a meadow about three miles long belonging to Mr. W. Patrick, through which it has to pass and there it has to be embanked four or five feet high. The contractors lately entered upon it and commenced the embankment, but were not a little surprised to find that their labors, like those of Tantalus, threatened to be of an endless nature; as having embanked 30 yards, they found that about 19 had sunk or subsided below the level of the line. They next day repeated their work, re-forming the embankment to the ordinary level; but strange to say the undersoil again gave way, and although they have since continued day and night to heap earth upon the spot the greedy bowels of the meadow receive it as it is applied, and the workmen are not without reason, despairing of finding a solid foundation. This most singular phenomena attracted a large party of engineers to the spot on Saturday week who could account for it in no other way than that the meadow is floating on water; which supposition seems the more feasible, that the ground rises on each side of the sinking portion, and splits in to deep cracks or bogs. The people of the district have flocked in hundreds to take ocular demonstration of the fact.—Scotch paper.

THE AMISTAD—SLAVE TRADE.—The following communication was addressed to W. P. Paton, in answer to a memorial relative to the Amistad:

"FOREIGN OFFICE, }
LONDON, DEC. 23, 1839. }

"Sir: With reference to the memorial of the Glasgow Emancipation Society, dated the 25th of October last, on behalf of the negroes who took possession of the Amistad, and were subsequently carried to New London, in the United States of America, I am directed by Viscount Palmerston to state to you, for the information of the above mentioned society, that his Lordship has directed her Majesty's minister at Washington to interpose his good offices in their behalf, in order that they may be restored to liberty; and his Lordship has further instructed her Majesty's charge d'affaires at Madrid to call upon the Spanish government to issue immediately strict orders to the authorities at Cuba, that if the request of the Spanish minister at Washington is complied with the negroes in question may be put in possession of their liberties.

"Her Majesty's charge d'affaires at Madrid has likewise been instructed to urge the Spanish government to cause the laws against the slave trade to be enforced against Messrs. Ruiz and Montez, and against all other Spanish subjects concerned in the transaction in qustion.

"I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant, W. FOX STANGEWAYS.

William P. Paton, Esq., &c., Glasgow."

THE NORTH EASTERN BOUNDARY—WAR LIKE DEMONSTRATIONS.—The St. John (New Brunswick) Courier of the 15th ult. furnishes the information that her Majesty's ship Vestal has arrived at Halifax and that other vessels of war are soon expected for the purpose of bringing troops and also to furnish munitions of war to the Provinces, in case it should be deemed advisable.

The same paper also states that the 23d Fusiliers, now in garrison at Halifax instead of proceeding to the East Indies as was the intention, is the first regiment for active service in the province of New Brunswick, and has received orders to be ready to move at the shortest notice. The Courier adds:

"We are further informed by good auty, that the erection of barracks at dstock, in this province, for the acmodation of a large military force, been determined upon, and the work commence immediately.

These precautions, we presume, are in accordance with the views exsed in the communition of the British ster at Washington to the American tary of State, under date of Janua6th, which will be found in a prececolumn. The continued persistance overnor Fairfield in acts of aggresson the disputed territory, contrary isting arrangement, (while the Britauthorities, as will appear from Mr. 's letter, have scrupulously adhered em both in letter and spirit,) and the ated threats of his detirmination to possession of the territory, could not to arose our authorities to a sense of duty, and have no doubt caused the ent warlike demonstrations. We erely trust, however, that the United es Government will perceive the difties into which the refractory Governf Maine is about to plunge the two na-, and at once interpose to prevent awful calamity of either a border or neral war."

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

DNESDAY, ... MARCH 11, 1840.

NOTICE.

protracted meeting will be held at the ngfield meeting house in the vicinity of this , commencing on Friday evening, March 13. isterial, together with as many Lay brethren an, of the adjoining circuits and of Zanesville ion, are affectionately invited to attend.

ISRAEL THRAP, Sup't.

CKNELL, with his usual amount of interestmatter, comes to us this week in a new s, being printed on new type.

We give the article from the Lady's Book, on 4th page of to-day's paper, which we promised time since. We hope the reader will think ell of Fred's opinions as we do.

BOLITION CONVENTION.—A National Antiery Convention is to convene at Albany, York, on the first of April, to consider the rect of making a third nomination for the sidency.

t will be recollected that when Post Masters to frank letters, that they must put their es on the back, otherwise when they reach office we are charged, notwithstanding they write "free" on the letters.

here have been, we believe, the past winter, e extensive revivals of religion, throughout the churches in the United States, than there e been for many years past. Probably, a wise benevolent Providence is over ruling our poral afflictions to produce this result.

BALTIMORE WEEKLY COMMERCIAL JOURNAL LYFORD'S PRICE CURRENT," is now the ding of Mr. Lyford's paper of Baltimore.— is is, perhaps, one of the most thorough comcial journals in the country. Every western der ought to have it. We hope he will see way clear to go on with it.

The Post Master General has decided that ost Master may enclose the subscription of a rd person, and FRANK the letter, if it be writt by himself. If he see the letter and knows elates to nothing else, is the same thing. As the present post office law is such an unteous taxation upon literature and the press' have requested our friends to avail themselves this privilege, on our behalf, and a number of m have done so. And we thank both them d those Post Masters who have had the kindss to lend us their aid.

The Rev. R. J. BRECKINRIDGE, Pastor of the cond Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, has ently been prosecuted by a Catholic, named Maguire, for an alleged libel on himself, pubhed in the Baltimore Literary and Religious agazine, for November, 1839, in regard to the nfinement in the cells of the Alms House, of aged German Catholic, who desired to become hristian." The Grand Jury for the City of ltimore have found a bill against Mr. B. In letter to his congregation, dated the 19th ult., resigns his pastoral care over them, until the atter be settled by process of law. Meantime occupies his pulpit in lecturing on the sinfulss and dangerous tendency of Popery. His ongregation has given an unanimous expression their undiminished confidence in him, and ve invited him to return forthwith to his minterial labors.

In these days of political depravity, when the aders of all the parties seem to lie as by instinct, is somewhat refreshing to the moral mind to eet with such an exhibition of honesty and andor as the following extract from the pen of a iend of the present administration evinces. Ir Ritchie, of the Richmond Enquirer, speaking f Gen. WM. H. HARRISON, whose elevation to e presidency he opposes, says:

"However decidedly we may differ with him opinion, we certainly do not think him an nemy to be despised. We make no question bout his patriotism and public spirit. Say that e is as honest as any man, and we shall be the st to detract from his merits as a patriot. We hall be the last too to dispute his military fame r to pluck a laurel from the veteran's head."

A person capable of such magnanimity of pirit as is here displayed by Mr. Richie, is the an we want to esteem, be him Jew or Gentile.

The following is the reply of the Superintendent of the Ohio Lunatic Asylum, Mr. W. M. Awl, to our request, that he would afford us an ssay on the best mode of treating the insane. We regret that Mr. A. does not feel free to give is views on this subject, for however short his experience, we believe he could treat it so as to be of interest to the public.

OHIO LUNATIC ASYLUM,
Columbus, March 2, 1840.

Rev. C. Springer, Dear Sir: I have received the copy of your paper containing some kind remarks in relation to this Institution, for which I feel grateful, and most respectfully tender you my thanks. But, however desirable and proper that the public should possess information in relation to the management of the insane, I must, for the present, beg leave respectfully to decline your kind and polite request. The subject is of vast importance, and my own views, as yet, new and too much scattered to be laid before the public. When time and a more extended experience shall have matured my judgment in these respects, I may perhaps, feel willing to do something for the public benefit.

Very respectfully yours,
WILLIAM M. AWL.

WESLYAN OBSERVER.—In a late paper, we suggested that the "Weslyan Observer," recently commenced at Lowell, Mass., probably carried its views of emancipation farther than "Zion's Watchman." In this supposition we appear to have been tolerably correct, as we infer from the following remarks in that paper, appended to our note which it republished:

"We are not aware of any difference in objects between the Watchman and the Observer. At any rate, we go for human rights in the BROADEST ACCEPTATION OF THE TERM, as we understand it."

That looks something like consistancy. And that is the paper we would recommend our friends to support.

ZION'S WATCHMAN.—Since we proved from the Watchman's own admissions, that the founders of the Methodist Episcopal Church were guilty of forgery, this paper got into a pet and discontinued its exchange.

We have never felt any other than a disposition to live on terms of friendship with the Watchman. There is one consideration, in particular, which should unite our interest and sympathies; we have both to conflict with the powerful organization of Methodist Episcopal influence. But the repeated and uncalled for attacks, directly and indirectly, of that paper upon the Methodist Protestant Church, has satisfied us that we have had very little of its sympathies. And its course has satisfied us, that however solicitous and sincere it may desire civil emancipation, it cares very little about ecclesiastical emancipation. Whether on the whole it is entitled to the confidence of honest and consistent men, we think doubtful.

The Watchman, before the establishment of the Recorder, by its misrepresentations, was doing the Methodist Protestant Church considerable injury in this quarter, as there was no medium of self-defence; and what we have said, was, principally, to ward off the shafts it had hurled at us. If by so doing, we have offended it, be it so. But it does seem to us rather a small business, for an editor, especially a philanthropist, to get into a pet about these little matters. Such conduct is satisfactory evidence to us, that there is something "rotten in Denmark."

ZANESVILLE, MARCH 11.—Wheat is still 50 cts, but will probably soon go down to 44; flour $3.

PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 3.—FLOUR.—There has been a further decline in the price of flour, which has brought buyers for foreign export into the market. Sales on Monday at $5 18¾ a 5 12½, and one parcel at 5 08 per bbl. Since then, the price has been steady at 5 12½ on the Delaware, and 5 00 on Broad Street, and the sales for shipment during the week have exceeded 21,000 barrels of flour—being the greatest amount ever sold in one week in this market. Sales for export to-day at 5 00 a 5 12½. The demand for home use has been moderate at 5 25 to 5 00 per bbl.

Provisions.—A sale of Jersey Mess Pork at $16 50 per bbl; some new Beef has sold at 15 a 15 25 for Mess, and 13 25 a 13 50 for prime. Bacon—sales of old at 6 cents per lb. for Hams, and 9 dollars per bbl for shoulders. Lard—sales of new at 9 a 10 cents.—Bicknell.

NEW YORK, MARCH 3.—Flour—Ohio via Canal, $6 25 a 6 37½, Troy, 6 25 a 6 50, Western Canal, 6 37½ a 6 30, Philadelphia, 6 37½, Georgetown, 6 25.—Luminary.

BALTIMORE, FEB. 29.—Flour—There were strong indications of a further decline in the price of Flour at the time of making up our last report as we then intimated; since which the article has been gradually dropping, 6¼ to 12½ cts a day, until Thursday, when a sale 1000 bbls. of Howard street was made at $5 10 per bbl. Yesterday, further sales to the extent of about 1500 bbls of good common brands, were made from stores at $5, cash, which is the price we quote to-day; and 4,87½ per brl. as the car and wagon price. We hear of no operations in City Mills; holders are not inclined to offer where there are no buyers. The receipts this week are very heavy, as will be perceived by our inspections, which amount to nearly 25,000 bbls of all descriptions of Wheat Flour; a greater number than has been inspected in this market within any one week for many years, and probably the number was never before so large. A small parcel of Susquehanna has also been brought to market, but no transaction has yet taken place that we have heard.

PROVISIONS.—There has been a little more activity in this market the past week than usual of late. Sales of about 25,000 lbs. Baltimore cured assorted Bacon have been made at 9¼ cts. cash; prime Western is held at the same rates. Sales of 100 bbls. new Mess Pork at $20, also cash; this article, however, is scarce, and at present inquired after. We note sales of 150 bbls new Beef, consisting of Prime, No. 1, and Mess, at 11,50, 13, and 14,50, per bbl., in the order as presented, for cash. Sales have also been made of 6 a 700 kegs new Lard, No. 1, at 8 3-8 a 9 cts. cash and time, which exhibits a material decline. Sales also of No. 3 Butter in kegs, at 10a10½ cts.; and 18 bbls. Roll ditto at 12 cts. per lb.—Lyford

PITTSBURGH, FEBRUARY 28.—Although stocks of western and southern produce are large, and prices very low, yet for want of money, the sales continue small and limited to immediate wants.

Sugar—Choice, sales per hhd 6 a 6½, and 7 per barrel.

Molasses—New Orleans, 31¼ to 33 by the quantity, and half barrels 35 to 39 cts.

Cotton—Sales at from 8 to 11 cts. per lb.

Flour is very plenty and dull, and sales small. At the rivers and from wagons at 2 76 a 2 87½, and from stores 3 00 a 3 25 per bbl. Bag flour was offered in the street at 1 25 per cwt. & dull.

Lead—Sales of Pig 5 cts. per lb.

Blooms—Small sales, 55 to 60 dollars per ton.

Pig Iron— do 25 to 28 do do

Corn—Sales at the river at 31¼ to 33½ per bushel.

Oats— do do at 18 do

Potatoes—Good red have been sold at our rivers and in our streets at 10 to 12½ cts. per bushel.

Hay—Sales at $10 a ton, and dull.

Iron and Nails—Flat Bar Iron, common sizes, per lb 5 a 5½; ditto, smaller sizes, 5¼ a 7¾; Lock Iron, 6½; Round and Square Iron, 5 a 8; Hoop Iron, 5¾ a 9; Sheet Iron, 7¾ a 9; Boiler Iron, 7¾ a 7½; Stove Plates, 8; Nail Rods, 7; Deck and Spike Rods, 6½; Plough Slabs, 6; do. Wings, 6½; 10, 12, 16 and 20d Nails, 5¾; 8 and 9d, 6; 6 to 7d, 6½; 3, 3½ and 4 inch Spikes, 6½; 5, 5½, and 6 inch Spikes, 7.—Harris.

CINCINNATI, FEBRUARY 28.—The same activity of business, noted by me last week, still prevails. This is, however, more applicable to Produce than to any general stir in other branches.—Very large shipments of Flour, Whiskey and Pork have taken place during the week, and still continues.

Flour sold to-day at 3 40; Mess Pork $13; Bulk Meat—Hog round 5 cts dull; Lard in demand, from 7 to 8 cts. according to quality.—Money matters this week have been much tighter than the week previous—but we hope it will pass off again.

There is nothing of very particular importance going on, except that the protracted meetings are still held by the Methodists and Baptists, and many additions to the churches are made.

The river is in fine boating order, and rising rapidly. Boats for all points are in readiness to carry freight and passengers.—Correspondent of the Middletown Mail.

It will be seen by the above quotations from eastern papers that flour has gone down considerably at the east.

General Taylor, it is said, has taken the blood hounds into the United States service. The Indians continue their predatory attacks on trains and out-posts; but the army are actively pushing the work of scouring the hammocks, and have succeeded in driving the enemy, for the first time, from the "Old Town Hammock" on the Sawanne, which contains 90,000 acres of good land.

AN IMPOSTOR!—The public are warned against a man by the name of John Robbins, who calls himself a Methodist preacher! He has been twice in the state prison—but having professed religion, he was received into the M. E. Church and licensed as a local preacher, which office he filled for several years. About two years ago, he removed to this city, (being formerly of N. H.) went into the Match business, obtained large sums of money and goods under false pretences, and finally ran away, leaving a wife and children behind, in destitute circumstances. He has lately been in Cleveland, Ohio, and has imposed himself upon our friends there, as a regular Methodist preacher, and as a single man!

O. SCOTT.

Lowell, Mass. Jan. 27, 1840.

THE BRITISH QUEEN.—The editors of the N. Y. Commercial, have been favored with the following extract of a letter from London:

"The Queen came to anchor at the Nore in the river on the 24th instant, which you will notice in the 'Times.'—She had a most tremendous passage, and the pitch of the ship carried away the cabins projecting over the deck forward of the paddle-wheels, and partly those aft of the wheels, clearly showing that no cabins ever ought to be placed off the deck. To repair the damages and make such alternations as experience point out in her general accommodation, we have determined to sacrifice one voyage and to despatch her on the 1st of March. No injury whatever to her hull or machinery.

"The President sailed for Liverpool on Sunday, and if all be well we hope to have her sail from that port for New York 1st of June.

WHALERS.

Ship Elbe, at sea, Oct. 23, 1839.

It must be some time since you could have heard from us, as we have not seen a whale ship for seven months. The last ship Mary Ann, of Fairhaven, out six months, with 250 barrels sperm.—This day spoke a brig bound in, on the coast, and we improve the opportunity by writing a few lines. We have now on board 19,000 bbls. whale and 500 bbls. sperm oil, and 19,000 lbs. bone, the largest I think ever landed in our country. The vessel is now bound off shore there to fill 300 bbls. of casks with sp. oil, then to some port on the coast of Chili on her way home. The ship is now in good order, tight and strong. We are in lat. 1, 55, south long. 81, 20, W.—all well on board. Please report us in New Bedford. In haste,

C. C. WATERMAN.

P. S. Expect us in June or July.

FROM HARRISBURGH.—A bill requiring all the banks of Pennsylvania to resume specie payments immediately, has passed our State Senate and is now in the House. An abstract of this extraoadinary measure will be found in another part of our paper. Its passage by the Senate has produced a deep sensation in this community. Enacted into a law it cannot but prove generally injurious. In the House another bank bill is still under consideration.

On Tuesday last a section was adopted by a vote of 44 to 31, which makes stock holders liable in proportion to the amount of stock held by each. What next?—Pennsylvania is in a sad condition at this time.—Bicknell.

The Journal of Commerce demonstrates that New York is not quite a city of bankrupts, and has obtained a statement from one of the principal New York houses, from which it appears that the amount falling due to that house during the five months from October to February, inclusive, was $331,750; the amount paid in full at maturity, was $294,227; the amount paid in part was $4,908; and the amount paid since is $12,440. Most of the balance will also be paid. If this is a fair specimen of the fortune of all our houses in collecting, it is indeed not much like ruin.—Bicknell.

GREAT FRESHET.—A slip from the office of the Northampton Courier states that on Monday morning, the breaking up of the ice in the Connecticut carried away about five hundred feet of the great bridge between that town and Hadley. In a few minutes more, the Sunderland bridge came drifting down the river, and carried away all that was left of the Northampton bridge, except a part on the Northampton side. It was feared that not a bridge would be left across the river, below Northampton.

The bill authorizing the issue of Treasury notes has passed both branches of our Legislature. It is said the Governor will not sign the bill, nor will he veto it. Unless he interposes his veto, it becomes a law in ten days, without his signature.—Indianian.

The Savannah Georgian states that on the night of the 7th February, a detachment of volunteers, encamped near Black Creek, Florida, were suddenly attacked by Indians and two of their number killed. The savages rushed in and seized their rifles, and the volunteers, thus unarmed, ran away.

The St. Augustine Herald of the 14th states that two more Indian murders have been committed in the vicinity of that city, on two mail drivers.

The Methodist Church in Martinsburg, Va. has been destroyed by an incendiary.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the New York Herald.

EIGHT DAYS LATER FROM FRANCE.

Highly Important from China—Another Battle in Africa.

The Duchess d'Orleans arrived off the Hook last night with dates from Havre to January 9th, and Paris to the 8th.

The Duchess d'Orleans encountered from the 14th January to the 5th of February a succession of severe westerly gales.

On the margin of Galignani's Messenger it was written that the mail had just been received with letters from Calcutta up to the 12th November. We have not yet full particulars. We hear only that Macao had been taken possession of by the Chinese, and that all the European residents had been obliged to embark.

News had just been received at Paris that another bloody battle had been fought in Africa, in which the troops of the Emir were routed in every direction.

The Duke de Nemours was said to be dying.

The Paris papers of January 7th contain the address of the Chamber of Deputies in reply to the King's speech, of which it was a mere echo; that of the Peers to the same purport, was given the previous day. The Ministerial party were in the ascendant.

ENGLAND.

The Queen's Marriage.—The Naval and Military Gazette says:—"It is, we are informed, now definitely arraged that her Majesty's marriage will take place on the 16th of February."

Newport Chartists.—Sir Frederick Pollock, Mr. Fitzroy Kelly, and Mr. Thomas have been engaged for the defence of the prisoners. The fees of Sir Frederick and Mr. Kelly will not be far short of £1000. They have 300 guineas each as a special retainer; 4s. 6d. per mile to Monmoth and back; heavy fee with brief; 25 guineas to each of their clerks, and all their expenses paid.

RUSSIA.

Odessa, Dec. 5th.—Military preparations in the south of Russia are actively continued. Fourteen bottalions, comprising together 10,000 men, had been embarked at Sebastipoli and Kertch for Anapa, to reinforce the army of the Black Sea, commanded by General Grabbe.

GREAT BRITAIN AND CHINA.—It may be John Bull's intention to have a bout at fisty-cuffs with the Celestial Longtails, after all. The following intelligencer, received this morning in a letter from London, certainly looks something like it.—The letter is dated December 26.

The Pantaloon brig of war, which sailed from Plymouth about three weeks since, relieved a sloop, which proceeded forthwith to the South American station, it is supposed to order some of the vessels on that station to join the East Iadia squadron.

The Nimrod, sixteen, is fitting at Plymouth for the East Indies, and expected to sail in three weeks.

The Rienheim, seventy-four, refitting at Portsmouth, joins the East India squadron as quickly as possible, and carries out out four of the large guns for throwing hollow shells, for the Admiral's ship Welesly, seventy-four

The Blonde, forty-six, and Pique, thirty-six are also going from Portsmouth to the same destination.

Also, the Thalia, forty-six, and Wanderer, sixteen, fitting at Sheerness, and the Cyclops steam frigate fitting in the the East India dock.

COUNTERFEITS ON OHIO BANKS.

COMMERCIAL BANK OF CINCINNATI.—10's, letter A, payable to John W Wales, dated, May 4, 1837, signed J S Armstrong, President, W S Hatch, Cashier, and engraved by Underwood, Bald & Spencer. The signatures are tolerably well executed; the counterfeits may be easily detected by noticing the plate, the bank having issued none of this description: in the centre of the note, at the top, is a vignette of William the Fourth, and on the right and left are female figures, the former seated, holding a sheaf of wheat, and the latter standing, with a cap of Liberty in her right hand. The one before us bears date May 2, 1837, and has the name of W S Haich, as Cashier; since October, 1833, no ten dollar bills have been issued, subscribed by Mr Haich, who is not now Cashier.

COMMERCIAL BANK OF LAKE ERIE.—2's of various dates—some dated January 24, 1834, payable to H Seymour,—engraving course.

5's stereotype plate, letter M, of various dates and payable to various persons. T P Handy, Cashier, L Case, President. Remarkably well executed, and calculated to deceive the most experienced judges. The signatures are apparently of one hand writing, and rather stiff—first being marked out by small dots in the engraving: paper bad. Observe that the letter i in the word Directors has no dot over it.

5's the name of the Bank is finely engraved over the whole face of the five dollar notes, and the Counterfeit can only be detected, by observing that in the fifth line, the letter a in the word "Commercial" is omitted. It is between the words "Lake Erie" on the right end of the note, and "Company of the"

10's spurious—vignette—Genius of Liberty reclining on the arms of Ohio. Leonard Case, President, T P Handy, Cashier.

BANK OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.—20's altered from 1's; the figure 20 in a large die is impressed in 7 places, and very clumsily done. This bank has never issued any 20 dollar bills.

BANK OF GRANVILLE.—3's no letter: Various dates. Vignette, a Steam Boat and Rail-Road Cars. On the right hand margin, an Indian figure in a standing posture, with bow unstrung.

BANK OF XENIA.—5's altered from 1s. Particulars unknown.

BANK OF ZANESVILLE.—5's badly executed, the paper very thin, and the female figure and sheaf of wheat, in the centre of the note very defective. The signature of the Cashier lacks the periods at the abbreviation of Charles, and at the initial C. The note we have seen has the letter A, payable to L H Dugan, and dated the 8th of February, 1833.

BELMONT BANK, ST. CLAIRSVILLE.—1's old plate, altered to 5's and also to 10's. Vignette of the genuine one, a laborer splitting a log.

5's letter B, pay J Weir of various dates, some May 1, 1827, and others April 7, 1828.—They are exceedingly well executed but can be detected by observing that the letter A in dollars is not crossed.

5's letter B, pay J Armstrong, dated September 10, 1829; the A in dollars is crossed with a pen.

10's altered from 1's, pay J Joy, letter B, dated September 9, 1829.

10's altered from 1's, letter A pay to B Osborn, June 6, 1818.

10's altered from 1's—letter A.

LANCASTER OHIO BANK.—1's very badly executed.

2's letter A, pay to A Gill, dated June 30th, 1828. Others dated January 3, 1828.

5's, signed M Garathy, Cashier; J Creed, President, letter A, payable to W J Reese; dated June 30, 1828. The engraving is remarkably well executed, but the paper is heavier and of a yellowish color, and the general impression lighter than the genuine notes. They are also about a quarter of an inch longer and a little wider. Others of the same date as above, payable to S Gill. All genuine notes which are made payable to S Gill, are numbered from 800 to 900; the counterfeits are between 600 and 700; those payable to W J Reese are numbered correctly.

URBANA BANKING COMPANY.—2's letter A, payable W Ward, June 3d, 1838, W Rianham, Cashier, John H James, President; vignette, a female figure, with one arm reclining on an eagle: light appearance.

3's letter A, dated June 3, 1838.

10's old plate, dated August 3, 1823.

BANK OF MARIETTA.—1's altered to 10's, and also to 20's, of Murray, Draper, Fairman & Co's plate, letter and date unknown; the Bank has no notes out of this plate of a larger denomination than 5's.

3's, letter A, payable to E Jones, dated August 10, 1838, signed Arius Nye, Cashier, John Mills, President. The small ovals on the left hand margin appear to be drawn with a pen.

3's letter A, dated July 21, 1836—they can be detected by observing that the counterfeit bills are ¼ of an inch shorter, and about ¼ of an inch narrower than the genuine bills

5's (Harrison's plate) letter unknown, pay to H Nye, April 3, 1813.

FARMERS' BANK, AT CANTON.—2's letter I, payable to A Lird, dated November 8, 1837, vignette a Steam Boat, and read simply "The Farmers Bank," instead of "The Farmers Bank of Canton;" on the genuine 2's there is no steam boat.

5's spurious—have for a vignette, a view of Wagon and Horses on left end of the note—and on right end, a miserably engraved Medallion head of Washington. They purport to be engraved by Underwood, Bald & Spencer, signed N Fogle, jr. Cashier, and John Harris, President; L Fogle, is Cashier of this Institution.

20's and 10's altered from 1's. They can easily be detected by holding them to the light, when the alteration is visible.

FRANKLIN BANK OF COLUMBUS.—3's letter H May 18th, 1833, payable to S Jones, engraving coarse.

3's letter L, payable H Allen, June 8, 1836, S Lawrence, Cashier; G Wan, jr. President.

5's letter B, pay at the "Banking House."—All bills of the letter B, payable at the banking house are spurious.

5's: they are of the letter A, and made payable to T P Handy, N Noble, E Jones, H P Espy, and probably others. The Bank has never issued any payable to T P Handy or N Noble. The counterfeit which has been presented is dated October 8, 1834. There are also other dates. No genuine notes of this plate have been issued of the date just mentioned, nor have any been numbered above 1100 since the year 1828. The counterfeits are shorter and narrower than the genuine bills;—The engraving, on close examination, is found to be coarse, particularly the vignette, which is inferior in execution to the heads of Washington and Franklin, on the margins—the eyes of the Washington head, are badly imitated; the signature of the Cashier is very defective: in the genuine notes there is a very slight mark, which is wanting in the counterfeits. Just over the word "THE," commencing "THE President, Directors and Co," is a small hair stroke, intended to be a part of the letter "P," which follows. The want of this, although it is very slight, is sufficient to detect the counterfeits. The words "Banking House" are not inserted in any other note issued by the Bank except the Five Dollar note of the plate thus counterfeited.

10's letter A, altered from 1's. Signed J M Espy, Cashier, G Swan, President.

BANK OF MOUNT PLEASANT.—20's & 10's altered from 1's. The genuine ones have no vignette.

BANK OF WOOSTER, OHIO.—10's altered from 1's. Easily detected, letter A, dated, April 6, 1835, Joseph S Lake, President, Ben. Bently, Cashier, can be detected by holding them up to the light.

FARMERS' AND MECHANICS' BANK.—2's spurious letter A, pay J Patterson, May 4, 1836, D Moodry, Cashier, N Dike, President. The name of the person to whom payable and President's name are engraved—vignette, a female figure with Liberty Cap and Eagle—head of Washington on right end, and sheaf of wheat on left.

3's spurious, same vignette as the 2's with side figures reversed—payable to J Patterson, (engraved) May 6, 1838, Moodry, Cashier, Dike, (engraved) President.

20's and 10's altered from 1's. On the left hand end of the genuine one is a view of a canal.

WESTERN RESERVE BANK.—3's July 16, 1830.

3's pay to Wm Williams, dated, May 4, 1830.

5's badly executed; they are one-eighth of an inch shorter than the genuine notes—Reed, engraver, dated January 7, 1826.

5's no letter, payable to W Williams, dated, November 5, 1829, engraving very faint.

10's letter D, Murray, Draper & Fairman's plate. The words "Western Reserve Bank," being on the left, and "Ohio" on the right hand margin; on the genuine notes they are the reverse.—Bicknell.

Business Department.

RECEIVED PAY FOR RECORDER.

From J Degarmo, through D Boughner, for M Williamson,	$2 00
" J Wilson for J Summerville,	2 00
" John Besant,	2 00
" W Y Roberts, for W Wells, and 2 in lieu of a counterfeit bill ret'd.	4 00
" M N Warren for John Davis,	2 00
" J Rose,	8 00
For E Newton, E Ripley, W Hunt and R Hopkins,
" J Parker for S Gish,	2 00
" J Barner for Jos Shipp, of Frankport, Indiana.	2 00

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J. Degarmo, 3 subs. cash in adv. for one; D. Boughner, J. Wilson, 4 subs.; J. C. Shockley, 1 sub.; W. Y. Roberts, D. J. Garwood, M. N. Warren, J. Gregg, J. Rose, 1 sub.; C. Woodruff, "Howard," W. W. Paul, D. H. Stephens, C. S. Worthington, H. F. Westfall, W. L. Wart, J. Parke, 2 subs., pay for one in adv.; J. Barner, W. M. Awl, G. Baxter, J. Dalbey, Jr., D. Lynch and J. Edmiston.

The P. M. at Alleghenytown informs us that S. Clancy does not call for his paper. We think there is a mistake in this name and have altered it to S. Clany. He has paid for his paper for six months.

The P. M. at Cloverdale, Ia., informs us that John Vestal has not taken his paper for some time. Mr. V. has paid for his paper. If any person has the explanation of this difficulty we should like to receive it, if he should have occasion to correspond with us.

The P. M. at Pittsburgh informs us that Wm. Johnson, M. D., refuses to take his paper. Well, we presume, if he be an honest man, he will pay for it, as he has subscribed, whether he takes it or not. He also informs us that Simpson Honour refuses to take his paper; now we think it likely there is no such name, and that, that paper was designed for Sampson Horner who has has since ordered one. We recollect distinctly at the time we wrote that name on our book we had to guess at it. From the carelessness, on the part of our agents, in writing subscribers names, post offices, &c., it will probable cost us twenty-five or thirty dollars this year.

A protracted meeting will be held at Gabriel Bane's near Lewistown, Logan county, Ohio, to commence on the second Saturday in April, under the care of Joseph Parke, who invites ministers from the adjoining circuits to his aid.

The Quarterly Conference of Spencer circuit, Indiana, resolved that they approve of the erection of an Indiana Conference, with which resolution I concur. JAS. EMMISTON, Supt.

February 22, 1840.

This is to certify that the quarterly conference of Richwood circuit, Ia., have unanimously voted for the creation of an Indiana Conference.

By order of the conference,

GEO. BAXTER, Rec. Sec.

Hancock, Ia., March 2, 1840.

We again request our correspondents to attend to our rules with regard to postage. We are still imposed on in this way by some. George Baxter above writes to us to have a resolution inserted doing the business of his circuit, and leaves us to pay 19 cents postage on his letter.—We now give notice that we shall attend to no such letters, in future, unless the postage be paid.

RULES FOR CORRESPONDENTS.

1. In every instance where a communication is forwarded to us for publication, the proper name must accompany it, or no attention will be paid thereto.

2. Any one who may wish to animadvert upon any of the functionaries of the church, the provisions of the discipline, or any of the exciting topics of the day, must permit us, at our own discretion, to connect his proper name with any communication he may write on any of these subjects.

3. We will cheerfully publish any selected extracts, our friends may desire, not inconsistent with the character of our paper; provided, they will send, addressed to the "Western Recorder" the paper or pamphlet containing them. But, if sent in writing, we cannot attend to them.

4. We are willing to pay postage on the following letters: 1. All that we have especially invited to write for our paper. 2. The communications of the Presidents of the Districts, giving an account of the spiritual condition of their charges. 3. All letters containing at least five new subscribers. 4. All which contain ten dollars cash;—5. or all which contain at least two new subscribers and five dollars cash. If any person wishes an agent to write to us when these terms cannot be complied with, he must advance to such agent the postage of the letter. If these rules are violated, we will notice it on the reception of the letter, so as to bring them to the recollection of our friends.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Lady's Book.

OUR JESSIE: OR, THE EXCLUSIVES.

BY MRS. EMMA C. EMBURY.

"Lizzy, who was that pretty girl I met on the stairs this morning?" said Frederick Carleton, as he threw himself into a well cushioned chair beside his sister; "she was some intimate friend, I presume, for she went into your apartment."

"I suppose it was Sarah Morton, as she is the only person I am in the habit of admitting to my dressing-room; was she very pretty?"

"Beautiful."

"How was she dressed?"

"With the utmost simplicity and neatness."

"It must have been Sarah; she dresses with great taste. Did the lady you met wear a black velvet mantilla, with a white hat and willow feather?"

"Pshaw! black velvet fiddlestick. Do you call that simplicity? No, the lovely creature I mean wore a litte straw bonnet and a black silk apron; her dark hair was parted smoothly upon her snowy forehead; she had soft blue eyes, and a mouth like an opening rose-bud; now, can you tell me who she is?"

"Oh," exclaimed Lizzy, "it must have been our Jessie."

"And pray, who is 'our Jessie?'" asked her brother.

"Only our seamstress, Fred; a pretty little creature who looks scarcely sixteen."

"By Jupiter! if that girl is a seamstress, Fortune never made a greater mistake—it can't be."

"Well, we can soon decide the matter, Fred; Jessie is now at work in our little sewing room, and as I am going up to give her some directions you can accompany me."

Frederick Carleton obeyed his sister's suggestion, and sauntered into the room half hoping his sister was mistaken.—But no; there sat the object of his admiration—their sat our Jessie, surrounded by pieces and patches, shaping and sewing with the utmost diligence, and scarcely raising her eyes from her work. Seating himself at a little distance, under pretence of waiting his sister's leisure, Frederick busied himself in studying the countenance of the unconscious girl.

"Her features are not perfectly regular," thought he; "but what soft eyes she has; what a lovely mouth, and how beautifully her fine forehead shines out between those bands of raven hair; her voice too, is soft and low, 'an excellent thing in woman.' What a pity such a creature should be the slave of fashionable tyrants."

"Tell me," said he to his eldest sister, Mrs. De Grey, as he returned to the dining-room, "tell me who is 'our Jessie?'"

"Her story is soon told," said Mrs. De Grey, laughing, "and for your sake, my susceptible brother, I am sorry she is not a heroine of romance. Jessie Murray's father was a printer, who, meeting with a severe accidental injury, was confined to his bed for several years before his death, during which time his wife supported the family by seamstress work and dress-making. Mr. Murray was always a reading man, and after he was disabled, he diverted his wearied hours by books and the education of his children. I have been told that he studied Latin and Greek, in order that he might teach his son, and thus fit him, if possible, for college, while he carefully instructed Jessie in all the branches he deemed essential to a good education. After her father's death, which occurred not long since, when Jessie was about eighteen years of age, she determined to fulfil his wishes respecting her young brother, and secure for him a collegiate education. She therefore adopted her present employment; she is a neat seamstress and an excellent dressmaker. Her services are highly estimated, and she works for a few customers who engage her, as we do, for several months together. Her brother entered college last fall, and she is at all the expense of his education."

"What a noble-minded girl she must be, to submit to a life of drudgery for such a purpose."

"She is the more praiseworthy, Fred, because she could have obtained a situation as nursery-governess, which, according to modern notions, would have been far less degrading; but she refused it because it would prevent her from returning every night to her mother."

"Is she always cheerful and good humoured?"

"She has one of the most winning tempers I ever knew."

"She must be a lovely creature."

"Yes, it is a pity to see so much beauty and grace wasted in humble life."

"But why need it be wasted, Julia?"

"Because she will, in all probability, marry some rough mechanic who will never perceive her grace, and scarcely appreciate her beauty."

"Do you suppose, then, that personal beauty is not appreciated by the poor as well as the rich, Julia?"

"Yes; but only certain kinds of beauty; a healthy coarse red cheek, and a bold bright eye, are the charms most admired among the plebeians."

"Julia, what are you talking about?—Are Americans running mad? Here have I returned to my native country after an absence of only five years, and while my love for our republican institutions has increased tenfold, I find my countrymen have become perfectly beside themselves in their aping of foreign follies. Plebeians—forsooth!—and, pray, who are the patricians of this most democratic community?"

"Why, Fred, there must be a difference between the upper and lower classes in all communities."

"Yes, Julia, the difference between the good and the wicked, the honest and dishonest, the educated and the ignorant, the governors and the governed—"

"You forget the principal distinction, Frederick, the rich and the poor."

"Aye, I thought so; that is the principal distinction in modern times, and of course the rich man is the patrician, though he may have raked his wealth from the kennel, and the poor man is a plebeian, though his ancestors should have been among the only American nobles—the signers of our Independence."

"Oh, no, brother, you are quite wrong; a mechanic, though he be as rich as Crœsus, cannot get into good society, but if he abandon his business before his children are grown up, they are received, and his grand children finally rank among our first classes."

"Provided they retain the fortune for which their grandfather toiled, I suppose, Julia. Well, I am glad to have the matter so satisfactorily explained, especially as we are the children of a mechanic."

"Heavens! Fred, how can you say so? Our father was an India merchant."

"True, my high-minded sister, but he began life in a cooper's shop down on the wharf where he afterwards built his stately stores. Many a good barrel has he headed and hooped; and I remember, when a very little boy, how I loved to play in the shavings. But that is thirty years ago, Julia, and I suppose that you think other people have forgotten it."

"I wish, Fred, you could forget it. It is not plesant to have such things brought to light so late in the day. They cannot injure you nor me, but they may mar Lizzy's prospects."

"True, Lizzy might not be allowed to marry a mechanic's grandson if it were known that she was only a mechanic's daughter."

Frederick Carleton with some eccentricity possessed many excellent qualities. His father had bestowed on him all the advantages of a liberal education, and after completing his studies he had spent several years in Europe. While abroad his father died, and his elder sister married, so that on his return he found the old family mansion passed into other hands, and his favorite sister Lizzy, an inmate of Julia's stately mansion. His paternal inheritance insured him a competence, and he resolved to marry as soon as he should meet with a woman capable of realizing his notions of domestic happiness. It is not to be supposed that the rich and travelled Mr. Carleton, (whose three thousand dollars of yearly income was more than doubled by many-tongued rumor,) lacked opportunities of selecting a companion for life. But among the manœuvring mammas and displaying daughters, he had as yet seen no one who equalled his ideas of womanly loveliness. A true American in feeling, he had lived long enough among foreign follies to despise them most heartily, and especially did he abhor this attempt to establish an exclusive system in society. "I am no agrarian," he would often say, "nor have I any utopian notion of perfect equality; I am therefore aware that there must always exist different classes in society, such as working men and men of wealth, men gifted with intellect, and others only one remove from idiocy, but let us never acknowledge that worst of all tyrannies, an oligarchy of mere wealth. A man of enlightened mind and virtuous principles is my equal, whatever be his occupation, and whether his hand be hardened by the blacksmith's hammer, or soiled by the ink of the learned professions, it is one which I can grasp with respect."

His notions much displeased his fastidious sisters, and they took great pains to convince him of his folly. But it was in vain they tried to initiate him into the mysteries of modern fashion; he would neither conceal half bis face beneath an overgrowth of moustache and beard, nor would he imitate the long-eared asses of South America in the longitude of his superb raven rocks. He even refused to carry the indispensable cane, alleging that since such a sudden lameness had fallen upon the spindle-shanked men of fashion, it was the duty of those who could still boast some solidity of understanding to depend on themselves for support.—The ladies pronounced him very handsome, but shockingly unfashionable; while the gentlemen, who found that his rent-roll was not likely to be diminished either at the billiard table or the race course, discussed his character as they picked their teeth on the steps of the Broadway hotels, and wondered how he contrived to spend his money.

The simple story of Jessie Murray had deeply affected Carleton, and the remembrance of her sweet countenance did not tend to decrease his interest. How much of self mingles in the best feelings of humanity! Had Jessie been a freckled, red-haired, snub-nosed girl, Fred would probably have soon forgotten her sisterly devotion, but she was too pretty to vanish quickly from his mind. Some how or other, it happened almost every morning that he found it necessary to see his sisters at an early hour, when he was sure of finding them in the sewing-room. His presence became at length quite unheeded by Jessie as well as by his sisters, and while he amused himself in romping with his little nephew, or quizzing the changes of fashion which usually occupied his sisters' thoughts, he had constant opportunities of studying the character of "our Jessie!" He noticed her quiet good sense, her fine taste, her cheerful manners, her unaffected humility, the patience with which she bore the caprices of his sisters, and he repeated to himself again and again. "What a pity she should be obliged to lead such a life."

One winter evening, as he was hurrying to an appointment, he met Jessie, who, with her bonnet drawn over her face, and her cloak wrapped closely around her, was hastening in an opposite direction. To turn and join her was his first impulse.

"Where are you going at so late an hour, Miss Murray?" he asked.

"Home," she replied, still hurrying onward.

"At least allow me to accompany you," said he.

"Oh, no, sir," said she, "it is not necessary. I go home alone every evening."

"But you are liable to insult, and should not venture out without a protector."

"We, poor girls, are obliged to be our own protectors, Mr. Carleton," said Jessie. "When my mother is well she usually comes to meet me, but in such cold weather I do not wish her to risk her health."

"And your brother?"

"He is at New Haven college, sir. Mr. Carleton, let me beg you not to go out of your way for me."

Fred only answered by drawing her arm through his. Jessie at first seemed alarmed; but, re-assured by his respectful manner, she consented to accept his escort, and they soon reached her mother's door. The light of a cheerful fire gleamed through the half opened shutters, and as Fred looked in the room he could not avoid noticing the perfect neatness of its arrangement. But Jessie did not invite him to enter, and he unwillingly bade her good night, though he had a strong desire to take a seat beside that humble hearth. When next he met his sisters he told them of his adventure, and asked why they did not send a servant with the little seamstress.

"Lord, brother, what an idea!" exclaimed Lizzy. "I am sure she can take care of herself."

"Should you feel quite safe, Lizzy, if you were sent out to walk a mile at eight o'clock on a winter's night?"

"No; but I have always been accustomed to a protecter. Such poor girls as Jessie early learn to take care of themselves, and do not feel the same fears which ladies do."

"For shame!" exclaimed Frederick, "do you suppose that poverty blunts every perception, and destroys every delicate feeling. Faith, I believe the poor girl is more favored than the rich in such respects, for I don't know one of your fashionable friends, Lizzy, who would shrink from taking my arm as modestly as 'our Jessie' did last night."

"Did you really give Jessie your arm, and escort her home?"

"I did; and when I saw the quiet, pleasant little parlor which she called home, I had a great mind to offer her my hand as well as my arm."

"Frederick, are you losing your senses? If I did not know you were jesting, I should think you had been taking too much wine!"

"I never was in a sounder state of mind, my dear sisters, and yet I declare to you I have a great mind to make little Jessie your sister-in-law—that is, if she will accept me."

"Come, come, Fred," interposed Mrs. De Grey, "you are carrying the farce too far; Lizzy is ready to cry with vexation."

"It is no farce, Julia, I am in earnest."

"For heaven's sake do not be such a fool; a pretty business it would be to introduce one of my hirelings as my sister. No, no, Fred, that won't do."

"You need not introduce her if you are ashamed of her. I dare say we should find society without your aid."

"It would be ruinous to all Lizzy's prospects."

"How so?"

"Why, do you suppose her rich admirer, Charles Tibbs, would marry the sister of a man whose wife had once been a seamstress?"

Frederick laughed heartily as he replied: "True, I had forgotten; Charles Tibbs is the grandson of old Tonny Tibbs, who used to peddle essences about the streets, and of course is now good society. Well, I will not interfere with Lizzy's matrimonial speculations, so banish your fears."

"Oh, I have no fears about it, for with all your eccentricities I am sure you would never do any thing so degrading."

Notwithstanding her boasted confidence, however, Mrs. De Grey really felt considerable anxiety about the matter, and she determined to send Jessie out of the way, until her brother should have forgotten his transient fancy. Convinced that Jessie was utterly unconscious of Frederick's admiration, and unwilling to lose her services permanently, she tho't of a plan which promised success, and she consulted Lizzy, as to its possibility.

"Aunt Tabitha has sent to us to procure her a seamstress for a few weeks, suppose we induce Jessie to go; the poor thing needs country air, and it will be just the place for her."

"Why, Julia?" asked Lizzy, with a smile, "because she needs country air, or because we need her absence?"

"Nay, Lizzy, it is no laughing matter. I want to send her out of Fred's way before she has any suspicion of his folly."

"But why send her to Aunt Tabitha?"

"Because Fred will never find her there; he is so terribly afraid of the old lady's sentimentalities that he never visits her, and by the time Jessie returns, he will have some new folly to engage his attention."

The plan was matured; and Jessie, who really felt the need of change of air, or relaxation from her continual labors, consented to leave her mother for a few weeks. Accordingly, one bright spring morning a stage deposited Jessie at the gate of a neat old-fashioned cottage, which stood on the outskirts of a village about forty miles from the great metropolis.

"Where is 'our Jessie?'" asked Fred, when he had watched in vain for her daily return to the little sewing-room.

"Lord, brother, do you think I keep a record of her engagements? When she has finished our work she goes somewhere else, and that is all I know about it."

The idea of that gentle creature being thus driven about from place to place, toiling day after day with her needle, and dimming her bright eyes over plaits and gathers, was extremely painful to Fred Carleton. The more he thought of it the more uneasy he became. "Why should I hesiate," thought he, "I have seen all the prettiest girls in Lizzy's set, and I like Jessie Murray better than any of them: Seamstress—indeed! I wonder if Julia would like to hear that our own dear mother used to make six shillings a day by binding shoes when she was first married to the honest cooper, our father? Yet I should hate to mar Lizzy's plans; I wish I had some one to advise me.—Now I think of it, I will go and see Aunt Tabitha, the dear good romantic old soul whom I used to ridicule so much, will now be my best counsellor." So, with his usual impetuosity, Fred started on a visit to Aunt Tabitha, leaving his sisters quite ignorant of his destination, and little dreaming of the unexpected pleasure that awaited him.

Dear old Aunt Tabitha! what a singular compound she was of good feelings and exaggerated sentiments. In early life she had been betrothed to one whose poverty was the only obstacle to their union. He had sailed for India, in the hope of bettering his fortunes, but he never returned, nor did any tidings of his fate ever reach his native land. The ship was missing—it had never reached its destined port, and the sea kept its own secret. Deeply tinged with the romance of warm hearted youth, and greatly addicted to novel reading, Aunt Tabitha had always lived in a world of the imagination, and the mystery which over hung the fate of her lover seemed to strengthen the romantic fervour of her nature. For some years after his disappearance, she never left her apartment, and it was only by awakening the charities of her kindly nature that she could be induced to take an interest in every-day life. She had grown old without having lost one atom of her early tendency to sentiment. Combining active benevolence with almost morbid sensibility, she was often a subject of ridicule to those who did not know her virtues, while she was sincerely loved by those who could forgive eccentricity in behalf of excellence. Fred Carleton, in his boyish days, had conceived a great dislike of her peculiarities, and unable then to appreciate her real goodness, was terribly bored by what he styled her "sentimentalities." But he had since learned to know her better, and her very foibles now seemed to render her better fitted to afford him counsel.—What was the result of her advice?

* * * * * *

Let us pass over the lapse of three years, in the course of which Lizzy Carleton had married the rich and aristocratic Charles Tibbs who was the very pink of fashion, excepting his dislike of perfumes, an antipathy probably owing to early associations. The sisters were established to their heart's content. A fine house, French furniture, a splendid carriage, and plenty of servants, had fallen to the lot of both. It is true, the habitual failings of Julia's husband, had made him a byword among honorable men, and Charles Tibbs was a mere nonentity—the very "essence" of insipidity; but these were trifling drawbacks upon the felicity of women of fashion. Fred Carleton was residing in Paris, the happy husband of a charming woman, and enjoying all the pleasures of that gay city. Had he soon forgotten our Jessie?

One morning Lizzy entered her sister's room with an open letter in her hand, exclaiming, "Oh, Julia, I have good news for you; Fred is coming home, and his Parisian wife will just arrive in time to add brilliancy to our winter parties."

Julia shrugged her shoulders. "I hope it may be so, Lizzy; but Fred is such a queer fellow that he is quite likely to have some dowdy of a wife, whom we shall be ashamed to introduce."

"Oh no," exclaimed Lizzy, "I have seen Mrs. Grantham, who has just returned from Paris, and who saw Fred's wife very often in society; she says Mrs. Carleton was quite the fashion. They were wearing bonnets, à la Carleton, redingotes à la Carleton, mantillas à la Carleton; in short, there was no limit to the admiration she was exciting. The Duke of Orleans has asked her name, as he met her in his daily rides, and expressed himself in very decided terms respecting her beauty; the Duke of Nemours has danced with her at a ball, given at the Tuilleries, and she has even sung a duet with the princess Clementine, at one of the royal soirees."

"Can it be possible! Well, if that be the case, she will be a great acquisition to our society—she must be a woman of some rank to be admitted into such circles in Paris."

"Mrs. Grantham thinks she is English; but you know Fred has always returned some quizzing reply to our inquiries respecting her, and we can only learn her origin from herself; she is quite distinguished for her vocal powers and though little skilled in instrumental music, creates quite a sensation by her splendid style of singing. From all I can hear, I judge that Fred has led as eccentric a life abroad as he does at home; nobody knew when he was married, but after living in retirement for two years after his return to Paris, he emerged from his seclusion, bringing with him his lovely and gifted wife."

"Well, we shall know all about her when they arrive: she will certainly be the fashion, but I should like to know who she is—however, she is a foreigner, and that will be suffiicient to attract attention."

A few weeks later, Fred Carleton arrived in his native city, and hurried to see his sisters, whom in despite of their follies, he really loved.

"Where is your wife?" was the first question.

"At the Astor House."

"Why did'nt you bring her to our house?" asked Mrs. De Grey.

"Because I could'nt tell whether you will like to receive her; you know nothing about her, and I have not forgotten your old prejudices."

"Yes; but you certainly could not doubt of her meeting a warm welcome; for although we have never seen her, yet we are not ignorant of her high reputation for beauty and fashion. We are all impatience to greet her Fred; come let us go directly to see her."

"Excuse me, my dear girls; first impressions are all important, and I have no idea of your seeing my pretty wife when she is looking pale and travel worn; I positively forbade her receiving any visits for three days, because I want her to appear in all her charms at Mrs. Grantham's musical soiree next Thursday."

"But surely you will allow her to see her relatives."

"No; you are precisely the persons I have determined she shall not see until she is looking perfectly well; I want you to do justice to my chice; she has been much admired in Paris, and I wish her claims to be as well established here."

"So, you have become a convert to our system, brother; and really desire to see your wife a woman of fashion."

"I have my reasons, Lizzy; when I have once seen her enjoying the undisputed possession of your admiration, we shall retire to our quiet home and laugh at the follies we now perpetrate."

"Do you suppose your wife will be content to retire from the gay scenes which she now adorns?"

"My wife is only obeying my wishes in leaving the seclusion which she loves; I have my reasons, I tell you. By the way, what has become of 'Our Jessie.'"

"Ah, Fred, you ought to thank us for manœuvring you out of that folly; if we had not sent Jessie out of your way, you might now have been the husband of a little sewing girl, instead of glorying in a wife who claims the praise of princes."

"Perhaps I might, Lizzy; but where is the pretty seamstress?"

"I don't know; she and her mother removed from her old residence soon after you saw her here; and I could discover no trace of them. I suppose she is the wife of some honest carpenter by this time. But tell us, Fred, when shall we see Mrs. Carleton?"

"We will meet you at Mrs. Grantham's soiree."

"Ah, I see: you think she needs the accessaries of dress, and the advantages of lamp light. I really believe you are ashamed of your wife, Fred."

"Perhaps I am only ashamed of my sisters," was the teazing reply, as with a merry laugh Fred Carleton hurried away.

When the appointed Thursday arrived, the sisters, full of curiosity, repaired to Mrs. Grantham's mansion; but they were far too fashionable to be punctual, and it was quite late when they entered the crowded room. Their steps were arrested by the sound of a simple prelude upon the harp; as they paused just within the door, a sweet, bird-like voice, filled the apartment with melody. The song was the fine ballad of "Old Robin Gray," which, when well sung, never fails to thrill every heart; and as the singer now threw her whole soul into the mournful strains, all stood in breathless attention to catch the exquisite sounds.

"It must be Fred's wife," whispered Lizzy, as they pressed forward to catch a glimpse of the vocalist. But her back was turned towards them, and they could only see a sylph-like figure, attired with the utmost magnificence.

"How do you like your new sister," said Mrs. Grantham, as she welcomed her guests; "is she not all I pictured her?"

"We have not seen her," was the reply, and at that moment Fred approached.—What was their astonishment, when in the lady who leaned upon his arm, they discovered Our Jessie.

As he led his wife to a seat beside them, and listened to their gracious welcome, he could not forbear whispering to Lizzy, "You see how much I am indebted to your manœuvring;—the partner of a royal duke, the belle of an hereditary prince, the songstress of the regal soiree, is, after all, only the little sewing girl."

"But when did you marry her?"

"Ask Aunt Tabitha."

Fred Carleton had devoted the two first years of his wedded life to the cultivation of his wife's fine musical talents, and he then brought her into society, determined to try whether beauty, talents, and grace were not sufficient claims upon the admiration of the fashionable world. He had succeeded even beyond his hopes, and as he beheld her receiving the homag rank and fortune, he could not but si at the remembrance of the indigna which his sisters had once expressed specting so degrading an alliance. soon as he saw his wife's charms f appreciated, and was assured that his ters had become reconciled to the thou of introducing her into society, Fred g ly withdrew from its frivolous gaities, during a long life of uninterrupted don tic happiness, never found reason to pent of his marriage with "Our Jessi

Brooklyn, L. I.

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on h 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of di ent qualities, comprising nearly all the varie in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good ass ment of Bridles and Martingales: riding driving whips: between 180 & 200 carriage heavy draft Collars, which will compare and w with any others made here or elsewhere. A fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and comi farming Harness. A lot of first rate carriage buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double ered wagon whips, varying in quality and p to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for work, is the testimony and long experience of old customers and friends. He is still anxi to please and accommodate those who may on him, and hopes to share so much of the pu patronage as his attention to his business s merit.

Putnam, March 4, 1840. 28tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a n and improved mode of ascending and scending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. T improvement supercedes the necessity of hors stationary power, by giving to the locomotive gine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles the motive, which connects with an extra rail laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wh on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with extra railing and propels her onward. The c struction and connection of the pilot wheel extra railing is of such a character that it not o necessarily advances, but advances perfec smooth, and cannot be impeded by the conge ing of ice, the connection of the wheel and r ing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers want further information, will please address the s scriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has tained the right of the State of Maryland by p chase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who the right of Georgia, North and South Caroli on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure t hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL. This machine can be attached to any of t powers now in common use, and is calculated save a great amount of manual labor. Clov seed can be hulled at the rate of from three five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at t rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, B ley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thi bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn c be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bus els per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spel or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of teen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Fa mer of the advantage of possessing such a labo saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he c prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth the time usually spent, and with one-fourth the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—inste of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushe Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicit durability, portability, and usefulness of th Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirab and money producing machines of modern inve tion.

Those wishing to procure this machine Georgia, North or South Carolina, can addre William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those the State of Maryland, can address Richard Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesvill Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of M Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county other sections can address the subscriber at Ha risville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most lit eral terms will be given to mechanics who ma wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill i sections not yet occupied. We invite the pub lic to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics, Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER. | Volume 1. | ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 18, 1840. | Number 30. | JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.

WO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. | $2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

POETRY.

THE BOWER OF PRAYER.

ve my dear friends, and with kindred to part,
from my home, it afflicts not my heart,
he thoughts of absenting myself far away,
hat blest retreat where I've chosen to pray.

ow'r where the vine and the poplar o'erspread woven their branches a roof for my head—ft have I knelt by the ever-green there,
oured out my soul to my Saviour in prayer.

rly sweet notes of the loved nightingale, urs of devotion would faithfully tell—d call me to duty, while birds in the air nthems of praises as I went to prayer.

weet were the zephyrs perfumed by the pine,
y, the balsam, the wild eglantine;
weeter, O sweeter, the pleasures which there,
h have tasted in answer to prayer.

sus, my Saviour, did oft with me meet, lest with his presence my humble retreat,
lled me with rapture and gratitude there,
ng in heaven's own language my prayer.

ower! I leave you, and bid you adieu!
my devotions in climes that are new:
knowing that Jesus presides every where,
an in all places give answer to prayer.

ill I look forward to that bright abode,
ed by my Saviour for all that love God, im in the ocean of happiness there,
ask in his smiles who has answered my prayer.

From the Methodist Protestant Banner.

A MOTHER'S LOVE.

other o'er her infant weeping lently; while not a breath ks the stillness; when 'tis sleeping, h the cold embrace of death.

forbear to call it weakness,
Which has caused her tears to flow;
a pure and holy sweetness, mother's heart can only know.

's the fond, and deep emotion;
eelings time can ne'er estrange,
a fixed and tried devotion,
Which can know no earthly change.

guish wrings a father's bosom,
When his brightest hopes are crossed,
en he sees his opening blossom,
lipped by death's untimely frost.

the hand of time still changing, fields his heart a sure relief,
l each day, his woe assuaging, dunts the poignancy of grief.

e will tune his heart to gladness, ooth, and lull his thoughts to rest;
d at length wan grief and sadness, find no place within his breast.

she, who mourns her beauteous flower.
arly gathered to the tomb,
ks no solace for this hour,
eeks not to dispel its gloom.

lone heart disdains to borrow,
ught that yields that heart relief;
finds a sweetness in her sorrow,
And a luxury in her grief. VIRGINIUS.

COMMUNICATIONS.

For the Western Recorder.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

. Editor: You will oblige me by publishing
r periodical, the statements which follow, e information of those friends who have kind-eed to assist me in the distribution of my on the "Benevolence and Rectitude of the me Being;" and also for the information hers who may be disposed to favor me with patronage.

as in Philadelphia about six weeks, super-ding the matter, and remained till the of it was in type. It covered 403 pages, exclu-f the Appendix, which I had to leave out, se the booksellers assured me the work could e safely and judiciously extended much be-the 400 pages, at the retail price of $1 25, wished to guard against hazard of pecuni-ss and embarrassment.

ce my return I have devoted considerable tion to the matter which was omitted in ublication; and though it is a necessary ndix to the preceding discussion, yet I re-that it was not then published; because I ive it can be improved and enlarged to advantage; and I intend hereafter, if the will, to publish it under the title of "Calm and Arminianism compared: with a view move 'Difficulties,' which stand in the way hristian Harmony." It will probably con-150 or 160 pages, and the price will be fix-ccordingly. All this, however, refers to the re; and how distant that future may be, will nd upon circumstances. I have already racted a large debt, on the encouragement by those friends who engaged to assist me;
I rejoice that their character furnishes a suf-nt pledge, that nothing will be wanting on part, in using those measures whereby I be furnished with the means of discharging obligation.

he publisher in Philadelphia entered into a ten obligation to have all the books ready for ribution by the opening of the canal naviga-, 1840. I therefore expect their arrival in sburgh, some time in April; and I wish to ive all necessary information, to know how can be distributed to the best advantage.
ish to know particularly to what business house they can be directed in Zanesville, as a place of deposite, that they may be distributed to my friends in that region of country, according to the number of their several subscriptions. I hope Bro. Marshall or Bro. Davis will give me information concerning this matter; and that every friend will give due notice of whatever may facilitate the business.

In regard to the matter of this publication, the subject in itself is deep; and therefore it was the aim of the writer, to make the language as plain as possible. Still it will require thinking; and as the author has devoted great attention to the subject for five years, he hopes his judicious friends will make up their minds to devote equal attention to it for one year, before they draw a final conclusion, in regard to the correctness or incorrectness of its positions. If any friend should find difficulties, that may seem to require solving, let him suspend his judgment till he shall have seen "Calvinism and Arminianism compared," &c., the Appendix which has been just referred to; and the writer hopes he will be convinced that truth is always consistent with itself, and that its harmonious connections are really essential to the honor and glory of God, and to the best interests of mankind. A. SHINN.

Allegheny, Feb. 27, 1840.

For the Western Recorder.

THE INSTITUTION FOR THE BLIND.

This Institution is a large edifice, built of brick, during the last year, principally with the labor of convicts. It is eligibly situated on a lot of nine acres, a little removed from the plat of the city of Columbus, on the north side of the National Road. The piece of ground on which this Institution is situated, "combines all necessary advantages in relation to the city and surrounding country; and in respect of healthful air, pure water and commanding view, is exceeded by none in the vicinity of Columbus." The Lunatic Asylum, the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, and the Institution for the Blind are all situated east of Columbus, nearly on a straight north and south line, varying from half a mile to a mile distant from Columbus, and from a quarter to a half mile from each other.

Dr. Hoge, N. H. Swayne, Esq. and Dr. Awl were the first Trustees of the Blind Institution, and they still continue acting as such to the general acceptance of the friends of the Institution. The Trustees appointed as principal instructor in the Institution, Mr. A. W. Penniman, himself almost blind, who was educated in the school for the Blind at Boston, and has since been engaged as an assistant teacher in the school for the Blind in the city of Philadelphia, with much approbation. The school was commenced with only five pupils, on the 4th of July, 1837. The number of pupils now in the Institution is nineteen, fourteen of whom are males and five females. Two of the pupils are supported by their friends and the remainder by the State. All pupils in indigent circumstances have their expenses for boarding, books and tuition, defrayed by the State; any other expenses, such as clothing and travelling, it is expected will be defrayed by the parents or guardians of the children. The utmost attention is paid to the health, comfort and morals of the pupils; and no effort is spared to give them the best education their capacities are found adapted to receive. The Trustees represent in their last Annual Report, that the pupils have improved in knowledge and every useful acquirement as rapidly as any equal number, blessed with the faculty of vision, in the same time and with equivalent advantages; and that intelligent visitors of the Institution, of different classes of the community, and from various and distant parts of the country, have received the conviction, on good grounds, that equal improvement has seldom, if ever, been obtained in the same time, in the best Common Schools. They also remark of the pupils, that in their moral habits, likewise in their cheerfulness and in every essential preparation for a useful and comfortable situation in life, their advancement has fully equaled their hopes.

"Mr. Penniman, who has charge of the department of instruction, has been most indefatigable in his labors, and his success is the best evidence of his ability. Devoted to the welfare of those under his care, on the best principles, and from a fellow feeling of the privation which he and they endure in common, he uses every means in his power to secure their moral and intellectual improvement."

"The course of instruction embraces reading, writing, arithmetic, geography and grammar, to which has recently been added, music. A teacher of music has been engaged in the Institution, and he has been able to interest and improve the pupils very greatly, both in vocal and instrumental music, which is peculiarly delightful and important to the blind. They receive from music a pleasure, which is the greater, because they are strangers to the pleasures of sight, and their knowledge of it will be a satisfaction to them in in all future life, and will, to some, be an ample means of support. Destitute of all the blessings of sight, they need and relish in just so much greater degree the pleasures which have their medium of access to the mind by the sense of hearing. The beautiful, the sublime, the useful in nature and in art, of which we take cognizance by the eye, is all darkness to them; but of the sublime, the beautiful, the affecting in speech and in song, they are in the highest degree susceptible. And it is not merely animal pleasure and intellectual delight that they derive from this source: there is a moral influence in music, on them unusually strong, to sooth and govern the mind, and give character and permanence to the affections and emotions of the heart."

"The time of the pupils is divided between study, useful labor and recreation. From six to eight hours are daily appropriated to study, under the direction of the principal teacher or an assistant. Several hours of every day (Sunday excepted,) are devoted to labor; the girls, under the direction of the Matron, being employed in housework, knitting, sewing, &c.; and the boys, under the direction of the Steward, performing some suitable kind of labor, particularly a part of them, with the instruction and aid of a practical workman, being engaged in learning the business of shoemaking, in which several of them have made very good proficiency. And it is certain that they can be so taught here, that when they leave the Institution, they will be able to earn sufficient wages for their own support. Time enough is allowed them all, and especially those who are but children, for rest and recreation. And besides, the arrangement of study and work is such, that weariness is seldom felt, and but little time for entire relaxation is really needed."

Shoemaking having been taught and successfully prosecuted in the Institution, the Trustees propose soon adding to it other branches of business, such as brush-making, broom-making, mattress-making, &c.

"Experience in this and other similar Institutions, fully attests the practicability, and indeed, the facility of educating the Blind. As they possess all the mental powers of man, and likewise, all the corporeal senses, except sight, it might be seen beforehand, that nothing more is necessary than to devise a system which shall compensate the want of sight, by cultivating and using other senses as the medium of communicating knowledge. This has been accomplished. It has always been known that the Blind receive oral instruction, so far as they have access to it, with very great advantage, so as to profit by it in the exercise of memory and reflection, in a greater degree than those who see; and likewise, that their sense of touch becomes, by use, exquisitively sensitive. Nothing was therefore wanting, as a basis of a suitable mode of education, but access to embossed or raised letters. This is to the Blind what common printing is to those who have the power of vision."

The ease and rapidity with which a blind youth acquires the knowledge of letters and arts, afford great encouragement. Some of the little Blind boys that have been in the school less than one year, are excellent readers, arithmeticians and geographers. They can with great readiness turn to any book, chapter and verse in the Bible, which is very properly one of the first books they are taught to read. They do all through the medium of the sense of feeling, accomplishing by that one sense what is usually done by two—seeing and feeling—or, in a word, they simply make their fingers do for them what our eyes do for us. The printing of the books for the Blind, being done with raised letters, and of course on one side of each leaf only, with large type, all the Blind pupil does is merely to run his fingers over them to read in a few months with great facility. I had the gratification to witness an exhibition of the Blind not long since, in the Representatives' Hall at Columbus, and during the progress of the exhibition, an honorable Senator remarked to me of a little Blind boy who had been reading, that he was a better reader than many of the Senators. If the remarks had been made of the members of the other branch of the Legislature, I could, from daily observation, have testified to its truth, and I had no reason to doubt the truth of the remark of my friend, the Senator. The boy had been in the Institution seven months.

A knowledge of geography is easily acquired by the Blind. Rivers, lakes, water courses, canals, rail roads, cities, turnpikes, towns and villages are raised on the maps used by the blind, and by running their fingers over them they very readily trace the course of a stream or place them on a town or city.

This useful and benevolent Institution has already imparted much substantial benefit to those for whom it was designed, and it commends itself to the liberal and enlightened men of every portion of the community. It is an Institution richly entitled to the fostering care of the State, and the gentlemen who are engaged in this enterprize of benevolence and philanthropy, and devoting so much of their time and attention to its advancement and prosperity, deserve the grateful consideration and regard of their philanthropic fellow citizens of Ohio and of the country, and will doubtless, be gratefully remembered for their benevolent labors in behalf of this interesting Institution, and for their efforts to meliorate the condition of this hitherto neglected portion of our unfortunate population—the Blind.

Newark, Ohio. HOWARD.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

PISGAH CIRCUIT, OHIO, MARCH 5, 1840.

Mr. Editor: Having re-visited the Bethel church to which I alluded in my last, I find that the work of religion to which I then referred is more thorough and extensive than I then supposed. I was well aware of a deep impression on the neighborhood; for during the progress of the meeting the citizens were so much interested in the ordinances of God's house, that they for the time being, suspended all attention to their domestic concerns and gave themselves entirely up to attendance on the means of grace. But I did not know at the time, but this serious attention might be only the "morning cloud and the early dew," as is often the case. But I am happy now to see that something more permanent is likely to be the result of this meeting. Since it closed, a number more have professed religion—some have joined the church—others have commenced taking up their crosses in their families,—the excitement is spreading to other neighborhoods, and there are none within the sphere of its operation, but feel the influence of this work of grace, which appears to be both deepening and widening. C. WOODRUFF.

SHELBY, OHIO, FEB. 28, 1840.

Bro. Springer: I have just been reading the 20th number of your paper; it brings such cheering intelligence of the prosperity of our church that I feel much encouraged to move forward in the cause of Gospel Liberty. For the want of such a medium of communication we have suffered much loss in this region; for our opponents were constantly reporting that we were dwindling and going down, and we have not till now had the means of correcting the discouraging tendency of such fabrications. I have, therefore, noticed with much interest, in the Recorder, the communications from the different circuits in the Ohio Conference and other portions of the connexion, and while I have heard of the work of religion prospering, I have thanked God and taken encouragement.

Six years ago there was but one man, to my knowledge, who belonged to the Methodist Protestant Church in Shelby county. I was a member of the first quarterly conference when Miami circuit was organized, upwards of two years since. We have now sixteen appointments and about one hundred and fifty members. I have been serving the circuit about seventeen months and find them to be a kind, friendly people, living in peace and striving to bear the cross of Christ.

Our second quarterly meeting was recently held, though the weather was unfavorable, yet we had a time of spiritual refreshment.

JOSEPH PARKE, Sup.

SPENCER CT., IA., FEB. 22, 1840.

Bro. Springer: Our prospects on this circuit in some places are good, but in others rather discouraging. We have had some additions this year and should get along pretty well if our members generally felt interested in the cause as they should do; but there is too much deadness and indifference among many. I hope God will arouse them from their lethergy.

JAMES EDMISTON, Supt.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Lady's Book.

PAPERS ON THE OLD ENGLISH ESSAYISTS.

THE TATLER.

By A. Stevens, A. M.

Perhaps a better service could not be done to the cause of literature, than would be a more general introduction of the old British Essayists to the reading community. There are few well furnished libraries destitute of one or more of these most interesting writers, but among the vast mass, who deserve the multitudinous products of the modern press, the number is exceedingly small who know any thing of the immense literary treasures which their writings contain. The most entertaining pictures of life and manners found in our modern novels, are combined in them with the sterling wit, varied learning and accomplished style of our elder writers.

The most illustrious names of English literature have given interest to these works. Addison, Steele, Berkely, Johnson, Swift, Chesterfield and Colman are indebted, not a little, to them for their celebrity. The period through which they extend and the vices of which they represent, is one of the most interesting in the history of English society and literature. They are most generally conducted too on a plan of concert among the contributors, and with an assumption of fictitious characters, which impart the highest dramatic interest. Some of the best drawn characters in our literature are found in them. In fine, a greater fund of wit, sprightly sentiment, learned allusion, literary learning and elegant diction is not to be met with perhaps in any language. Mrs. Hannah More has remarked, that "To hardly any species of composition has the British public been more signally indebted than to these periodical essays, and perhaps it was only from the British press that such publications could issue." She devotes an excellent chapter to them in her plan for the education of a Princess.

The aim of these writers, as expressed by one of them, was to "bring philosophy out of the closets and libraries, the schools and colleges, to dwell in clubs and assemblies, at tea-tables and coffee-houses."—Under this guise, a still nobler purpose was contemplated, especially by the most celebrated of the Essayists. It was an age of open irreligion and, the profligacy, of manners which mark the times of the Second Charles, was still common. Ignorance combined with literary affectation, prevailed among the higher classes, and corruption, undisguised, among the lower. While the Essayists aimed at the ridicule of the prevalent faults of manners, they studied also the improvement of morals and the vindication of religion. Addison's exquisite essays on the Imagination, Wit, English Tragedy, the Opera, and his criticisms on Milton's Paradise Lost, were designed to correct the literary taste of the times; Milton had sunk into comparative obscurity, until these beautiful articles were published. He has also frequently introduced some of the most profound subjects of religious meditation, but so adorned with enlightened illustration and elegance of style as to rank among the most entertaining papers from his pen. Among such may be enumerated the articles on "Eternity," "Various opinions of the Future State," "The Present Life Preparatory to Eternity," "The Nature of Man," "Meditation on Death," "The Ways of Providence," "The Idea of the Supreme Being," "Devotion—Enthusiasm," &c. Bishop Berkely attacked with his polished satire and logic the scepticism of the age. Steele painted with admirable accuracy its corrupt manners, and Johnson steadily wielded his Herculean club against all the immorality and irreligion of both high places and low places.

We think not with a writer,* for whose fine intellect we entertain the liveliest admiration, that the popular opinion has erred in awarding to Addision the highest standing among the periodical Essayists. Steele, it may be admitted, excels him in the ready perceptions of the weak points of human nature, and the off-hand and ludicrous exposure of them, but he makes no approach to him in literary taste and critical skill. They are both excellent in their respective qualities. They are fit subjects for a contrast, but not for a comparison. They have but few traits in common; the peculiar excellences of Addison are unquestionably, however, of a superior class to those which belonged to Steele. Steele excelled in the conception of dramatic character, but Addison in finishing it—Roger de Coverly for instance. Most certainly the art of painting is of higher excellence than that of drawing. Steele was a man of the world, an adept in the knowledge and description of its follies and vices. He was at home in society, and ready in conversation; a colloquial sprightliness distinguishes his style, and gives ease and piquancy to his essays. Addison, though in the beau monde, was not at home there, his world was his study, his observations penetrated deeper than Steele's. They were not confined to the surface of life, but reached the inner man, and borrowed beauty and frequently sublimity from the fine literary topics and great moral truths upon which he delighted to dwell. He is represented as ungraceful in conversation, his style has ease, even felicity, but it is not the conversational ease of Steele; it is classical, elaborated, yet it has ease—the facility which is acquired by hard study and toilful practice, like the use of nice instruments by the experience artizan. They both have humor, but who has ever denied Addison's superiority in this respect? where, indeed, in the English language, can be found more refined and elegant humor than Addison's?

It has justly been remarked, that Addison seemed providentially raised up and endowed with his peculiar genius in the minute discrimination of matters of taste, morals and manners, in order to meet the necessities of his times in these respects. His Spectators have become classical as standards of style. His exquisite taste has given a fascination to every paragraph. His moral sentiments were delicate and have impressed almost every page of his Spectators.

His dramatic power is not the least attraction in these accomplished Essays.—His characters are not paintings or statues, gazed at by the observer as specimens of art—they live and move before us—they converse with us. Who has not felt the reality of Sir Roger de Coverly's character? What can exceed the individuality and truth of the Fox Hunter, or Will Wimble? How exactly are the shades of character, the alternations of temper, the follies of life, the affectations of learning, and the fallacies of scepticism, delineated throughout the whole series of these attractive papers! What literary taste cannot relish the rich "feast of fat things" spread out in this exhaustless banquet!

These entertaining writings vary much in their character. The Tatler is a most interesting picture of the society of its day; it is the best representation extant of the social and domestic peculiarities of the time of Queen Anne. Its vices, its follies, its gallanties, its pastimes, its literature, its drama, its conversation, its costume, its private and its public life are all exhibited—not described merely, but acted out with the vivacity of life. We are carried back by an irresistable illusion, to the days of our old Anglo-Saxon ancestors, and converse with them in their periwigs and hooped petticoats. There is a sociability and pleasantry in the manners of Issac Bickerstaff, Esq., which puts us in such good humor that we yield ourselves up passively to the impression of his conversation—in the language of another, "the reader is admitted behind the curtains, and sits down with the writer in his gown and slippers."

The Spectator assumes a higher dignity. We live in a literary household, and converse with men of intellect and classic humor, yet pass once and anon into the gay world to criticise, smile, and not unfrequently laugh at its whims and its follies. The fine dramatic character, the elegant critique, Attic style, polished satire, and humor that ever cheers, but never fatigues by excess, form our entertainment here.

In the Guardian we meet with the gravity which befits more important topics, and in the Rambler it becomes serious if not solemn. The moral dissertation, the dignified rebuke of error, the pointed admonition of vice, the sober discussion of manners and literature, conducted in the stately style of "the great moralist," form perhaps a very suitable counterpart to the preceding writers, in this department of our literature.

The Tatler was the first of the British Essayists, its first number was issued April 23, 1709. Steele, Addison and Swift were the chief contributors; Steele, however, was the ostensible conductor. He was accurately acquainted with the lights and shades of life. He was a native of Dublin, but educated at the famous old Charter House School, in London. Addison was his fellow student. His inclination led him to the army, and he first became an author by writing the Christian Hero while an ensign. The first publication which disclosed the true character of his genius, as a wit and satirist, was his Funeral, or Grief a-la-mode, a comedy, written while bearing a captain's commission. These writings introduced him to the attention of the gay world, and all his subsequent works show that he was no careless observer of its vices and follies. The stores of his observations are spread out in the pages of the Tatler, with a vivacity which render it one of the most entertaining pictures of the fashionable world that has ever been painted.

The Tatler is distinguished from the Spectator, Guardian, Rambler, and Idler, by confining its satire to the more superficial follies of society; though the moral dignity and elaborate elegance of the latter works are not to be found in its pages, yet for sprightliness of remark, satirical humor, and versatile power of observation, it is unequalled by any of them.—The object of the Tatler is expressed in the first volume. "The state of conversation and business in this town, having been long perplexed with pretenders in both kinds, in order to open men's eyes against such abuses, it appeared no unprofitable undertaking to publish a paper which should observe upon the manners of the pleasurable as well as the busy part of mankind. The general purpose of this paper is to expose false arts of life, to pull off the disguises of cunning, vanity and affectation, and to recommend a general simplicity in our dress, our discourse, and our behavior."

Something of a dramatic arrangement is adopted in the composition of the Tatler, which, perhaps, first suggested the idea of the fictitious literary clubs, under which most subsequent periodicals of the kind were published. Steele assumes the name of Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq., and the "lean hectic" appearance, the good humor, and wise advice of an old man are present to the reader's mind throughout the work. The old gentleman has a number of relatives who send him their opinions; he is an adept in astrology, and therefore capable of holding the secretly wicked in terrorum, has a demon as sagacious as was that of Socrates, who encourages him when he desponds over the follies of the world, and, fleet as visits all lands and retirements to bring him reports.

"The swift-winged arrows of light,"

Steele has given a dramatic interest to Hotels and Coffee-houses. It is in these Essays that we first meet with the venerated names of White's, Will's, the Grecian, and St. James's Coffee-houses. At these houses Bickerstaff meets his friends, observes the manners of "the town," receives his correspondents over a dish of coffee, and reads and discusses their communications, preparatory to publication. All remarks on gallantry and pleasure are dated from White's Chocolate-house; learning and science from Grecian, and foreign and domestic news from St. James's Coffee-house while miscellaneous observations are dated from "my own apartment."

The extensive supervision which Bickerstaff assumed over the manners of the town, necessarily led to the introduction of many scenes not suitable to the fastidious taste of later times. We will not even say that he is excusable from the charge of vulgarity in many cases. Yet the salutary effect of his writings is said to have been remarkable. A contemporary writer observes, "It is incredible to conceive the influence they have had on the town; how many thousand follies they have either quite banished, or given a very great check to; how much countenance they have added to both virtue and religion; how many people they have rendered happy by showing that it was their own fault if they were not so; and lastly, how entirely they have convinced our fops and young fellows of the value and advantages of learning."

A foreign writer asserts that the Tatler, Spectator, and Guardian—the three periodicals to which Steele and Addison were the principal contributors, have been reprinted as often, perhaps, as any books in our language.

The Tatler was originally published on half a sheet. Each number consisted of two pages, and nearly one-fourth was filled with advertisements. The price was one penny. The work was published three times a week, and reached 271 numbers. The last is dated January, 1711. The advertisements and notices of foreign and domestic news, gave the Tatler somewhat the character of a common newspaper. Its original papers on morals and criticism alone distinguished it from the half sheets of news which where then common. In most of the reprints, these only have been retained — Perhaps no data can be afforded to the student of English manners, more interesting than these articles. The refined humor of Addison distinguishes the communications to the Tatler which are from his pen. Its later numbers manifest a greater boldness of writing and elevation of feeling than are found in the preceding ones. It is curious to observe the policy with which its writers accommodated themselves to the public by thus assuming a lenient tone in the outset, and becoming more pungent as their popularity increased.

*See Hazlitt's Lectures.

The success of the Tatler was incredible—it seemed indeed to produce a mania for periodical publication among the literary predenders of the time. Gay, the poet, observes humorously, "The expiration of Bickerstaff's lucubrations was attended with much the same consequence as the death of Melibœus' ox in Virgil; as the latter engendered swarms of bees; the former immediately produced whole swarms of satirical scribblers.

"One of these authors calls himself the Growler, and assured us, that to make amend for Mr. Steel's silence, he was resolved to growl at us weekly, as long as we would think fit to give him any encouragement. Another gentleman with more modesty calls his paper the Whisperer; and a third, to please the ladies, christened his the Tell Tale. At the same time, came out several Tatlers, each of which with equal truth and wit assured us that he was the genuine Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq. They seemed, indeed, at first to think that what was only the garnish of the former Tatlers was that which recommended them, and not those substantial entertainments which they every where abound in.

"Accordingly they were continually talking of their maid, night caps, spectacles, and Charles Lillie. However, there were now and then some faint endeavours at humour and sparks of wit, which the town, for the want of better entertainment, was content to hunt after through a heap of impertinencies; but even these are become at present wholly, and quite swallowed up in the blaze of the Spectator."

On discontinuing the Tatler, Steele commenced with Addison the Spectator. Many of the most interesting papers of the latter were from his pen. He wrote the second paper, in which the Literary Club, which is admirably maintained throughout the work, is described. We are perhaps chiefly indebted to Steele for the dramatis personæ of the work. The interesting conception of Sir Roger de Coverly, usually ascribed to Addison, was actually Steele's. The perfectness and fine humor of this character attracted the attention of Addison, and won his sympathies as strongly as if the good-hearted knight were in actual existence, and among his dearest friends. Hence he was a favorite personage in some of Addison's best papers; and it is said that he contrived to introduce the premature death of the amiable old man, because Steele began to represent him in bad scenes, which, to Addison's refined taste, detracted from the beautiful morale of the character.

At the conclusion of the 7th volume of the Spectator, Steele commenced with Addison the Guardian. The first paper appeared March 12, 1712. Steele projected it without the assistance of Addison. A quarrel with the publisher stopped its publication, but it was immediately followed by the "Englishman," which was in fact but a continuation of the Guardian, modified in its character by assuming a more free discussion of politics. Steele introduces it by observing that he had "purchased the lion,* inkstand and paper, and all other goods of Nestor Ironsides, Esq., (the fictitious character of Steele,) who has thought fit to write no more himself, but has given me full liberty to report any large expressions or maxims which may tend to the instruction of mankind, and the service of his country." He then remarks with much humor, that Nestor had exhorted him to turn patriot, a hint to the political course he intended to pursue. He soon plunged into the vortex of political contents, and dropped the fine literary humor which has rendered his other works immortal, while the Englishman is scarcely known. Libellous paragraphs in this paper led to his expulsion from the House of Commons, where he had a seat at the time.

His next attempt was entitled the Lona. It was devoted to domestic manners like the Tatler. Forty papers were published; some first rate article were from the pen of Addison. Nine papers of another periodical called the Reader, were published by him before the Lona closed. The Town Talk followed. It is a series of letters to a lady, and supposed to have been addressed to his wife, then in the country. Some of its passages are exceptionable for their indelicacy. The Tea Table was his next attempt, but it was short-lived, extending only to three numbers.

The Plebian was the next in appearance. It was got up in opposition to an aristocratic bill in Parliament. With this publication is connected the painful event of a quarrel between Steele and Addison. The latter started the Old Whig, in opposition to the Plebian; personal allusions soon followed, and these fast friends in some of the best literary labors of that age, went to their graves enemies. Johnson truly remarks that such a controversy was "Bellum plusquam cevile." Every reader must regret that these two friends, after spending so many years in confidence, endearment and fellowship of study, should part in acrimonious opposition. His last important work as an essayist, was the Theatre, which manifested much of the tact of the Tatler, and was exceedingly popular. It contained many statements of his private life, and was devoured with avidity. Steele at last became paralytic and returned to his seat at Llangunnei, in South Wales, where he died in 1729.

*A gilt lion-headed letter box kept at one of the London coffee houses.

A Royal Marriage Speech.—Among many instances of the great change of manners which 170 years have produced in England, perhaps few are more striking than the difference between the style of the past and present speeches from the throne. Those of Charles the Second, in an age though scarcely less polite or less witty than our own, have a familiarity, a bluntness and a homeliness which make them sound oddly in our ears. The following is from Charles' speech, at the opening of his second parliament in 1661: "I will not conclude without telling you some news,—news that I think will be very acceptable to you, and therefore I should think myself unkind and illnatured if I did not impart it to you. I have been put in mind by my friends that it was now time to marry, and I have thought so myself ever since I came into England. But there appeared difficulties enough in the choice, though many overtures have been made to me; and if I should never marry until I could make such a choice, against which there could be no foresight of any inconvenience that may ensue, you will live to see an old bachelor, which I think you do not desire to do. I can now tell you, not only that I am resolved to marry, but to whom I am resolved to marry. If God pleases, it is with the daughter of Portugal. And I will make all the haste I can to fetch you a Queen hither, who I doubt not will bring great blessings with her to me and you." In the same session Charles finished one of his speeches thus: "The mention of my wife's arrival puts me in mind to desire you to put that compliment upon her that her entrance into the town may be with more decency than the ways will now suffer it to be; and to that purpose I pray that you would quickly despatch and pass such laws as are before you, in order to the amending of those ways, in order that she may not find Whitehall surrounded with water."

The Washington National Monument.—A late number of the Washington Intelligencer contains a table exhibiting the whole receipts and expenditures of this association, from its establishment in 1834 to October 1839. The whole amount received by the Treasurer, Samuel H. Smith, has been: from contributors, twenty-nine thousand three hundred and thirty dollars and eighty-four cents; interest on stocks, four thousand five hundred and fifty-seven dollars and sixty-nine cents; in Brandon Bank notes, from contributors three hundred and twenty dollars; total, $34,208 52. Of this, $33-105 65 has been invested in stocks, the value of which is estimated at about $800 over their prime cost; two hundred and thirty-eight dollars has been expended for the contingent expenses of the Treasurer; two hundred and twenty-seven dollars for the exchange of bank notes and drafts; thirty-one dollars for postage and ninety-five dollars for legal and other expenses. This leaves a balance of five hundred and eleven dollars cash; of which three hundred and twenty dollars, Brandon, has been sent to New Orleans for collection, which may be worth ten dollars. The Treasurer has also thirteen dollars in counterfeit, and five dollars in uncurrent notes. The actual available balance of cash, deposited in the Bank of Washington to the credit of the society, is $174 56.

The Brandon and counterfeit part of the above funds are certainly the most curious portions of the statement. Whoever thought to buy the credit of liberality with such currency must have estimated fame at a cheap rate.

The British Empire in the East Indies.—This empire has within a single Century, risen from the humble rank of a trading factory to an imporium of more than 100,000,000 of inhabitants, with an equal number (100,000,000) who, though under their own princes, still obey the British power; extends 1,250,000 English square miles of the most fertile part of the surface of the earth (from eight deg. latitude to 35 deg. and from 68 deg. longitude to 92 degrees,) and consequently contains a polar attitude the same as Messina to Turnea, and a breadth as from Lisbon to Smolenski; which shows that it cannot be compared to any thing in Europe, either as to size or population, any more than in difference of climate and temperature—but that it must be compared with Europe itself. This empire has within its boundaries the Gauts and Himalay Mountains, always covered with ice, which raise, the former 12,000, the latter 27,000 feet above the level of the sea; it is intersected by rivers, each of which, like the Indus, Jumna, Sutledge, Ganges, and Brahmapotra, offers a navigation of not less than 1,200 English miles, and the two last mentioned, during certain months, pour into the Bay of Bengal a mass of water containing more than 100,000,000 cubic feet in one hour. It has for its defence a standing army excellently disciplined, and considerably greater than that of Austria—and a revenue half as large again as that of Russia. Within its boundaries there are towns which, like Calcutta, have a population of a million; others which, like Delhi, Aggra, Benares, Luckno, and Poona, reckon from 300,000 to 500,000 inhabitants; and others again—Madras and Bombay, which carry on a trade greater than that of Ancient Carthage, Venice, or Genoa, during their most flourishing periods. It has kings as vassals, with a greater number of subjects than Naples of dynasties older than the Bourbons, and the emperor in Hindostan, the descendant of Tamerlane—(Thimur Khau,) the great Mogul, still sits on his golden throne, in Delhi, surrounded by all the grandeur of the East, himself only a prisoner in the power of the British.

From the "Wilkesbarre Advocate."

THIN SHOES.

Epitaph on the gravestone of a young lady:

"Died of thin shoes, January, 1839."—Exchange paper.

If the truth was always to be found in an epitaph, and epitaphs on every gravestone—such inscriptions as the above would be as thick in our repositories of death, as fallen leaves in autumn.

The practice of wearing thin shoes, and clothing in light garments generally, is too common among American women, and cannot be too strongly animadverted upon. A thin pair of shoes undoubtedly set off and display to advantage a pretty foot; but is the word of admiration from some senseless coxcomb in a crowded ball-room, an equivalent for the hacking cough and hectic flush—or the ruddy tint of health so lightly esteemed by our fair country women as to be carelessly exchanged for the red harbinger of death, blasting the cheek where it blooms!

Is a foot, compressed into the smallest possible space by kid and morocco—a prisoner there—and which if placed and kept there, against the will of the wearer, would be called torture; is a foot thus bondaged, we say, because its diminutiveness may attract the eye of some jockey in humanity, and exposing its owners both by the quality and manner of its covering, to cold, cough and consumption, to have such meretricious advantages compared with such probable fatal results? Let those who thus throw themselves in the suicide's path, reflect upon what they are doing.

We say to every one, wear good, strong, thick shoes and overshoes, whenever there is mud, water, snow or ice in the street. Never mind if your feet do look a little large, ladies; even if they should appear clumsy, do not fret. A little looking foot is not of so such importance to health and happiness as a good pair of lungs; and those who act the part of wisdom will dress to ensure health, and let fashion and fashion's fools go to destruction in the way that they love to travel.

The Smaller Methodist Bodies.—We have had an opportunity of glancing at a London work,—which, as far as we are aware, has not yet been republished in this country,—with the following title:

"An Analytical and Comparative View of all Religions, now existant among mankind: with their internal diversities of Creed and Profession. By Josiah Conder, author of 'The Modern Traveller,' &c. &c.

From this work, which was printed in 1838, we extract the following particulars respecting various organizations of Wesleyan Methodists:

1. The Methodist New Connexion.—"The New Methodists (somtimes called, from their most prominent leader, "Kilhamites,") differ from the old Methodists in the more popular Constitution of their Church government, the preachers and the lay-deputies chosen by the people, being associated in all meetings for business. They are numerous, chiefly in the northern counties." Their number in 1838, is thus stated: Preachers, 95—Members, 19,899. They originated in 1797.

2. The Primitive Methodists. "Since the formation of the New Connexion, other separations from the original body have taken place. The largest of these is the connexion of "Primitive Methodists," usually denominated "Ranters," who profess to adhere more strictly to the original description of Methodism, and, in opposition to the decision of the Conference, in 1803, admit of female preachers. From the minutes of their fourteenth Conference, in 1833, it appears that they had then 552 chapels, 102 circuits, 290 circuit preachers, 3,515 local preachers, and 48,421 members; the increase of the latter, during the year preceding, being 7,120."

3. Bryanites.—"Another detached body, called Bryanites, who are found chiefly in the western counties, reckoned, a few years ago, 13,000 members."

4. Independent Methodists.—"The "Independent Methodists," who have only lay-teachers, rejecting "a hired ministry," consisted of about 4000 members."

5. Wesleyan Protestant Methodists.—"The Wesleyan Protestant Methodists, a more recent secession, principally at Leeds, at their first Conference in September, 1839, reported 2,840 members."

6. The Methodist Protestant Church.—"In the United States, where the parent body is under a species of Episcopal government, a considerable division took place, in 1827-8, on the principle of having a Representative Assembly for the government of the Church. On Nov. 2d, 1830, a Convention of 49 ministers and 32 lay-delegates, favorable to this plan, assembled at Baltimore, and agreed upon an instrument, for "The Constitution and Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church." The number of its ministers now amounts to about 200, and the members to 30,000."

7. The Wesleyan Association.—"We have yet to mention another important schism in the Parent Body in this country, consequent upon the recent expulsion of Dr. Warren, and those who took part with him. The body has assumed the title of "The Wesleyan Association." Some overtures have been made with a view to a union between this body of Seceders and the New Connexion, which had a similar origin, and is based upon similar principles. Hitherto, however, the desired union has not been consumated. The Wesleyan Association comprises 57 itinerant preachers, 167 chapels,* and 21,275 members in Society."†

SUMMARY.

	Preachers,	Members.
1. New Connexion,	95	19,899
2. Primitive Methodists,	290	48,421
3. Bryanites,		13,000
4. Independent Methodists,		4,000
5. Wesleyan Protestant Methodists,		2,840
6. Methodist Protestants,	200	30,000
6. Wesleyan Association,	57	21,275
	642	139,435
		642
		140,077
Add Local Preachers of Prim. Meth.		3,514
Total,		143,591

It must be remembered that this, after all, is a very imperfect account of the numbers of Methodists not associated either with the original Wesleyan Methodist Connexion or the Methodist Episcopal Church. Several Bodies, in this country, are not noticed. Of those which are named, the numbers are taken, in some cases, from old reports—in one, more than ten years old. There can scarcely be a doubt that the various Seceding Methodists number, at least, 200,000. What but a badly organized government could have caused such separations among Christians? And what other separations, by the same cause, are now in prospect! Will they not— must they not continue, until Lay-Representative shall triumph? And shall not this principle re-unite the fragments in one, just, peaceful, magnificent, and glorious organization? Time will show.—Meth. Prot. Letter Press.

*Exclusive of 343 preaching places, rooms, &c.

†Dr. Warren has since entered the Established Church. His friends are erecting a chapel for him in Manchester.

Robert A. Forsyth, late paymaster in the United States Army, accused by the press as a defaulter, has paid over his balances.

AGRICULTURAL.

Salting Straw.—We have heard different opinions about the propriety of salting straw for cattle. Some say it is best to sprinkle the straw with salt and water; others, of equal intelligence and experience, say it is best to give them the salt separately. After considerable attention and inquiry upon the subject, we are satisfied that it is best to give them the salt separately. Cattle need a certain amount of salt for health; they instinctively know how much they need for this purpose. If you put it where they can get at it when they please, they will lick the proper quantity and no more. If you deal it out to them on straw you may either give too much or too little; if the latter, their strength is not promoted; if the former, it tends to produce the scurvy. If any person wishes to satisfy himself on this subject, let him fill two racks with straw; the one strongly sprinkled with brine and the other without any. He will find his cattle will feed at the salted rack until they have enough of the saline substance, and they will then walk off to the other. Now, if they were compelled to satisfy their hunger at the first, they would take more salt than they otherwise would, which fact should satisfy any reflecting man, that it would be better to place the salt in a situation where they could take the amount their instinct indicated; for

"Value reason o'er instinct all you can,
In this 'tis God that acts, in that 'tis man."

Time to Gather Apples.—Apples should be gathered before they are touched by the frost; especially winter and spring fruit, as it hastens their maturity and depreciates their quality. A few years ago we let our Rhode Island Greenings get some frosted before we pulled them, and by the middle of February they had turned yellow and bursted. The following season, we took them before the frost, and they retained their greenish color and their flavor, until late in the spring. We have kept Newtown Pippins until late in June, retaining their firmness and flavor; but last fall they got some frost before we gathered them, and they are at this period on the decline, having turned yellow and exhibiting symptoms of fast decay.

Some people are under the impression that it is best to gather apples at a certain time of the moon. It is said that any bruise they may get when the moon is in a particular phasis will dry up and that the apple will keep better. We find there is more in the character of the season than in any relation to the moon in which fruit may be gathered. A few years since, our Greening trees were so very full that the wind blew off a considerable number of them,—they fell at every stage of the moon,—most of them had bruises; we gathered and laid them on the cellar floor. The weather turned cool immediately after they were taken in, and we do not believe one half bushel out of twenty-five bushels rotted.—They sold in the market for just as much as those which were carefully picked. This year, in consequence of the warmness of the fall, the fruit rotted very extensively; even that which was picked ever so careful, and no difference at what stage of the moon's phases.

From the Zanesville Gazette.

LIME.

Mr. Editor:—In looking over the Agricultural department of the Gazette of October 9, 1839, I find some very judicious remarks on experiments and the manner in which they should be conducted, but it strikes me that the following paragraph is liable to mislead: "We once knew a man who was in the habit of using considerable lime on his land, and every year as he thought to profit, till by making an experiment he ascertained that the increase of his crops had been attributed to a wrong cause." Now if the increase was not attributable to the lime, to what was it?

My own experience is decidedly in favor of lime as a manure, and as our Muskingum hills abound in limestone, I would recommend a trial of its efficacy. I was led from the above paragraph in your remarks to observe on your plan the result of an experiment:—I had limed about half an acre of my cornfield last spring, making a mark to show its limits. On gathering I husked eight rows of that which had not been limed, making in measure about one third of an acre: it yielded eleven bushels. A few days afterwards I husked out eight rows of that which had been limed: it measured 15 bushels. This was at the rate of 12 bushels difference per acre in favor of the lime; for except that, the soil was as near alike as could be found.

In conversing with neighbor K. a few days ago, he stated that he believed limed ground often produced twice as much corn as that of equal quality not limed.

Respectfully, S. Rodman.

Springfield Tp., Feb. 29, 1840.

THE FARRIER.

A Saddle horse.—A horse with thin shoulders, and a flat chest, whose fore feet stand boldly forward and even his neck rising semicircularly from the points of those thin shoulders to his head, may be justly said to have a light forehead, and be fitter for a saddle than a collar.—As most horses in the hands of farmers are drawn, while they are young, which notwithstanding their make, occasions them to move heavily—if you desire a nimble footed horse, choose one that has never been drawn.

In buying a horse—inquire into four other things, viz., biting, kicking, stopping and starting.

A horse may be sound though guilty of all four, which a man can hardly discover, by barely looking on him; so I refer to his keeper.

When you are buying, it is common for the owners to say in praise of his horse. That he has neither splint, spavin nor windgall.

The splint.—The splint is a fixed callous excrescence or hard knob growing upon the flat of the in or outside, and sometimes both, of the shank bones; a little under and not far from the knee, and may be seen and felt.

To take it off, shave the part, and beat it with a stick, prick it with a nail in a flat stick, clap on a blistering plaster as strong as you can make it; let it be on three days, then take it off, rub the place with half a drachm of the oil of origanum, and as much oil of vitrol, mixed; if the first does not do, rub it a second time with the oils; if you find any remains of the splint, apply a second blistering plaster, for twenty-four hours; walk him moderately, to prevent any swelling or excresence from not settling.

Most young horses have splints, more or less and they will occasion lameness while they are coming upon the bone; but after they have come to the firmness of bones, they do not lame a horse, nor is such a horse the worse for use, though he may not look so well to the eye.

The Spavin.—The spavin is of the same nature, and appears in the like manner, on the instep bone, behind, and not far below the hoof. To take it off, beat the bone with a bleeding stick, and rub it; then annoint it with the oil of origanum, tie a wet cloth about it, and with a hot brick applied to it soak it in the oil till it be dry.

Windgalls.—Windgalls are several swellings just above the fet-lock joints of all the four legs; they seem when felt to be full of wind or jelly, but they never lame a horse; the splint and spavin always do. All three proceed from one and the same cause which is hard riding, travelling too far in one day or carrying too great a weight when young.

Setting out on a journey.—Whenever you intend to travel, hunt, or only ride out for the air, let your horse's feet be examined sometime before, to see that his shoes are fast and sit easy on his feet, for on that depends the pleasure and safety of your journey.

Directions for mounting.—Before you mount, look round your horse to see if his bridle, curb, saddle and girths, are all fitted to their proper places. Always accustom your horse to stand firm and without a motion, till you are fixed in your seat, and your clothes be adjusted.

Directions for going.—When you would have him go, teach him to move by pressing close your knees, or speaking to him, without using whip or spur; for a horse will learn any thing; and a good quality may as easily be taught him as a bad one would.

Corrections ill-timed.—Corrections well-timed.—An easy rein.—Most men whip and spur a horse, to make him go faster, before they bid him; but it is cruel treatment to beat a generous creature before you have signified your mind to him, by some token, which he may be taught to understand, who would obey you if he knew your pleasure; it is time enough to correct him when he refuses, or re you. Do not haul his head about too tight a rein, it deadens his m besides, he will carry you safer, and better care of his steps with an easy h that a heavy one; much depends the quietness of the bridle hand.
your elbows steady, and you cannot his mouth. Again nothing discove bad horseman, even at a distance, so r as throwing his arms and legs about; it is easier to the horse and rider, an can carry you farther by ten miles a when you sit as steady upon him you were a part of himself.

FROM WASHINGTON CI

From the Correspondent of the Zanesville zette.

Washington, Saturday Mornni
March 6th, 1840.

My letter this morning must be b as the proceedings of Congress for last few days offer but little of interes your readers generally. The time both houses has been taken up in con ering local bills.

On Monday last, Mr. Lumpkin
Georgia, introduced into the Senat resolution for an adjournment of the p ent session of Congress some time in M next.

He said he saw no necessity for p tracting the session, and he was for fix a day of adjournment that business mi be attended to, and members go home their constituents. He would say to S ators and Representatives, "Gentlem you have been long enough feeding of the public corn-crib. It is time should go home and feed out of your c corn-crib. Look out, and see the spr bursting forth with brightness and ge ality, and clothing the earth with v dure, and inviting man to industrious useful pursuits." He added, that he tended to persevere in this matter.

Mr. Webster concurred most heart with Mr. Lumpkin, and would go w him most cordially and earnestly in deavoring in accomplishing the object had in view. The resolution for an propriation to continue the Cumberla Road, coming up in the House, Mr. B of Tennessee, made an able speech in vor of the resolution. The previc question was demanded, but before t vote was taken, the House adjourned.

On Wednesday, the House refused suspend the rules for the purpose of king up the Sub-Treasury bill.

The Senate has passed a bill autho zing the Secretary of the Treasury compromise with the sureties of Samu Swartwout, and to extend for a long period the several acts now in force f
the relief of insolvent debtors of the Ur ted States. The bill to continue the o fice of Commissioner of Pensions nee only the signature of the President to b come a law. The salary of the commi sioners has been reduced from $3.000
$2.500.

New Jersey Election.—On Thursda
the different committees were called upo for reports, when the Committee on Ele tions made a long report, which conclude with declaring that Mr. Dickerson an the other administration claimants fo seats as representatives from New Jerse had received a majority of the lawfu votes.

The Speaker stated that the questio would then be on Mr. Fillmore's motio to re-committed the report, in order t give the minority an opportunity to pre sent their report. Mr. Duncan appeale from the decision of the chair, and hi decision was reversed, when Mr. Petri ken instantly moved a resolution, declar ing in favor of the Van Buren member from N. Jersey, and requiring the Speak er to swear them in, whenever they shoul present themselves. It was manifest tha the decree was that the resolution mus pass. Mr. P. called the previous questio on his resolution, but before the vote was taken, the House adjourned.

And on yesterday [Friday] several members appealed to Mr. Petriken t withdraw his call for the previous ques tion, but he refused, and persisted in his call for a direct vote. One of the minor ity of the committee on elections asked for a suspension of the rules to enable him to present the report of the minority, but the rules were not suspended. Finally, the House proceeded to the orders of the day, when the Speaker presented, by leave, sundry documents which he had received from New Jersey, relative to the election in that state. They were refer red to the committee on elections. Mr.
Fillmore addressed the house until a late hour in support of the motion to have these documents printed and the whole evidence before the house before the final vote is taken on the subject. The house adjourned before he concluded his re marks. But the Van Buren members will be admitted. Yours, in haste, M.

Something Singular.—We conversed yesterday, with a little girl of five years, who has a mother of 25, a grandmother of 45, a great-grandmother of 65, and a great-great-grandmother of 85, all living! It adds to the singularity of the event, that each of the parties, from the youngest to the oldest, is the "only daughter" of her parents. We should be right glad to see the whole five taking tea together. It would warm the heart.—Boston Trans.

It is rumored that the Seminoles are busy training an army of Rattle Snakes to act against the whites in Florida as an offset to the Blood Hounds. Such a thing is just as possible as that the Blood Hounds will succeed in extirpating the savages.

THE RECORDER.

ZANESVILLE.

WEDNESDAY, ... MARCH 18, 1840.

We acknowledge the receipt of all the Nos. f the Letter-Press.

The March number of the Casket with the isual amount of interesting matter, was receiv- d some ten days since.

The March number of the Lady's Book is re- eived, and we give from it an enteresting arti- le on the English Essayists, in this paper.

The watch and jewelry store of Mr. C. S. Keyes, f Grand Gulf, Mississippi, was robbed on the ight of the 27th ult. of property to the amount f ten thousand dollars; supposed to have been one by four robbers, one of whom (Clarke) was hortly after arrested at Natchez, from whom one- ourth of the stolen goods was recovered.

A number of pens have discribed the eloquence f Mr. Corwin's late speech in Congress on the Cumberland Road instructions. It is said to ave amused both friends and opponents. The llowing extract is from the correspondent of he New York Express:

"Mr. Corwin possesses all the qualifications of mind and manner which makes the perfect ora- or. He puts his antagonist to death in a manner o courteous and refined,—with so much good lature and for so many good reasons,—that like astings before Burke, the opponent, guilty or ot guilty, feels that he deserves the censure and ondemnation sought for."

LITERARY REPOSITORY.—We acknowledge the eceipt of the three first numbers of Mr. Hildreth's Literary Repository," from Lowell, Mass.— Ve take this kindly of Mr. H., and should he rant any little service done in our way, if he ill give us a hint it shall be cheerfully attended o. We noticed the "Repository" in our 27th umber, as a valuable literary sheet. It seems hat the public so appreciate it, as the edition rst struck is exhausted and the numbers before s is a re-print.

YOUTH'S CABINET.—We have received the umber of this paper for March 5th, but have not eceived one before for several weeks,—previous o which it came to us as regularly as any paper n our exchange list. At the request of its edi- or we published his prospectus, and gave it five nsertions, and therefore consider ourself, accord- ng to his own proposals, entitled to receive his aper. We cannot, however, think there is any ntentional wrong in this matter. This, tho' small paper, we consider a valuable exchange, nd perhaps draw as heavy from it for our columns s any other paper we receive, and perhaps more berally than any other journal in the west draws om it.

A letter from S. S. Parr, pastor of the First aptist church of this town, to the Columbus ross and Journal says:

"We have received into the First Church since came to this place, fifty-two; forty-five of whom ave been baptized. Our brethren of the Mar- et Street church have been much blessed, and esterday Bro. Miles and myself, with our respec- ve congregations, repaired to the river side, nd in conjunction waited upon twenty precious uls into the liquid grave of their adorable Re- eemer. I am happy to say that the two church- s are united in the great work of benevolence nd love."

The same paper states that the number receiv- d into Mr. Lynd's church, Cincinnati, in the te revival, by baptism, is one hundred and wenty.

TAKE CARE WHAT YOU EAT.—About the 8th ult. Ir. Solomon Robinson, son and brother, residing n the eastern part of Morgan county, Ohio, ere repairing a mill dam. On removing some ubbish they found a root which they took to be pikenard, which they divided among them, and ach ate a considerable portion of it. Shortly fter the son complained of feeling sick. At this uncture they were called to dinner; the two rothers started to the house, and the son ap- roached the creek to obtain a drink. But when e former found the latter did not follow they eturned to see what was the cause, when they ound him prostrate upon the ice convulsed with pasms. They immediately conveyed him to the ouse, when on their arrival thither the other wo were taken in like manner. The son was ead in one hour. A physician being immedi- tely called, he pronounced one of the others ir- ecoverably gone, but by bleeding they seemed to let immediate relief from their excruciating ufferings, and both the others ultimately recov- d.

The root was said by some to be what is called Wild Parsnip, but it is somewhat doubtful as to he kind of vegetable.

MARKETS.

ZANESVILLE.—Wheat is down to 40 cents and lour to $2 50 a 2 75. The two mills in Zanes- ille received 19,000 bushels last week; there are our other mills in the suburbs, if they all receiv- d as much it would make fifty-seven thousand ushels sold in our town in one week. In conse- uence of low prices farmers have been keeping heir wheat back.

Flour in New York, the latest accounts $5¼ nd dull; Philadelphia, 4 87½ a $5; Baltimore, 62½ a 4 75.

Wheat in Massillon 50 cents.

News by the Great Western discouraging for our.

PHILADELPHIA, MARCH 10.—Flour.—The lour market during the last two weeks has been nusually animated, and the sales larger than hey have been for many years past for export, ut for home consumption the demand has been imited. Sales for export on the Delaware at 12½ per bbl. for Brandywine Flour, and $5 for ennsylvania; one lot at a mere shade less. On road and Market streets, sales at $5 a 4 87½, hiefly at 4 87½ to 4 94, per bbl. at the former rice, for cash; in some cases on time, with inter- st added, at the latter rate. Within two weeks bout forty-seven thousand bbls. of wheat Flour ave been taken in this market for shipment.— Rye Flour is steady at 3 dollars, with sales.—Bicknell.

METHODIST PROTESANT BANNER.—We have received the three first numbers of this paper, the prospectus of which will be found on our last page. We think the influence of this little sheet will be felt in the south.

There is an interesting meeting now in progress in the neighborhood of this office, at the Springfield chapel; ten were received into the church at love feast on Monday morning last, and the meeting is still continued.

Our Episcopal brethren have had quite an excitement for some time past at the Asbury chapel, about three miles west. A number have been received into that church.

The following is from the South Western Christian Advocate of the 7th inst.

"It will be recollected that some weeks ago we published a letter from J. J. Amos to the 'Western Recorder,' complaining that the Reformers or Protestant Methodists neglected the poor in not sending out itinerant preachers. Our attention has been called to a reply to that letter, and we consider it due to all parties that we should make an extract from that reply."

We omit the extract from Bro. Bassett's "vindication," but give the following remarks of the editor of the Advocate at the close:

"We are of opinion that we mistook the proceedings of the Ohio (Protestant) Conference for the Gen. Conference, in Pittsburgh. 'Let justice be done though the heavens fall.'"

Now this we think highly creditable to the editor, Mr. STRINGFIELD, as a gentleman and as a christian. The number of the Advocate containing the re-publication of Bro. Amos' letter and the editorial remarks thereon, did not reach us, but the subsequent number, which made allusion thereto, did. The remarks which we saw did the Methodist Protestant church much injustice. But by giving a liberal extract from the "Vindication," and by the above remarks, this matter has been set right, and our brother editor has evinced an honorable candor which has gained upon our confidence.

At the time we published Mr. Amos' letter we were aware that it was calculated to mislead.—But as our columns are open to the laity to examine the doings of the public functionaries of the church, and as Mr. A. was our personal friend and a worthy man, we could not deny him a hearing. But as matters have turned out, we think no ultimate injury will happen from this thing. Mr. A's mind has been relieved,—the subject has been 'vindicated,' and it has afforded an opportunity to a brother editor to exhibit an act of honesty which does him great credit, and is pleasing for us to contemplate.

As it respets the disposition of the Methodist Protestant Church to extend the gospel to the poor, we are of opinion that there is not a set of men in America who have done more for the promulgation of the gospel, according to their ability, both among the ministry and the laity, than the founders of the Methodist Protestant Church. Without a large amount of sacrifice on their part the church could never have been placed on the same footing on which she now stands. We have little doubt, if she had the ability, simply to CLOTHE and FEED her ministers, she would soon send the gospel to all the poor of the land.

OHIO LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

On the 7th. inst. Mr. Tod, from a select committee, on leave, reported back the bill to amend the act for the prevention of immoral practices, with amendments. Before the amendments had been disposed of

Mr. Bissell expressed dissatisfaction with the details of the bill, and preferred waiting another year. He therefore moved its postponement until the first Monday of December next. Which motion, after some discussion he withdrew.

Mr. Henderson then made some remarks. As a friend to the protection of religious meetings, he feared that the bill, as amended, is not as good as the old law. He animadverted upon a practice, in which he said the gentleman from Trumbull had been very successful, of getting bills to which he is unfriendly, referred to him, by which means, he incorporates provisions that neutralize the effect of those to which he objects. He said there was no vote of that gentleman, to show that he was a friend of the bill. For the purpose of affording some of the friends of the bill an opportunity of considering the amendments, he moved to recommit the bill to a select committee of three.

Mr. Tod replied to Mr. Henderson, denying that there was any ground for the charge made against him. After which the motion to recommit failed, and one of the amendments was agreed to, and the other disagreed to.

Some discussion then ensued upon the nature of the amendments, after which Messrs. Henderson and Bissell withdrew their opposition.

Mr. Utter and Mr. Glover then opposed the bill, after which the Senate took a recess. 2 o'clock, P. M.

Senate again met.

The bill to amend the act for the prevention of certain immoral practices being upon its final passage, a motion was made to recommit the bill to the committee on the Judiciary, with instructions to strike out of the bill the words "goods, wares, or merchandize," so as to exempt pedlars from the penalties imposed upon the venders of spirituous liquors, &c.—This motion was discussed at some length; and before the question was taken, the bill was laid upon the table.

There has been a considerable effort on the part of the Methodist Churches and those who are in the habit of holding camp and other meetings in the grove, to procure an Act to protect them from disturbances while in the enjoyment of their undoubted privileges. As many petitions have been forwarded to the Legislature to procure legal protection, as have been forwarded, perhaps, for any other object. To meet the prayer of these petitions the above bill was reported. A few at its introduction manifested considerable hostility to it, but their opposition was overruled by an overwhelming majority. These malecontents appear to have gathered some strength and are now doing their utmost to defeat the object of the petitions by adding amendments to the bill which will paralyze its efficiency. We will give no opinion about the motives of the opponents of this bill. They may be honest, only wishing to guard against ecclesiastical encroachments, or they may be themselves a part of the rabble rout against which the proposed law is designed to operate, and therefore are opposing what they fear. But for the want of a personal knowledge of the party, we can hazard no conjecture as to which motive actuates them.

The subject involved in these petitions is one that we are well acquainted with. The petitioners are a numerous, respectable and law-abiding portion of the community. And probably no equal portion of citizens have been more grossly imposed on, for more than twenty years, by a worthless set of vagabonds, than they. It does really seem to us surprising, that the Legislature should manifest such reluctance to extend to these petitioners the protection which the principles of eternal justice call for. What is a Legislature for but to protect by law the peaceful against the oppressor?

A motion is made to strike out "goods, wares, or merchandize" so as to protect pedlars. Who are those pedlars that so interest the sympathies of honorable members? We have been favored with a visit from a succession of them every few weeks for several years. They are a set of unprincipled Europeans that can scarcely utter the English so as to be understood, one of whom will pack as much as a jackass, and who are all disposed to impose on the ignorance of the public, selling their goods, often, for 100 per cent. more than they are worth. They are a real nuisance to the community, and we were not much surprised to see petitions offered to the Legislature for their suppression. Yet these are the men that honorable Legislators are disposed to protect in preference to civil, honest citizens. We saw one of these "pedlars" a few years since at a camp-meeting in Licking county, with thirty or forty gross of mint vials, who stationed himself near the stand, and drew around him a whole crowd to annoy the meeting. There was no doubt but a large portion of these were filled with brandy. Perhaps the honorable member wishes to protect these pedlars, so that should he take it into his head to go up to camp-meeting about election time, he might have an opportunity of wetting his whistle from a mint vial.

ITEMS.

Gentility is a virtue of the mind, not of high birth.

That time is partly lost, which could have been better employed.

During the recent great flood on the Connecticut river, a man at Barnet, was carried down twenty-two miles on a cake of ice, but escaped.

The Poughkeepsie Charter election is reported as having resulted in favor of the Whigs, by a majority of about 300.

Of 4614 marriage licences granted in Virginia, in 1827, 1047 were to those who could not write their own names.

TRUE.—It is bad enough when men agree to cheat each other—but to call in the lawyers to cheat both parties is a great deal badder.

A gentleman visiting the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, asked one of the pupils "What is eternity?" and received for an answer, "It is the life-time of the Almighty."

COTTON LOST.—The Marion, Ala. Herald says that several thousand bales of cotton have been carried off from the banks of the Bigby and the Cahawba by the sudden rise of those rivers.

A new transportation line between Baltimore and Pittsburgh will go into operation on the opening of the Susquehannah and Tide Water Canal, which event will speedily take place.

The following advertisement appears in one of our New England papers: "Wanted, a man to take charge of a milk cart and horse, entertaining abolition principles."

Some villains at Smyrna, Delaware, recently seized Daniel Neall, a member of the Society of Friends in Philadelphia, and tarred and feathered him. The reason of the outrage is not stated.

The Troy municipal election has resulted in the re-election of Mr. Heart, Mayor, by a majority of about six hundred. The Common Council, so far as ascertained on Tuesday, stood 11 Whigs, 2 Van Buren men, three seats unascertained.

The National Intelligencer states that the custom of "pairing off" has been introduced for the first time into general practice among the members of the House of Representatives. If about one hundred were paired off, and kept off, the public business would certainly be expedited.

SHORT CUT.—The Connecticut river has cut through the Isthmus near Hockanum, and thus shortened the route of the river four miles, and spoiled the beautiful curve in the river which formerly made a great point in the view from Mount Holyoke.

VILLAINOUS FRAUD.—While Brandon money is daily selling in the streets of Jackson, Miss., at nine cents on the dollar, it is said that the Directors of the bank are every day discounting the trash to swindling agents, for circulation. The very State of Mississippi is bankrupt, and unable to pay its legislature and the current expenses of government.

TO STOP ACCIDENTS.—The Canajoharie Radii, edited and published by a mute, after mentioning the accident by which a deaf and dumb man was recently killed on the Utica Rail Road, says, "there should be a law made, that when any man was run over by the cars, they should hang three of the first Directors they could catch."—We rather think this would be effectual.

A MAN DROWNED.—A man whose name is supposed to have been Jacob Steiner, from Miamisburgh, Ohio, and on his way to Pottsville, Pa., was drowned in the Ohio river, near Wheeling, on Friday last.

THE BANKS OF MARYLAND.—The Senate of Maryland have, by a vote of 11 to 9, passed a Bank Bill, which fixes the period of resumption on the 15th of January next, or within ten days after the Banks in Philadelphia or Virginia shall resume, if those Banks resume before that day.

A FIRE IN NEWARK.—While the cars passed through Newark, N. J., on Friday night, a large fire was observed raging in Mechanic street. A number of houses were in flames, and the fire appeared to be spreading rapidly; but no further particulars could be obtained, owing to the speed of the cars.

NAMES.—Emma is from the German, and signifies a nurse; Caroline from the Latin, noble-minded; George, Greek, a farmer; Martha, Hebrew, bitterness; the beautiful though common name Mary is Hebrew, and means a drop of salt water, a tear; Sophia from Greek, wisdom; Susan from Hebrew, a lily; Thomas from Hebrew, a twin; Robert from the German, famous in council.

INTERESTING QUESTION.—At a debating club the question was discussed, "Whether there is more happiness in the possession or pursuit of an object." "Mr. President," said a young orator, "suppose I was a courtin' a gal, and she was for to run away, and I was for to run arter her, would'nt I be happier when I cotched her than when I was running arter her?"

BE CIVIL.—Many persons imagine that unless they behave with rudeness towards their superiors, they cannot command respect. The homage done to such individuals may appear like respect, but the inward feeling in every instance is that of contempt. One's conduct should always be civil and politeness can alone disarm the malice of pride, and form a guard against the venom of the vulgar.

CENSUS OF THE UNITED STATES FOR 1840.—The sixth census of the United States is to be taken the present year, commencing June 1st. By the late act of Congress for taking the census of 1840, the President of the United States was directed to cause the statistics of the country, relating to Agriculture, Manufactures, Mines, Commerce, Fisheries, &c., to be taken, as well as the condition of the people with regard to education.

CHARLESTON.—The Charleston Courier of the 3d inst. says:—The spring business of Charleston we are happy to say, appears to have taken—like the peach and apple blossoms, now in full bloom—an early start, and our wholesale dealers have for a week past, been pretty briskly employed. We are glad of it. Something was wanted to shake the dust from their jackets, and prevent them from getting rusty in their vocation.

LITERARY INSTITUTIONS OF OHIO.—There are fourteen incorporated Colleges in this State, viz: 7 Literary—4 Literary and Theological—1 Medical—1 Literary and Medical—1 Medical, Literary and Legal.

The aggregate libraries to the above amount to 35,000 volumes, including 6000, belonging to different Literary Clubs and Societies, attached to the different Colleges. The aggregate number of Students is estimated at 3000.

The notorious Stephen Borroughs, so well known for his rogueries in early life, for his counterfeit money, died recently at Three Rivers, Lower Canada, at the probable age of about eighty.—Burroughs had been in numerous prisons for various crimes, and made many surprising escapes from them—and finally took up the business of being a "respectable man!" in the latter part of his life. He was the son of a very worthy clergyman of Coventry, Connecticut.

RIGHT OF PETITION.—The resolutions which were introduced into the Lower House of the N. York Legislature, offering the right of petition and disapproving the late decision of Congress having passed that body by a vote of 85 ayes, to 10 noes has also passed the Senate by a vote of 20 to 4. N. York was one of the earliest and most strenuous of the States in asserting the right of petition, and procuring its incorporation in the Constitution. The State still remains of the same opinion. No party there can be brought to sustain the late resolution of Congress.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

BLACK HAWK'S REMAINS.—The Burlington (Iowa) Gazette of the 25th ultimo, states that the grave of this celebrated Indian Chief has been plundered and his bones carried off. The manner of the outrage indicates that they were taken by some white person for the purpose of speculation. If this be so, the detection of the perpetrator will follow upon the first attempt that is made to use his ill-gotten acquisition for such a purpose.

The affront is one which the tribe of Black Hawk will never forgive nor forget, unless restitution is made and due punishment inflicted on the criminal.

MAIL ROBBERY.—The mail coach from the west to Columbus was, at 12 o'clock last night, stopped by two men about three miles on this side of Springfield.—There was no other person with the coach but the driver. One of the robbers put a pistol at his breast and forced him to halt his team, while the other broke open the coach and abducted the Cincinnati letter bag. This was the only bag taken. As soon as the driver was at liberty he put his horses to their full speed, and gave the alarm at his stopping place. A diligent search, we understand, was immediately commenced in the neighborhood.—Columbus Journal.

THE SMOKE DISPERSER.—Great inconvenience is often experienced, by smoking chimneys, rendered so in consequence of deflected currents of wind from higher adjacent buildings or hills. One of the best contrivances for preventing this evil, is one termed the smoke disperser. It is made of sheet iron, some what in the shape of a tub inverted and made to fit closely over the top of the chimney. The sides and top of this vessel are to be thickly punched with holes, from the inside outward, so that the burr or raised irregular rim round each hole may project outward in the direction of the current of smoke. In punching these holes, the tool should have a rounded point, and not be one with sharp edges, otherwise it will cut out a piece of the sheet iron, instead of bending it outwards, and would make it less effective.

THE BIBLE.—The following preamble and resolution adopted at a late meeting of the "Butler County Bible Society," were recommended to the consideration of school directors in every section of the State.

Whereas, it is all-important to the best interests of society and the stability of our institution, that the youth of this Commonwealth be deeply induced with the principles of virtue and no means can be devised so effectually to secure this end as the inculcation of the truths of the Bible: And whereas, the State Society has appropriated one thousand dollars to assist in introducing the Bible as a text book into the Common Schools of this State. Therefore

Resolved, That the School Directors be requested to use their influence to have the Bible introduced into all the public Schools of the country as a school book.—Pennsylvania Democrat.

GOOD ADVICE.—The following advice cannot be too often repeated:

1. Be industrious: time and skill are your capital.

2. Be saving: whatever it be, live within your income.

3. Be prudent: buy not what you can do without.

4. Be economical: let your economy be always of to-day and not to-morrow.

5. Never think moral obligations, or promises, in matters of debt, as of little consequence. A man whose moral principles and integrity carry him no further than the requirements of law, will never gain the confidence of the public.

6. If you must form harsh judgments, form them of yourself, not of others; and, in general, begin by attending to your own deficiencies first. If every one would sweep his own walk, we should have very clean streets.

SINGULAR PUNISHMENT.—A pedagogue at one of the Boston public schools, has adopted a plan for the punishment of truants, singular enough, but which is said to work to a charm. When a case of truancy occurs, he enters into a compact with the culprit's parents, that they shall keep him at home for a week, dressed in girl's clothes. Rarely does a boy repeat the offence; but, if he does, a second edition of this curious punishment effectually cures him of his vagrant propensities. The parents of the Irish children heartily concur with the master in his plans, and a correspondent relates one instance in which an Irish boy, a most incorrigible truant, who cared nothing for floggings, was reformed by a week's wearing of the gown and petticoat. In our juvenile days, the masters were in the habit of putting naughty boy's on the "girl's side," and and some, the sly rogues, managed to spend most of their school hours in that agreeable place.

THE NORTH EASTERN BOUNDARY.—The plot thickens. We have accounts almost every day of the arrival of British troops at Halifax and St. Johns, preparatory to the impending struggle on the frontier; while not an effort is apparently making by our government to counteract these hostile measures, or to meet them by corresponding preparations for the worst event that may happen. It does indeed seem rather a small matter for two great nations to involve themselves in open and implacable war upon a disputed jurisdiction over a wilderness; but when it is recollected that both have taken a position from which they cannot retreat without compromising what the world calls national honor, there does indeed seem to be no appeal but that to arms.

The St. Johns (New Brunswick) Courier of the 15th instant, furnishes the information that her Majesty's ship Vestal has arrived at Halifax, and that other vessels of war are soon expected for the purpose of bringing troops, and also to furnish munitions of war to the provinces, in case it should be deemed advisable.

The same paper also states that the 23d Fusilers, now in garrison at Halifax, instead of proceeding to the East Indies, as was the intention, is the first regiment for active service in the province of New Brunswick, and has received orders to be ready to move at the shortest notice. The courier adds:

We are further informed, on good authority, that the erection of barracks at Woodstock, in this province, for the accommodation of a large military force, has been determined upon, and the work is to commence immediately.—Times.

FOREIGN NEWS.

FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the Great Western.—This splendid steam ship arrived in New York on the 7th instant, bringing London dates to the 15th of February. Her news, though of the latest, is not of much interest. The following items, condensed, are among the most interesting:

Mehemet Ali seems bent on war. He is making warlike preparations with great activity. Report says he will not submit to the terms of the great powers.

The news from France and Spain presents nothing extraordinary.

American Flour, duty paid, sold in Liverpool on the 18th ultimo, at 43 a 44 shillings.

The Queen was married Feb. 10th.—The papers are full of accounts of the august ceremony.

The dates from China, received in England, are nearly the same as we have here. Great Britain intends to send a land, as well as a naval force against the Chinese.

M. Guizot is sent as Ambassador from France to England.

The general news from Africa is favorable to the French.

The Duke of Wellington had again been seriously ill.

Parliament was in session. A great variety of matters had engaged attention, the principal of which was her Majesty's marriage, and the addresses on the occasion. The Queen at Buckingham Palace, on the 18th, received these congratulatory addresses from the Houses, and that from the Lords was presented by upwards of 60 Peers.

Actual hostilities have taken place between the British and Chinese. It is expected that the next intelligence from Canton will confirm the rumor that that city had been bombarded by Capt Elliott. The importation of tea into Great Britain, in consequence of the difficulties existing between the Chinese and British, was much below the usual supply. In consequence, the price of that article had advanced materially in price. It would seem by the latest returns that the actual stock in the bonded warehouses of the country are 53,800,000 pounds against 55,200,000 pounds at this time last year. Of the former quantity, there is in London about 43,000,000lbs.; in Liverpool, 5,560,000 lbs.; in Bristol, 3,375,000 lbs., and in other ports, including Irish and Scotch, 2,250,000.

Accounts of the recent hostilities in China had reached England. The Hampshire Telegraph states that a great naval armament is to be sent immediately from Portsmouth, to take on board 16,000 native troops in India; to lay the city of Canton under contribution, or destroy it if necessary, and then proceed northward to Pekin and compel the Emperor to submission.

Prince Albert has been appointed a field marshal—emolument some two thousand pounds a year. Moreover, he has been naturalized by act of Parliament.

The Chartist prisoners of Newport have had their sentences commuted from death to transportation. Only three of them were convicted—Frost, Williams and Jones. There was a difference of opinion among the judges on a technical objection raised by the prisoner's counsel.

The allowance voted by Parliament to Prince Albert is £30,000 per annum.

HYMENEAL.

MARRIED, on Thursday the 5th instant, by the Rev. ISRAEL THRAP, Mr. GABRIEL DORING, of Licking, to Miss MARGARET STIERS, of Muskingum county.

OBITUARY.

DIED.—At Elkheart, Indiana, on the 16th ultimo, Miss MEHITABLE STILLMAN, aged 53 years.

——At his residence in Frazeysburg, on Friday last, Mr. SAMUEL FRAZEY, aged 61 years.—Mr. F. was the founder of the flourishing village bearing his name—was an enterprising, worthy citizen, and lived for several years in Zanesville.

——In this town, on Tuesday last, at the residence of Daniel Brush, Esq., Mrs. ELIZABETH BRUSH, aged 78 years, widow of the late Jared Brush, Esq., of Irville, in this county. She lived the christian's life, and had the consolation of the christian's hope to sustain her in the hour of death.—Gazette, 11th instant.

Business Department.

Bro. Brown is informed that his appointment for Pisgah circuit, will commence at Bethel, April 3d, at 11 o'clock; and for Cambridge circuit at Cambridge, so soon as he can get there; for Zanesville circuit, Thursday 23d of April at New Salem, early candle lighting; Saturday 25th at Brownsville.

Bro. Stockton will please send the Letter-Press to O. WHITE, Zanesville, Ohio, and charge us; so soon as we have an opportunity he shall be paid.

Bro. Shinn can forward his Books to O. WHITE, Zanesville, Ohio, (care of Sperry & Abbott,) who will take charge of them, and who can always be found at his Book Bindery, No. 104, Main St.

DEFERRED ARTICLES.

LORD BROUGHAM.—Lord Brougham, it is said, will visit this country next year.

The new constitution of Mississippi prohibits the introduction of slaves into that State as merchandize or for sale.

The cost of food and clothing for a convict in the New Hampshire State Prison is $37,41 a year.

The Louisville Gazette announces the sudden death of Mrs. Henry Clay, wife of the son of the Senator.

The princess Sophia is said to possess the most splendid and valuable casket of brilliants in Europe. It is valued at £140,000.

Fashion makes people visit when they rather stay at home—eat when they are not hungry, and drink when they are not dry. She ruins health and makes fools of her followers.

On the morning of the 18th Feb., the old Theatre in Louisville was burned down. It had just been fitted up as an amphi-theatre, at a cost of 15 to $18,000.

Capt. Hawkins of the schooner Thaddeus, a packet plying between this port and Norfolk, indited there for carrying off a runaway slave, has been acquitted.

The store of Theron Soules, at Kendall, Orleans county, N. Y., in which was kept the Post Office, was burned down on Saturday, the 1st ult.

Which you tink, Massa Cesar, the most beautifulest part ob Miss Dinah's face? Why, by de lunar observation, Sambo, I tink de neck is.—[N. O. Sun.

Another fire occurred in New Orleans on the 12th ult. It burned the houses of Mr. Commissary Barry, in Good Children Street, and five or six others, adjoining.

The Bristol, R. I. Phœnix, mentions the fact that a sea fowl, weighing two pounds ten ounces, was taken entire from the maw of a codfish, bought in that market.

MATRIMONY.—Tobin in his Honey Moon, says, "All women are angels before marriage, and that is the reason why their husbands so soon wish them in heaven afterward."

POST NOTES.—The Post notes of the U. States Bank sold at Philadelphia on Monday at 9 and 10 per cent. The Bank has recently issued $90,000 of new Post Notes.

The Maryland House of Representatives have passed the Bank Regulation Bill. It requires resumption on the 1st of July next, and will probably pass the Senate.

ANOTHER FACTORY ABOUT TO CLOSE.—The Boston Atlas states that the Boston and Sandwich Glass Company intend stopping their works and dismissing their operatives at the close of the month.

By the bill of mortality of Lowell, we find that there has been 263 deaths within the last year. More than one fourth of them have been occasioned by diseases of the lungs.

PROTESTED NOTES.—Bicknell's Reporter of Philadelphia says, that protested notes of the Bank of the United States to the amount of $255,000 were paid in specie by that Institution, on Friday and Saturday last.

The Legislature of Mississippi have passed a law making the penalty of an issue of post notes, the forfeiture of the charters of the banks who make such issue. This measure of restriction had certainly become necessary in Mississippi.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—A son of the Rev. Mr. Briggs, of Roxbury, Mass., aged 15, came to his death a few days since, by having administered to him by his father, a quantity of opium pills, which he supposed to be a common cathartic.

PRISON STATISTICS.—Ten convicts, whose term of imprisonment had expired, or who were pardoned, were liberated between the 31st of January and 22d of February, from Sing Sing prison. There are now in the prison, 802 men and 60 women.

Incendiaries are at work in Albany, having burned the building of J. Boardman on Beaver street, and the stables of W. J. St. John, and A. G. Graves on Eagle street. The Mayor offers a reward of one hundred dollars for their apprehension.

A set-to lately came off about five miles from Royalton, Vermont, during which one of the parties drew a clasp-knife and severed the other's intestines almost entirely in too. The party killed was a huge bear—its adversary Mr. David Eaton.

A case of justifiable homicide occurred in the vicinity of Columbia, N. C. recently. A deputy sheriff named Z. Bates, was in the act of arresting a desperado named Waterhouse, when the latter resisted with dirk and pistol, and was shot dead by the sheriff.

"My son, hold up your head, and tell me who was the strongest man." "Jonah." "Why so?" "Cause the whale couldn't hold him after he got him down." "That's a man—you needn't study the catechism any more at present."

FIRE IN WILMINGTON.—We learn from the Delaware State Gazette that on the afternoon of Wednesday the 26th February, a very destructive fire occurred in Wilmington. It is attributed to incendiaries, and some persons have accordingly been arrested.

JURY TRIAL.—The Legislature of Ohio have passed a bill to authorize jury trials before justices of the peace. The Ohio folks will get sick of that fun or we miss our guess. Any trial of consequence enough to demand a jury, should be tried before a higher tribunal than a justice's court.—Eastern paper.

The Cincinnati News cautions the public against a large number of persons, principally ladies, who are in the habit of attending funerals, for the sake of a ride in a coach gratis, in following the body to the grave. This is the last description of swindling that has come under our notice.

Extensive revivals are now in progress in several of the Baptist churches in Philadelphia, as well as in churches of other denominations. In one church 20 have been baptized, in another 35, in another 65, in another 57, in another 11, and prospects encouraging in others.—Cross and Journal.

The Senate of Kentucky have passed a bill restoring the banks their charters, provided that they resume specie payments as soon as the banks of other States about them do. If other States were to pass similar laws, the banks would wait for each other to the end of the world, rather than be out done in politeness.

Two members of the Pennsylvania Legislature had a set-to in the Capitol at Harrisburgh, the other day. Mr. McElwee, the member from Bedford, attacked with a sword cane Mr. Barclay the Senator from Bedford and Somerset, who thereupon undertook the personal chastisement of his adversary, but was prevented by the by-standers.

WHEN we hear a man boasting of his love for the dear people, we are strongly inclined to suspect him of a love for the 'dear people's offices.' It reminds us of the Irishman who was about to marry a southern girl for her property.

'Will you take this woman to be your wedded wife?' said the minister.

'Yes, your riverence, and the nagers too,' said Pat.

Major Noah says—"We prophesy that from the year ending 1st day of June, 1840, there will be a larger addition to our population than was ever known. In our commerce with Europe we shall send out cotton, bread-stuffs and provisions, and instead of bring back large assortments of English, French and German dry goods, we will import farmers, traders and manufacturers of the better sort, possessed of considerable property."

GEN. WASHINGTON AND LORD ERSKINE.—A volume was presented to Gen. Washington in 1797, by Thomas, Lord Erskine, on a blank page of which he wrote the following note, containing, perhaps, the happiest eulogium of the many bestowed upon that wonderful man:

"Sir—I have taken the liberty to introduce your august and immortal name in a short sentence which is to be found in the book I send you. I have a large acquaintance among the most valuable and exalted classes of men, but you are the only human being for whom I ever felt an awful reverence. I sincerely pray God, to grant a long and serene evening to a life so gloriously devoted to the happiness of the world."

DR. FRANKLIN.—A young person once mentioned to Dr. Franklin his surprise that the possession of great riches should ever be attended with solicitude; and instanced a merchant who, although in possession of unbounded wealth, was as busy and much more anxious than the most assiduous clerk in his counting house. The Doctor in reply, took an apple from the fruit basket, and presented it to a child in the room, who could scarcely grasp it in his hand. He then gave it a second, which filled the other hand, and choosing a third, remarkable for its size and beauty, he presented that also. The child, after many ineffectual attempts to hold the three apples, dropped the last on the carpet, and burst into tears. "See there," said the philosopher, "is a little man with more riches than he can enjoy."

It is stated on the authority of one of the late owners of the Baltimore Chronicle, that, since its commencement a few years ago, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars have been sunk in carrying it on. "This (says the Baltimore Post) is an immense sum, but it will not surprise those who know any thing of the infatuation of newspaper publishing. There is no pursuit in which men embark with so blind a calculation of the chances of success as in this. And there is none which they so reluctantly abandon, even when practical knowledge should convince that failure is inevitable. Almost every newspaper is gradually, though often very slowly, increasing its patronage, and the publisher is thus lured onward, believing that the struggle a little longer continued will place him on a safe footing. And then, when he looks over his books of accounts, and sees what a goodly show his patronage makes, as there exhibited, another irresistible lure is presented, and he struggles on, hoping against hope, and only years of unavailing toil, and too often absolute bankruptcy alone, can convince him of the difference between his income as charged on his books and as actually received in cash into his treasury."—National Intelligencer.

EDITING A NEWSPAPER.—The following sensible and correct remarks are from the New York Sun:

Editing a newspaper is no easy task. Many persons estimate the ability of a newspaper and the industry and talent of its editor, by the variety of the editorial matter it contains. Nothing can be more fallacious. It is comparatively an easy task for a practised writer to pour out daily columns of words upon any and all subjects; his ideas may flow freely and his command of language may enable him to string them together like a bunch of onions, and yet his paper may be a meagre, poor concern. But a judicious, well informed editor, who exercises his vocation with a full conviction and conscientiousness of the responsible duty he has to perform, will conduct his paper with the same care and assiduity that a clever lawyer bestows on a suit, or a humane physician upon a patient. Indeed, the writing part of editing a newspaper is but a small portion of the work. The industry even is not shown here. The care, the taste, the time employed in selecting are far more important; for the fact of a good editor is shown more by selections than in any thing else; it is half the battle. But, as we before observed, an editor ought to be estimated and his labor appreciated by the conduct of his newspaper—its tone, its temper, its manners, its uniform consistent course, its aims, its manliness, its courtesy, its dignity, its propriety. To preserve all these as they should be preserved is enough to occupy the time and attention of any man. But if to this be added the general supervision of the office, which most editors have to do, it will appear that editing a newspaper is indeed no easy task.

HERALD OFFICE, NORFOLK,
January 16, 3 o'clock P. M.

FROM THE COAST OF AFRICA.—The Liberia Packet ship Saluda, Capt. Waters, from Monrovia 14th November, arrived at this port yesterday, with a cargo of camwood, palm oil, ivory, &c. Capt. W. reports that the health of the colony was good, and its condition flourishing.

By this arrival we learn that the slave trade is carried on to a great extent on the coast of Africa, chiefly by American vessels, though Capt. Waters was informed that from the 1st of November to the time of his sailing there had been twenty vessels, under Portuguese, Spanish, and Brazilian colors, brought in by British cruisers, and condemned. The British armed brig Lynx, Lieutenant Broadhead, had seized at British Accia an American schooner, called the My Boy, Harvey, master, New Orleans, and taken her to Sierra Leone, where she was duly condemned. The master of the schooner was detained on board the Lynx, and would be conveyed to Monrovia, to be delivered to the United States Agent at that place. Lieut. Broadhead informed Captain Waters that there was a great number of American vessels on the coast for slaves, and that he knew of three lying in a river waiting a chance to take slaves on board.

Captain Waters informs us that several of the commanders of the British armed vessels told him they had received strict orders from their Government not to interfere with any American vessels unless there was positive proof that slaves were on board, or the vessels were in British waters, as was the case of the My Boy, where the right of search was exercised. This caution was used in order to avoid all ground of collision with the United States.

The Liberia Herald of the 30th Oct. says: We have recently heard with regret that the slave trade is prosecuted with unwonted energy in the neighborhood of the Gallenas. Such is the eagerness with which slaves are sought, that every species of foreign merchandise has fallen in price to a level unusually low. The article of tobacco, for instance, can be purchased from the natives at 25 cents a pound.

The Centennial Anniversary of the Methodist Church was celebrated at Monrovia by solemn services during the day. The church was appropriately and beautifully decorated with palm leaves and vines.

INDEPENDENCE OF THE PRESS.—Several months since, a gentleman of this city, a high minded and honorable man, who has a deep stake in the well being of society, said to us, "Do you believe, sir, that an independent press can be sustained? Will a paper which speaks the truth and the whole truth irrespective of its effects upon party interests, be supported by the community?" "I think not," added he; "the political press is in chains—its boasted liberty is gone—its morally depraved—its independence prostrate. Free it is from the tyranny of statutory law, but enslaved is it to the more heartless power and fiercer despotism of a relentless party-spirit, and so I think you will find it in the result of your experiment." Our interlocutor is a man of sagacious observation, and although, in our brief experience, we had seen much to corroborate his opinions, we were reluctant to yield to the conviction which he sought to produce. Proofs of the correctness of them, however, have multiplied upon us in a hundred shapes, and recently in forms too obvious to be mistaken or resisted.

One of the few pledges which we thought it proper to make to the public when we began this publication, was that it should be an "independent and a free press." The editor of this paper can conduct no other. His mind must be "free as the winds of the mountains." Sooner than be the tool of a party, with aims and duties circumscribed to the registration of its decisions, wise or foolish, right or wrong, just or unjust, he and his paper would perish together. If the political press of this country, with all its mighty energies, is to be sunk down to the depths of degradation implied in the supposition of its slavery to party, we will have no share in the dreadful responsibility of its prostitution. Nay, we will, on the contrary, exhaust our last resources of mind and body and means in the effort to uphold and preserve it in its purity, its dignity and its inappreciable power. We do, by no means despair of the Press. If we did we should equally despair of the Republic, of its institutions and of public liberty. It is affirmed by wiser and better men than we pretend to be, that the era is marked by a conflict between the conservative and destructive principles of government & society—and "with fear and trembling" have they been looking for the issue of the contest. Upon that issue, along with every other valuable civil and social interest, is involved the ultimate character and destiny of the Political Press. The triumph of Reason and Right Principles secures its preservation in the greatness and the grandeur of its legitimate operations—the subjection of these to their antagonistical and malign principles, consigns it, of course, to the common destruction which shall overwhelm all that is fair, and good and precious.—Columbus Confederate.

COUNTERFEITS ON OHIO BANKS.

COMMERCIAL BANK OF CINCINNATI.—10's, letter A, payable to John W Wales, dated, May 4, 1837, signed J S Armstrong, President, W S Hatch, Cashier, and engraved by Underwood, Bald & Spencer. The signatures are tolerably well executed; the counterfeits may be easily detected by noticing the plate, the bank having issued none of this description: in the centre of the note, at the top, is a vignette of William the Fourth, and on the right and left are female figures, the former seated, holding a sheaf of wheat, and the latter standing, with a cap of liberty in her right hand. The one before us bears date May 2, 1837, and has the name of W S Hatch, as Cashier; since October, 1835, no ten dollar bills have been issued, subscribed by Mr Hatch, who is not now Cashier.

COMMERCIAL BANK OF LAKE ERIE.—2's of various dates—some dated January 24, 1834, payable to H Seymour,—engraving course.

5's stereotype plate, letter M, of various dates and payable to various persons. T P Handy, Cashier, L Case, President. Remarkably well executed, and calculated to deceive the most experienced judges. The signatures are apparently of one hand writing, and rather stiff—first being marked out by small dots in the engraving: paper bad. Observe that the letter i in the word Directors has no dot over it.

5's the name of the Bank is finely engraved over the whole face of the five dollar notes, and the Counterfeit can only be detected, by observing that in the fifth line, the letter a in the word "Commercial" is omitted. It is between the words "Lake Erie" on the right end of the note, and "Company of the"

10's spurious—vignette—Genius of Liberty reclining on the arms of Ohio. Leonard Case, President, T P Handy, Cashier.

BANK OF CLEVELAND, OHIO.—20's altered from 1's; the figure 20 in a large die is impressed in 7 places, and very clumsily done. This bank has never issued any 20 dollar bills.

BANK OF GRANVILLE.—3's no letter: Various dates. Vignette, a Steam Boat and Rail-Road Cars. On the right hand margin, an Indian figure in a standing posture, with bow unstrung.

BANK OF XENIA.—5's altered from 1s. Particulars unknown.

BANK OF ZANESVILLE.—5's badly executed, the paper very thin, and the female figure and sheaf of wheat, in the centre of the note very defective. The signature of the Cashier lacks the periods at the abbreviation of Charles, and at the initial C. The note we have seen has the letter A, payable to L H Dugan, and dated the 8th of February, 1833.

BELMONT BANK, ST. CLAIRSVILLE.—1's old plate, altered to 5's and also to 10's. Vignette of the genuine one, a laborer splitting a log.

5's letter B, pay J Weir of various dates, some May 1, 1827, and others April 7, 1828.—They are exceedingly well executed but can be detected by observing that the letter A in dollars is not crossed.

5's letter B, pay J Armstrong, dated September 10, 1829; the A in dollars is crossed with a pen.

10's altered from 1's, pay J Joy, letter B, dated September 9, 1829.

10's altered from 1's, letter A pay to B Osborn, June 6, 1818.

10's altered from 1's—letter A.

LANCASTER OHIO BANK.—1's very badly executed.

3's letter A, pay to A Gill, dated June 30th, 1828. Others dated January 3, 1828.

5's, signed M Garathy, Cashier; J Creed, President, letter A, payable to W J Reese; dated June 30, 1828. The engraving is remarkably well executed, but the paper is heavier and of a yellowish color, and the general impression lighter than the genuine notes. They are also about a quarter of an inch longer and a little wider. Others of the same date as above, payable to S Gill. All genuine notes which are made payable to S Gill, are numbered from 800 to 900; the counterfeits are between 600 and 700; those payable to W J Reese are numbered correctly.

URBANA BANKING COMPANY.—2's letter A, payable W Ward, June 3d, 1838, W Rianham, Cashier, John H James, President; vignette, a female figure, with one arm reclining on an eagle: light appearance.

3's letter A, dated June 3, 1838.

10's old plate, dated August 3, 1823.

BANK OF MARIETTA.—1's altered to 10's, and also to 20's, of Murray, Draper, Fairman & Co's plate, letter and date unknown; the Bank has no notes out of this plate of a larger denomination than 5's.

3's, letter A, payable to E Jones, dated August 10, 1838, signed Arius Nye, Cashier, John Mills, President. The small ovals on the left hand margin appear to be drawn with a pen.

3's letter A, dated July 21, 1836—they can be detected by observing that the counterfeit bills are ¼ of an inch shorter, and about ⅛ of an inch narrower than the genuine bills.

5's (Harrison's plate) letter unknown, pay to H Nye, April 3, 1813.

FARMERS' BANK, AT CANTON.—2's letter I, payable to A Lind, dated November 8, 1837, vignette a Steam Boat, and read simply "The Farmers Bank," instead of "The Farmers Bank of Canton;" on the genuine 2's there is no steam boat.

5's spurious—have for a vignette, a view of Wagon and Horses on left end of the note—and on right end, a miserably engraved Medallion head of Washington. They purport to be engraved by Underwood, Bald & Spencer, signed N Fogle, jr. Cashier, and John Harris, President; L Fogle, is Cashier of this Institution.

20's and 10's altered from 1's. They can easily be detected by holding them to the light, when the alteration is visible.

FRANKLIN BANK OF COLUMBUS.—3's letter H May 18th, 1833, payable to S Jones, engraving coarse.

3's letter L, payable H Allen, June 8, 1836, S Lawrence, Cashier; G Wan, jr. President.

5's letter B, pay at the "Banking House."—All bills of the letter B, payable at the banking house are spurious.

5's: they are of the letter A, and made payable to T P Handy, N Noble, E Jones, H P Espy, and probably others. The Bank has never issued any payable to T P Handy or N Noble. The counterfeit which has been presented is dated October 8, 1834. There are also other dates. No genuine notes of this plate have been issued of the date just mentioned, nor have any been numbered above 1100 since the year 1828. The counterfeits are shorter and narrower than the genuine bills;—The engraving, on close examination, is found to be coarse, particularly the vignette, which is inferior in execution to the heads of Washington and Franklin, on the margins—the eyes of the Washington head, are badly imitated; the signature of the Cashier is very defective: in the genuine notes there is a very slight mark, which is wanting in the counterfeits. Just over the word "THE," commencing "THE President, Directors and Co," is a small hair stroke, intended to be a part of the letter "P," which follows. The want of this, although it is very slight, is sufficient to detect the counterfeits. The words "Banking House" are not inserted in any other note issued by the Bank except the Five Dollar note of the plate thus counterfeited.

10's letter A, altered from 1's. Signed J M Espy, Cashier, G Swan, President.

BANK OF MOUNT PLEASANT.—20's & 10's altered from 1's. The genuine ones have no vignette.

BANK OF WOOSTER, OHIO.—10's altered from 1's. Easily detected, letter A, dated, April 6, 1835, Joseph S Lake, President, Ben. Bently, Cashier, can be detected by holding them up to the light.

FARMERS' AND MECHANICS' BANK.—2's spurious letter A, pay J Patterson, May 4, 1836, D Moodry, Cashier, N Dike, President. The name of the person to whom payable and President's name are engraved—vignette, a female figure with Liberty Cap and Eagle—head of Washington on right end, and sheaf of wheat on left.

3's spurious, same vignette as the 2's with side figures reversed—payable to J Patterson, (engraved) May 6, 1838, Moodry, Cashier, Dike, (engraved) President.

20's and 10's altered from 1's. On the left hand end of the genuine one is a view of a canal.

WESTERN RESERVE BANK.—3's July 16, 1830.

3's pay to Wm Williams, dated, May 4, 1830.

5's badly executed; they are one-eighth of an inch shorter than the genuine notes—Reed, engraver, dated January 7, 1826.

5's no letter, payable to W Williams, dated, November 5, 1829, engraving very faint.

10's letter D, Murray, Draper & Fairman's plate. The words "Western Reserve Bank," being on the left, and "Ohio" on the right hand margin; on the genuine notes they are the reverse.—Bicknell.

O. WHITE, BOOK BINDER, No. 104 Main Street, Zanesville, Ohio.
January 15, 1840. 21tf

Notice

IS hereby given to all whom it may concern, that there will be a petition presented to the Commissioners of Muskingum county, at their next session, to establish a county road on the following route: commencing in the north end of Lewis Gray's lane, in Springfield township; thence north on the road now used to intersect the Flint Ridge road; thence to the lane leading to the Springfield meeting house; thence north in said lane to the aforesaid meeting house; thence a northernly direction to a point near the east corner of Samuel Gray's meadow; thence bearing a direction to the south west corner of Catharine Sickel's lot; thence north with the line between Samuel Gray's and Catharine Sickel's to the township line; thence a north-eastern direction to Asa Ridge's bars, at the south end of his lane; thence north with said lane to near said R's barn; thence in a north western direction to said R's gate; thence north on the line between Ed. Smith's and Widow Holton's to intersect the National Road between Usual Headly's and Edward Smith's taverns. Also, to vacate so much of the road leading from the Falls of Licking to Jonathan's creek bridge as lies between the north end of Lewis Gray's and to where said road intersects the National Road near Thomas Williams' barn.

January 25, 1840. 23

Methodist Prot. Banner.

THE Methodist Protestant Church in the South, and particularly in South Carolina, being as yet in her infancy, her history is but little known, while the views and principles of her Members have been studiously misrepresented. To enlighten the public mind in relation to those principles, and to correct misrepresentation, is the object contemplated by the publication of this periodical. And there is every reason to believe that wheresoever those principles are known and properly appreciated—based as they are upon the union of spiritual and ecclesiastical liberty—it will be conceded that the church stands upon the high ground of scriptural truth. The Methodist Protestant Church has already attained a respectable and firm standing among her sister churches, in various parts of the United States, and we trust the day is not distant, when she will rank second to none, for piety, numbers and usefulness in the sunny South.

While the principal design of the paper will be to make known the history, present condition, and future prospects of the Methodist Protestant Church; to vindicate her principles, and defend her from the attacks of others; due courtesy will be extended to other churches, and notice taken of their condition and prospects—Literature, Science and the Arts, will not be forgotten.

Terms:—THE METHODIST PROTESTANT BANNER will be published monthly, on a quarto sheet, under the direction of a Committee of the South Carolina Annual Conference, at One Dollar per annum, payable in advance. Its enlargement in size and more frequent appearance, will depend upon the support it may receive.

Any person remitting Five Dollars will be entitled to a copy gratis.

Communications may be addressed to the Publishing Committee of the Methodist Protestant Banner, Charleston, South Carolina. 24

Dissolution.

THE partnership heretofore existing between the subscribers in the PUTNAM FOUNDRY, under the firm of HARTLEY & ANDERSON, was this day dissolved by mutual consent.

The Putnam Foundry will hereafter be conducted by J. J. Anderson & Co.

LEVI HARTLEY,
JACOB J. ANDERSON.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

Notice.

ALL persons indebted to the late firm of Hartley & Anderson, are earnestly requested to call at the Foundry and make settlement, as the change of owners makes this step absolutely necessary. We ask the attention of all persons concerned, to this notice.

J. J. ANDERSON & Co.

Putnam, Jan. 1, 1840. (Jan. 29: 23.)

S. C. Haver,

IN the flourishing town of Putnam has on hand 40 or 50 SADDLES ready for sale, of different qualities, comprising nearly all the varieties in fashion in our Buckeye State: a good assortment of Bridles and Martingales: riding and driving whips: between 180 & 200 carriage and heavy draft Collars, which will compare and wear with any others made here or elsewhere. Also, fine York, Dearborn, heavy team and common farming Harness. A lot of first rate carriage and buggy Harness, (brass and silver plated.)

Trunks, vallises, saddle-bags, and double cov ered wagon whips, varying in quality and price to suit purchasers.

The only recommendation he now offers for his work, is the testimony and long experience of his old customers and friends. He is still anxious to please and accommodate those who may call on him, and hopes to share so much of the public patronage as his attention to his business shall merit.

Putnam, March 4, 1840. 28tf

Important to Rail Road Companies.

THE subscriber offers to the public a new and improved mode of ascending and descending Inclined Plains on Rail Roads. This improvement supercedes the necessity of horse or stationary power, by giving to the locomotive engine a new wheel, affixed to one of the axles of the motive, which connects with an extra railing laid in the centre of the road, on the plain. As the engine approaches the plain, the pilot wheel on the centre of the axle, falls into gear with the extra railing and propels her onward. The construction and connection of the pilot wheel and extra railing is of such a character that it not only necessarily advances, but advances perfectly smooth, and cannot be impeded by the congealing of ice, the connection of the wheel and railing being on the right and left of the tread.

Rail Road companies or managers wanting further information, will please address the subscriber, at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio, or William P. Ellis, Washington city, who has obtained the right of the State of Maryland by purchase, or William C. Pool, of Baltimore, who has the right of Georgia, North and South Carolina, on commission.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

Important to Farmers.

FARMERS are hereby invited to procure the hitherto unrivalled HULLING MILL.—This machine can be attached to any of the powers now in common use, and is calculated to save a great amount of manual labor. Clover-seed can be hulled at the rate of from three to five bushels per hour;—Rice can be hulled at the rate of twenty-five bushels per hour;—Oats, Barley or Spelts, can be hulled at the rate of thirty bushels per hour, ready for flouring;—Corn can be made into hominy at the rate of twenty bushels per hour. Corn, Oats, Rye, Barley, Spelts, or Buck-wheat, can be chopped at the rate of fifteen bushels per hour.

A moment's reflection will convince the Farmer of the advantage of possessing such a labor-saving machine. Is he a Rice grower?—he can prepare his Rice for the market in one-fourth of the time usually spent, and with one-fourth of the labor. Has he a surplus of Corn?—instead of selling it for twenty-five cents, he can make it into hominy and sell it for two dollars per bushel. Has he a surplus of Barley?—instead of selling it for fifty cents per bushel, he can hull and sell it for six cents per pound, &c. &c. The simplicity, durability, portability, and usefulness of this Mill, recommend it as one of the most desirable and money producing machines of modern invention.

Those wishing to procure this machine in Georgia, North or South Carolina, can address William C. Pool, Baltimore, Maryland; those of the State of Maryland, can address Richard B. Chinoweth, also of Baltimore; in this region of country, can address Lewis Ward, of Zanesville, Levi B. Ball, of Putnam, Abraham Baker, of Mt. Vernon, or Mr. Hanawalt, of Licking county; other sections can address the subscriber at Harrisville, Harrison county, Ohio. The most liberal terms will be given to mechanics who may wish to make, vend and use this Hulling Mill in sections not yet occupied. We invite the public to call and see for themselves.

JOHN MERCER.

November 28, 1839. 15

THE

WESTERN RECORDER

IS PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY.

☞ The office of the Recorder is five and a half miles west of Zanesville.

TERMS:

1. The WESTERN RECORDER will be published weekly, on an imperial sheet, at $2 per annum in advance: $2.50 at the end of three months; $3 at the end of the year.
2. No discontinuances will be allowed, except at the discretion of the publisher, until all arrearages are paid.
3. To all ministers having regular pastoral charges, who do any thing at all for the paper, if they will direct us where, a copy shall be sent gratis; any other who forwards to us $10, post paid, for new subscribers, shall have six copies sent to any address he may give.
4. All letters designed for the paper, must be directed to the Editor, Zanesville, Ohio, and post paid, except such as contain subscribers names, or $10 in money.
5. A failure to notify a discontinuance before the expiration of the subscription year, will be considered a new engagement.

CHARACTER.

The pages of the WESTERN RECORDER will be open to discussion on all moral questions;—it will give articles on Literature, Mechanics Agriculture,—an abstract of Regligious and Political intelligence, and whatever may be interesting and instructive to families in general. A portion of its columns will be open to advertisements and prices current,—another portion to sustain the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church in the West. These two latter objects will not likely occupy more than one page.

The RECORDER will take a firm stand against Clerical Supremacy.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

C. SPRINGER, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.
☞TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

Volume 1. ZANESVILLE, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25, 1840. Number 31.

JOHN W. WHITE, PRINTER.
$2.50, IN THREE MONTHS; $3, END OF YEAR.

POETRY.

For the Western Recorder.

SACRED SONGS, NO. VI.

And is it so? It is. The eternal God
Did send his only well beloved son,
To die for poor rebellious guilty man,
That he might be from fear of death set free,
And well prepar'd, by faith and strict obedience,
To dwell in heaven with him.
Amazing love!
All share alike the freedom Jesus bought;
The richest nabob, and the poorest wretch,
The greatest monarch, and the meanest vassal,
The African whose skin is tann'd as black,
By torrid suns, as thickest shades of night,
And his proud lord are all of equal worth,
For no distinctions know, no praise is given,
In consequence of color, wealth or power.
O what a theme for saints to muse upon!
The love of the Almighty God to send
His darling son! And O the Saviour's love,
To come and die for man, claim grateful songs,
From every one who knows this boundless love.
Then rise, my soul, exert thy utmost skill,
Strain every organ, use thy greatest power,
To praise and magnify the name of God,
For he is worthy of eternal praise.
But words cannot express my gratitude;
'Come then, expressive silence, muse his praise.'

March 12, 1840. L. E. S.

For the Western Recorder.

THE BACKSLIDER.

I once had communion with God,
Was happy, contented and free,
I felt not His chastening rod,
For great was His kindness to me.

To meet at His altars of prayer,
Was source of exquisite delight,
I gladly would follow Him there,
At morning, at noon, and at night.

To walk in His precepts I found,
His hand to conduct me was there,
My footsteps to Canaan were bound,
As borne upon pinions of air.

Peace! peace! inexpressible peace!
No burden of sin had I then,
Nor dreamed that such comfort could cease,
I told it with freedom to men.

But now a bold traitor I am,
Deserving like Judas my place,
Some distant unknown dreary realm,
Excluded from mercy and grace.

Fain would I the price of His blood
Cast down as a token of grief,
My tears should roll down as a flood,
If that would procure my relief.

But misery now is my doom,
I sue for His mercy in vain,
My spirit's envelop'd in gloom,
I smile, but my laughter is pain.

Ah! where shall I hide from the gaze,
And from the derision of men,
That there I may finish my days,
Awaiting my destiny then.

Plainfield, O., March, 1840. S.

COMMUNICATIONS.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

BROWNSVILLE, OHIO, MARCH 13, 1840.

Brother Springer: It is not for want of something to write that may be interesting to some of your readers, if well written, nor yet for a lack of disposition to contribute my mite to the interest of your paper, that I have not sent you a publication at an earlier period of this Conference year. But a sense of my inability to interest the hundreds of intelligent readers, whose eyes scan the pages of the Recorder, has contributed in no small degree to produce this backwardness. We will try however, to sketch a few things that have transpired on this circuit the present year, which we hope will not be considered altogether unworthy of notice, and will, we humbly trust, encourage others to faith and perseverance.

The Lord has been with us of a truth, and in several instances manifested Himself a God forgiving iniquity, transgression and sin to those who seek His face. Our first quarterly meeting, which was held at Springfield chapel, November 1st, was, I think, a profitable season to believers in Christ; and though there was no special excitement among sinners on the subject of their souls' salvation, yet I trust the well meant labors of that meeting have not fallen to the ground. Three united with us in church fellowship on the occasion. The class at this place is, in part, composed of those who formed the first Protestant Methodist society on what is now known as "Zanesville circuit," which was organized under the Conventional Articles in the fall of 1829, by the Rev. Jacob Myers. They, together with the societies of Zanesville, and Bethel in Newark circuit, ventured to risk their reputation on the good or ill success of a camp-meeting, and accordingly appointed one to commence in their vicinity, on the 11th of September, 1829. This was the first camp-meeting held by our branch of the church west of the Ohio River, and the second west of the Alleghany Mountains, one at Braddock's fields, Pa., having preceded it about two weeks. The meeting was very famous and highly creditable to the societies, by reason of the perfect order that was observed throughout, and for the many conversions that took place, there having been about seventy-five who professed religion. It was on this encampment that the writer of this humble article, was, by grace divine, brought to know himself a sinner and to know God as a sin pardoning God. An event that has ever bound his affections to that place and pious people, as the thousand recollections, gay and sweet, of childish sports and schoolboy feats bind our attachment to the home and associates of our juvenile years. Nor will the good man think it strange, that recollection should dwell upon the place and scenes where first we felt the pardoning love of God. Of the original society, I believe there never has been one charged with immoral or unchristian conduct, nor has there been a church trial among them; amid all the misrepresentation and opposition of various kinds that our church in the west has been called to undergo, they have stood to their principles and practice of religion with an unwavering firmness, and a few of their company after having lived to a good old age have taken up their feet and been gathered to their Father's in peace.

Sometime in December, we held a protracted meeting at the Clay Lick meeting house. There was considerable excitement and some professed religion [illegible] church. We have a very good society at this place, a number of its members are of the first stamp of Protestant Methodists, men of firmness of character and stability of habits. A little to the south east of Clay Lick we have another class on the Brushy fork of Licking, among whom there has been considerable religious excitement and several have professed faith in Christ. Our friends in this place commenced in the latter part of January and have now under roof a meeting house, 26 by 38 feet, and expect to have it ready to preach in about six weeks; all things considered, their enterprise is realy praise worthy.

We have also held a protracted meeting at New Salem, which was thought to be a profitable time. Saints rejoiced and thanked God at the return of prodigals—sinners wept on account of their sins, and penitents were made to rejoice by believing in Christ. Several have united with us at this place—such, I hope, as will be saved.

Our second quarterly meeting was held at this place, commencing on the 8th of February and was continued until the 18th. During the most of that time a very considerable religious excitement prevailed in the village. A number bowed at the altar of prayer, and some professed to have found peace with God through the merits of the Redeemer,—fifteen gave their names to the church, and I trust, their hearts to Christ, to go with us to that country which the Lord God hath promised shall be the inheritance of His faithful followers. May His grace sustain them; His presence comfort them; His power protect and defend them, and His glory be their everlasting reward in heaven.

With regard to the moral condition of this circuit, I think it pretty fair and promising. A little more punctuality to the use of the mean of grace and humiliation before God, would, however, do no harm. For I am persuaded that not only the individual but also the church that humbles itself under the mighty hand of God shall be exalted in due time.

About six weeks since, I visited New Lancaster, and found our friends at that place much devoted to God in humble, fervent prayer, nor were their supplications in vain, for God, in answer thereto, granted them a season of refreshment from His presence. It was the time of their second quarterly meeting; congregations were unusually large and very respectable in their appearance, and more attention paid to the word, or better order, I have never seen in any assembly of people. Weeping mourners crowded to the altar of prayer, and some found peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. The church, like mighty men of valor, came up to the help of the Lord against the mighty.—And I understand the good work is yet going on. May the living God carry it on there and here and elsewhere, until the inhabitants of the four continents shall be converted to Him, and a knowledge of His glory cover the whole earth as the waters do the great deep.

I am, &c., ISRAEL THRAP.

BARNE'S MILLS, MON., VIRGINIA, February 29, 1840.

Dear Sir: Since my last communication to you we have held a protracted meeting at Pierpoint's meeting house in the forks of Cheet, some two or three miles south west of Cheet Neck.—The meeting commenced on Friday the 14th of the present month, in the evening. On the Sabbath following the meeting became very interesting by reason of the manifestation of the Divine influence in our congregation. The children of God spake freely of His gracious dealings with them, and the sacred flame ran through the assembly during the love feast. At 11 o'clock we had preaching by brother P. T. Laishley, after which an opportunity was given for seekers of religion to come to the altar of prayer; this opportunity was embraced by a number of penitent souls. Meeting was continued on Sabbath evening to good effect; the number of seekers of religion increased. On Monday the Lord's supper was administered to about one hundred and thirty communicants; here it was as it ought to be—no distinction between Episcopal Methodists and Protestant Methodists in surrounding the sacramental board; all united in commemorating the death and suffering of a common Saviour, and thence forward, during the meeting, all the friends of Jesus seemed to unite in helping forward the good begun work.

Here it may be proper to say that the Lord seemed to take the work more immediately into His own hands, and the conversion of souls progressed gloriously. Days and nights passed on without any preaching but from the spirit of God. Singing, praying, praising, shouting and ascribing glory to God was the order of the day. Convictions were deep and pungent, conversions clear and manifest, and the shouts of new-born souls exhiliraling. But why attempt to describe what is indiscribable?

After a continued meeting of eight days, and a considerable part of nine nights, I was necessitated to leave to attend my Sabbath appointments at Morgantown and Snell's school house, at which time more than EIGHTY persons had united with the Protestant Methodist Church as probationers. Until I left the meeting the congregation remained large, perhaps there were an average of about four hundred daily in attendance, consequently secular business in the neighborhood was generally suspended. Brother P. T. Laishley continued the meeting, the Sabbath day that I left the place, and I have heard that an addition of ten or twelve more members was the fruit of that day's labor.

I mention with pleasure that the Episcopal Methodists gave us their commodious meeting house to hold our meeting in, and took a deep interest in its success. No doubt the good Lord will abundantly reward them for their kindness. I will also mention that we were favored with the labors of brother P. T. Laishley nearly the whole of the meeting, and occasionally with the labors of brothers A. Pool and S. Laishley.

We have had about two hundred and twelve persons added to the church on Middletown circuit since the commencement of the present Conference year.

Yours, in the best of bonds,
JOHN FORDYCE.

MT. VERNON, OHIO, MARCH 14, 1840.

Bro. Springer: Your paper is generally approved of in this part of the country. We are glad to hear through its columns of the prosperity of Zion. On this circuit there is nothing out of the ordinary course of things. You are aware that we have here a number of excellent members.—Since Conference we have received twenty-four into society; things appear tolerably fair. I held a protracted meeting some three weeks ago, and the Lord was with us of a truth. A large number of penitents came forward, requesting the prayers of God's people. I had no help at the meeting from any of our preachers, but two of our brethren of the New School Presbyterians came and labored faithfully for two days. A number found pardon. We have formed a class of eleven in that place.

I wish Bro. Hughes to let me know, thro' your paper, or otherwise, when he can be with us.—Our quarterly meeting will be held about the middle of May, and if it is in his power we would be glad that he would attend at that time. He will please send word as soon as possible. I think if he would publish his arrangements it would be best.

I wish, through your paper, to acknowledge the kindness of the friends of the Mt. Pleasant circuit in the course they have taken to raise the balance of my allowance for the year I travelled that circuit. They opened a subscription for the purpose, and at the last Conference I received eighteen dollars of the amount, at the hand of the circuit steward, brother Francis Scott.

I remain yours, MOSES SCOTT, Supt.

UNION CT., OHIO CON., MARCH 2, 1840.

Mr. Editor: The Lord is yet convicting sinners on Union circuit. We renewed our meeting at Pleasant Hill about two weeks since, and the Most High was present to carry on his own work. We continued from Saturday until Thursday night. Transgressors were arrested by the mighty power of God and fell prostrate before Him, and cried mightily for pardon, and the Lord, in great mercy, sealed their peace, and they were then enabled to testify that God had power on earth to forgive sin, and with the saints of the Most High to shout aloud his praises, so that the sound was heard afar off.

Sixteen professed religion at our last meeting, and twenty-one united with the church, making forty-one at the two meetings, which have joined at this one class. One hundred in all have united with us, on this circuit, since Conference.

I rejoice to hear, through your paper, that the Lord is carrying on His work in many other places in the west. May He enlarge the borders of our Zion! Yours, &c. I. HUNT, Supt.

PITTSBURGH, PA., MARCH 6, 1840.

Bro. Springer: We have much to encourage us in this station. The members of the church seem much revived—class meetings much more interesting and much better attended than formerly. We have had an accession of thirty-five members since Conference and much seriousness is apparent in the congregation at large. Our congregations on the Sabbath are generally large and attentive. We have lately been favored with the untiring labors of our Conference Missionary, Bro. Piper. During his stay we held a protracted meeting, which we trust was the means of good to the church, while sinners shared liberally of its benefits. During its progress a goodly number professed a change of heart and thirteen joined the church on probation.—Our prayer is for the improvement of our infant branch of the church, in primative holiness. Holiness of heart, should be our motto as a church; as ministers, ought we not constantly to live and preach a growth in grace?

Yours in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. JOEL DALBEY, Jr.

PITTSBURGH, IA., FEB. 19, 1840.

Bro. Springer: I am travelling on the Tippecanoe mission, and have been laboring almost day and night to preach the gospel of Christ. I have seen some very good times and have witnessed some conversions. I expect to organize an additional class on the last of this month. The Lord is watering his vineyard and I am looking for still better times.

With reference to the division of the Conference, being acquainted with the western part of Indiana, I should judge it would be for the interest of the church here that it should take place. A number of unstationed ministers, in that event, I think, would turn out to travel. However, I submit to the decision of more experienced men in this matter.

Yours, affectionately, JOSIAH HOPKINS.

OBITUARY.

For the Western Recorder.

Departed this life on the 17th of December, 1839, ANN SMALLMAN, wife of the Rev. Joseph Smallman, of this place. She was born in Birmingham, England, January 6th, 1756,—became a member of the Weslyan Methodist Church, in 1777. At that time she was vain in her dress and deportment, living as most young people of her rank; but when brought to experience a change of heart, threw them all aside—became plain in her dress, pious in her deportment and lived an ornament to the church of Christ.

She with her husband joined the new connexion of Methodists in England, about 14 years [illegible] they left that for America. On their arrival here they were much disappointed in the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church in this country, expecting to find the church, at least, equal to the States in liberality of principle. Finding no other church, however, in this city, as near their wishes in doctrines and means of grace, they both became members of the M. E. Church, and continued therein in good standing until the secession in 1828, when they united with the proscribed Reformers in building up a new church in this city, in which they remained in good standing until God removed her from the evil to come.

Sister Smallman was a good wife, an affectionate mother and steady friend;—was no tatler, nor did she busy herself in the matters of others; was a lover of class meetings and always present on such occasions, when health and circumstances would permit. Thus she lived, an example of piety for more than sixty years, and then fell asleep in the arms of her Lord to rest from her labors for ever. The body will quietly repose until the resurrection morn, when aroused by the tramp of God, it shall have part in the first resurrection; then, that which was sown in weakness shall be raised in power, and re-united to its now departed inhabitant, shall dwell in the Eden of God forever. Her husband, trembling under the infirmities of age, is left to mourn the loss of a companion and a friend who used to share with him in the joys and sorrows of this earthly pilgrimage. He now, with great propriety, can adopt the language of the poet:

"A stranger lonely here I roam,
From place to place I'm driven;
My friend is gone and I'm alone,
This world to me is a lonely tomb,
I have no home but heaven."

JOEL DALBEY, JR.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

RICHWOOD, OHIO, MARCH 11, 1840.

Bro. Springer: On the 5th day of this instant our much beloved sister WOOD closed her eyes in death, after enduring a lingering affliction for a number of months. She was raised in Shippensburgh, Pennsylvania, and in the 14th year of her age embraced religion, and united with the M. E. C., and lived with them in love and christian fellowship for a number of years, during which time she married. Her and her husband removed to the west some years since and settled in the village of Richwood, where they lived until her death. When she settled in this place she attached herself to the Episcopal church, and lived with that people in the best of bonds until there was a Methodist Protestant Church established, she then left the old church and attached herself to the former, and lived with us ever since, enjoying, I believe, the confidence of every member. During her affliction I inquired how long she had professed religion. She told me ever since she was 14 years old, making about twenty years she had served God. As she had always trusted in him she experienced the Lord to be a strong hold in time of affliction, for although her disease was most severe, she found the grace of God to be sufficient for her in her trying moments. She frequently shouted and praised Him aloud during her illness, and her last breath was spent in praising the Lord who had given her the victory. She has left her consort and five children and a number of friends to mourn her loss. Her funeral was attended by the largest procession I ever witnessed. Brother Brown, of the Episcopal church, preached on the occasion to a very much affected congregation.

Yours, &c. WILLIAM HAMILTON.

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the National Gazette.

PROFESSOR ESPY'S THEORY.

Mr. Editor: Knowing the difficulty, if not the impossibility, of making the subject intelligible in a short newspaper article, it is with reluctance that I am now induced, after much earnest solicitation from my friends both near and remote, to give a very brief summary of reasons and facts which have led me to desire that an experiment should be made, to see whether rain may be produced artificialy in time of drought.

The documents which I have collected on this subject, if they do not prove that the experiment will succeed, do at least prove that it ought to be tried; this I trust will most satisfactorily appear when they shall be published entire: In the mean time it has become necessary to present to the public something on the subject, lest longer silence might be construed into an abandonment of the project.

First—It is known by experiment that if air should be expanded into double the volume by diminished pressure, it would be cooled about 90 degrees of Fahrenheit.

Second—I have shown by experiment that if air at the common dew point in the summer season in time of drought, 71 degrees, should go up in a column to height sufficient to expand it by diminished pressure into double the volume, it would condense into water or visible cloud, by the cold of expansion, more than one half of its vapour—a quantity sufficient to produce nearly three inches of rain.

Third—It is known by chemical principles, that the caloric of elasticity given out during the condensation of this vapour, would be equal to about 30,000 tons of anthracite coal burnt on each square mile over which the cloud extended.

Fourth—I have shown by experiment [see Saturday Courier, March 18, 1837] that this caloric of elasticity would prevent the air from cooling only about half as much as it would, if it had no vapour in it, or about 42 degrees at the height assumed, which would cause the cloud to be, at that height, about 45 degrees warmer than the air on the outside of the cloud at the same height. I have shown from these principles [see Journal of the Franklin Institute for 1836,] that the barometer would fall under the cloud thus formed, in favorable circumstances, a quantity as great as it is known to fall sometimes under the middle of a dense and lofty cloud, and that consequently the air would rush in on the sides towards the centre of the cloud and upwards in the middle, and thus continue the condensation of the vapour and the formation of cloud and the generation of rain. [See also Journal of the Franklin Institute for September and October, 1838, and for January, February and March, and subsequent, 1839.]

Fifth—I have shown also in the volumes quoted above, that the air does move inwards on all sides towards the centre of the space of region where a great rain is falling, and of course upwards, after it comes in under the cloud, which is so much lighter than the surrounding air; at least, that it does so in all storms which have been investigated, which now amount to sixteen, besides several tornadoes, in all which the trees were thrown with their tops inwards.

From the principles here established by experiment, and afterwards confirmed by observation, it follows, that if a large cloud will be generated, and that cloud will contain in itself a self-sustaining power, which may move from the place over which it was formed, and cause the air over which it passes to rise up into it, and thus form more cloud and rain, until the rain may become general; for many storms which commence in the W. Indies, very narrow, are known to move from the place of beginning several thousand miles, widening out and increasing in size, until they become many hundred miles wide. [See Redfield and Reid, and the Reports of Joint Committe.]

If these principles are just, it will follow, when the air is in a favorable state, that the bursting out of a volcano ought to produce rain; and such is known to be the fact, and I have abundant documents in my possession to prove it.

So under very favorable circumstances the bursting out of great fires ought to produce rain; and I have many facts in my possession rendering it highly probable, if not certain, that great rains have sometimes been produced by great fires.

It is a general opinion in parts of the country where great fires frequently take place, that those fires produce rain. Now this opinion could hardly have originated without some circumstance besides mere coincidence attending them, such as related in the following account. Dr. Dobrezhoffer, a missionary to Paraguay, speaking of the tall grass and bulrushes on fire, says—"I myself have seen clouds and lightning produced from the smoke, as it is flying off like a whirlwind, so that the Indians are not to blame for setting fire to the plains in order to produce rain, they have learnt that the thicker smoke turns into clouds which pour forth water." (Account of the Abiphones, volume 3, page 150.)

Mr. Lapice, of Louisiana, informed Dr. S. Calhoun, of this city, "that the conflagration of the long grass in the prairies of that State covers every thing with its cinders for miles around, and that rain follows it shortly, according to immemorial observation in that country."

"Very extensive fires in Nova Scotia, in the woods, are so generally followed by heavy floods of rain, that there is some reason to believe that the enormous pillars of smoke have some share in producing them." (Mag. Nat. His. for December, 1835.)

The bad philosophy of supposing that smoke was turned into clouds and produced rain, does not weaken the evidence of the main fact.

If the principle is correct, that clouds are formed by up moving columns of air, we should expect to find, in favorable states of the air, that clouds would form over large cities and manufacturing towns where much fuel is burnt; and so we find it to be.

Extract of a letter to me from Benjamin Matthias, of Philadelphia—"In the course of last winter, while in England, I visited Manchester four or five times, and on each day it rained. Several of the inhabitants assured me that it rains in manchester more or less every day in the year."

Extract from Ed. Mammatt's Collection of Facts concerning Ashby Coal Field, 4to London: 1836.

"When the air is apparently stagnant in the valley of the Thames and surrounding country, a strong current is found to set in, on every side of London, along the streets leading from the country, in the morning. This current is no doubt occasioned by the rarefaction in the high chimneys, over so many thousand fires just kindled, and must be the cause of the introduction of fresh air to an immense extant, which would not otherwise flow. This rarefaction produces other phenomena, among which, when the atmosphere is in a light state, and clouds are passing at a height which does not allow them to condense and fall in rain, these accumulate in passing over London, and either remain as a dense fog, or drop in small rain all day long, scarcely clearing once; the country at a little distance having very little rain."

The bad philosophy of supposing the air so light on these occasions as to let the clouds on passing sink down in it over London, does not invalidate the evidence of the principal fact.

From these remarkable facts alone I think it will be acknowledged that there is some connection between great fires and rains other than mere coincidence, even if that connection remained a mystery.—Humboldt acknowledged this in the case of Volcanoes when he speaks of the mysterious connection between Volcanoes and rain, and says that when a Volcano bursts out in South America in a dry season, it sometimes changes it to a rainy one. But now when it is demonstrated by the most decisive evidence, the evidence of experiment, that air in ascending into the atmosphere in a column, as it must do over a great fire, begins to condense its vapour into clouds as soon as it shall rise about as many hundred yards as the tempearature of the air is above the dew point in degrees of Fahrenheit, it amounnts to a very high probability that great fires have sometimes produced rain. That great fires and even volcanoes should not always produce rain is manifest from the circumstance that as they break out accidentally, they may sometimes occur when the state of the atmosphere is unfavorable, and even adverse to rain. First, if they should break out when there is a current of air, either near the surface of the earth, or at a considerable distance above, of some strength, the upmoving column would be swept by it, out of the perpendicular, before a cloud of great density could be formed, and thus rain would be prevented.

Second, they might break out when the dew-point was too low to produce rain at all: and, third, there may sometimes be an upper stratum of air, containing so much caloric that its specific levity would prevent the upmoving column from rising into it far enough to cause rain.

These three things I conceive are the only circumstances which prevent great fires from producing rain at all times when they occur. The first two can be ascertained without much difficulty by means of small balloons and the dew point—the last in the present of science cannot always be known, and a failure on that account must be risked by the experimenter. The risk I am willing to run, if Congress or the State Legislature will promise a sufficient reward in case of success.

It has been objected to my project that I propose too much, and that it is utterly absurd to expect to make rain in time of drought, when there is such a scarcity of vapor in the air.

Now this objection is founded on an entire ignorance of the fact arising from a want of due consideration. For there is generally more vapor in the time of summer drought, than at any other time, as I know by experiments constantly made almost every day for these last ten years; and this is reasonable in itself, for the vapor is rising into air and increasing every day of dry weather, preparing for another rain. A quiet state of the atmosphere is also more likely to occur, to great heights, in time of droughts than at any other time, for immediately after rains there are sure to be cross currents of the air, produced by the inward motion of the air at the lower part of the cloud and an outward motion in the upper part which require some time after the rain to come to rest.

If I have succeeded in shewing that there is any the least ground to hope that an attempt to produce rain, might sometimes succeed under favorable circumstances, and that those favorable circumstances are most likely to occur in time of drought than at any other time, then it follows that the experiment is a highly interesting one, and ought to be immediately tried. If it should be successful, who can tell the mighty results which may follow in its train.

I have many rsasons and facts which induce me to believe that if a very large cloud is once generated, the rain will become general, or at least spread over a wide extent of territory; who can tell a priori, that this will not be the case, when it is now known that an immense steam power is let loose in the formation of such a cloud; a power which can be calculated with as much accuracy as that of the steam engine itself, and in part on the same principles.

Gentlemen have made their puns on this project and had their laugh, and I am sorry to see by letters which I have received, that my friends and relations at a distance are much troubled at these innocent laughs; but let them be consoled, I have laughed too, well knowing, that those who laughed the most heartily would be the most willing to encourage the experiment, as soon as they discovered they had nothing to laugh at. As a proof that I was right in this anticipation, I may be permitted to say that I have lately received a letter, from a highly distinguished member of the American legislature, who laughed as heartily as any one, when my petition was presented there, containing many kind expressions and promising me by way of amend for his levity, "to avail himself of the earliest opportunity of being better informed on the subject of my new philosophy."—Such conduct as this is all I want; I fear not the strictest scrutiny.

If I should be encouraged to go on with the experiment, I mean to have a large mass of combustibles prepared ready for use, and when I have found all the circumstances mentioned before, favorable in a time of drought, I will set fire to the circumference in various places at once. Soon after the fire commences, I will expect to see clouds begin to form, about as many hundred yards high as the temperature of the air is above the dew point in degrees of Fahrenheit. I will expect to see this cloud rapidly increase in size, if its top is not swept off by a current of air at a considerable distance above the earth—until it becomes so lofty as to rain. I shall expect the cloud to move eastwardly, increasing in width as it advances, and the next day I shall expect the region to the south of where the rain fell, to be visited by rain; for a reason explained in my writings.

But it is in vain to anticipate all the results which will follow, for nothing but the experiment itself can demonstrate them. If the experiment, when repeatedly tried, should fail, it would be in vain for me to say I would not be mortified, but I will not incur any disgrace—unless it is disgraceful to desire to see a great experiment made, which all the knowledge we have on the subject, in the present state of science, leads us to hope will be crowed with success.

I have made this very brief, though necessarily imperfect statement of my reasons for wishing to see the experiment tried, which can alone decide the question, to comply with the earnest and repeated solicitations of my friends; I will now in the conclusion say a word for myself.

The present state of the science of meteorology renders it highly important to know in what direction and with what velocity summer rains travel over the surface of the earth. What is their shape, round or oblong—and if oblong in what direction their transverse diameter lies, and whether they move side foremost or end foremost or obliquely. Now I request gentlemen throughout the United States who feel interested in this subject, to keep a journal of all rains, from the beginning of June till the end of September; noting their beginnings and endings, the force and direction of the winds, and also of the clouds, and send the accounts, (published in some paper) as early in October as convenient, to William Hamilton, Esq. Actuary of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia.

Finally, if any gentleman intends to clear from twenty to fifty acres of woodland this spring, or early in the summer, in the north-western parts of Pennsylvania, will he please inform me of the fact as soon as convenient?

Journals of the weather also for the 16th, 17th and 18th of March, 1838, kept in various parts of Virginia and North Carolina, are much desired; and if gentlemen can even tell me how the trees are thrown down indicating the direction of the wind, the information, will be highly valuable, and should not be withheld if any thing is known or recollected.

I am, gentlemen, yours respectfully,

JAMES P. ESPY.

Philadelphia, April 2, 1839.

EARLY SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY.—There are few stronger evidences of the truth of christianity than its early success.—When we consider the persons who were first called to promulgate its doctrines, the time when and the place where it rose, we are astonished at its rapid diffusion, and can reasonably account for it only by the interposition of super-human power.

Who were its promulgators? Not men of deep learning, lettered theologians, but unlearned fishermen,—men, whose whole lives had been spent in the retirement of their humble vocation. In the very choice of His disciples it would seem that the Great Founder of christianity intended to show that more than human aid, was employed in disseminating His glorious principles.

Christianity had its rise during one of the most enlightened periods, of the then civilized world. The Roman empire was at the very zenith of splendor and intellectual glory. Christianity had, therefore to contend with the mightiest of the human mind—was forced to bear the keen scrutiny of the most profound understandings. Those who espoused her holy cause, had the most disheartening difficulties to overcome, and trials to endure. Her mild and humiliating precepts were directly opposed to the dispositions and feelings of the people among whom she had her rise. Those, therefore, who embraced the christian religion were obliged to resist and overcome the most alluring temptations to luxury and sensual gratification; the strongest passions of haughtiness and intellectual pride, with the deepest rooted prejudices against any doctrine of such a humbling nature. Furthermore, the followers of the Cross, had to endure the taunts and ridicule, and the cruel persecutions of the inveterate enemies of christianity. The merciless Nero and Caligula, with other inhuman monsters, were continually heaping miseries upon them. We are told by Tacitus that "many were disguised in the skins of wild beasts and worried to death by dogs;" while "others were wrapped in pitched shirts and set on fire when the day closed, that they might serve as lights to illuminate the night!" All these trials and sufferings they bore, and still they forsook not their God. Amid the revelry of the voluptuous—the bacchanal shouts of the effeminate,—there was heard the pure prayer of the humble saint ascending to Heaven, while over him was suspended the implement of torture and death, just ready to hush his voice in the slumbers of eternal repose.

What could be more disheartening and discouraging, than for any one at that period to embrace the doctrines of christianity? When did any cause ever have such unfavorable circumstances under which to commence its earthly career? and where, in the history of all human events since the creation of the world, can be found any cause that flourished so gloriously and spread so rapidly? Three thousand, we are told, embraced its principles on the first day of its promulgation. From that moment its progress was onward, and no earthly power could stay it. "Before the end of thirty years," says Bishop Wilson, "the gospel had spread through Judea, Galilee, Samaria, almost all the numerous districts of Lesser Asia; through Greece and the Islands of the Ægean Sea, and the sea-coast of Africa, and had passed on to the capital of Italy." And now, considering the state of affairs in those early times, can we account for its almost incredible progress? That it was through the energy of divine power appears, in my mind, as evident as tho' I beheld it written, in plain letters, by the hand of the Eternal.—Literary Repository.

NATURE OF BLOOD HOUNDS.—These animals with which we are accustomed to associate all that is savage and ferocious, are supposed to have been natives of Great Britain. They received this name from their peculiar power of scenting blood, and were much used and valued by hunters for discovering game which had escaped from them. They were also held in high repute by government officers and noblemen, (who generally had them in attendance whenever they went abroad,) and in fact by all, for their sagacity in discovering robbers and murderers, and the enemies of their employers, and were greatly feared by the people.

The blood-hound is larger than the common hound, of a strong muscular form and make, of a deep brown color, and of a most savage appearance.—Though by men more inhuman than themselves, they have been trained to the greatest ferocity, and made, through their influence, to commit deeds, the mere recital of which fills the mind with horror, and makes the blood run cold, yet their natural disposition is far different from what is generally supposed. In fact, they prove to be the most docile, tractable and interesting animal of the canine species, as the following anecdotes will show:

"A breed of this species of dogs is found in various parts of Europe, particularly in the Alps and Appenines, in the convents of which they are kept for the purpose of finding travellers who have been overcome with fatigue and cold, or buried in some of those heavy falls of snow, or avalanches, common in the Alpine regions.

In the monastery of Mount St. Bernard, one of the Swiss Alps, dogs of this species are trained to a perfection, which, had it not been frequently seen by modern travellers, would be almost incredible.—We have ourselves seen these sagacious and highly tutored animals. There are about twenty of them, and they are sent out in pairs. One of them has fastened round his neck, a large bell, and the other a flask filled with liquor. Every day during the inclement season, several pairs are sent out on the different roads and passes across the mountains, most of which concentrate near the monastery. Their sense of smell is so acute, that they immediately discover any being who may have been overwhelmed by cold or snow; upon thus finding any one, if a grown up person, the one immediately rings his bell violently, and at the same time they both lay themselves close to the individual, licking his hands and face, which process, aided by the heat of their bodies, seldom fails to restore animation. In the meantime, the continued ringing of the bell, is generally heard at the monastery. However, if the dogs do not receive assistance promptly, the one with the bell starts off at his utmost speed towards the monastery, and if he does not meet any of the brotherhood on the road, he soon summons them, and conducts one or more to the spot. This occurs in cases of heavy grown persons: but should it be a child, after restoring some degree of animation, the dogs raise it gently on the back of one of them, and in this manner conveys it to the monastery, where, by the care of the monks, it is fully restored.

The monks informed us that they had known instances where these dogs had discovered individuals at the depth of sixteen or twenty feet of snow, and by the dint of scratching and labor, extricated them, and the individual had been revived. They are, upon extraordinary occasions, sent out at night with lanterns affixed to their necks, along their principal roads, and, by their accute smell, discover travellers who have lost their way in the darkness, and would probably, without them, meet a dreadful death by falling over some of those tremendous precipices, on the extreme edges of which the roads of the Alps are formed."

"One of these noble creatures was decorated with a medal, in commemoration of his having saved the lives of twenty-two persons, who, but for his sagacity, must have perished. Many travellers who have crossed the passage of St. Bernard, have seen this dog, and heard, around the blazing fire of the monks, the story of his extraordinary career. He died about the year 1816, in an attempt to convey a poor traveller to his anxious family."

"A story is told of one of these dogs, who, having found a child unhurt, whose mother had been destroyed by an avalanche, induced the poor boy to mount on his back, and thus carried him to the gate of the convent."

Though such seems to be the disposition which nature has bestowed upon them, their inhuman tutors have succeeded in changing it, and making them to assist in scenes of the greatest inhumanity and crulty, which stain the history of our race.—Youth's Cabinet.

THE NEWS FROM EUROPE.—The British papers brought by the Great Western are filled with accounts of the marriage between the Queen of Great Britain and Prince Albert of Saxe Coburg. We do not wonder at the attempt of royalty to sustain itself in public opinion, by dazzling the eyes of the multitude with extravagant splendor; for, taking for granted that mankind were made for its use, it can have no compunctions in loading them with burdens for its pleasure, and will therefore never hesitate in asking or compelling them to pay for its trappings.—Such has ever been the history of power. But we do wonder at the toleration, by a people so enlightened as the British, of the follies exhibited upon this occasion; follies worthy of some land of tyrants and den of slaves, like Russia or any of the barbarous Asiatic governments.

England is a country of free institutions; of the models upon which have been constructed our own republicanism: of securities for equal rights, given by God, yet continually exposed to violation by man. It is a country of inquiry, of discussion, of knowledge; a country containing a more enlightened, high spirited and energetic people than any other in the world, excepting our own; a country containing a greater amount of cultivation, literary and scientific, than any in Europe. Such a people ought to exhibit that sturdy independence and dignity of character which would elevate them far above such trifling, and induce them to spurn it as worthy only of the millions of inferior races whom they hold in subjection.

This marriage, like all royal marriages in hereditary monarchies, was political; for it involves the succession to the Crown, or nominal executive of the British Government. So far as this was concerned, it should have been disposed of like any other affair of business, by the proper officers, but without any public parades.—Like the ratification of a treaty of commerce, it should have been effected quietly, without any parade, in presence only of such public officers as were necessary to render it legal. After this, the Queen and her new consort should have been left to arrange any festivities that were agreeable to them, after their own fashion, and at their own expense, as mere social affairs, with which business and politics should have no connexion. But in making all this ridiculous parade a business of state, John Bull certainly forgot much of that dignity of human nature which he ought to assume, in an age when free principles are rapidly advancing, and when the most enlightened minds in the civilized world are striving to elevate the mass from the degredation to which it had sunk under the tyrannies and superstitions of the past. As John Bull is striving to maintain free principles, he should also strive to maintain a corresponding deportment. If he do not, the enlightened of all countries will say that, notwithstanding the freedom of his institutions, he still delights in the tastes and manners of a slave.

This affair presents another aspect, equally tending to reflections upon the inconsistencies of the British nation.—When the public burdens are enormous, to defray the expenses of a great army and navy, and an inextinguishable debt, and when no small portion of the people are in extreme distress for want of employment, an appropriation of $150,000 annually, to enable that mere political cypher, the Queen's husband, to maintain a frivulous splendor, is an act of folly, ill becoming a free and enlightened people. The present means of the Queen, derived from the public treasury, are amply sufficient for the decent expenses of a husband; and the parliament would have exhibited a little more regard for the people which it represents, by signifying to a pennyless foreigner that he had been sufficiently fortunate in his fortune-hunting, to share their Queen's privy park, without asking an industrious people, already overtaxed for the trappings of government, to pay him in addition for his good luck.

When will this miserable folly of royalty come to an end?—Bro. Jonathan.

TRINITY CHURCH, NEW YORK.—A record preserved of the persons buried in the cemetery of this church, since 1702, excepting during the year of the revolutionary war, when no account appears to have been kept, and it is stated by those who have examined, that one hundred and sixty thousand bodies have been there deposited. A city of the dead truly is this, containing piled up, one above another, in its confines, a mighty mass, equal to the half of that which daily swarms in the streets and dwellings of the great metropolis of the new world.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.—The following is the substance of the Bill of the Indiana Legislature for the relief of the people;

1. On all judgments and decrees rendered by any court of record from and after the first day of March next, there is a stay of 12 months.

2. On all judgments rendered by any justice of the peace from and after the first day of March next, there is a stay of 8 months.

3. On all judgments and decrees rendered by any court of record since the first day of October last, there is a stay of 6 months from the first day of March next.

4. On all judgments rendered by any justice of the peace since the 1st of December, 1839, there is an additional stay of 4 months from the 1st of March next.

5. If the judgment debtor is unable to procure bail, and his property is taken by an execution, then the property is to be sold on a credit from the same length of time that the judgment debtor would have been entitled to a stay, could he have procured bail.

6. If the plaintiff fears, at any time the solvency of the bail, or if the bail is about to remove from the country, he may order an execution against the judgment debtor, which execution is to be recalled, whenever satisfactory additional security is given.

Whenever the act reaches this place, which will be, perhaps in time for our next paper, we will publish it.—Indianian.

CHINA.

From China—Interesting.—We published the other day, a verbal account of an engagement between Captain Elliott and the Chinese junks, brought by the master of a vessel to this port. We are now enabled to lay before the reader authentic particulars of the affair, by which it appears that the poor Chinese did not die like dogs, but fought valiantly notwithstanding the odds of a sloop of war against junks. The measures of this man Elliott appear to us, at this distance, to entitle him to the gallows, at least. Warring against a country, because its government will not permit its people to be poisoned, is unworthy of the English nation—and the English people will not approve it. The following, from the Boston Daily Advertiser, is an extract of a letter from Mr. John Cunningham, supercargo of the ship Morea, of Boston, dated Macao, November 4, 1839:

"On arriving at the Bogue, the point of the river which is defended by forts, and where we were obliged on our passage down (from Canton to Macao) to show our pass, we saw two English men-of-war, engaging from twenty to thirty war junks. We were drifting down slowly with the tide, and had good opportunity of witnessing all that passed. The fight continued about an hour, when the junks retreated, and the men-of-war set sail for this place. On arriving opposite to the spot where the shot had appeared to fly the most thickly, we found three of the Chinese vessels sunk, with their masts just peeping from the water, and numbers of miserable wretches clinging to the rigging. Several others appeared much disabled.

